GENTILES are mentioned six times in as many verses. A Gentile is someone other than a Jew. For milleniums past the Jews had held privileged positions before the Lord. Now, through Christ, the Gentiles had seen a great light. That Light is Jesus. We who were not a people have been called the people of God. In Christ there is neither Jew nor Gentile; all are sinners and all can be saved. "Glorify God for His mercy". Praise His name today for His love and grace, that we, who were afar off, strangers from the commonwealth of Israel (and what wealth they had), are in the Kingdom. We deserved justice; He gave us mercy. We could have been slaves; He has made us sons.

"Through mighty signs and wonders" (v.19).

GOD confirmed His Word through Paul by healings, miracles, mighty signs and wonders. God has not changed. There is a longing in this generation for a manifestation of the miraculous. Some of us have only heard of the great attestations of divine approbation that accompanied the Pentecostal pioneers. Now, again, as God is moving in power, pray that in your church signs and wonders will follow the preaching of the Word. Thank God for scholarship, for all the

When Jesus Calls

by Hugh Sawyer

"Follow Me, and I will make you fishers of men."
(Matthew 4:19)

THE foreknowledge of Jesus made Him fully aware that down the ages men and women from all walks of life would seek to follow in His footsteps, some with hearts zealously ablaze in faithful service, others sluggishly, drifting with the Christian tide, lukewarm in their loyalty and oftimes failing their Lord. How true are the immortal words of Jesus, "Many are called, but few are chosen"!

Walking by the Sea of Galilee at the commencement of His ministry, Jesus was drawn to a hardy breed of men, fishermen, men well accustomed to the deadly perils of the treacherous, tempestuous sea in which they earned their living, attributes which in later years would serve them well in their warfare against the agents of darkness as they sought to spread the Christian doctrine among men.

Peter and Andrew, busily engaged in casting a net into the sea, were suddenly interrupted by the loud, clear, commanding voice of Jesus hailing them across the intervening water, "Follow Me, and I will make you fishers of men!". Looking up, they saw, heard, heeded, and without a moment's hesitation, went! It was the same with John and James, who were engaged with their father Zebedee in the tedious task of mending their torn, well-used nets as they lay at anchor a short distance away. In answer to the imperative command of Jesus, they also left all and followed Him.

Many Bible-skimmers, mistaking the shadows for the substance, are awed by this dramatic call to leave everything at once and are bewildered by the immediate, willing response of those who were called and their unquestionable obedience to the command of an apparent Stranger.

Was Jesus a Stranger to these men?

He certainly was not to Andrew! He had already had a previous, never-to-be-forgotten introduction to Jesus, when, as a disciple of John the Baptist, the latter had declared upon seeing the approach of Jesus, "Behold the Lamb of God!". Andrew's other companion at that time was presumed to have been a cousin of Jesus, John the son of Zebedee. Both had got into immediate contact with Jesus and spent some time in His company. Later, Andrew brought His brother Simon Peter to Jesus, confident that at last they had found The Messiah, whereupon Jesus had conferred upon Peter the name of Cephas, meaning "a stone".

Some time had presumably elapsed since that first meeting, because the brothers immediately recognised Jesus and, realising who He was and the divine nature of His calling, gladly forsook the work in hand and followed Him.

John and James, once having been in close contact with Jesus, would never forget the experience, because the magnetism of His divine personality was unique among men and His drawing power imperative. The sight of Peter and Andrew in the Master's company signified the importance of the occasion, so, perhaps without as much as a farewell to their surprised father, they immediately left all and joined their beckoning Lord.

These early brethren areofttimesreferred to as poor, ignorant fishermen. Surely this is an insult to their intelligence. They were neither poor nor ignorant! They were successful businessmen, thriving partners in the fishing industry. Owning their own fishing vessels they necessarily became employers of labour and were actively employed, night and day.

John was well-to-do, owning property in Jerusalem, moving in high society, numbering among his acquaintances the high priest. He was later to become the beloved friend of Jesus. As far as ignorance is concerned, like the average Jew, these early disciples would be devout, religious men, well instructed in Hebrew doctrine and prophetic revelation as taught them from an early age by the rabbis in the local synagogues scattered throughout the land. Upon their willing response to the call of Jesus, they became the original nucleus of Christian discipleship, the forerunners of all who truly believe, the recipients of the abundance of blessings which fall like dew from the hands of our Heavenly Father.

Today as always, the unchangeable, eternal Christ Jesus calls men and women into His service, not for what they are, but for what He is able to make them if they are fully prepared to obey His commands and to follow in His footsteps.

Then He will indeed make them "fishers of men"!

WHAT qualifies the expression "all things" in the beloved Romans 8:28?

You soon discover a similarity of thought in v. 31: "What shall we then say to these things?".

The inescapable conclusion is that the background begins in v. 18: "For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time . . .". The famous three groanings are part of it—"the whole creation groaneth" (v. 22); "we ourselves groan" (v. 23); "the Spirit . . . with groanings" (v. 26)—all expressive of the spiritual warfare in which the child of God is engaged.

That such a conflict exists we cannot deny. The people of God are by no means exempt from the trials and testings of life. Salvation is not a guarantee that there will never be any trouble, that problems will cease to exist.

No, it is much more wonderful than this. The gibe of "escapism" levelled against Christianity—Bible-based Christianity—serves only to reveal the lack of knowledge on the part of those uttering it. The true knowledge of God in Christ may leave the child of God in the midst of the attacks of the devil and of the various challenges of life, but it gives such a perspective on them and grants such a power to face them that life is transformed.

Foreknowledge and predestination as revealed in vv. 27-30 are not happy hunting-grounds for the theologically devious, but glorious assurance to the discerning believer, for they show that God is on the throne, but also that they can reign in life by One, Jesus Christ. To those who love God, who are called according to His purpose, all things work together for good. We can say to "these things", "If God be for us, who can be against us?". We can lyricise with that sublime clarion call, "In all these things . . . more than conquerors"!

Remember the triumphs in Christ as you share in our Week of Prayer.

Ours is not to pray to be in the victory so much as to ask that we shall realise the victory in which we are and that we shall be given vision to appropriate its triumphs.

"Hallelujah! What a Saviour!"

GILTBROOK Pastor: R.R. Taylor

ON May 12th Pastor R.R. Taylor was inducted to the Elim Pentecostal Church, Baker Road, Giltbrook. The church, which has recently been redecorated and recarpeted, was full to capacity for an inspiring service which marked the beginning of a new gospel outreach in Giltbrook by the Elim Church. Local churches were represented at the service and there were also visitors from Nottingham, Heanor, Ilkeston and Derby, in addition to a coach load from Pastor Taylor's previous church at Leicester. Hearty congregational singing was led at the piano by Mrs. Yvonne Smith, and Mr. Taylor and his family were welcomed on behalf of the church by the secretary, Mr. P. Robinson. Pastor Brian Edwards, of Derby, gave an address on the "Call of God" which was much appreciated by all present.

KIDDERMINSTER Pastor: H.J.V. Jeffery

AFTER a crusade with Alan Ball in September God started to move in a wonderful way. The gifts of the Spirit have been much in evidence among the young people, who have wanted all that God can give. Once a month the Crusaders have a prayer meeting in a home. During one such meeting God told us that He was going to move on Kidderminster in a new way and that it would not be confined to one church. The local Evangelical Free Church also had the same message a week before.

On Wednesday, April 25th, we arrived at the youth meeting for what we considered would be a normal occasion but how surprised we were. A youth group from a nearby Baptist Church came unexpectedly to the meeting. A hymn and a prayer were followed by a time of worship and this was when the Spirit fell. An unconverted young lady from the Baptist Church who had never seen these things said that, if God could do this, she would become a Christian and she accepted salvation. Young people were praying for young people and the presence of the Holy Spirit was very wonderful. Five received the fulness of the Holy Spirit. We praise God that all He requires is a heart that will seek Him in sincerity and truth. The evening drew to a close and we laid hands on a Crusader who has one leg considerably shorter than the other. The youth leader asked him to walk without shoes. At first he stumbled, but after about half a dozen steps there was a marked difference for which we give God all the glory. We live in exciting days. If we move with God they will be even more exciting. Our aim is:

To be used of God, to sing, to speak, to pray.
To be used of God, to show someone the way.
I long so much to feel the touch of His consuming fire;
To be used of God is my desire.

ALAN GUNSTONE

STOWMARKET Pastor: M.A. Drew

WE recently held the first baptismal service in our Church. It was a meeting richly blessed by God. We have no baptistry, so a portable one was brought in. Three of the young people were converts from the coffee bar, which runs from 10 p.m. on Friday nights. The other lady was saved during the crusade we held last October. It is thrilling to see these young people eager to go with God. All are involved in the work of the church. Pastor John Harrison brought us a fitting word.

Having this service has made us eager to get a permanent baptistry and plans are being made for this work to be carried out. Already there are names for the next service. We thank God for His blessings over the past year and for the young people who are coming in week by week.

ILFORD Pastor: J.F. Hardman

"THE Lord hath done great things for us; whereof we are glad" is the testimony of the members of our Ilford Church. Much blessing was experienced during the recent Easter convention through the ministry of the guest speaker, Pastor R.J. Mackenzie. The Lord's presence has especially been experienced during the Sunday morning services when the manifestation of the Gifts of the Spirit has brought challenge and inspiration to many. Much appreciation has been expressed concerning the series of messages by the Pastor on the First Epistle of Peter. What has happened during the last few weeks has been the result of earnest prayer. A number of decisions for Christ have been registered in the gospel services, new members have been received into fellowship, and several have testified to the Lord's healing touch in their bodies. As a Church we give God all the praise. We praise Him for all that is past and trust Him for all that's to come.

Birmingham Presbytery Rally

WHAT a blessing the first Birmingham Presbytery rally at our Stirchley Church proved to be. "Serve the Lord with gladness, come before His presence with singing" read a young man from Caerphilly and this was the purpose of the visit of the choir from our Assembly there. My heart did a dance when they sang "I bob yn sy'n fflyddlon", and "Calon lan", and I joined in. Imagine Welsh with a Yorkshire accent! Pastor John Cooper's public prayers always bring me close to the Lord and how he prayed. The testimony of Mrs. Muriel Tyler of her healing of uterine cancer brought much praise to the Lord. It was good to hear of a case of healing that has been medically ratified and stands the test of time.

Ken Hathaway expressed the appreciation of the family for the prayers of the people for his brother, David. He gave a grand word, rich in historical illustrations and full of practical application. I was sorry that, being Conference time, so many ministers missed his ministry, but it did me good, and many others, too. I felt that his ministry ought to be more widely known in our Elim fellowship.

It is credit to Pastor and Mrs. J.B. Coleman that the work at Stirchley is progressing steadily. Our prayer is that for the next rally at their Church they will have their own church building.

Youth Centre in N. Ireland

THE Elim Churches in Ireland have recently purchased a disused primary school. It is situated at Grangee, about two miles inland from Millisle, Co. Down, a lovely little seaside resort. The school is being renovated and additions are being built to make it into a very useful youth centre. Sited on two acres of its own ground, the school's potential for camps, weekend retreats and other activities is exciting. Varying types of work have to be done and, to reduce the overall cost, some of the pastors in Ireland are undertaking the labour with added voluntary help. New skills are being discovered and exercised and our fervent prayer is that the centre will become, not only a place of relaxation from tension, but a real spiritual Bethel.

The decision to purchase Grangee school was inspired by the success of our present hired youth centre. This is another, smaller, converted school in a less accessible part of the Mourne foothills. Souls have been saved and believers baptised in the Holy Ghost at this place, so our expectation of even greater things at Grangee is greatly encouraged.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor,

Thank you for your comments about the Ascension of Jesus Christ in the ELIM EVANGEL, May 26th, 1973. I was delighted to read your views about this divine truth. I was also pleased to hear on the B.B.C. radio on Ascension day before the eight o'clock news the hymn about the Ascension.

One is mindful of two great, fundamental truths, the Ascension and Exaltation of Jesus Christ. One can imagine the glorious "home-coming" of the Son of God, the God-Man returning to His Father. The loving, awaiting father ran out to meet and to embrace his prodigal son with a kiss. The loving Father must have given His Son a royal, glorious welcome as He went back to His eternal Home, His Father's House. What part did the angelic host play in this welcome?

Jesus Christ not only ascended, but was exalted and given a place at His Father's right hand. He went from the bosom of the Father (John 1:18) through the womb of a woman to mankind and became one of us. He went to the cruel cross, through the deadly tomb, ascended and was exalted, bearing the marks of the cruel cross in His body. In the words of C. Wesley's hymn, "Five bleeding wounds He bears".

No wonder Peter on the day of Pentecost proclaimed in his sermon: "Therefore being by the right of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, He hath shed forth this, which ye now see and hear." (Acts 2:33).

Yours in the risen Christ,

LEON C. QUEST

The George Canty Viewpoint

. . . . among the Methodists

NOT really so long ago, a Methodist Superintendent minister threatened to resign from the local Free Church Council if I, from Elim, were accepted for membership. Another wrote protesting about my being given an opportunity in the Press, complaining to the Editor that a representative "of a small unorthodox sect" should have this privilege.

> Wholesale and wholesome change was indicated when I joined by special invitation the delegates at the W.W. Triennial Conference of the Methodist Missionary Society to help them to understand the Pentecostal Church, and an offering was later taken up for "Mr. Canty and his Pentecostal work".

Our particular "workshop" led by Hugh Morton, President of the Methodist Church, first formulated and later discussed questions to which I especially had to reply, much aided by Professor Walter Hollenweger, Professor of Mission at Birmingham University, and that great personality Mrs. Reynolds, wife of the Administrative Secretary of the Church of God in Christ.

> Women, missionaries, nuns, Christian workers from all over the world, whose age and sometimes houswifery appearance belied their experience and abilities, as well as some male missionaries proved to be the most ruthless and acute questioners I have met for some time, but always charming.

. . . . How were cultural differences related to Pentecostal experience?
. . . . Didn't tongues tend to stereotype the workings of the Spirit?
. . . . Were tongues achieved after a warming up leading to abandonment?
. . . . If tongues are so important what place had we for silence?
. . . . Didn't a second experience of this kind reduce others to second class?
. . . . How could the Full Gospel Business Men be Pentecostal and still rich?

> These are samples of probings to which I tried to reply, though not always was my explanation taken as completely satisfactory – especially about the "near-to-wind" dealings of Pentecostal business tycoons in the U.S.A. and about the South African question.

I had my own question that I would have liked them all to answer. Why were they so interested in tongues – including those who seemed to want to have the Spirit without tongues? The discussion seemed to put tongues as the central factor – for most were only interested in "charistmatic renewal", rather than in the effect of the Spirit in making us witnesses for Christ. They were concerned with what they called "release".

> Thinking it over, however, perhaps tongues is all that they have noticed about us as distinctive? Perhaps our lives, unlike the time when the Pharisess took note that the disciples had been with Jesus, are not the shining examples of spiritual fulness they ought to be? Just tongues. "Once more into the breach dear friends, once more".

Ann Cheetham, roving reporter, interviewed me on tape for circulation to readers of Now the Methodist Missionary magazine and referred to two fantastic meetings that she had attended in Santiago, Chile, when 6,000 singing, dancing, exuberant people made her also feel like dancing.

> The final session, when groups of every study workshop gathered together to bring their findings forward under the chairmanship of Hugh Morton, President, was a brilliant tour-de-force for that outstanding and attractive Methodist. Skilfully he took up comments from each group – whether on music, painting, politics, communication or Pentecost, and brought them together in a profound word: "God made a great universe of complex variety, which for us often is viewed as a universe of contradictions and problems but is in fact a glorious testimony to His vastness and purpose, which eventually we shall see completely worked out in the perfect divine order".

I liked that. To all present I was able to say that tongues was not merely another form of self-expression used by the Spirit, but the Spirit's own form of expression – God expressing Himself through us. But the Methodists want tongues – and we want the Spirit, and we all want God to manifest His fulness to a world empty of understanding and hope.

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

32. The Blessing of the Lord (Genesis 30:27)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

WHEN Jacob arrived at his home, Laban was accounted to be a small farmer, but, from the time that Jacob began to work for him, Laban's stock increased remarkably. No doubt this was due partly to Jacob's natural diligence, but chiefly (as Laban testified) the blessing of the Lord upon Jacob caused those small flocks to increase and become a multitude. It was not the goodness and perfection of Jacob that brought the Lord's blessing to him, in fact the Lord had to teach him severe lessons to correct things that were wrong in his life. The blessing of God came firstly because of the mystery of the divine calling, and secondly because Jacob had respect and love for the promises of God. So, despite his imperfections, the Lord blessed him and others through him.

There can be no doubt that the Lord desires and delights to bless His children, not because we are without fault or blame – we are often deeply aware of our own imperfections – but because He has called us to be His children through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ and we have responded by believing and receiving Him as our Saviour. He has blessed us for Christ's sake (Romans 8:32; Ephesians 1:3). It is the will of God, however, that the joys that He gives us shall overflow to others around us so that they shall be caused to recognise His blessing and, perhaps, as a result come to believe and receive the Lord Jesus as we did. Is this desire of the Lord being fulfilled in our lives? Are we "channels of blessing"?

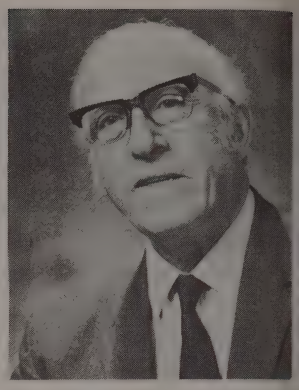
PRAYER AND PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

IT has been said many times that the Elim Movement is a big, happy family. This is true. At the Blackpool Conference, many members of the family came together for a wonderful time of spiritual fellowship. Quite a number came to me to tell me that they read this column. It was nice to meet these lovely people, who not only appreciate the contents of the column, but who are also people of prayer.



It used to be said that the real strength of a church was the number who gathered for the prayer meetings. Some movements think that the strength of their churches is in the number who attend Sunday school. Others think that the indication is the size of the Sunday evening congregations. I am still old-fashioned enough to believe that the real strength of any church is the prayer meeting. So often those who attend this meeting support the Bible Studies and two Sunday meetings also.

My plea in this column this week is for more to attend the prayer meetings in our churches and to pray through for God's blessing. Our urgent need is for men and women to pray the power down.

I recently passed one of the new Labour Exchanges in the High Street. One was courteously invited to inspect the display of job vacancies for men. I did not see one for women workers, but there might well have been one there.

Each church could display a "wanted" sign: "WANTED: Men and women for the prayer meeting"! Your church needs you – needs you in the prayer meeting. There is always a vacancy there. Why not fill it? It pays rich dividends.

The Letter to the Romans

by J. Alexander Wright

"GAIUS" (v.23) was with Paul in that riot at Ephesus (Acts 19:29). "Mine host" was immortalised by John Bunyan in the second part of Pilgrims' Progress, where Christiana and her weary children found such wonderful hospitality in the lovely old inn of the good Mr. Gaius. He was one of the only two whom the apostle baptised at Corinth (1 Corinthians 1:14). He entertained not only the big preachers, but all who came to him. Dr. Adam Clarke thinks that he may have been the "well-beloved Gaius" to whom John addressed his Third Letter, which also commends his hospitality (3 John 1-6). What a great need of Gaiuses there is today!

"Erastus", Corinth's city-treasurer, was a very important man. "Not many mighty", said Paul(1 Corinthians 2:26), but there were some. In all this long list there are very few Jewish names. Most were Greek (Gentile). Paul breathes again the benediction of Grace (Romans 16:24,20) and concludes with his grand doxology ascribing all power and wisdom to God (vv 25-27). It echoes his opening words of 1:1-5 and is a study in itself. The Old Testament prophets carried the gospel tidings for all the nations (16:26). They wrote of the secret purpose which, "after the silence of long ages, had now been disclosed and made known on the basis of the prophetic Scriptures" (vv. 25,26, Moffatt). "The Old Testament is the hand of the clock proceeding silently round the dial. The New Testament is the striking of the hour" (Bengel). That hour of fulfilment is not more loudly or clearly heard than in Romans.

Concluding our study, let us stand back from the great Letter, as from a masterpiece in canvas, to consider not the parts, but the whole.

Here, at great length, is the language and metaphor of the law-court – righteousness, condemnation, justify, etc. It is the terminology which Paul's invisible opponents have chosen. God's government in terms of law was to them paramount, but, though the apostle uses the language of law, his meanings and interpretations are not legal. God governs in love and grace. To "justify freely" would be absurd in actual law, literally to "acquit the guilty" or "justify the ungodly" would be to overthrow God's throne, which is established in righteousness. "Thou shalt justify the righteous and condemn the guilty", God said to Moses (Deuteronomy 25:1). Paul delights to use, with glorious paradox, this language of law, to set forth God's free and full forgiveness and acceptance of men through that "strange and matchless grace and God-like miracle of love" that baffles and confounds all earthly jurists. "The intricacies of Jewish law have little appeal to 20th century minds. So much of it is raking the ashes of dead fires, but the spirit of legalism - the real thing Paul was concerned about - is by no means extinct. The idea behind "the righteousness which is by the law" still commands the assent of multitudes, even in Christendom. In every generation the old error takes on a new lease of life."(A Man in Christ , J.S. Stewart).

Paul was not setting forth a Systematic Theology or a Manual of Christian Doctrine. If so, he left unanswered a hundred questions. No, this is a letter, hot from his great heart, telling men of their hopeless case in a bondage from which they cannot free themselves, but of a living Christ who can liberate them and keep them free, who has done for them what they themselves could not do. By simple trust they may lay hold of this boundless blessing and enter into that real and wonderful "mystic union" with Him in the fellowship of the Christian Church. In those three chapters which deal specifically with the people of Israel, the true N.T. doctrine of Election is simply and clearly set forth. In an earlier day a needless profundity was cast around the subject. Who were the elect, and how could one know that one was among that choice number? Some averred that even the most devout could never know with assurance until the judgment day when the books were opened, and always was the uncertainty and fear that after all they might not be saved. The "elect" were known to God alone. But how different here! Israel is the Elect, the true Israel, the saved from among Jews and Gentiles. These

Pentecost

2. In Worship

by

Geoffrey J. Feasey, Pastor of our Pontardulais Church

THE carefully recorded chapters in 1 Corinthians concerning the rules of worship ought to be learned by heart by every member of our movement. Pentecostal worship is not guided just by the mind; it must be dominated by a heart full of gratitude for God's goodness. For too long some have worried about what people will think; they are afraid of being different. Our Pentecostal gatherings must conform to the New Testament pattern. Formality and expected modes of worship are far removed from Paul's experience.

When we come together everyone has a part to play. Too much can be left to the pastor – preaching, convening, urging, prompting all through the time of worship. Everyone has a hymn, a doctrine, a tongue, a revelation, and so on. It is the will of God that all the parts of the Body should come together and worship together.

We cry to God for the fresh breath of the Spirit, where whole congregations are lost in praise, not just one or two people, where delicate harmonies of voices are heard as the music of the Spirit takes control, where depth of feeling takes the place of superficiality, and above all where the holiest of all Pentecostal worship comes to the fore, the ministry of the Gifts of the Spirit, all nine of them in the local assembly. God longs for this in His Church; it is we who hinder the Spirit.

We can be bound by having the same pattern for our services. We know what time they will start and what time they will end, and, as for what is in the middle, everything has its definite order and arrangement. Who are we to tie the hands of God? Whenever we come together, God has a plan for that gathering; we must sacrifice our rigidity so that He might guide our worship.

We must sacrifice our conformity. "What will people think if they hear of unusual events in our church?" say some. "Every other meeting finishes at seven, why do we have to be different?" ask others. Pentecost is different. We are not the same as everyone else. Pentecost means fire, power, difference. Full sway must be given to the Spirit, not what we feel is right and proper. Some of the most unconventional men have been pioneers of the Pentecostal message. Kneeling in a crowded market-place and committing his friend to God on parting did not bother Smith Wigglesworth. Fear of the unusual did not hinder Burton, Salter, Jeffreys and co. We are different so let us be different.

We must never devalue the Spirit of God. He is God, God in action, God in power, God in Pentecost. The Spirit of God is holy, perfectly holy, and if He wants to move in a certain way at a certain time, we must at all costs be willing to be lead in that direction, for the outcome will be utterly wholesome, holy and good.

May our worship be conducted under the banner: "It was good to the Holy Ghost and to us".

compose the Olive Tree, the Church Universal. This was what the O.T. prophets proclaimed and such was God's intention from the beginning!

Through all the changing scenes of life the Christian Ethic, flowing from that central cross, abides. "Get right with God yourself, and then live for others" is Paul's message. Christianity is intensely personal, and calls for our response in every province of living.

Mr. Wright thanks all who have accompanied him throughout the studies and invites correspondence from any who wish to be helped.

Under New

by

SOME 350 people from Edinburgh, Coatbridge, Motherwell, Harthill, Glasgow, Dundee, Aberdeen, Carlisle, Wick, London, Eastbourne, Cheltenham and Plymouth, twenty-five ministers drawn from the same places, two policemen and a minor traffic jam, add the new City Temple Elim Pentecostal Church on George IV Bridge in Edinburgh, and the scene is set for the opening of the new home of Elim in the City.

New and yet not new (like the gospel preached there!), for the building dates back to 1861, and the fellowship which occupied it to 1681. . . 291 years of evangelical witness by the United Free Church of Scotland, which ended in 1972.

This is where Elim came in. Our Church was established in Edinburgh following George Jeffreys' Crusade in 1932 and made its first home in the Elim Tabernacle, Dean Street. In 1957 the building in Henderson Terrace was purchased and alterations were carried out to make a Manse of the flat above and a compact Church on the ground floor. Shortly after the commencement of his ministry in Edinburgh, the present Minister, Brian J. Hayes, shared with the congregation a vision for the Elim Church to seize the opportunity to grow and become a centre of evangelical witness and Pentecostal testimony in the city. Under the Lord's good hand this began to unfold and, with His blessing upon the Church, during the early part of the 1970s a programme of expansion began. In 1972 a separate manse was purchased. Then, sooner than expected, God provided the opportunity of a building in the centre of Scotland's capital, 300 yards from the vast University complex, 800 yards from Princes Street, just round the corner from the Castle and Cathedral, situated in the heart of Edinburgh's life. Three months of hard labour by the Minister, Deacons and Members, culminated on May 26th in the opening of The City Temple.

To commence, all 350 of us made sure that Edinburgh - or at least the part of it within hailing distance of George IV Bridge - knew what we were about: "To God be the glory, Great things He hath done." Pastor J.C. Smyth then read of the dedication of Solomon's Temple. The resident Minister spoke briefly of what he desired that The City Temple should achieve. Pastor John Lancaster, our President, unlocked the door, for the first but not for the last time, for the Church is now open to all who wish to know Christ as their Saviour and as the answer to their needs.

The Church filled rapidly as several more coachloads arrived and was soon re-echoing (as of old) to "Praise, my soul, the King of Heaven" and "Praise the Lord, His mercies show". The President congratulated the Edinburgh Members and led the prayer of dedication. Myra Anderson and Jean Drysdale enriched the service by their anointed singing. Pastor F.W. Jones, the District Superintendent, compared the moving of Elim into a fine building to the coming of the ark (and thus the worship of the Jews) to the Temple in Jerusalem. God promised that His presence would stay in the latter; may it also in the former! There were introductions, greetings and the inevitable couple of choruses. Pastor J.C. Smyth spoke on Jesus. . . and what better subject? "He that cometh from above is above all" in His wonderful word, witness and work. This confirmed what was avowed on a sign outside the church: "We preach not ourselves. . . but Christ".

ore

Formalities over, visitors were entertained to tea and had opportunity to view the premises. The main Church is compact and seats about 400. New lighting, heating, carpeting, and a new piano, and, with some difficulty and expense, a new baptistry have been installed. An electric organ was loaned for the opening. Beneath the church are two minor halls and a new kitchen and toilets. Beneath this is a large undeveloped (to say the least) basement. In all, something far in excess of 1,000 man (and woman) hours have been put in by Minister, Deacons and Members. There is still much to do and plenty of room for expansion.

The evening meeting began at 6.45 and lasted for 145 minutes, a rather crammed nearly two and a half hours. The full Church again reverberated to choruses and hymns, to more inspiring singing by Jean and Myra, to the singing of the Edinburgh young people ("Thy loving kindness is better than life"). Pastor Hayes was presented with a Bible and Mrs. Hayes with a bouquet of flowers from the Edinburgh Y.P.F. in gratitude for their combined ministry both practical and spiritual. The day was crowned by two speakers. Pastor Smyth spoke of Paul's facility in comparing the Christian life to running a race. "Let us so run despite difficulties toward the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus," he said. Pastor Lancaster re-asked Solomon's question, "Will God indeed dwell upon the earth with men?". He expertly revealed how the answering "Yes" thunders from the New Testament: "That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith."

As ELIM continues 291 years of evangelism we do not merely wish that The City Temple will be situated in the heart of Edinburgh's life, but that Jesus whom we preach will dwell in the hearts and lives of Edinburgh's men and women.

President, John Lancaster, addresses the crowded congregation

Scene at the afternoon Dedication Service

A Door was opened by Don Norton, Elim Missionary, Penhalonga, Rhodesia.

PAUL said of his visit to Troas, "A door was opened unto me of the Lord" (2 Corinthians 2:12). This could be said of our experience in the Mutasa Tribal area at the beginning of the year.

Enquiries into the possibility of establishing a work in this large area proved fruitful. Contact was made with people who were once Elim members who had moved into the Mutasa district. This gave the opening for us to obtain permission to hold services. An audience with the Chief was attempted on our first visit to the area. To our surprise, the Chief agreed to see us there and then. We had not come prepared for this. We thought that an appointment would have to be made, as is the usual custom, but God was in it all. He was opening the door. With ceremony to be seen to be believed, we were ushered into the royal presence and traditional handshakes were exchanged. When the visiting party was seated, the Chief's company commenced a clapping of the hands which we had never seen or heard before, a tradition of the MaShona people. It was most impressive. One realised again that the African people have many traditions worthy of preserving. Now it was time for verbal greeting and enquiries into the health of those present and those absent. Then the real purpose of the meeting could be attended to. Our request was laid before the Chief through one of his counsellors, never directly. The ageing Chief thoughtfully considered the matter and consulted those of his counsellors present before making his reply. How glad we were to hear - through his counsellor - that permission was granted. God was in this venture.

The matter concluded, as we thought, we prepared to be dismissed, awaiting the Chief's permission to leave, but the Chief was not finished. My wife had stayed in the car with the children. The Chief gave the command for her to be brought; he wanted to meet her. Again came the handshakes, the clapping and the verbal greeting. We counted it a privilege to be welcomed in such a way. Still the Chief had not finished. His desire was to seal the friendship. This took us by surprise. As their custom is, gifts had to be exchanged. A basket of mealie cobs was presented to my wife who, in saying thank you, expressed our children's liking for such food. This prompted the Chief to ask for the children to be brought! Once again the handshakes - with all six - followed by the hand clapping and then verbal greeting. The whole family had now been presented to the Chief - what next?

To our surprise and amazement the Chief announced that we were now part of his family. We felt this to be an honour, but this required a seal to the friendship from us. We were not prepared and wondered if the Chief would understand. He was very understanding when we promised to visit him again with the seal.

The Wednesday of the following week was the arranged date. The time fixed was 10 a.m. We could not be late; God had opened the door, we must not fail on our part. We were on time and once again the Chief received us most graciously, with the handshakes, the clapping and the verbal greeting, a tradition never forgotten by the African. Our gift was then handed to the counsellor. This called for more handclapping. Then to the rhythm of clapping hands, the counsellor kneeled down before the Chief to show the gift. When the Chief indicated that the gift was acceptable, the counsellor squatted on the ground and handed the gift, over his head, to the Chief. This gift was a Bible, suitably inscribed, and a small gift of money – we were not buying a friendship but sealing a relationship.

The Chief of the Matusa Tribe with Don Norton

Our visits to Mutasa district have been many since then and each time we have visited our Chief to be welcomed in the same royal way. On one visit we found the Chief sick. My wife prescribed treatment, which was duly collected from the Mission. Our next visit saw the Chief fit and well again. He thanked my wife personally, this time bypassing the counsellor – we were in, the door was wide open!

Now we wondered if the Chief would visit us at the Mission; we could but invite him. Our invitation was accepted willingly and Easter Saturday was the date agreed upon, convention time at the Mission. The news thrilled the Africans around the Mission and soon spread far and wide. Never before had the Chief visited ELIM. A crowd of loyal subjects awaited his arrival. As his Landrover stopped, a traditional welcome was given – a high-pitched wail from the women. Over a cup of tea in our house, we heard some of the history of the Mutasa people.

The Church was packed when we entered. Africans from all over the district, some of whom had never been to our church, and a good group of Europeans, all wanted to share the service. This was an opportunity to reach many with the Gospel.

Mention should be made of the Mutasa Scottish Pipe Band, complete with kilts, playing pipes of their own manufacture but giving a sound similar to the bagpipes. This band played hymn tunes, much to the delight and sometimes to the amusement of the people, and also escorted the Chief in his walk from the house to the church.

What has been achieved by all this? An opening to further the Kingdom of God has been gained. Paul desired to be "all things to all men, that I might by all means save some" (1 Corinthians 9:22). This is our desire. There is little time left. Satanic forces are active. We should be ever ready to pass through open doors of opportunity to reach the lost for the Master. He who came to seek and to save that which was lost says, "Even so send I you".

The next move is to obtain a church site and funds to build a church to house the people who are now regular attenders at our meetings, which are held under a tree. Please pray for this venture that His name might be glorified.

The Urgent Message

Ephesians 5:1

by Sheila Price

MR. BROWN decided to paper the living-room. As soon as he had eaten his breakfast, he put on his overalls and prepared to start work. He was in the middle of measuring the wallpaper when the doorbell rang. Mr. Brown opened the door and saw Clive, the young lad who worked at the post office.

"Telegram for you, Mr. Brown!" he said. "I hope that it is good news."

"It is indeed," said Mr. Brown. "An old friend whom I've not seen for a long time is in town. He wants to know if I'll meet him for lunch before he returns home".

"Are you going?" Clive asked.

"Well, I don't really know," said Mr. Brown. "I am rather busy today. But, yes - yes, I will go. I might not get another chance to see him."

Clive wrote down Mr. Brown'sreply to the telegram and cycled quickly back to the post office to wire the answer to Mr. Brown's friend.

Mr. Brown went upstairs to get ready for lunch. "I can do the decorating another day," he said to himself.

When he received the telegram, Mr. Brown had to make up his mind rightaway. Tomorrow would not have done; his friend would have gone by then.

We must make many decisions as we go through life. Sometimes we must decide immediately. The most important decision of all is the one that we must make today. We can either stay for ever in our sin or we can accept God's great and wonderful offer of salvation. This is the urgent message from God. We need to give Him our answer today. If we delay our decision until tomorrow, it could be too late.

From T. H. Stevenson

BEING yet in Ireland on a prolonged visit there is daily much one could write about the contemporary scene, but I wish to deal with historic links related to Elim, and of particular events of interest to me.

While ministering in Monaghan, Eire, my wife and I stayed at the home of our niece and her husband. Beside preaching in our Monaghan Church, we visited and shopped in Patton's, a large business in the county town and the business from which the first ministers of the Elim Evangelistic Band gave up their jobs to begin the Elim Church with George Jeffreys. Patton's sell everything from a slice of bacon or meat to feeding stuffs for pigs and cattle. My niece's husband is manager of the large timber trade, while his brother is manager of the largest side of the business, the feeding mill.

We also visited the home of the earliest remaining member of the Elim Evangelistic Band, our dear sister, Miss Adelaide Henderson, and of her pioneering brother, William Henderson. Beside the house in the heart of the country is the little school of which their father was headmaster. I learned about the disciplinarian headmaster from a former pupil!

I really intended to write about the Presbyterian Church which our young relatives in Monaghan attend. We were glad of their fellowship at Elim. Only Sunday morning services are conducted in this Presbyterian Church as the Protestant population slowly dwindles, and even in Eire many Protestants are but nominal. Indeed, the deeds of four new bungalows erected on formerly Presbyterian-owned land contain a clause that such bungalows may only be sold to Protestants. This is not discrimination or isolation, but preservation for the survival of a small Protestant neighbouring community. It is not difficult to understand why Eire freely elects a second Protestant President. With four per cent or less Protestant population it poses no problem. Even our Monaghan Church has lost considerable families in recent years as Protestants move to N. Ireland or across the water. The reason is entirely economics, not religious nor political. It highlights the over-simplified questions you hear in N. Ireland: "If the Republic of Eire is so wonderful, why do the Catholics remain in the North, or if they move, why do they go to Britain which they so much dislike or disagree with?"

Ballylaney Presbyterian Church, of which I have been writing, began in the latter half of the eighteenth century as a "Secession Church", though it is now reunited with the Presbyterian Church. It suffered early persecutions from their former brethren and their two earliest ministers (both Scotsmen) knew the inside of prisons for refusal to kiss the Bible on oath, protesting against "this popish custom". In 1777, when a famine raged in Ireland (past poverties are not completely divorced from ever-recurring Irish strifes), the first Minister of the Church took three hundred of his congregation with him to sail from near Newry to Virginia, U.S.A., where they established a colony.

Ireland to some is a land of intrigues. To those familiar with it, it is also an intriguing land.

An Honour for the Doctor

THE Queen's Birthday Honours List for 1973 was of particular interest to me because of the inclusion of one name which is more outstanding in Christian circles than the otherwise more famous names of politicians, sportsmen and heads of industry. I refer to Dr. Ronnie Holland, a world-famous authority on eye surgery and a missionary in the wild north-west frontier area of Pakistan. For services to medicine and the community in Pakistan Dr. Holland was awarded the C.B.E.

Harold Briley of the Daily Express gave a moving, sympathetic account of Dr. Holland's devoted work from which I quote: "With his wife Joan, the English nurse, they went there on high hopes. She was struck down by polio, but she fought back to overcome her handicap and become what you might call. . . an angel on wheels. A wheelchair this past thirty years could have been her prison. Instead it's been her passport to a lifetime of service to the poor and blind.

"The nurse and doctor fell in love when they worked together in Sussex Royal Infirmary, Brighton. Ronnie was already committed to a career as a missionary doctor, in the footsteps of his famous father, Sir Henry Holland. Sir Henry became a legend at the missionary hospital in Quetta where Ronnie was born. He succeeded his father there, preaching the gospel as he wielded the surgeon's knife. This vast area covers the snow-bound mountains of Afghanistan to the hot desert plains of Sind.

"Joan had joined him thirty years ago to get married. When polio struck in Kashmir he saved her life with artificial respiration and a broken iron lung repaired with a car inner tube. She was left crippled in both legs and one arm, and with weakened lungs. Her friends said she was finished. But not Joan Holland, the fighter. She made a remarkable recovery, becoming a mother and bringing up three children, and a partner in a remarkable, dedicated team.

"Dr. Holland talked to his patients in the six or seven local languages he knows fluently, while Joan took clinical notes, handed out eye ointment and religious tracts, and gave anaesthetics. Dr. Holland picks up little more than £1,000 a year as a missionary doctor, with the support of transport, equipment and drugs. What fees he gets for treating the rich he gives to help the poor. . . He looks back on a life-time in which he has carried out an astonishing 100,000 operations to save sight or cure blindness.

" 'My greatest rewards', he says, 'have been to see so many people blink as the post-operation bandages are taken off and cry out 'I can see! I can see!' '. . . Ronald William Barrington Holland . . . you've earned your C.B.E."

This is a wonderful story of Christian service and utter dedication. What greater proof is needed that a consecrated life of self-forgetting and caring for others is abundantly satisfying and rewarding? I think instinctively of our own equally dedicated doctors, Dr. and Mrs. R.C. Brien, who have served God for twenty-five years in the hospital at Inyanga North, Rhodesia, The time has come for their retirement, but no young doctor has responded to the appeal and come forward to carry on the great work. I have a dreadful suspicion that someone is being disobedient to God's call, for He is always well organised and has His men chosen and equipped. I realise that it will mean a great sacrifice for, as with Dr. Holland, the salary will be only that of a missionary and in no way comparable to that which most doctors receive. But think of the sacrifice that He made for us and think of those for whom He died who are still in their spiritual darkness and physical need in Rhodesia. If you are God's man for Inyanga, in Christ's name, hesitate no longer, but obey the call and choose a life of rich fulfilment where the need is greatest.

I'll go where you want me to go, dear Lord,
O'er mountain, or plain, or sea;
I'll say what you want me to say, dear Lord,
I'll be what you want me to be.

An Opportunity Perhaps?

asks Adrian L. Hawkes

KIRBY Lonsdale, just off the M 6, is on the edge of the Lake District for those who really don't know. What's there? You may well ask!

I was asked to be the preacher at a youth meeting there recently. After crawling up 1 in 4 hills, the engine of my car getting hotter and hotter, I arrived. All that I could see were cows, sheep, fields, and more cows, sheep and fields! I asked myself where the people were to come from for a youth meeting here. Houses and people were in more than short supply. I first went to Lund Farm, where my hosts for the evening talked of their next-door neighbour whose house I couldn't even see across the valley. I wondered still more where anyone could come from for this youth meeting at which I was to speak. Perhaps they might get half a dozen, I thought.

I was taken to another farm in the next village and was told that the meeting would be there. When I got inside, into the kitchen of all places, there were well over fifty young people crammed in rows singing choruses. The organisers introduced me and apologised for the shortage of numbers that week (there's a weekly youth meeting) "but there was a coffee bar running as a witness in the village at the same time and many of the young people who would normally have been there were staffing that". Up to seventy apparently was the usual Friday night youth meeting attendance.

Once a year they run their big rally – not in the kitchen, for that's too small. They use the barn for that. How many usually come to that? Around 500, but it's still growing!

Weekly meetings, where people think nothing of travelling forty miles to the service and forty miles home again just to experience Christian fellowship and hear the Word of God – this isn't some far-off state, mind – this is England!

The people in the area have a choice of churches to go to, Church of England, or Methodist. There is the only sad note that I found in my visit. Some of the leaders with whom I spoke – not just the younger ones either – were deeply concerned with the modernistic trends of their ministers. "Some of them don't even believe in the Bible," they sadly told me. "We would be ashamed to take our unsaved friends to some of the services with some of our preachers", was another comment I heard. "But what else can we do? We do run these extra meetings", they said, and from what little I saw God certainly is blessing and moving in those.

I was asked questions about Divine Healing and so on. Altogether I came home thrilled that God was working in yet another area of this country. "God on the Farm" was how one well-known evangelist put it. Though I came back excited with God's work, however, I also came back challenged with the thought that we usually go for the big cities and the populated centres. How about our Elim movement doing a little farming?

It's a thought!

Alive!

by Ruth Bridger

IN the scorching heat of the blazing Palestinian sun, a man hangs dying from a wooden cross. Sweat and blood trickle down his face showing the torturous agony of his execution. His body is racked with pain. Death is very near. People stand and watch, some because of duty, some because they are interested in seeing the last of this man, while others just sit in apathy, bored by the whole affair. One man sits alone, tense, taking in every agonised breath, anxious to capture the last moments of Jesus Christ on celluloid before a thunderstorm ruins another day of filming.

It is 1973. Jesus is still news and to some people a multi-million dollar moneymaker. Based on an original idea from the New Testament, about a man who claimed that he was the Son of God, Jesus Christ Superstar is now within the reach of everyone. This non-stop rock musical, a complete sell-out on Broadway and in the West End, is now available to the masses and is expected to net another fifty million dollars.

If you think that there is a similarity between this story and the one that has been told for generations, then the resemblance ends at the crucifixion, for that is when the curtain falls and the cinema projector slows

The Family Altar

Scripture Union Portions — Notes by Ray Hughes

Monday, July 2nd — Romans 15:22-33

"Strive together with me in your prayers to God for me" (v.30).

THE powerful Paul pleads for PRAY-ers to join him in prayer that he might travel only by the "will of God", thus fulfilling (v.23) a deep desire, a dedicated duty (vv.25,26), and a determined devotion (v.29). Prayer changes things - or keeps things as the pure heart had envisaged.

Tuesday, July 3rd — Romans 16:1-16

"I commend" (v.1).

IN his writings Paul describes the Church as a co-ordinated body and extols the virtue of each member, emphasising that we are workers together with Christ. Appreciating associates is not always the easiest task, but all great leaders "salute" the brethren. Even Christ desired some human support, as is evidenced by His request that the disciples should pray with Him in Gethsemane.

Wednesday, July 4th — Romans 16:17-27

"Mark them which cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned" (v.17).

IN days when man is trying to organise the Church via the ecumenical movement or seeking to de-spiritualise the Church with state worship - centres and state registered preachers in communistic countries, it is good to remember that uniformity is not unity. As Paul told Timothy (2 Timothy 3:16), "All scripture is given. . . for correction". Scriptural standards will always result in Satan being under your feet (Romans 16:20) and in establishment in the Gospel's power (v.25).

Thursday, July 5th — 1 Kings 12:1-24

"The cause was from the Lord" (v.15).

A REBELLION in the realm, a division in the dynasty, a brother in obstinate opposition – such events can happen within the local church fellowship. The prophetical pointer that gave God's guidance then stands good now: "Ye shall not go up, nor fight against your brethren" (v.24). One should have recourse to Matthew 18:15-17, remembering "to speak the truth in love" (Ephesians 4:15), realising, however, that "the battle is the Lord's" (1 Samuel 17:46).

Friday, July 6th — 2 Chronicles 12:1-16

"He forsook the law of the Lord, and all Israel with him" (v.1).

"IN footprints on the sands of time some people leave only the marks of a heel." What kind of mark are you making? Rehoboam made a black mark, not only on his own life, but also on the lives of all the people whom he was in a position to influence. As soon as he backslid, things went wrong, until, in the magnificent mercy of God, who will heal all our backsliding, he was granted a measure of restoration. Notice, however, that while godliness and gold should have been his portion, backsliding and brass were his realisation.

Saturday, July 7th — 1 Kings 12:25-33; 13:1-10

"It is too much for you to go up to Jerusalem" (v.28).

A CONVENIENT Christianity motivated by self-interest is not the product of some twentieth century house meeting. Such attitudes have always been present, for men try to avoid the price that God demands. The prince, the priests, the place of worship and the people were all perverted by an ever-increasing evil influence. Failing to respond to the standard of Scripture or to the searching Spirit can lead only to judgment (John 3:35,36).

Sunday, July 8th — 1 Kings 13:11-34

"Disobedient to the word of the Lord" (v.26).

HAVING found the will of God, take hold, hold on and never let go, for the enemy of our souls will often come to us as an angel of light (2 Corinthians 11:14) to seduce us to sinning. The disobedience in question was disastrous even in the life of one who had been used mightily in the service of God. May we say with Paul, "I have been obedient to the heavenly vision" – as someone has said, "The will of God – nothing more, nothing less, nothing else".

to a stand-still on Superstar. "He was a man who got beyond himself and went too far" is the view expressed by the actor playing the role of Jesus in the film version, but, unfortunately, the writers never went far enough. The amazing truth that has transformed human lives throughout the centuries – that JESUS IS ALIVE – is never retold by the creator of Jesus Christ Superstar, whoever he is or was.

So either we let the Superstar of the stage and screen become the figure on which people will base their ideas of Christianity or we go out and proclaim the Jesus whom we know and love, Jesus who is ALIVE, Jesus who is still concerned about the individual.

The choice is ours.

The Media and the Northern Ireland Local Government Elections

by James T. Bradley

WE must all of us almost be desolated by the reaction of the media to the recent local government elections in Northern Ireland. Their casual treatment of these election results reveals more tellingly than anything else that they have said or not said about the Northern Ireland situation what they really wished to happen. In my own paper of May 30th, I looked in vain for spreading headlines proclaiming the result of the elections and for comment thereon. I must admit that at the back of my mind I had, after all, a feeling that I would look in vain there for any reference to the Northern Ireland elections. Pride of place was given in my paper to what is happening in, above all places, Greece! Turning over to page two I found the bare facts and the results; the sparseness of comment spoke volumes in itself.

There is no doubt in my mind and I am sure this must be true of multitudes of others, Protestants in particular, that had the elections gone the other way, everything else, the Lonrho affair, the affairs of Lords Lambton and Jellicoe, Greece, the Watergate affair, the Cod War, all would have been relegated to the background. There would have been splashed headlines and a spate of comment on the B.B.C., T.V., and in the Press by every conceivable authority and non-authority on the Northern Ireland situation.

However one may look at it, and however unbiased one may try to be, the issue in Northern Ireland is a religious one. Hundreds and hundreds of British soldiers are killed or maimed for life with little protest, but had the I.R.A. and its supporters been trounced militarily as they have been trounced in the ballot box, what a furore would have been touched off. The glee would, doubtless, have been muted, but nevertheless would have come through at another defeat for Protestantism, for the United Kingdom, for the forces of law and order, for all the factors that make for a stable society, and another victory for minorities prepared to use any means, however disruptive or brutal, to wreck society to achieve their ends.

Let us be fair. Ireland's real troubles are Pope-originated, anti-British though Southern Ireland may be. Here is the historical background:

The bull of Pope Adrian IV issued to Henry II of England in 1154 proclaimed the right of the Holy Roman Church over Ireland and all other Christian lands. "Henry has announced to us his desire to enter Ireland in order to subdue the people, to make them obedient to laws and root out from among them the seeds of sin; the Irish are to accept him and obey him as their liege lord, and he shall enforce Peter's pence and preserve the rights of the Church."

To implement the bull, Henry II landed near Waterford on October 17th, 1171. Already he had received the submission fo some Irish rulers; Adrian's bull had done its work among the Irish rulers, hence their amazing surrender to the English king. "At Lismore Henry assembled a council where the laws of England were by all freely received and confirmed with due legal solemnity."

Henry's land-hungry barons then proceeded to reduce and annexe the lands of Ireland's rulers. Pope Adrian's grant was renewed by his successor, Alexander III. "No doubt can exist that Alexander presented Ireland to Henry. At a council of bishops at Dublin in March 1177 Cardinal Vivian as legate, declared Henry's right to Ireland, and enjoined on the whole people not to depart from allegiance. No protest was made, and from that to 1534 English kings, Irish bishops and chiefs fully accepted the fact and the practical consequences of Alexander's Privilege" (A History of Medieval Ireland, by Edmund Curtis, M.A.).

It is a prevalent idea that religion should be the last thing that people should quarrel about and should have strong opinions about. Yet what a man believes concerning this life, or the life to come, or both, is surely the matter that most affects his conduct.

We have said before that the Catholic-Protestant confrontation as seen in Northern Ireland, the Arab-Israeli confrontation in the Middle East, and the Communist-Christian confrontation as seen throughout the world, are all part of the one confrontation between the powers of good and evil, manifested religiously, politically or ideologically.

Members of the Church of Jesus Christ who are au fait from the Word of God with the great conflict between the powers of light and darkness will realise that their own part in this conflict is set for us in the latter part of Ephesians chapter 6. The practice that we are most reluctant to engage in is that which is most emphasised in this passage, the sevenfold reference, "praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit and watching thereunto with thanksgiving and for me," says Paul, "that utterance may be given unto me that I may open my mouth boldly to make known the mystery of the Gospel for which I am ambassador in bonds that therein I may speak boldly as I ought to speak." Only spiritual weapons can avail against the forces that oppose the work of God and seek to prevent the spread of the Gospel.

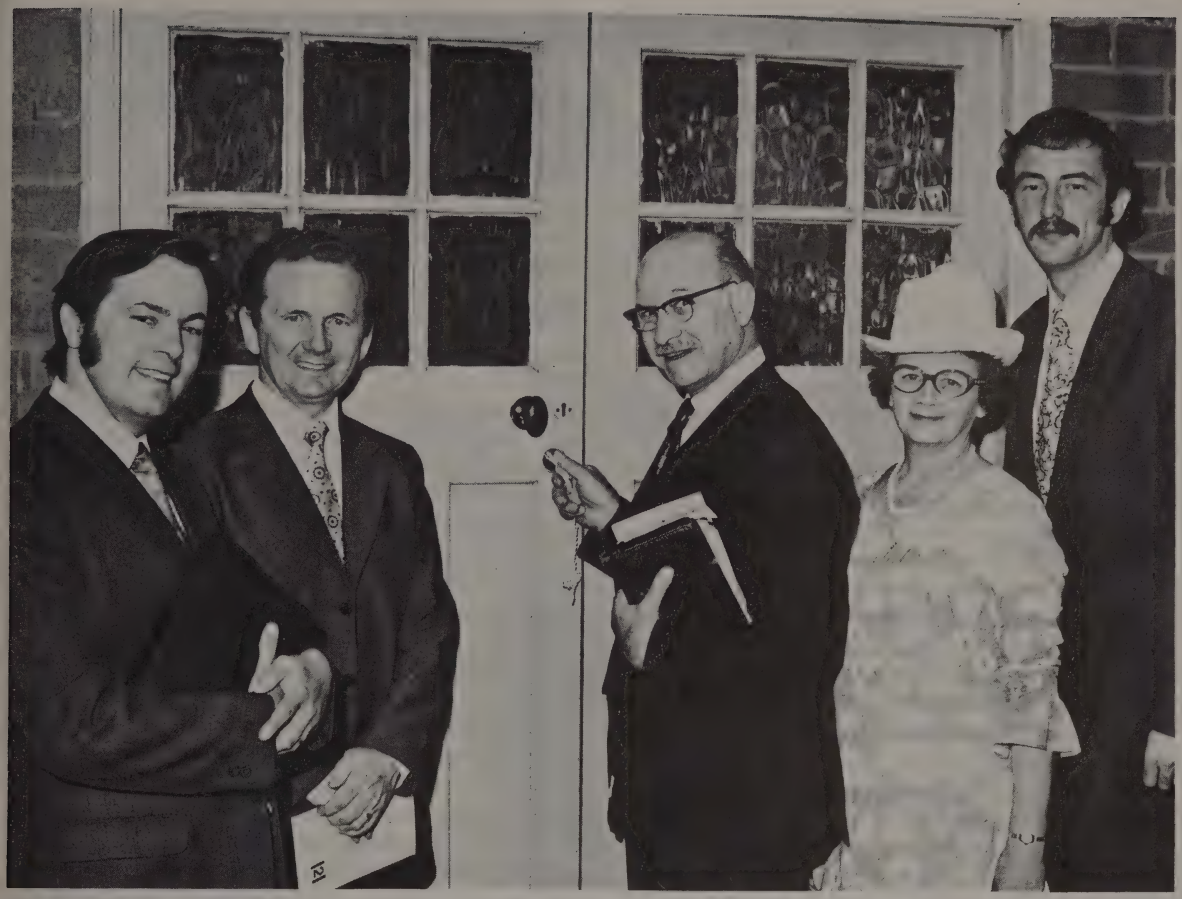
THE supreme confidence of the apostle Paul is almost daunting! One of the sublime heights to which his expectations rose is found in these words: "And I am sure that, when I come to you, I shall come in the fulness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ." (Romans 15:29) – not just "the gospel", or even "the blessing", but "the fulness". These touches are of the essence. He who wrote that we are "saved by hope" was not short of this precious commodity himself!

Another scintillating example is found in 1 Corinthians chapters 4 and 5. I am attracted to the use of the telling description "puffed up". The mind-picture is so apt!

The famous dissertation as to the sheer idiocy of partisanship in spiritual things occupies much of the first three chapters of the Book. Beginning with the laying down of the ultimate standard regarding the ministry, "Let a man so account of us, as of the ministers of Christ, and stewards of the mysteries of God." (4:1), Paul moves on to the question of judging.

As he does so often in his writings, he shows the two extremes of our nothing and our everything. "For who maketh thee to differ from another? and what hast thou that thou didst not receive? now if thou didst receive it, why dost thou glory, as if thou hadst not received it?" are the rapier thrusts of his demands. "Learn in us" he says, meaning himself and Apollos, "not to think of men above that which is written, that no one of you be puffed up for one against another."



It reminds me of some carol singing we used to do at one church where we were ministering. A group of collectors went round to ask for donations for the Sunday school treat at Christmas. One of them was deaf. He tended to collect from streets in which we had not sung or which we had left about half an hour previously! Not being able to hear well, he just plodded on, street after street, irrespective of whether the folk had heard any carols or not. His was always the biggest collection, which effectively dampened everybody else who had zealously gone round with the choir rattling their boxes within earshot of the Yuletide song! The absence or presence of that melody seemed inconsequential, just as prowess, position, and human ideas of glory are irrelevant in the spiritual sphere.

After describing the spectacle "unto the world" presented by the apostles and detailing the series of contrasts as to their apparent weakness, that is by reference to their desire to see their converts well rooted, grounded and fed, Paul gets back to the "puffed up" illustration. "Now some are puffed up, as though I would not come to you." he remonstrates (v.18), but then comes the absolute height. All the squabbles are seen to be the petty things they really are. All the personality complexes fade away like a television picture after you have turned the switch off.

Here is the dazzling wonder of his assertion: "I will come to you shortly, if the Lord will, and will know, not the speech of them which are puffed up, but the power. For the kingdom of God is not in word, but in power." (vv.19,20).

There you have it. That is the heart of it. All the publicity and all the talk and all the self-display mean nothing at all, if there is no power. Paul knew that he would have that power!

God give us Acts 1:8 power every day – and especially every time we minister the Word!

JESUS VEM BREVE

"A Brand plucked from the Burning" by H. Jeffery

THIS is a photograph of Carlito de Oliveira preaching in the Elim Pentecostal Church, Londrina, Brazil, on the first Sunday he became the Pastor of that Church. During the recent Annual Brazilian Conference the former Pastor Norberto do Espirito Santo was elected President of the Elim work in Brazil and, as a result, had to move to the Headquarters' Church in Socorro, Sao Paulo.

Carlito is the man who, about four years ago, was suffering with tuberculosis, one lung having collapsed and the other being severely affected. He was haemorrhaging from the lungs and critically ill when the local Elim Pastor was called to pray for him. He first gave him the gospel. Carlito was unable to speak, but he nodded his acceptance of Christ when an appeal was made. The haemorrhage immediately ceased, but the doctors insisted that he should go to a hospital for an operation, as they said, to save his life. Carlito was full of fear about the operation, but, remembering how the haemorrhage had stopped in answer to prayer, cried to the Lord to complete the work.

It was not long before he began to gain weight and to breath normally. He was soon allowed home for a weekend. On the way home, he asked the Lord to prove to him that he was healed by arranging a baptismal service somewhere that weekend so that he could be baptised. On arrival home, the first thing his wife told him was that there was a baptismal service in the Elim Church opposite! That Sunday he was baptised and I had the joy of baptising him as I was then visiting the Church.

On his return to hospital, further tests were made and X–rays taken. He was declared to be completely healed. Praise God! He was soon working and witnessing for the Master and growing in grace and the knowledge of the Lord. He received the baptism in the Spirit last September and accepted the leadership of a congregation of people converted in one villa as a result of the radio programme of Londrina, sponsored by missionary gifts from Britain. He is now in charge of the Londrina Church, the radio programme and five smaller Churches in the surrounding district.

Pray for him and his family and for all the other national workers that they may preach the Word with power to the saving of many souls and the edifying of His Church.

Our Tribute to a Friend, Pastor and Brother in Christ, Albert J. K. Magee

FOR some forty-five years Pastor A.J.K. Magee served in the ranks of the Elim ministry. It can be said of him that he fought a good fight, that he kept the faith, that he has now finished his course and awaits with all who love the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ the crown of righteousness that fadeth not away.

Brother Magee entered Elim Bible College in 1931 and since then has served the Church of Jesus Christ in Elim faithfully as a Minister in many churches in the British Isles.

We Elim people have known Albert Magee as a Brother in Christ, friendly, unassuming and humorous. Many of us have known him as a colleague who was loyal, devoted and faithful to his ministry. A very large number of our people have known him as a Pastor, one who was sympathetic, full of understanding, kind and loving; one who, like Paul, was willing to spend and be spent for those to whom he ministered. Many of our members scattered over the British Isles will testify to his loving concern as a Pastor for their welfare.

Some of us more immediately can recall the blessing he was to us during his ministry in Cheltenham in his last years. His exposition of the Word of God, whether in teaching, evangelism or in exhortation, was conveyed to us with a disarming simplicity which tended to hide its depth and penetration.

Testimony down the years had been borne to his Sunday morning ministry around the Lord's table. We thank God that we had the privilege during his ministry in Cheltenham of experiencing this at first hand. We would acknowledge that he seemed to have that contact with God that brought us all into blessing, a sensitivity to the Spirit, the possession of which may have been more costly than we realised, but which all of us Ministers would covet earnestly.

Many churches in the British Isles have been blessed by Pastor Magee's ministry. After leaving Elim Bible College his first pastorate was in Bath, then followed the three pastorates in Scotland - Edinburgh, Greenock and Dundee. Following this there were two pastorates in Halifax and Sheffield then Ilford, Carlisle, Swansea, Ealing and a great ministry in Ballymena. On his retirement he took up the ministry in Cheltenham. Many young people in particular have cause to thank God that he came to Cheltenham. He won his way to the hearts of young people with a wonderful felicity. They crowded round him, loved him, and showed their love for him. It was a joy to witness their response to his appeals, both for salvation and to take part in the services. Their freshness in worship on Sunday mornings, their bright testimonies, and their freshness in prayer at the prayer meetings were an inspiration to all who listened to them.

Pastor Magee was District Superintendent for a time of our North London Presbytery and sat on several District Presbytery Committees.

As a personal testimony I may speak of two matters. My own father used to speak of the friendliness, good humour, fellowship and understanding of both Pastor and Mrs. Magee. He was obviously very happy with them and also under their ministry. Additionally it must be said that some of us learned much since his coming to Cheltenham about conducting church services. God seemed to have his hand upon Albert Magee in a special way in this matter.

The sympathy and understanding of our whole Movement go out to Mrs. Noreen Magee and their family at this time of bereavement. We uphold them in prayer and pray that the Holy Spirit will fulfil His office to comfort and sustain us in this hour of parting. May their thoughts be drawn still nearer to God and to heavenly things because their loved-one is now with his Lord in a closer fellowship, deeper intimacy and holier and more ecstatic worship than even he enjoyed here on earth.

Our Lord came anointed with the Spirit that He might appoint to them that mourn in Zion beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness, that they might be called trees of righteousness, the planting of the Lord that He might be glorified. May this be the portion of all those who are bereaved as a result of Mr. Magee's home-call.

JAMES T. BRADLEY
Secretary-General

As it is quite impossible to acknowledge individually all letters of condolence and gifts to the Minor Hall Fund, Mrs. Magee, Wesley and Noreen wish to express their heartfelt thanks to all Churches, Ministers, and friends for their kind letters, gifts and expressions of sympathy and love in their recent bereavement of a devoted husband and father.

To Pastor A.J. Downes and local church members a special Thank You.

From the President's pen

Imitation Fire won't burn

by John Lancaster

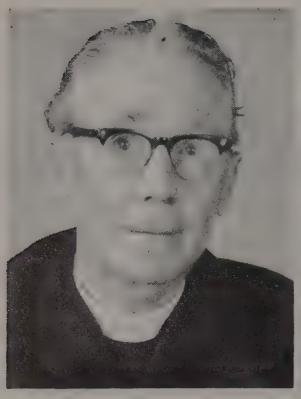
ONE of my school-masters had a "thing" about electric fires which were made to look like coal fires. "You might as well put shafts on motor cars to make them look like horse-drawn carriages," he said. In his opinion electric fires ought to look like electric fires not imitations of something that they had superseded.

In this he would have won the warm approval of John Ruskin, who, in The Stones of Venice, complained bitterly about architects who arranged to have wood painted to look like stone. Such a practice, he considered, was grossly dishonest – an architectural lie. What he would have said about the modern use of imitation can hardly be imagined. The plastic age would have given him apoplexy.

Plastic flowers have neither scent nor nectar. This is why bees don't bother with them. Similarly, imitation fire will neither warm your hands nor burn the toast. It's red, but dead. Herein lies the folly of imitation; it cannot keep its promises. It is weighed in the balances and found wanting.

In days when there is much that is artificial it is well for us to remember the need for spiritual reality. A cheap, second-rate, plastic Pentecost may look like the real thing, but it will not stand up to the tremendous pressures involved in spiritual life today. As never before, we are faced with a concentration of demonic power that threatens the destruction of the society in which we live. Nothing short of genuine Holy Ghost power can meet this challenge. We cannot afford, therefore, to be satisifed with anything less than a New Testament experience of the power of the Spirit.

The divine instructions regarding the holy anointing oil contained a clause forbidding any imitation to be made (Exodus 30:31-33). Any attempt to imitate Pentecostal blessing can likewise bring us under God's disapproval. Let us be honest – it is possible to simulate Pentecostal blessing by the use of certain hymns and choruses and, sadly, it is also possible to produce a human imitation of the gifts of the Spirit. I am not suggesting that this is done out of anything more than a very real hunger for the blessing of God, but this does not obviate the very real spiritual dangers involved.



When Elijah challenged the false religion of his day he carefully instructed the prophets of Baal that they should "put no fire under" the sacrifice. He demanded the authentic fire from heaven, not a human substitute however plausible. We may produce what we think is a "lively atmosphere" by our sheer enthusiasm and our smiling exhortations to the congregation to "pull all the stops out", but we must beware lest we are substituting human crowd psychology for the real anointing of the Spirit. Real Pentecost is not measured by the amount of noise it engenders. Dynamics not decibels are the true criteria of spiritual worth.

By all means let us throw ourselves with all our enthusiasm into all we seek to do for God. Let us not be niggardly in any way, but at the same time let us recognise our need for the genuine fire of God in our souls and the genuine moving of the Spirit in our meetings. Anything less is futile. Faced by the harsh realities of our modern world we must have the genuine anointing of the Spirit. Cheap imitations of the Gifts of the Spirit can never manifest the glorious authority and blessed uplift of the real thing. Painted fire will not burn and mere words without the anointing of the Spirit will neither command the respect of hell nor bring help to men.

May God give us the real thing. God make us willing to seek His face in humble prayer and expectant faith so that we shall continually experience in our churches and our own lives the glow of living fire. The words of Isaiah 50:11 have a message for modern ears: "Behold, all ye that kindle a fire, that compass yourselves about with sparks: walk in the light of your fire, and in the sparks that ye have kindled. This shall ye have of mine hand; ye shall lie down in sorrow." God is not impressed by human fire-raising. Why should He be? He Himself is a consuming fire and out of the fire of His own glorious nature He has shed forth tongues of living flame. Why then should we rub the bent sticks of human ingenuity together when this mighty conflagration leaps around us?

Let us build afresh the altar of the Lord. Let us seek Him with all our hearts until the fire from heaven descends afresh upon us.

The real thing is still available!

A series on the Epistle of JUDE
— some great Subjects from a little Book

1. In Defence of the Faith (Jude v.3, N.E.B.)

by
F. J. Slemming

It is not my intention to write a commentary on the Book of Jude, nor am I going to attempt an exposition of its twenty-five verses. It is my intention to introduce the Letter and its writer and then take up some of the interesting, exciting subjects with which this Book abounds.

THE author of the Letter introduces himself in his opening words: "Jude, the servant of Jesus Christ, and brother of James". In the original text the name is given as "Judas". Quite a number of men with this name move across the pages of the New Testament. We have Judas Iscariot, Judas of Galilee, Judas surnamed Barnabas, and the writer of this Letter, who describes himself as "brother of James"; he could have spoken of himself as "Judas, the Lord' s brother".

The name "Judas" was once quite popular and respected, but, for the past 2,000 years, it has been anathema, a synonym of apostasy and treachery, for it designates a traitor. It is intriguing to see such a name heading an Epistle whose theme and subject is apostasy, the great apostasy to which the Church is exposed and which intensifies in the days immediately preceding the coming again of our Lord Jesus Christ.

The Book of the Acts is sometimes spoken of as the Book of Beginnings, so called because it describes how God planned and used the deeds of good men in the beginning of the building of His Church. In complete contrast, Jude points out for our warning and our instruction the deeds and teaching of evil men in the days that end the building of His Church just prior to its completion and rapture at the second coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.

A great question is posed by our Lord in Luke 18: 8: "When the son of Man cometh, shall He find faith on the earth?". In this Letter Jude gives an answer to that pertinent question.

The apostasy is Jude's great subject and theme.

Paul writes of it in 2 Thessalonians 2:3, when he speaks about a falling away from the faith in the last days. The margin is interesting; it gives us the words, "The Apostasy". Writing to Timothy, Paul again speaks of apostasy as a departing from the faith (1 Timothy 4:1). He defines it as an unwillingness to endure sound doctrine. Peter in 2 Peter 2:1 adds yet another word when he tells us of false teachers appearing and bringing in damnable heresies "even denying the Lord that bought them".

In this Book of Jude teaching about all this reaches its climax. The whole matter is spread before us. We are taken back to the dawn of history and shown apostasy there. God's people, Israel, are indicated and we are shown apostasy there. We are taken ahead to the closing days of history and again it is shown us there. Jude leads us into the realms of the supernatural and points out that the foul thing can be seen there. He turns us away from the supernatural to the natural world and, lo, we see it there. Jude deals with apostasy in detail, describes and illustrates it and warns and instructs us about its dangers in almost every sentence he pens.

Read and re-read this little Epistle. We must see these last days' conditions and get some help and instruction if we would earnestly contend for the faith.

Surely we recognise the great upsurge of apostasy, the blatant denial of the faith, the awful blasphemy that faces us and meets us at every turn. The last pages of the history of the Church are being turned and the warnings and strong words of Jude's Epistle can help us not to fall victims to the evil onslaught, but by God's grace to be enabled to standfast in the faith.

Apathy opens the door to liberalism, materialism, humanism and modernism. Evil "Men have crept in unawares" is how Jude describes their method and practice and still they creep in – ungodly, that is, worldly men, carnal men. See what they do: "turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness", sceptical men, "denying the only Lord God", lawless men, despising dominion and speaking evil of dignities, criticising men, murmuring and complaining.

In the knowledge of all this Jude says to us who call ourselves believers, "Earnestly contend for the faith. . . once delivered". That Faith has never been

33. Doing the Will of God (Genesis 31:16)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

WHEN Jacob went to look for a wife, he intended to be away for only a few months, until Esau had "cooled off"; in fact, he was away for over twenty years! While he remained a poor relation, Laban tolerated him, but the blessing of God manifested itself, Jacob became wealthy despite Laban's trickery and, as a result, Laban and his family became hostile to Jacob. Then the Lord told Jacob to return to Bethel and home. Jacob was prospering in the good pasture-land of Syria and the journey home faced him with many dangers, yet his family were unanimous in their decision: "Whatever the Lord commands you, do it; His will is the right way!"

The will of God is always the best way for us. It is true that His way is not always the easiest path to take. We may want to settle down comfortably in the circumstances in which we are placed, while His will may point us to a difficult or uncomfortable road and may call for the exercise of all our spiritual and moral powers. The way of God may lead to heartache, as it did with Jacob, whose lovely Rachel died on the journey, or bring distress, as it did to him when his brother Esau came to meet him with a band of armed men. Yet it is the only way which a Christian can honourably choose, for we recall the words of the Lord Jesus: "Any man who puts his hand to the plough and looks back is not fit for the Kingdom".

The will of God is truly the best way, for He will both bless those who honour Him and use them to fulfil His purpose (Romans 8:28).

withdrawn; adjusted, amended or changed. It is our God-given duty to defend it and contend for it against all opposition. There are three ways by which you can do this: by PRAYER – "praying in the Holy Ghost" (v.20); by STUDY – "building up yourselves in your most holy faith" (v.20); and by SERVICE – "keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life". (v.21). You keep faith and He will keep faith, keeping us in the hours of tribulation and trial to which we are all exposed.

He will keep me till the River
Rolls its waters at my feet
Then He'll bear me safely over
Where the loved ones I shall meet.

Perfect Cleansing

Psalm 119:9

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

IF you were to ask Tommy what he disliked most of all, he would reply, "Soap and water". He could not see why he had to use them so many times a day! He would not wash at all if his mother did not remind him.

Yesterday, for instance, he came home from school, hung up his blazer, and was about to sit down to tea when his mother asked, "Have you washed your hands, Tommy?"

"They are not dirty, mummy," he replied. "I washed them before I went to school this morning and I washed them at playtime and I washed them after P.T. Do I really have to wash them again?"

"Of course, dear," his mother said, and off Tommy went to wash his hands.

After he had eaten, Tommy did his homework and then went out to play. At half-past seven his mother called down the garden, "Come along, Tommy! It's time for bed now. Say good night to your friends".

"See you tomorrow," Tommy said to his friends, and in he came, his knees covered in mud.

"I have prepared your bath, Tommy", his mother said.

"Oh dear," Tommy sighed. "Why must I wash so many times a day? Why couldn't I just have one big bath every week and get all the dirt off in one wash?"

"Because," said his mother, "the dirt would be harder to remove. You would need a scrubbing brush to get it off. There is so much dust and dirt around, Tommy, that we need to keep ourselves clean. That means we need to wash every day. It is not only our bodies that become dirty, Tommy, but our hearts, too. Sin stains our hearts with dirty thoughts and habits and we need to wash these away, too. Christ has promised us perfect cleansing through His own precious blood. Just as we must use soap and water every day to keep our bodies fresh and clean, so Christians need to read the Word of God daily in order that their lives may be refreshed and cleansed."

Elim Bible College Open Day

by W. J. Maybin,
Pastor of our Southampton Chu

JUNE 16th was a date ringed in many calendars for months and many prayers for fine weather were expressed. How wonderfully God answered prayer! The experts have since informed us that it was the warmest weekend in June for three years. Beautiful Grenehurst Park bathed in the glow of such summer sunshine looked more charming than ever. With hundreds of Elim friends sitting about on the grass, walking around the delightful grounds, or exploring the College precincts or the studio recording unit, it was borne in upon one in a new way that this was indeed "our" college. We felt justly proud to belong, and very thankful to God for such an institution and for our devoted Principal and his equally devoted wife who work so hard to make Capel what it is – not only a Bible-based College, but also a centre for fellowship and conferences.

Open Day is fast becoming a "special" in our Elim calendar and it was very evident that interest is building up, for this year saw one of the greatest crowds ever packing the large tent and spreading around outside in the many chairs provided for the overflow.

The afternoon session got on its way with Douglas Fincher warming up with a few choruses. The Chairman, Pastor L. Wigglesworth, felt at home right away, and soon got the vast crowd singing with confidence, "My heart is fixed". It was good to see so many young people rejoicing in this assurance in a world where so few seem to have an anchor.

One of the highlights of the service was the singing of the entire College group, rendering that great favourite, "The heavens are telling" by Beethoven. Other singing items were equally enjoyed.

It was good to welcome overseas visitors in the persons of Pastors J. Egyir-Paintsil (Ghana) and O. Raper (South Africa), and to hear a few words from each.

The Principal's report gave much cause for rejoicing as Mr. Gilpin outlined for us what was happening at Capel. As he resumed his seat it was with our prayers that God would continue to bless his leadership in this vital section of Elim's witness. The brief sight of a row of young men ready to step forth into the ranks of Elim's ministry was proof that the patience and work so faithfully rendered are not in vain. May God bless them as they leave the classroom for the pulpit!

Awards time is always eagerly awaited, not only by the students, but by families, friends and those of us who feel that we have some little share in the tuition given. Miss J. Seymour, whose services in the language section have been greatly appreciated, made the presentations.

The evening service saw an even larger congregation, with Pastor Wigglesworth again in the chair. Again the members of the College singing groups gave us much delight as they rendered their various items. A special word of thanks goes to the choir for their rendering of "Let Mount Zion rejoice", with a student taking the solo part with such ease and expertise.

The preacher was Pastor John Phillips of Assemblies of God. He was in fine form for the ministry of the Word. He assured us that he was at home with the students and it soon became evident that he was at home with the entire congregation. How we rejoiced to become aware that in our midst there was One who was "greater than the temple" (Matthew 12:6). He brought the day to a close with a powerful, logical conclusion that, if the text was true, then there was One present who could meet every need. A very goodly number expressed their desire to make contact with the unseen Christ as they stood in large numbers within and without the tent. The day finished with that now very favourite hymn, "Glory, glory be to Jesus".

So, as we farewelled, it was with the thought in mind that the risen Lord had again condescended to tabernacle with us.

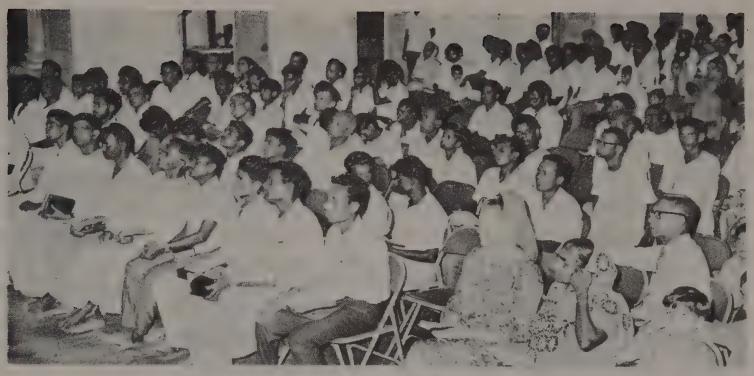
MINISTERS of the Maranatha Full Gospel Churches from the Andaman Islands, Rajasthan, Mysore, Andhra Pradesh, Kerala and Tamil Nadu States joined recently for a memorable Conference in Madras. There were thirty-five of them, but some brought elders from their churches, making a big family of about seventy during the four days of the Conference.

Pastors Henry Joseph and John Prentice welcomed the ministers who were introduced in turn. There followed at this first meeting a song of praise and a season of prayer. Then Pastor G. Sundaram, Superintendent Pastor of the Apostolic Christian Assemblies, brought an apt message for the ministers. His many years of service and ministry enabled him to reach the hearts of all. The message was direct and practical, leading everyone to heart-searching and readjustment before God.

Pastor Sundaram spoke on the second morning also, while Pastor Prentice gave the address on the third. Two Pastors of the Fellowship, Joseph Balachandran and Dhayanandam, brought papers on "Starting new Works" and on "The Importance of Children's Work in the Churches".



The four evening services were greatly blessed. Pastor R. Courts, national representative of World Missionary Evangelism, was the speaker. He brought anointed messages appropriate to the occasion. His simple, straightforward, forceful words, his excellent illustrations and touches of humour will long remain in the hearts of the people.

The Saturday evening meeting was a very special one when successful students of the Maranatha Bible Training Institute received their diplomas on completion of their two years' training. Pastor T.S. Sastry, Principal of W.M.E. Bible Institute, Elluru, presented the diplomas. The brethren concerned were set apart for the ministry. Then came the ordination service for Maranatha ministers who have served satisfactorily for two years on the field. This was conducted by Pastor J.A. Prentice. There was silence as the awareness of God's presence filled the hall.

MORE than 150 students trained in the Maranatha Bible Training Institute are now preaching in five States and in other places. God has enabled us to establish nearly forty Maranatha Full Gospel Churches.

The need and importance of training nationals for the work of preaching the gospel was never before felt so much as it is now. The Bible Institute has been located in a rented building since 1963 and the need for a place of our own has long been felt. The government has offered about 1,000 square metres of land in a well-developed part of the City of Madras stating that one-quarter of the cost had to be paid immediately, the balance having to be met by instalments. By the grace of our miracle-working God, we have paid the one-quarter. We have also asked for another 500 square metres, which, we trust, will be sanctioned. The land is expected to be handed over to us soon so that we can commence construction. Please pray for this new project.

Faced with many problems in the successful running of about forty churches in the Andaman Islands, Andhra Pradesh, Mysore, Rajasthan, Tamilnadu and Kerala States, we have been forced to embark on a church building project. The idea is to have places for worship and homes for the pastors and their families. While I was touring Europe with my wife and our daughter Sally, we shared this with some of God's children, who showed real interest. One Elim Pentecostal Church has enabled us to buy a piece of land for a church through their harvest festival offering.

We covet your earnest prayers and practical support for the work of God.

A thrilling Testimony from New Zealand

AT the age of forty-seven I went to the optician to be told that I had senile cataracts forming on my eyes. I was very upset and felt that I needed professional advice, so went to an eye specialist. He confirmed the diagnosis, but said that there was nothing they could do at present, but I would have to have six monthly check-ups.

Each time I was told that they were advancing, but were not ready for an operation. My eye-sight was becoming very poor. To read I had to wear glasses and use a magnifying glass.

One night, when I was at the Elim Church, I went out for the laying on of hands and prayer. I didn't notice any difference that night, but next morning I was about to put my spectacles on from force of habit, when a voice from within said, "No! don't do that". I put them away, picked up my church paper and read it without them for the first time in twelve years. I have never put my glasses on since. It was a wonderful blessing and healing from God. Praise the Lord!

Another Slant

by Ken Smith
Pastor of our Erdington, Birmingham Church

I GUESS that I would not be a preacher if I did not find a sermon in life's experiences, nor Ken Smith if I did not write Another Slant about them! In this way one's ministry is related to life and human experience. Road accidents are too commonplace. My recent serious accident on the motorway on our way, as a family, to take the Sunday school anniversary at our Church in Plymouth proved to be no exception. My time of restoration provided opportunity for reflection and thought and I found myself more thankful on the following counts.

I thanked God for parental preservation. Some people talk about "Providence", which is so impersonal. I prefer to speak of my Father, as the Master so often did. It's not providential so much as personal, in my judgment. I am His child and He's my father. Even in tragedy one can cry "Abba, Father", and that means much to the believer. Our faith is not an insurance policy against any eventuality, for one has only to read Romans chapter eight to realise that the experiences of life befall saint and sinner alike – "tribulation, distress, persecution, famine, peril, death, life", to name but a few. None of us is likely to escape them all. To quote another: "We know not what the future holds, but we know who holds the future". James, speaking of making plans without recognising the sovereignty of God and His will, gives good counsel, even for accidents. We had planned ministry for Him and a holiday for ourselves, which was not to be.

I find that we learn from life both by observation of others and from our own experiences of life. I feel that only the hard way seems to teach some of us the way of life. The gardener speaks of "hardening off" and the carpenter of "weathering", and the experiences of life do just this in terms of character and personality. Even the Son of God became perfect through suffering, not in relation to sin, but in relation to the business of living, and fitting Himself for His ministry of intercession, for He understands, thank God. I found Hymn 712 in Redemption Hymnal such a comfort.

Hid with Christ in God is not a theological abstraction or a doctrinal platitude, but an experiential reality when we are faced with death. The secret of David's life is seen in the words: "and the Lord preserved David whithersoever he went". I have faced death a few times and His Word has convinced me that I will go through the experience when He calls me home. When His work in me and through me is completed then He will call me Home. This is true of every child of God. "The valley of the shadow" can be interpreted as the whole of life's existence, not just the brief moment of passing into eternity. Romans 8: 28 is still true, praise God, but one must grasp this lesson in the whole of life, not just glibly quote its words in adversity, or else they become as bitter words, instead of the blessing they ought to be.

I thanked God for a praying people. Some of my people told me after the accident that they had prayed for us before we set off and others when they heard of our condition. One wonders what the outcome would have been but for committing ourselves to the Lord before commencing our journey. The Christian teacher who kindly stopped on the motorway and assured us of his prayers as he continued to drive proved Paul's point that we must "pray without ceasing". To feel conscious of the prayers of God's people is a healing power in itself. We care by prayer. Sometimes it is the only thing that we can do.

I thanked God for a praising people. Hymn 712 sums it up again: "And are we yet alive, and see each other's face? Glory and praise to Jesus give for His redeeming grace". Habakkuk had the right idea when He spoke of praising God in the midst of human adversity. Only God's grace can create that kind of praise. The Psalmist knew the whole gamut of life's circumstances. I found these words so relevant: "I shall not die but live, and declare the works of the Lord. The Lord hath chastened me sore, but He hath not given me over to death". "Rejoice in the Lord" and "In everything give thanks" are Scriptural injunctions which have a healing virtue when observed. Prayer and praise are inseparable. They made the prison house at Philippi a paradise for the apostles. I wonder if Paul would have sung a solo had I been with him!' "Be careful for nothing; but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God". I never felt so much the rejoicing of God's people as over our deliverance. It does something to the relationship between pastor and people, when one is conscious of this appreciation. The praising of God's people at the prayer meeting on our return, few though they were, was better than even the forfeited holiday.

I thanked God for a practical people. Right from the start this proved so. So often the people of God are "knocked" and it is good to give them credit for their practical application of their concern. I think of one of our ministers who was so immediate in coming to the hospital, one of my deacons who came and brought us back home, the school teacher who, travelling to Cheltenham, let the brethren there know, the minister's wife who offered to do the washing and cook the meals, the minister who loaned his car for a break, the Brethren believer who phoned to bring his wife's new Mini for our use, which I graciously declined, and the flowers from Plymouth Assembly. Some 'phoned out of concern and others did not 'phone out of equal consideration. How thankful one must be for the family of God's people. The world knows nothing like this, I assure you. Read what James says about professing faith without its practical application. "I'll pray for you" is not always the whole answer; it can sometimes be an easy escape from responsibility or inconvenience. The parable of the good Samaritan gives Christ's teaching on this point, for its purpose was ethical and not evangelical - to show that those in need are our neighbours, not necessarily those next door!

A motorway accident and a write-off make for a traumatic experience, but one would be a fool not to seek to learn lessons from it all.

Even as God's people we often forget we are not to live for ever in this life. David's words are true of us all. "There is but a step between me and death" and the danger of holding material things too dearly came out of it all. To see my Mini, which I really loved, a wreck, hurt deeply, and John's words, "Little children, keep yourselves from idols" seemed more relevant after this accident. Anything affecting our relationship with God and our love for the Lord Jesus Christ comes in this range. No wonder the hymnist wrote, "The dearest idol I have known, whate'er that idol be, help me to tear it from Thy throne and worship only Thee". Even preachers are not immune from this evil and the good things of life become a snare if we allow them to be so. I had an accident eleven years ago, which did not involve my family, but how true are the words that "none of us liveth to himself and no man dieth to himself". This time my wife and two boys were involved. This sense of responsibility to others must have a bearing on life, not least in our driving, for we can be a danger to others who are not responsible. How thankful that none of them was too seriously injured and that I had checked everything before commencing the journey and was travelling at reasonable speed. Just as in wrongdoing the innocent often suffer, so in the circumstances of life others can be involved.

Do you remember the story of Hezekiah? "Set thine house in order, thou shalt die and not live" was the word of the Lord to him. We may not get the opportunity to do this and it is imperative that our house is in order in every sense of the word, so that when the call comes we are ready to meet Him unashamedly. How many of us can do so? How we live, even as believers, will shape how we die.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor,

My wife and I express our appreciation to the brethren who have written following our motorway accident, telling us of their prayerful concern, and especially to the Minister, Deacons and Members of the Elim Pentecostal Church, Plymouth for their practical expressions of goodwill and to our own Assembly at Erdington, Birmingham.

Every blessing,
Kenneth Smith.

An Outline

A Window, a Basket, and a Rope.
(2 Corinthians 11:33)

Without these we might never have heard of Paul.

The contractions of life, imprisoning – such are what men imagine "religion" to be. Rather it provides the escape from life's bondage.

1. There's always a Window. Recall the prisoner of Chillon. Sometimes a book can be. God will provide a way of escape (1 Corinthians 10:13).

2. There's always a Basket. Less than an ideal means of escape, it yet served the purpose. Think of the means by which men have escaped the pollutions of this world (2 Peter 2:20) to the larger life in Christ.

3. There's always a Rope with two ends. Paul was at one end, and, at the other, were unseen hands! On Livingstone's grave in Westminster Abbey we read: "Brought by faithful hands" over land and sea. William Carey said, "You hold the rope". Mothers, fathers, Sunday school teachers, friends, are rope-holders all!

How shall we escape if we neglect the Window, the Basket, and the Rope (Hebrews 2:3)?

An Open Letter

"Dear Pastor . . ."

MAY I be so bold as to continue with a few further remarks concerning our congregational singing? This is a day of protest songs. There's one in Redemption Hymnal (no. 762), written by the great Dr. Sylvester Horne, father of the comedian Kenneth Horne, and one-time minister of our Kensington Temple Church. He wrote it as a protest against Gabriel's "Glory for me", the "self-centredness" of which he did not like. "Not, 'glory for me' ", he said, "but glory to Jesus our King". This hymn, sung to the same tune, is Christ-centred throughout. I must say, Pastor, that at times I get a bit tired of singing about "me". Let us have more of those great hymns of the Church which exalt Father, Son, and Holy Ghost – at least one in each service!

A Faithful Member.

A Converted Bowl

THE famous Bishop Taylor Smith had been visiting a military hospital in the first world war. On his way, he passed a group of convalescents who were seated around a table on which a bowl had been placed upside down. He paused and said to the men, "Do you know what is inside that bowl? Darkness and uselessness!". Then he turned it over. "Now", he said, "It is full of light and ready to hold fruit, soup, or anything else for which it is suited. It is a converted bowl. Which position represents your spiritual life, gentlemen? Are you inverted and useless, or have you been changed and made productive because you have turned from darkness to light?".

PRAYER and PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

OVER the past years many things seem to be disappearing from our land and among them is the open-air meeting. How nice it was on going to church on Sunday mornings to see men and women in uniform with a band at open-air services. I can well recall going to the gospel service one Sunday and using the public transport of that city. The bus was full, but no-one seemed to be speaking – and this was a Yorkshire city! Presently we passed the Salvation Army open-air. The band was playing a well-known hymn. Suddenly the passengers brightened up. The air of depression changed to one of cheer and the buzz of conversation was amazing.

All this is an introduction to what I want to say. A good Elim brother holds an open air meeting each week at the lunch hour, right in the heart of the City of London. The venue is at Bow Bells Church in Cheapside. Every Cockney will know this Church. We understand that Dick Whittington, on leaving London, was at Highgate when he heard these church bells, which seemed to tell him to return and become London's Lord Mayor three times. If you work in the London City area the good Elim brother would love to see you between 1.10 and 1.50 p.m. Stand by him and ring out the good news of the gospel to the many hundreds who pass by. Pray for this brother who so faithfully and courageously preaches in the heart of London City.

You may have heard of the late Douglas Scott who, passing by an open-air lunch hour meeting in the City of London, stood to listen for a few moments, was wonderfully converted, filled with the Spirit, and then went to France, Belgium, Switzerland, and later the Congo, to win thousands and thousands to Christ.

THE Isle of Wight is truly an island paradise in June, particularly when the sun is shining, the roses are in bloom and all the trees are freshly green. Just opposite the magnificent oak tree, in whose shade, I was told, Queen Victoria used to sit, is a little cottage which my husband and I went to visit one Monday last month.

The garden was gay with sweet-scented stocks and indoors there was a welcoming smell of coffee as we entered the home of friends whom my husband had known from his Crusader days in the first Islington Church. We were soon in reminiscent mood. Our host began to recall the excellent teaching which he received, when he was a new convert, from the last Pastor W.G. Hathaway, who at that time was the Minister of the Church. Our friend was, to use his own words, "very raw" and "especially ignorant" of the meaning of many theological terms. The constant use of the word "grace" by preachers and Christians puzzled him and he prayed that the Lord would show him what they meant by it. One night, Pastor Hathaway, when speaking on another subject, mentioned the word "grace", and, digressing for a moment, said, "Do we all know what grace means? It is the free, unmerited favour of God". This explanation satisfied the grateful hearer. It was a joy to meet him over forty years later and to find him still rejoicing in the wonderful grace of God.

The great preacher and man of God, Dr. Andrew Bonar, found the Saviour in 1830 when he was a young man of twenty. During the previous year, because of a great sense of unworthiness and guilt, he recorded in his diary: "Great sorrow, because I am still out of Christ; my birthday is past and I am not born again". His sorrow and regret were the products of a wrong conception of the love of Christ and the grace of God. "I found in my heart so much that must keep me from the love of Christ. I thought that I must purge my soul of all defilement and cultivate all the graces of the faith before I could hope for a place in the kingdom of Christ", was his lament. One glad day all the doubts and fears that had tormented him for years were swept away. He had been in pensive mood and took down the book by Dr. Guthrie Trial of a saving Interest in Christ and engaged in serious thought. That night the Holy Spirit applied the stupendous truth of John 1: 16 to his heart. He explained it then: "Of His fulness have all we received! His fulness filled my heart! I did nothing but receive . . . and so the fulness and freeness of the divine grace filled my heart".

Even afterwards, all through the long years of his ministry, this text was the keynote of all his preaching. Just before he died at the ripe old age of eighty-two, he wrote rejoicing that for over fifty years he had drawn upon the inexhaustible grace of God.

Truly God's grace is inexhaustible and has many facets. His grace alone bestows salvation through our believing in the Saviour whom He sent to the world. This is where it all begins and then the supply of grace comes sweeping in like a tide. This grace functions in the life of the child of God in every situation and for all time. Truly it is "Grace for grace", or, in a more modern rendering, "Grace upon grace".

Thy ceaseless, unexhausted love,
Unmerited and free,
Delights our evil to remove
And helps our misery.

Thou waitest to be gracious still;
Thou dost with sinners bear:
That, saved, we may Thy goodness feel
And all Thy grace declare.

Its streams the whole creation reach,
So plenteous is the store,
Enough for all, enough for each,
Enough for evermore.

Throughout the universe it reigns,
Unalterably sure
And while the truth of God remains,
The goodness must endure.

Depression and its remedy

Psalm 42:11

by Frank Lavender

THINK about David in his cast down condition. One of the most common, distressing troubles in church life is Christians who are depressed.

It does not help at all that this is often ignored and that no-one will talk about it. It is regarded as being so unworthy a condition that a Christian should be ashamed to admit to being depressed. This makes matters worse and increases the depression. To discuss it openly in the light of Scripture can bring understanding and relief.

We are not told why David was cast down or depressed when he wrote this Psalm, but his life-story in the Scriptures shows that there could have been several causes. Perhaps David was cast down because of the rebellion of his favourite son, Absalom, and his best friend, Ahithophel; this must certainly have deeply hurt David. Is your depression caused by the loss of one whom you have loved or because one you loved and trusted has turned against you? Perhaps because the child you brought up to be a Christian has turned away from the Lord, you are not hurt just because they no longer seem to believe what you taught them, but by the thought of the eternal danger and loss which face them.

It may be that David was depressed because a disaster, like the great drought which occurred during his reign, had overtaken his kingdom and had brought suffering and misery to his people. Every true pastor will understand this, for nothing brings such grief and sorrow to his heart as when his church and people are injured by division and spiritual dearth. One can bear so much more when it is directed against oneself, but it is desperately painful when one's church and people are under Satanic attack.

David could have been cast down because of having consciously let the Lord down by his sin, as he did when he committed adultery with Bathsheba then had her husband murdered. It is a terrible feeling when one has done something which has really dishonoured the Lord and made someone say: "If that is being a Christian, I will never be one!". Maybe you are deeply upset through failing the Lord either by neglecting your duty or by doing what you know to be wrong.

It could be that David had been ill and that his low condition was a natural result. The connection between body and spirit may be very mysterious, but it certainly exists. It is beyond doubt that some lowering sicknesses leave such a sense of depression that folk feel they just want to sit down and cry. Perhaps this is your trouble?

David's problem may have been an attack of "middle-aged depression". Did you know that not only teenagers but also middle-aged folk have bouts of depression when it seems that nobody understands them and that the whole world is against them? Teenagers and middle-aged people are undergoing physical changes which can sometimes have a devastating effect upon them. Do you think that this could be your problem just now?

Whatever was the cause of David's distress, he knew the right thing to do. He turned to the Lord, who never changes however much circumstances alter. He poured out his heart to Him. David knew that he could depend on the Lord absolutely and that He would bring him victoriously out of all his troubles. He concluded his song on a happy note of faith: "I will praise Him who makes my face to shine; I will glorify God who is mine!".

There is a word here for every depressed, distressed believer. The Lord is the unchanging One who has promised: "Him that comes to Me I will never turn away". Whatever is causing our hearts to be cast down, He knows, understands, and cares for us. We can pour out our hearts to Him and He will meet us in our need and give us the comfort which no other can give. Having told Him all our distress and knowing that He has heard and answered our cry, we can by faith praise and adore Him. We can offer the sacrifice of praise - and nothing lifts the spirit so much as to praise the Lord.

Do not look upon your depression as being itself sinful, but do not either allow the depression to remain on your spirit as a dark, constant cloud. Rather, when you are low accept the remedy of the Word of God: trust your loving Father completely, pour out your heart to Him, and then praise Him by faith because He will bring you out of your distress.

The Family Altar

Monday, July 9th — 1 Kings 14:1-20

"When she cometh in. . . she shall feign herself to be another woman" (v.5).

WE can deceive men, but God knows our innermost secrets. "Neither is there any creature that is not manifest in His sight: but all things are naked and opened unto the eyes of Him with whom we have to do" (Hebrews 4:13). The discovery of deception did not depend on the set eyes or ideas of the prophet, but on divine direction. Spiritual sensitivity should be maintained even into ministerial maturity. Notice that the child found grace in the eyes of the Lord (1 Kings 14:13). Godless parents do not necessarily produce totally godless children. In this case premature death was a reward from God, granted rather than that the child should be shamed by death on a battlefield deserted by divine providence.

Tuesday, July 10th — 2 Chronicles 13:1-22

"By a covenant of salt" (v.5).

SALT purifies as well as permeates. It was used in the ancient world to preserve for future use in the natural realm. God used it as a reminder of His pure contracts with man that were to be preserved throughout generations (Numbers 18:19; Leviticus 2:13). A reminder at this time of His "salt covenant" with David's house was deeply significant, because deterioration was increasing throughout the realm. A feud in the family, false gods, and a fornicated priesthood all point with the finger of experience to the truth: "Don't give the devil a place [toe-hold]" (Ephesians 4:27).

Wednesday, July 11th — 2 Chronicles 14:1-15

"Asa did that which was good and right in the eyes of the Lord his God" (v.2).

THE right action brought rest, refreshment and a resplendent display of God-given prosperity. When the enemy attacked, as he always will attack the righteous, this was Asa's assurance: "Lord, it is nothing with Thee to help, whether with many, or with them that have no power. . . let not man prevail against Thee" (v.11). Spiritual cleanliness produces spiritual confidence.

Thursday, July 12th — 2 Chronicles 15:1-19

"The Lord is with you, while ye be with Him" (v.2). "HOLD the beginning of your confidence steadfast to the end" (Hebrews 3:6). Asa had started well, but he needed a reminder to remain real. Here we see the importance of teaching to avoid spiritual bankrupcy (2 Chronicles 15:3), the importance of the removal of evil and the renewal of good (v.8), and the importance of God coming even before family ties (v.16). Someone has said, "God's plan made a hopeful beginning, but man spoiled his chances by sinning. We hope that the story will end in God's glory, but at the moment the other side's winning." Let us change the tide by keeping the truth.

Friday, July 13th — 2 Chronicles 16:1-14

"Because you have relied on the king of Syria, and not relied on the Lord" (v.7).

IN an age of gimmicks in gospel presentation and fine art and trickery in fund-raising, it is good to remember that our help comes from the Lord (Psalm 121:2). It has been said: "In all your getting, GET GOD". Asa could have known a great God (2 Chronicles 16:9) and a divine doctor (v.12), but he sought an alliance with ungodly men and rejected the remonstrations of a man of God moved by the Spirit. The result was repression in his kingdom and rottenness in his body.

"Omri wrought evil in the eyes of the Lord" (v.25).

HIS evil deeds were not only in the eyes of the Lord, for he influenced his son until his son considered it a light thing to walk in sin (v.31). He also built Samaria, which later became a centre for false worship. Ahab raised an altar to Baal, married outside the faith, walked in wickedness, allowed a woman to rule his life and would not listen to a heaven-sent messenger. All these indicated the far-reaching effects of the life of the unregenerate Omri.

"Elijah the Tishbite" (v.1).

"TISHBITE" means "reformer", and what a reformer we have here! He burst on the black scene of Baal-worship and bestiality, for immorality of all kinds was practised in the groves, and began the restoration of a true faith in the land. God worked with him with signs following (Mark 16:20). Even the ravenous raven, which would eat or hoard anything, provided for the prophet. A widow woman, having received a double blow in the loss of the husband and the smallness of her son, who was too small to gather sticks, received a double blessing in the presence of the prophet and the provision of plenty when she puts God's servant first.

Pentecost

3. Every Day

by
Geoffrey J. Feasey, Pastor of our Pontardulais Church

OUT of the depths of our innermost beings shall flow rivers of living water, rivers overflowing, producing power and plenty. These rivers are to flow constantly. They are not just Sunday rivers, or even prayer meeting gushings; they are constant, always flowing from dawn to dusk. This is the life in the Spirit – Pentecost every day!

Pentecostals must guard against the awful suggestions of Satan that Pentecost is a church matter, and that Pentecostal conduct must be limited to the four walls of a church. This is not so. We must live all the week as we live on Sunday. We must act all the week as we act on the Lord's Day. This means a walk in the Spirit, an existence that makes all others pale in comparison. The realm of Pentecost breaks down barriers, reaches all classes and affects every area of life.

How could God have granted to John the glimpse of future glory had he not been in the Spirit? Everything is changed when Pentecost is put into operation every day. The sermon on the mount takes on a different perspective when viewed from the high towers of Pentecost. Let the rivers run freely!

This way of living is not just for self-enjoyment, nor merely to make every Pentecostal feel good; what lies beneath is far more exciting. The advice of Paul concerning the life in the Spirit is often misquoted; singing, speaking, and making melody in your heart are to be given to the Lord. To put this in an everyday expression, it is a life of ceaseless praise. There is nothing in all the vast universe that causes delight to the heart of God like the soul who once was dead finding himself alive unto God, pouring out a rhapsody of uninterrupted praise. The rivers are flowing!

Paul goes even further than the orchestrations of the heart. He evaluates speaking in tongues continually to oneself as building and edifying the inner man. Tongues in worship by a congregation can be the poetry of heaven itself, rich and wonderful; how much the more this is when they are used intimately at the lone altar every day. Paul knew the value, for he states that he used this mode of worship "more than you all". The rivers were flowing!

After melodies and poetry, comes something that even surpasses them – the leading of the Spirit. Living in such realms brings an intimacy. Being so close to God that when one is needed for some kind of service without long-winded preparation shows how one is ready and equipped for service.

One word sums up this kind of walk: sensitive. In whatever way God choses to move, the sensitive believer, being in the spirit, is constantly ready and aware of the breath of God.

Pentecost must be manifested every day of every week. We are dealing with something that has no comparison – the Holy Spirit of God. Paul's command in the original emphasises: "Be being, being filled"; it is a continuous process of receiving all that God has to give.

Let the rivers flow continually!

Editorial

BRITISH evangelist Don Summers has spoken almost with bitterness about the apparent indifference of the news media towards evangelical enterprises. He showed that his recent crusade, which attracted thousands to meetings in the heart of the Midlands, passed almost totally in ignorance as far as the general public were concerned, that is to say, with regard to the well-nigh total silence of newspapers, radio and television.

Billy Graham writes of his recent effort in South Korea where converts have numbered ~~in~~ tens of thousands and where attendances were phenomenal, one crowd being reckoned over 1,000,000 — yes, one million — in number.

Our Secretary-General has written concerning the indifference of the media to the results of the Northern Ireland local government elections, his points being underlined by the rather different reactions of some sections towards the moderate gains by Catholic-supported politicians in the elections for the new Assembly.

We might well agree with Don Summers and wonder as well that we can be treated to endless reports about the Desremault baby (however did that couple get married and have a child?), stupid pictures of and comments about teenagers at Wimbledon drooling over a seventeen-year-old tennis player and the like, yet there is blank silence over evangelism at home and abroad.

It seems as if this is indicative of the modern mood. Gurus, alleged messiahs, erring clergy, way-out bishops are all grist to the mill, but real soul-saving activities are ignored deliberately, or so it would seem, or else sneered at if they are mentioned.

Well, let's do our share of giving God the glory! Thank the Lord for souls saved! "Let the redeemed of the Lord SAY SO"!

After all, changed lives will speak more loudly in the end than any amount of copy writers' blurb. The more who are gloriously saved by the redeeming power of Christ, the more will be the cumulative effect. God is moving, even in Great Britain, and we believe in increasing measure. A colleague recently told me that the representative of a well-known Christian book firm had told him that the increase in demand for Christian books over the last two years is almost more than they can cope with. We have passed through a period of years when Christian bookshops were closing down, but the tendency has been reversed, thank the Lord. Young people especially are reading more spiritual books than would appear to have been the case two years ago. Christian unions are reportedly increasing in numbers in ever more colleges. The opposition, the problems, the challenges are still there, but God is moving.

Our prayers should be directed as never before to the need for evangelism and for evangelists to be thrust out. The gospel is still the power of God unto salvation. Jesus saves, thank God, and we want many, many more to find this so great salvation.

Church Reports

Baptismal candidates pictured at our Church at Maldon, Essex, with Pastor E.D. White

MALDON Pastor: E.D. White

A RECENT baptismal service brought much blessing and encouragement when a large congregation witnessed five candidates passing through the waters including a 72-year-old blind sister, three young people and a 67-year-old sister.

A reporter of the local press attended and his report and photograph of the event have brought interest to Maldon residents and several enquiries have been received regarding Elim activities.

We thank God for His blessing and look forward to a breath of revival.

ROTHERHAM Pastor: P. Smith

ON a recent Sunday we held a baptismal service when nine ladies and five men testified to their faith in Jesus by following Him through the waters of baptism. It was wonderful to hear each candidate give a short testimony of how they came to accept our Lord's offer of salvation. One young girl came to know the Lord as her Saviour while attending a Sunshine Corner which had been started when a young couple were willing to open their home to children living in the neighbourhood. Two of the young men were saved during the crusade held at the Church in March. It has been a joy to see the change in their lives. One of them could not at first understand the need for water baptism, but was willing if only to be obedient to his Saviour. Three members of one family were baptised, two sisters of another family, and a husband and wife.

CHIPPENHAM Pastor: K.W. Phillips

WE recently held our third baptismal service since we started as a Church four years ago. There were three candidates. One brother had cracked his pelvis eight weeks before and the Lord wonderfully met this need to enable him to go through the waters using only one stick instead of crutches. His wife was also baptised. The other candidate testified to having been saved at the Bingley Hall Youth Rally last year. The service was held in the local Baptist Church. The preacher was Pastor W.R. McKibbin whose subject was the necessity for believers to be baptized.

We were pleased to see so many present, quite a few being young people. We enjoyed our brother Ernie Reeves's ministry in song.

WE recently celebrated our first anniversary. How quickly the past twelve months seem to have flown by. It was a year ago that Pastor Ron Jones and his party came for an evangelistic campaign, out of which the present Elim Assembly was formed. Our brother J.B.D. Ritchie came straight from Elim Bible College to be our first Pastor and he won his way into the hearts of the people immediately.

We still have no church building of our own and are praying earnestly that God will soon provide us with a meeting-place that will glorify His name. We praise God for the loyalty of our Members who continue to support us faithfully. Our Sunday meetings are held in the St. John Ambulance Hall and the week-night service in a room in the Town Hall.

We have a thriving Sunday school on the nearby Bourneville Estate where Ron Richards and his keen staff of teachers seek to bring the Gospel to the boys and girls. A number of them have given their hearts to Jesus.

Our anniversary services were conducted by Pastor Ron Jones and the New Creation Singers from Bristol. Brother Jones's message brought us a fresh challenge to meet the need of the hour. Students from Elim Bible College also took part in this Saturday service and all day Sunday.

We are grateful to all the Elim Family for support and prayers and would appeal to you once again to remember Pastor and Mrs. Ritchie as they seek to press the battle to the gates in this seaside town.

MEMBERS and friends have been thrilled with the opportunities that have come their way to take part in religious broadcasts in connection with the local television network, Cablevision. Recently our Minister was asked to arrange a forty-minute religious programme for the Network. The President, Pastor John Lancaster, was in the area visiting the Churches, so Pastor Jones took the opportunity to interview the President on his coming year of office, his call to the ministry, Pentecostal teaching and experience, his views on the present spiritual state of our country and the answer to its needs. Also taking part in the programme were Mr. and Mrs. Beattie, Members of our Beersbridge Road Church, Belfast, on holiday at Woolwich. Mr. Beattie spoke of his conversion and God's keeping power during these troubled days in Northern Ireland. Mrs. Beattie was interviewed concerning her healing from deafness and the benefit of prayer at such worrying times in Belfast. It was an added joy to include in the programme Rosemary Mawutsa of Inyanga North, Southern Rhodesia, who is in London studying for higher nursing qualifications. Rosemary spoke of her conversion and of her desire to return home to serve the Lord. The programme also included singing by David and Carol Tattersall. We are delighted to say that the programme received a favourable response.

THE children completely took over the Sunday school anniversary weekend, which was crowned with the salvation of souls. There were three anniversary services: on Saturday evening the adult Bible classes, led by Mr. Ron Morgan, on Sunday afternoon the beginners, and on Sunday evening the junior and senior children.

About sixty toddlers, aged between three and seven ministered on Sunday afternoon for an hour with the songs that they have learned during the year. On Sunday evening more than 100 children sang, recited and performed Biblical sketches. The children, a cross-section of the 500-strong Sunday school, also sang with a twenty-five strong children's band.

After the Sunday evening service, about 400 people listened to the B.B.C.'s Sunday Half-Hour programme on a radio installed in the church. This had been recorded at the Church a few weeks earlier and included hymn singing and items by the Temple's Crusader Choir. The broadcast, heard by five million listeners all over Britain, was the second made by the Temple in two months. The other was a half-hour programme in April which was broadcast world-wide.

ALISTAIR FORREST

SOUTHAMPTON Pastor: W.J. Maybin

OUR Spring Convention could so easily have started on a note of disappointment, as our principal speaker, Pastor Christopher Smith, was unable to come owing to illness, but from the commencement on the Saturday evening we had a wonderful time of blessing which lasted right through to the last meeting on the Monday evening.

At the Saturday evening meeting the speaker was Pastor J. Osman who gave us a very challenging message under the anointing of the Holy Spirit. The Gospel Four Ladies Quintet ministered to us in song.

On Sunday, our own Minister filled the gap, and in the evening service our Young Wives Group, whose fifth anniversary it was, blessed us with musical items with guest soloist Mrs. Lynda Tucker who accompanied herself on the autoharp and sang two solos which were very much appreciated.

On Monday we were joined by Pastor Tom W. Walker who very kindly and at very short notice came in place of Pastor C. Smith. He was our speaker for the afternoon service and everyone was blessed and challenged greatly by his powerful message under the mighty anointing of the Holy Spirit. Josie and Angela Smith, our duettists, brought two lovely pieces by which we were richly blessed.

A splendid tea was greatly enjoyed during the interval and our sincere thanks go to Mrs. Maybin and her lady helpers who worked very hard.

At our evening service our first speaker was Pastor P.G. Parsons. His message was plainly and forthrightly presented and was the means of bringing great blessing. Pastor Walker brought the final message of our convention and stirred our hearts with a great address given in his own inimitable way and which must have gone deeply into the hearts of everyone present. The meeting ended on a great note of triumph and one felt that this was indeed our finest convention to date. A short time of fellowship was enjoyed over cups of tea before we parted after a wonderful time of great blessing.

Our attendance figures were as follows: Sixty on Saturday evening, and 102 on Monday afternoon and 167 in the evening. It was good to meet so many friends from other Assemblies and the fellowship was indeed sweet.

E. PRESTON

WINTON, Bournemouth Pastor: G.N. Backhouse

THE past few months have brought times of blessing and encouragement to the Winton Church. The Easter Convention meetings were a source of inspiration as we meditated on the death and resurrection of our Lord. The ministry of Pastor D.D. Phillips was thought-provoking and much blessed.

After Easter there was a visit from Pastor F. Packer, a former Minister of the Church. We were blessed, not only by his ministry, but also in sharing his personal testimony to the goodness and faithfulness of God both in sorrow and rejoicing.

Recently a small group of students from Elim Bible College conducted a brief outreach in the schools. One of the students, Ken Legg, stayed with us for a few weeks. As a result of the very able way in which he followed up this work, we now have a number of newly-converted young people who are themselves witnessing to others. This is a cause for thanksgiving as we realise that our prayers for blessing on the young people in the Church and for others to be brought in have been abundantly answered.

A series on the Epistle of JUDE
— some great Subjects from a little Book

In Defence of the Faith

2. Sinning Angels

by F. J. Slemming

JUDE 6,7 and 2 Peter 2:4,5 are complementary. Here we learn of angels that sinned and so came under the judgment of God. The incident referred to is recorded in Genesis 6:1,2.

Our first task is to settle the identity of the "sons of God" who married "the daughters of men". It is proposed by some, including C.I. Scofield in The Scofield Bible, that the line of Seth was a godly line and that they are therefore "the sons of God", the line of Cain being an ungodly line and so they constitute "the daughters of men". Before we can accept this interpretation there are a number of problems that must be answered.

Why should the sons of Seth be called "the sons of God"? Were there no daughters in the line of Seth? How can we possibly conclude that, because Seth was godly, all his line, all his sons, were godly also? There is no authority to make such a statement as far as I am aware. Eli was a godly man, but what about his sons?

Why should the daughters of Cain be called "the daughters of men" and why is there no mention of sons in the line of Cain?

One would think that Seth had only sons in his line and Cain only daughters.

Why should the offspring of these marriages be different? Genesis 6:4 tells us that the offspring of the marriages between the sons of God and the daughters of men were "nephilim" or giants. God's Word warns believers against marriages with unbelievers, but when that warning word is foolishly disregarded, as we know it sometimes is, the resulting offspring of such marriages are not monstrosities.

Who then were "the sons of God" who took to themselves "the daughters of men"? My answer is that "the sons of God" mentioned in Genesis and by Jude were spirit beings, or angels. Job 38:6 says that when God laid the corner stone of the earth, the morning stars sang together and all the sons of God shouted for joy. The sons of God were angels and they were active when the earth was laid by God. One ancient manuscript reads: "The angels of Old saw the daughters of men". Smith's dictionary says that this was the most prevalent opinion both in the Jewish and the early Christian Church. John Owen, a Puritan divine of great spiritual stature, a philosopher of great learning, a keen, gifted Bible student, preaching at Cambridge 300 years ago, said of this, "The angels. . . they are the sons of God". Dean Alford is very forthright and says pointedly and plainly that the angels committed fornication with another race than themselves, thus going after strange flesh.

That angels were created by God to serve Him is quite a Scriptural fact. It is also a Scriptural fact that there are evil angels. Some are shown to be evil. Some hideous sin is seen in the ranks of these holy beings, and, like it or not, it is a deplorable fact.

In Psalm 78:49-51, the psalmist is describing the plagues with which God visited Egypt because Pharaoh refused to let His people go. Notice the words used: "He cast upon them the fierceness of His anger, wrath, and indignation and trouble, by sending evil angels among them. . . and smote all the first born in Egypt".

Job 4:18 reads: "His angels He charged with folly".

That some angels had become irrevocably evil is seen by the eternal punishment prepared by God for them: "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels." (Matthew 25:41).

In Jude vv. 6,7, notice three things: they "kept not their first estate"; they "left their own habitation"; and they are "reserved in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day." They were holy angels, but they kept not their first estate. They left their own habitations — they fell — and are now reserved for judgment. C.H. Spurgeon said, "Angels were in the central abode of God Himself, evil entered their hearts and they fell never to rise again".

Study 2 Peter 2:4. Again we have three things to notice: God spared not the angels that sinned; nor the world that sinned; but He delivered Noah. We are considering sin and judgment, sin between angels and inhabiters of the old world in the time of Noah. Two kinds of judgment are mentioned: the angels were bound and reserved; the ungodly world was destroyed by the flood.

We must now consider how they sinned. Jude vv. 6,7 make it quite clearthat thesin was the sin of Sodom and Gomorrah. Linking with these verses 2 Peter 2:5, one concludes that it was a sin of uncleanness – going after strange flesh.

Let us list the facts that we have gathered:

The sin was in the days of Noah and was participated in by angels and inhabiters of the world (2 Peter 2:4,5).

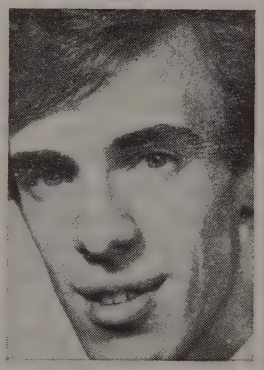
The sin was the sin of Sodom and Gomorrah (Jude vv. 6,7).

We compare this with Genesis 6 and learn that the sons of God (angels) took wives of the daughters of men.

The result of this, says the Word of God, was that God spared not the angels, and God spared not the old world.

Take notice now of the results of the "marriages" and the sin. According to Genesis 6 it was "nephilim", or giants. "There were giants in the land in those days". There can be no doubt from both Scripture and history that there existed a race of giants, beings of extreme size and stature. They appeared, flourished and disappeared. They were not overcome – they became extinct. They were not imaginary creatures, but awful realities. They existed and flourished, but, in spite of their size and strength, they proved to be sterile and died out. The word "nephilim" is from an old Hebrew word, the root meaning of which is "to fall", indicating that they were the offspring of the fallen angels, satanic hybrids, men and angels, natural and supernatural. How enlightening is Genesis 6:4 in Bagster's translation of the Septuagint: "and they bore children to them, these were the giants of old – the men of renown".

Josephus, the historian, wrote, "Their sin was so vile, the fruitage so horrible and repugnant to God, the world so corrupt, He swept them into eternity by means of the flood. After the flood the sin was repeated with the same results and God cast the angels down, bound them and is reserving them for judgment; then we find the race of giants became a remnant and died out."



The Scriptures speak of the remnant of giants in Deuteronomy 3:11; Joshua 12:4; 13:12 . These were not creatures of God's making, but sinful, corrupt superfluities, the products of a satanic miracle.

In the days of Noah the two prevalent sins were uncleanness and lawlessness and "as it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the days of the coming of the Son of Man". "The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished: But chiefly them that walk after the flesh in the lust of uncleanness and despise government." (2 Peter 2:9,10).

A God of purity demands purity.

A God who is all in all must have obedience.

"Raise the Dead"

Eliza—"widow"

The dead man Yeremiah, Pastor Joseph and Eliza

THE Church Leader, Yeremia, called on Pastor Joseph to pray. Then a loud noise rang through the church. Yeremia had dropped dead. "Dead?" said I.

"Dead!" they all rejoined. "How do you know he was dead?"

"Yosefu", I said, "You are the oldest here, the Church Elder; you will have seen many dead people."

"He was dead," replied Yosefu.

"Perhaps he had fainted?" I suggested, to which he replied, "No".

"Was he in a fit?" I went on. "But no," I corrected myself, "Your daughter was an epileptic for many years before Bwana Yesu healed her. You know all about fits. He was in a coma, probably?".

"Amekufa kabisa [he was as dead as a doornail]," retorted Yosefu.

"Martha," I turned to the mother of eight children, "Pastor had just finished praying. There was a loud thud like the fall of a tree. Yeremia was lying dead behind the table. . . dead!".

"Dead, Bwana" she said, "and then a great burden of prayer fell on me. Someone went to tell Yeremia's heathen father. He was greatly distressed and Pastor had great difficulty with him, because he wanted to take the body away."

"Pita, what happened?", I queried.

"Happened, Mzee?" the young man replied. "Yeremia died."

The Masai women who were present were emphatic: "He was dead."

One of them, meeting Yeremia in the market some days later, testified to all around, "This man was dead".

Pastor Joseph speaks: "As I finished praying there was a heavy thud behind me. I turned and found Yeremia dead at my feet. 'Oh God,' I said, 'What will you do for Your great name? What will the heathen say? As I thus cried to God, the Holy Spirit witnessed that we should seek God's face in prayer that Yeremia should be raised up again. His father came in and dropped down by the body. He cried out in his grief, 'My poor son! What has killed you? I will take him away,' he said, 'immediately.' I had great difficulty in preventing him from doing so. The widow had fallen on the body weeping unrestrainedly. So, with some of us praying, others weeping, the father protesting, 'At the indignity of his son's body being left to stiffen on the floor', we prayed on. Once or twice I looked at him in hope. Then the prayer burden began to lift. I turned to the body and called, 'Yeremia!' and again, 'Yeremia!'. The left eyelid moved slightly. All who were watching burst into praise. I called him again. A faint sound came from his lips. Soon, we were supporting him to his home nearby. We left him there in the care of his father, while we broke bread in remembrance of Him who broke the power of death. The neighbours, coming in haste to bring their condolences to the bereaved, found the dead man sitting in a chair."

"Eliza!", I was now speaking to the widow.

"My bwana died," she said.

"How do you know that he was dead?" I queried.

"He was dead, I knew it, although I am afraid to go near dying people," she said. "Pastor told me not to cry, but I could not listen to him. My grief was too great."

"Then?" I queried.

"His eyelid moved, then I remembered that Yesu has all power." She began to laugh for sheer joy.

"Eliza," I exclaimed, looking at her through my tears, "God has made you to laugh, like Sarah when she gave birth to Isaac. Yeremia, what do you know of this matter?"

The Holy Spirit and Conversion

by Trevor Partington

Trevor Partington is Pastor of Covenant Hall, Stafford, which is in fellowship with The Elim Church Incorporated.

THE Nicene Creed speaks of the Holy Spirit as being "the Lord and Giver of Life"; this is evident throughout the Word of God. He was the Life-giver at Creation (Genesis 1:2). He is the Life-giver in conversion (John 3:5), in sanctification (Galatians 5:16), and in resurrection (Romans 8:11). Nothing that the Holy Spirit has done, or will do, is known to us, however, until we become Christians: "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him, BUT GOD HATH REVEALED THEM UNTO US BY HIS SPIRIT" (1 Corinthians 2:9,10).

At conversion there are four distinct ways in which the Holy Spirit works.

The Holy Spirit communicates

To communicate is "to make contact with", and this is what the Holy Spirit did for us, primarily through the Word of God. He started to reveal to us the wonderful truths that were contained in this Book and the relevance of the Gospel in our own life. Paul speaks of those whose understanding is darkened, being separated from the life of God (Ephesians 4:18), but, when the Holy Spirit started to communicate with us, then the Bible became alive. We were given ears to hear what the Spirit said to us (Revelation 3:22), for "the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God" (1 Corinthians 2:10).

The Holy Spirit convicts

In that communication there came a deep conviction of the sin in our lives and of our need for forgiveness. "When He is come, He will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment" (John 16: 8).

An old man who, having been a sceptic all his life, resolved to read the Bible which he had so long derided. As he did so, he became more and more astonished. Looking up after a week's reading he said to his wife: "If this Book is right, we are all wrong." He continued his reading for another week and then exclaimed: "If this Book is right, we are lost". He went on reading with even more avidity and then, a few nights later, he earnestly said: "If this Book is right, we may be saved", and they were! In entering the kingdom of God they left all their ifs behind.

From the Scriptures a most marked example of conviction occurred at Pentecost: "Let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made this same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ. Now when they heard this, they were pricked in their heart, and said to Peter and the rest of the Apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we do?" (Acts 2:36,37).

The Holy Spirit converts

God the Father planned our salvation in eternity and God the Son procured it at the cross, but it is God the Holy Spirit who applies it to our hearts. "A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you. . . I will put My Spirit within you" (Ezekiel 36:26,27), so, at salvation, our bodies become the dwelling-place of God, temples of the Holy Spirit (1 Corinthians 3:16). This is why we are converted, for, if God the Holy Spirit dwells within us, we are bound to be different. The Holy Spirit gives life to those who are "dead in trespasses and sins" (Ephesians 2:1). We can be sincere in our preaching, persuasive and thoroughly orthodox, but, unless the Holy Spirit is at work, there will be no conversions. The Gospel must come not "in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost" (1 Thessalonians 1:5).

The Holy Spirit confirms

He confirms our relationship with Christ, assuring us of it: "The Spirit Himself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God" (Romans 8:16). Within the hearts of many believers there comes at times a niggling doubt: "Am I a child of God?". The doubt may have come because of a failure or because they were facing a difficulty. A man doubts his salvation when he relies too much on his feeling as a gauge to test his spiritual life, but Christian assurance is more than a warm feeling inside. It rests on what God says in His Word and the Holy Spirit Himself endorses these truths in our heart. We need not wait until we get to heaven for assurance. It is not even postponed until we have reached some special height of holiness. Assurance can be ours now through the great work of the Holy Spirit within our hearts. We can KNOW that we are children of God!

No man can truly say that Jesus is the Lord,
Unless Thou take the veil away and breathe the living Word.
Then, only then, we feel our interest in the blood,
And cry with joy unspeakable: "Thou art my Lord, my God".

The Finger of Accusation (John 8:1-11)

by Maldwyn Jones,
Pastor of our Beeston Church

"So when they continued asking Him, He lifted up Himself, and said unto them, He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her" (verse 7).

"THE scribes and Pharisees brought unto Him a woman taken in adultery". See the terrible position of this unfortunate woman. She had committed a dreadful crime in the eyes of the self-righteous scribes and Pharisees. The motive for bringing the woman to Jesus was not only to see her punished, but also that they might pick a quarrel with Jesus. Those taken in adultery were condemned by the Jewish law to be put to death.

The Pharisees seemed to have a great zeal against this crime. In our attitudes towards sins of this nature we must remember that the old adage is true: "People in glass houses should not throw stones". There is a respect in which we all live in glass houses. We may not commit this particular sin ourselves, but it might ensnare members of our families. Do not be in a hurry to condemn others. "Judge not, that ye be not judged; and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured unto you again."

Jesus said that whoever looks on a woman with lust commits adultery in his heart. This woman was caught in the act, but this did not make her any more guilty than someone who has looked upon another person with lust. Let us not underestimate this sin. We cannot condone it, but we must not condemn the sinner. We may not have committed adultery, but we are all guilty of sin.

The Pharisees were concerned with two things: to trick Jesus, and to condemn the woman. How easy it is to point the finger of accusation at other people! All are guilty of sin. The Pharisees' condemnation of the woman was hypocritical inasmuch as they were so concerned in finding fault with other people that they failed to consider their own sinfulness. As Matthew 7:3,4 declares: "And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thy own eye? Or how wilt thou say to thy brother, Let me pull out the mote out of thine eye; and behold, a beam is in thine own eye?". Matthew Henry wrote: "We must judge ourselves and judge of our own acts, but we must not judge our brother. We must not sit in the judgment seat to make our word a law to everybody. We must not judge rashly. We must not judge uncharitably, unmercifully, nor with a spirit of revenge and a desire to do mischief. We must not judge the hearts of others, nor their intentions, for it is God's prerogative to try the heart."

There is, however, a difference between judging and reproving. Reproving others is a duty. It can be the means of saving a soul from death. Not everyone is able to reprove. Those who are themselves guilty of the faults of which they accuse others or of worse bring shame upon themselves and are not likely to do good to those whom they reprove. There are degrees in sin, not that any sins are considered any less blameworthy in the sight of God. Our own sins ought to appear to us greater than the same sins in others. Many have beams in their own eyes and yet do not consider them. They are under the guilt and dominion of very great sins, yet they are not aware of them, but justify themselves, as if they needed no repentance or reformation. Some who are most sinful themselves are least sensible of it, and are most forward and free in judging and censuring others.

"But Jesus stooped down, and with His finger wrote on the ground, as though He heard them not." (John 8:6). Jesus, silent and stern, contemplated the situation. They had brought a woman to Him to be judged of a great crime of which she had been found guilty. Instead of judging the woman, the Master by His silence judged the woman's accusers. As we consider Christ the Judge two things stand out: His mercy and His justice.

To the woman Christ was merciful. Read Psalm 103:17. The divine mercy is totally undeserved. Nothing in the human heart evokes the love of God and His infinite mercy to us (Romans 5:8). Divine mercy defies description; it is beyond human comprehension. This poor woman had no defence. She had been caught in the act and now all that she could look forward to was judgment, and that meant death. She had not reckoned with the mercy of the Saviour. Instead of condemning her, the Lord stooped down and began to write on the ground. What was he doing? She may have wished that He would pronounce the judgment and get it done with. Whatever were her thoughts, she must have noticed the difference between Jesus and her accusers.

The woman was the recipient of mercy. The scribes and Pharisees were made conscious of His judgment. He stooped low and began to write. How low the Saviour stooped to make salvation available to men and women! He left heaven's glory, took upon Himself the form of sinful flesh, dwelt among men, suffered, bled and died even the death of the cross, in order to do for us what we could not do ourselves (Philippians 2). He was far above all principalities and powers, but He became as the lowest of the low in order to bring us back to God.

Jesus began to write. This is the only reference to Christ writing. What He was writing we do not know. It recalls the scene in the Babylonian palace when Belshazzar used the golden vessels from the temple at Jerusalem to decorate a pagan orgy. "In the same hour came forth fingers of a man's hand, and wrote over against the candlestick upon the plaister of the wall of the king's palace: and the king saw the part of the hand that wrote." (Daniel 5:5). Belshazzar knew that his judgment was being written. It is obvious that the woman's accusers were uncomfortable as well.

"He lifted up Himself, and said unto them, He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her." (John 8:7). He neither reflected on the law nor excused the prisoner's guilt, nor did He encourage the prosecution or countenance their heat. They came with design to accuse Him, but they were forced to accuse themselves. The standard of judgment was a severe one: "He that is without sin". Only One is sinless, pure, therefore only One is able to be the judge of mankind. His name is Jesus.

Jesus answered these men by referring them to the very laws which they were so fond of quoting to others. Jesus put the onus on them. "If you want to uphold the law, go ahead, but realise that you must fulfil the whole law and that law says, 'Let him that is without sin first cast the stone at her,' " He said.

In showing mercy to the sinner Jesus did not condone the sinner's sin. He condemns sin, but He loves the sinner. He realised that the woman's accusers had no right to stand in judgment over her because they too were guilty before God. In dealing with the unsaved let us be merciful and loving and remember the pit from which we have been dug.

"They went out one by one" (v.9). They were so thunderstruck by the words of Christ that they no longer sought to persecute Him. Their one desire was to get out of His presence. The soul that cannot dwell in the presence of the Master is in a bad state. It reveals that there is no peace within and that the heart is black with sin. The child of God should love to attend the house of the Lord. People say that they did not enjoy a service because they felt uncomfortable in the presence of Jesus. The sight of the Lord writing on the ground frightened these men by sending them to their own consciences. He had shown them to themselves and they were afraid that His next word would show them to the world. They went out one by one that they might go out softly, like people ashamed.

When the conceited prosecutors quitted the field, the self-condemned prisoner stood her ground. Jesus was left alone with the woman. She did not try to get away. She was aware of her sin and by this time was also aware of the purity of Christ, but she was not afraid of being left alone with Him. She had looked into His eyes and there beheld such compassion. She had listened to that voice that dropped with mercy. She had watched the hand that was soon to be skewered to a cross write the judgment of her accusers upon the ground, and she was not afraid. "Where are thine accusers? Hath no man condemned thee? She said, No man, Lord". She recognised the sovereignty of Jesus: "Neither do I condemn thee". Christ speaks those same words to the Christian (Romans 8:1).

When Christ dismissed her, it was with this warning: "Go, and sin no more." The fairer the escape was, the fairer the warning. This command comes to all Christians.

. . . . Book Comment

IF a Franciscan scholar studied the Pentecostal movement for two years and condensed his reactions into about 7,000 words, what would be a fair condensation of his book? It would be in his own words. "There is a real feeling that the Church is not meeting the deeper needs of the human spirit, in its teaching or in its ritual. Faith must be expressed", as Fr. Coventry says, "by every human creating-discovery activity, from dancing on."

> Dancing – and that from a Roman Catholic, when some even in Pentecostal churches frown on clapping! From this and other contacts outside our Churches, I gain the idea that Pentecost is summed up in emotional release. This is a limited view of Pentecost, but it should help to take away the timorous idea that too much excitement in our meetings will be off-putting. Exactly the opposite is the case – excitement is our really attractive feature.

Fr. Sullivan's booklet Can the Pentecostal Movement renew the Churches? is being treated as an important document. The British Council of Churches publish it by arrangement with the World Council of Churches.

There are, however, some dubious comments in it. For instance (p.1): "The charismatic movement (is an) experience wider, more comprehensive than the Pentecostal movement. . . The charismatic movement takes into account the whole range of God's gifts to the Church". This is a basic point with which I strongly disagree. The charismatic movement generally is much narrower than the Pentecostal movement that I find myself within. Pentecost is not less but more than the gifts of God, "from miracles to good teaching and administration". Pentecost is not merely "charismatic renewal", but "being filled with all the fulness of God" to be "witnesses" and to "hold forth the word of life", and on, on, on beyond that. The gifts of the Spirit occupy a vital but not total position in our concern. This is the difference between the neo-Pentecostals and the classical Pentecostals, as they describe us. These terms may be useful to distinguish between those who are absorbed in "charisma" and those who are concerned with Christ Jesus and His glory.

> It is surprisingly difficult to communicate these days. After two years study Emmanuel Sullivan has in my opinion achieved a warm sympathy for the Pentecostals without discovering the secret of their inner love for Jesus and their love for one another in a vast world-wide family dedicated to conquering the world with their gospel, waiting for His return.

There are, in addition, evidences of inaccuracy. We have not, for instance, "stressed the baptism of the Spirit as a second conversion". We don't think Gnosticism, Montanism and radical Anabaptists are skeletons in our cupboard, as he says. From the start we had no truck with anything that was heretical in these bones. T.B. Barratt (p.3) did not have anything to do with the leadership of the 1906 meetings in Los Angeles and it is quite out of balance to state that "some" of us accept the Lord's supper and "many" practise foot washing. The list of denominations is amazingly incomplete and omits many large bodies of Pentecostals such as The Church of God. There are other statements, too, that are not as informed as they might be, some of them describing our theology.

> Fr. Sullivan could make himself clearer. On p.8 he stresses that "prophecy" should be used "to discover God's will", and yet immediately complains about Pentecostals in regard to this gift that "there is too much dashing about in response to 'voices' one hears". In fact, Pentecostals in the main don't resort to prophetical utterances to hear directives to dash about anywhere. Specific plans are not made known generally through prophetical commands either now or in the New Testament. This is typically "charismatic" as against Pentecostal teaching.

I have read carefully Fr. Sullivan's section (p.11) on the important question of Church unity. So far as I can interpret him, he thinks that the Pentecostal movement can help the "ecumenical" movement by re-establishing the value of prayer, which would (somehow) help the unity of belief. He says that "Faith is the foundation of reunion" and Pentecostal experience may help to discover the "basic elements of the faith". I wish I knew what all this meant. I can make myself clear, I hope, anyway. The foundation of reunion may be faith, but it is a faith which includes certain beliefs, to begin with. Prayer may help, but without truth, we build on emotion, sentiment, or mere camaraderie. Tongues and healings, don't immediately impel me to embrace long-lost brothers without seeing their credentials of doctrine. Fr. Sullivan says we should "share one another's charisms in defence of the Gospel", but he doesn't question it that we all have the same gospel. I do question it. The gospel I hear from some pulpits and read in many books is not remotely familiar to me as a Pentecostal.

This book is certainly one that offers us an open hand of warm fellowship from the heart of the World Council and British Council of Churches. I would be churlish not to respond with love to this overture, but I feel a responsibility to the truth and to the wider-than-charisma witness of the Pentecostal churches not to say "there's no difference, we're all one". I don't think we are - yet.

A PERSONAL EXPERIENCE
by Alistair Forrest

The Ladder of Praise

"Enter into His gates with thanksgiving and into His courts with praise."

MANY people feel that there are three main steps of progress in the Christian life: Salvation, the baptism in the Spirit, and entrance into Glory. He who thinks that these are the only means to a deeper relationship with Jesus Christ is undoubtedly mistaken.

The Gifts of the Spirit definitely project the Christian into a deeper realm and the person who delves into the Word - of God or who seeks God at length in prayer also finds new riches in Christ.

There is another approach, however, which, when combined with these other aspects of Christian living, lifts the person concerned into a totally new experience. It is the ladder of praise.

The verse from Psalm 100 – "Enter into His gates with thanksgivings, and into His courts with praise" – can show us the way. Perhaps we have entered the gate of salvation with thanksgiving, but are wondering how to get into the courts of the Lord. The court is deeper into His presence than the gate. The answer is simple; praise Him!

Most Christians do praise Him, but is His praise continually in their mouths? Do Christians praise God in the middle of calamity, when there is no food to feed their family or when they are stricken with sickness?

When calamity besets us we must praise God that "All things work together for good to them that love God", and that He is perhaps testing us. Around the corner may be a new experience for which He is preparing us. When we praise God in bad times as well as in good, continually, we have climbed a ladder to a new position.

A few weeks ago I realised that God was speaking to me along these lines. I knew that I had to stop criticising God's people and praise Him for them, for what He was doing in the world today, and for what He did at Calvary.

I embarked on this new approach, praising God continually in everyday life. After a few days God tested me with a kind of spiritual dryness. I felt as if my prayers and my praises were bouncing back from the ceiling. I reached the stage where I was about to begin grumbling again. Then I remembered my new commission and I continued to climb the ladder above the dark storm cloud that was forming until I reached brilliant light.

I felt as if I had entered His courts.

"Be of good Cheer" Mark 2:1-12

by Sheila Price

IN a small room in the village of Capernaum a crippled man lay on his bed feeling sorry for himself. His life had been ruined by sin and his body was bent and diseased. As he lay on his bed, regretting his wicked past, the door opened and in walked four of his friends.

"Cheer up!" they said. "Jesus is home!"

"So what?" said the cripple. "He can do nothing for me."

"Jesus has cured worse disease than yours," they told him. "Why don't you come to hear Him preach?"

"How can I? You know I can't walk!"

"Then we'll carry you," said his friends, each taking hold of a corner of the mattress.

When they arrived, they could not get near the door for the crowd who had gathered to hear Jesus preach.

"We'll try again tomorrow," they said.

"But Jesus might be gone tomorrow," the cripple cried, "and I'll be so disappointed if I don't get to see Him now."

"I've an idea," said one of his friends. "I'll get some rope from the boats and we'll lower you down from the roof,"

The noise interrupted Jesus' sermon. He looked up to see the mattress being lowered by the ropes. It landed right at His feet and He looked down at the frightened cripple. He saw the great sadness in the cripple's eyes. "Be of good cheer!" Jesus told him. "Your sins are forgiven!"

The Pharisees began to mutter among themselves. "The man has come to be cured," they cried, "not forgiven!"

They did not know, as Jesus did, that it was more important to cure the soul than to heal the body. Jesus turned to the cripple, saying, "Arise! Take up your bed and walk." Immediately, the paralysed body was filled with a new, strong power.

The man must have danced and sung all the way home, his heart filled with a great love towards Jesus, the One who had understood his secret sorrow, the one who had not only healed his crippled body, but had taken away his greatest pain of all – the sin in his heart.

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

34. Divine Protection (Genesis 31:24)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

HAVING determined to return home with his family, and evidently expecting trouble from Laban, Jacob left secretly without stopping to say goodbye. On the third day, when the news reached Laban, he and his sons at once gave chase with the clear intention of doing harm to Jacob. The Lord gave clear warning to Laban not to hurt Jacob, however, and Laban was so afraid of this warning that he treated Jacob very carefully when they met. Thus the Lord protected Jacob in his hour of danger, even though Jacob did not realise at that time how the Lord had intervened for him.

In the Book of Esther is recorded a similar intervention when the Lord preserved Mordecai from his malignant enemy, Haman. Believers down the ages have constantly borne testimony to the Lord's protective care. How often have you and I been the objects of His loving care in the same way? It may have been at a time when we were in conscious danger or distress or perhaps on an occasion when we were not aware that trouble was threatening. Maybe only when it was past were we able to understand. Suddenly the Lord intervened to bring us out of trouble and the burden lifted, our distress was eased, the danger was averted. If we are Christians, we are the constant and special objects of Divine care; He loves us dearly for His Son's sake and all His glorious power is available for our protection. We can, therefore, leave ourselves and our future confidently in His care. No weapon that is formed against us can prosper!

"I felt a fire in my body, then something hurled me against the wall," he replied. "I heard a voice calling me, from, oh, so far way. I answered. The voice became louder. I found myself lying on the church floor, my relatives and the Christians around me. They told me that I had been dead."

At my welcome service, Yeremia was admitted to the status of Evangelist, having qualified for that rank through study and diligent service for the Master. Evidently that Master has further work for Yeremia here on earth!

"Why is it thought incredible by any of you that God raises the dead?" (Acts 26:8, R.S.V.).

Children and Scandals

THE first annual report of London's Police commissioner, Sir Robert Mark, makes very sad, disturbing reading, because of the large percentage of children and young people convicted of crime. Of all the robberies in London cleared up by the police last year, sixty-seven per cent were committed by those under the age of twenty-one. Out of this number fourteen per cent were children between the ages of ten and thirteen, and twenty-seven per cent were fourteen to sixteen year olds. I try not to be a gloomy prophet, but this report and the recent report of the Conference of Head Teachers only confirmed my fears concerning today's trends.

The speeches of some of the delegates do at least offer a glimmer of hope, however, for it is apparent that they are conscientious, thinking men. Discipline in schools is breaking down as the moral standards of leaders crumble. One head teacher told Bruce Kemble of the Daily Express: "The children's attitude is 'Why shouldn't I cheat? Everyone else does' ".

Addressing the Conference, one teacher said: "Events such as Watergate, Profumo, Lonrho, Poulson, and 'My Lords' make your job and mine more difficult. . .A loss of integrity causes a loss of credibility. . . It is expected that leaders in a position of authority, power and influence should not only be competent and efficient. They should also be honest, just, responsible - and may I suggest, humble".

Let us see what God says about this kind of disgraceful conduct which we all deplore. Proverbs 6:16-19 makes it very plain how He feels. Mr. Barnett, fifty-five year-old head of Birmingham's Castle Vale Comprehensive School said: "These recent events make our job more difficult. Kids know about these things from newspaper and television. It breeds cynicism and scepticism. Such events make it more difficult for them to accept authority. Our responsibility is made no easier by the fact that we don't always get a good example set by leaders. In that I include all people - politicians, pop stars, footballers, the lot".

It is not only the overwhelming guilt, the heartbreak and shame caused by these recent scandals that matter; they also incur God's condemnation on two counts, firstly because they are an affront to the Almighty, being absolutely opposed to His laws, and secondly they degrade the whole standard of human behaviour. What a legacy this generation is leaving to its children! I agree with another head teacher who observed: "This sort of thing weakens the whole fabric of society. Children begin to think everyone is corrupt".

What are we to do to counteract the general lowering of standards? To wring our hands in holy horror is futile. We must fight the evil with all our might. The silent Christian minority must be silent no more. Whether it is popular or not, we must not hesitate to say that truth is better than a lie, honesty is a better policy than dishonesty, cheating is always despicable, and purity and integrity of life are the hallmarks of a good, upright character. The old well-tried code of conduct which is Bible-based has never changed; rather it is society's opinions that have changed. Unfortunately even the most staunch believer can be hoodwinked by the Devil's delusion that today's morals and behaviour pattern are the norm. They are not. We must "hold fast that which is good and abstain from all appearance of evil" (1 Thessalonians 5:21,22).

Where the doubts are thickest, where the strength of youth
Falls beneath the chains of error,
There you find the soldiers, with the lamp of truth,
Freeing men from thoughts of terror.
Servants of the Master, strong in faith and sight,
Fighting for the Truth, the Life, the Light!

Letter to the Editor

Dear Brother Walker,

I SHALL be grateful if you will kindly spare a space in your esteemed EVANGEL for a word of thanks to the Elim Pentecostal Fellowship in the United Kingdom.

I thank the Lord for opening the way for Pastors James McKeown and David Mills and me to attend the Elim Conference at Blackpool this year. I wish to express my gratitude to Pastor L. Wigglesworth (who arranged my itinerary), the good brethren and staff at Headquarters in Cheltenham, the Missionary Council and all the Pastors and Deacons in whose Churches I was privileged to minister.

I was in the homes of some forty pastors, deacons and precious friends in England and Northern Ireland with whom I shared very happy fellowship. I am especially thankful to Pastor and Mrs. G.L.W. Ladlow and Pastor and Mrs. Tom W. Walker, with whom I stayed the longest at a time.

Our visit to the United Kingdom has strengthened the fellowship between the Church of Pentecost, Ghana, and Elim Pentecostal Church. I leave for Ghana with many happy memories and wish the Elim Fellowship every divine blessing.

"Praise the Lord! Hallelujah!"

Your brother in Christ,

Joseph Egyir-Paintsil

Youth Page

by Ken Smith, Pastor of our Erdington, Birmingham, Church

"We will give ourselves continually to prayer" (Acts 6:4)

ONCE a month, our weekly prayer meeting is devoted to the needs of the young people's activities in our Fellowship. I can commend this practice for the following reasons.

It encourages Fellowship.

In some assemblies, the youth work, or indeed any other section, can become a church within a church. This ought not to be so. Youth activity is a means to an end, not the end in itself, for young people are an integral part of the whole church fellowship.

At our monthly prayer meetings each leader gives a brief report of the previous month's work in our two Sunday schools, Sunshine Corner, Girls' Guild, and Crusaders, thus older and younger believers share the burdens and the blessings. What better fellowship is there than fellowship in prayer? Praying with young people for young people is a grand way of maintaining spiritual unity. It is easy to be critical of young people, not always without cause, but the place of prayer can unite our hearts in fellowship.

It encourages Prayer.

Spurgeon spoke of prayers which lacked aim. Jesus encourages us to be specific in our prayers: "Ask. . . seek. . . knock". Some people say much in prayer, yet they never really pray. To pray for the youth activities in your church is essential. You can pray at home, but that argument could stop you attending any prayer meeting. It need not preclude praying for other needs, or as the Holy Spirit leads. After all, a good number of Elim churches remember the missionary work in the first prayer meeting of each month. How easy it is to be casual and pay lip service to the need to pray for our young people each week, yet this encourages specific, intelligent prayer, when you know the needs of your local youth work and of national events. Our workers are very strongly expected to attend the place of prayer at least monthly through this specific purpose. Some come who for real reasons cannot come to the weekly prayer meetings.

It encourages Service.

You cannot sincerely pray for long before you feel the need for action and service. This is the right order in my judgment. Activity is rightly stressed, but there is need to emphasise prayer. Everyone can help in youth activity whatever one's age. Older people can adopt classes or scholars and, particularly during the time of the service or youth activity, can uphold the work in prayer. Through guidance in prayer it may be that the Lord will open up other fields of service for one can give financially, or assist in visiting absent scholars, thus contacting their homes and parents.

If you feel the need in your Assembly, talk to your minister. Ask that it be discussed and considered at the next teachers' meeting, youth workers' meeting, or deacons' meeting. For the sake of the young people whom we love and seek to win for the Saviour, we must "pray without ceasing".

Reviews of Children's Books

A Friend from the Woods, by E.M. Watkins. Published by Victory Press, price 45p, postage and packing 6p extra.

THIS interesting story tells of a boy's heart's desire to own a puppy. Although he was unable to have a dog because of the family's financial difficulties, he decides that there is something else he needs. He hears the gospel being preached and accepts Jesus Christ into his life. Ben feels as though his life has completely changed. The book then tells how Ben's prayers are answered when he finds a cute fox and of his trying times looking after it.

I found this book enjoyable to read and well written. I think that girls and boys between the ages of eight and eleven years will enjoy reading it.

Ferryman's Folly, by H.P. Benney. Published by Victory Press, price 45p, postage and packing 5p extra.

ANN has a forbidding task keeping a watchful eye on her brother. Life is immediately filled with adventure when Brian, deep in a Zoom-man comic at busy Paddington Station, knocks over THE ENEMY. Camping and boating offer the imaginative Brian ideal opportunities for stalking the heathen aliens on the opposite bank and attempting some man-napping (as opposed to kidnapping). He surprises even himself with his powers. It is all in a desperate attempt to save the holiday and the demolition of Ferryman's Folly and involves more contact with the sinister enemy.

Not everything goes Brian's way, including having to smarten up for church, but the end of one adventure leads to the start of another for Ann, now on the brink of new joy and beauty found in a new life in Christ.

The reader easily identifies with Brian, but unfortunately for me, Ann does not come across quite strongly enough. The reasoning and thinking of a young girl coming to Christ could have been more

Monday, July 16th — 1 Kings 17:17-24

"Now by this I know that thou art a man of God" (v.4).

JESUS said, "Believe Me for the works' sake" (see John 10:38). Elijah spelt out the message: Faith with works is ALIVE. When men see God answer prayer and the miraculous happens,they are moved to believe. Moody used to say, "Don't just wait for something to turn up, go out and make it." James tells us: "Elijah was a man subject to like passions as we are, and he prayed earnestly. . . and he prayed again" (James 5:16-18). When we continue to seek God in prayer we will be sent with a life-giving message and will live to see the supernatural signs that God gives to the servants whom He can trust.

Tuesday, July 17th — 1 Kings 18:1-16

"Obadiah feared the Lord greatly" (v.3).

HE feared Ahab more! In days when men loved pleasure more than God and worship was defiled by the whims of men and the introduction of false gods into the land, Obadiah should have stood alongside Elijah to defend the faith. In him we see the woolly-minded religionist who tries to get the best of both worlds. He hedged his bets to please the Almighty by hiding the prophets and pandered to the palace by being silent about sin. He was not the separated servant whom Paul calls for (2 Timothy 2:20,21). He was so unsure of his own word that the truth made him unsure of the character of others. It has been said: "The faults that we most readily recognise in others are those inherent in ourselves."

Wednesday, July 18th — 1 Kings 18:17-29

"Art thou he that troubleth Israel?" (v.17).

AHAB looked for faults in others, blaming God's servant and, indirectly, God. He had a speck in his eye, a chip on his shoulder and a heart harder than the hardest granite. A chip on the shoulder indicates wood higher up. Ahab "halted between two opinions". Indecisive leadership is not to be compared with inspired, informal leadership.

Thursday, July 19th — 1 Kings 18:30-46

"Come near" (v.30).

GOD'S work always bears examination. This is why the word, "come" is in the Scriptures over 1,000 times. It is not only a certain beverage that men reject, saying, "I don't like it, so I haven't tried it". God's principles for blessing are in this account: construct according to God's pattern; call upon the God of succeeding generations; stand aside and let the fire fall (Gypsy Smith said, "We preachers must learn when to stand aside and let God work"); completely destroy evil (v.40, compare 1 Samuel 15); persist in the vision that God has given you (v.43); live to see the reward of the righteous.

Friday, July 20th — 1 Kings 19:1-8

"He arose, and went for his life" (v.3).

IF such a great prophet was overcome with fear, there is encouragement for us all. There are times when we all feel that we could run away, whether it be the harassed mother from the children, the Pastor from the problems, or the businessman from the pressures or people. We are challenged to "Resist the devil, and he will flee from you" (James 4:7). Even the great Martin Luther was once depressed so much that his wife dressed in black. He asked her who was dead, to which she replied, "God". He immediately realised that the Almighty is alive.

Saturday, July 21st — 1 Kings 19:9-21

"What doest thou here?" (v.9).

TO Adam God said, "Where art thou?". Of Saul Jesus asked, "Why persecutest thou Me?". "Where? What? Why?"—God often asks the human heart these searching questions, not always in dramatic ways but more frequently "in a still, small voice" that leads us to a place of comfort. God showed Elijah that there were others who had not forsaken the truth and He allowed him a companion so that his loneliness would not obscure truth from his otherwise triumphant spirit.

Sunday, July 22nd — 1 Kings 20:1-21

"I will deliver. . . by the young men" (vv.13,14).

THERE are reading this portion twentieth century Samuels and Stephens who, though not bearers of these names, can rise under the Spirit of the Lord to put the enemy to flight. Moody, when still young and somewhat unlearned (Acts 4:13), heard a preacher say, "The world is waiting to see what God can do through one fully surrendered soul". Moody prayed, "By God's grace I will be that man." Rise up, young men! Burn your bridges like Elisha and minister to the Master.

clearly developed. It is a well-written book, however, in the language of young people and commendable for both boys and girls, though I would suggest of a slightly younger age bracket than that suggested on the cover – more nine to twelve year olds. It would also bear reading aloud by an imaginative adult to groups of children. Denzil Jarvis

THE FIRST OF THREE ARTICLES

1. The return of the Shunammite

(2 Kings 8:1–6)

by A.S.F. Horne, Pastor of our Ipswich Church

IN The Jerusalem Bible it is: "Epilogue to the story of the woman of Shunem".

Please read very carefully the six verses that I am going to share with you in my next three articles.

Whether the famine that caused the Shunammite to leave her native place commenced before the birth of her son and ended before his death, or whether it began and ended after he was "restored to life"; it is hard to tell.

A Sojourner "in the land of Philistines"

THE Philistines, descended from Ham in the line of Mizraim and Caphtorim, now inhabited a tract of country along the coast of the Mediterranean in the southwest of Canaan. It was only about forty miles long and from fifteen to twenty-five miles broad, and was almost entirely enclosed by the possessions of the Israelites. It ought to have been conquered and possessed by them. The Philistines were perpetually at war with the Israelites and continued as thorns in their sides until about six hundred years before Christ, when they were harassed and finally destroyed as a nation by the kings of Egypt and Assyria, who made their country the seat of their wars.

They were those who so cruelly opposed and oppressed Israel in the days of the Judges Shamgar, Samson, Eli and Samuel, who in the days of Eli stole the Ark of God that contained the commandments engraven on stone which Moses received from the Lord on Sinai, who defied the "armies of the living God" in the days of Saul, king of Israel, in the person of Goliath, whom David slew with a sling and stone, and who afterward slew "the beauty of Israel", the anointed son of Kish and the lovely Jonathan "upon the high places of Gilboa". They were idolaters. This was the land and these were the people, in which and among whom the holy matron had to dwell.

To their praise, it must be said, the sacred rites of hospitality and justice were not violated by them, for among them she sojourned.

How remarkable that so good a woman should have had to seek a home among so wicked a people!

The Reason

A great scarcity of food was occasioned by drought, mildew, locust, the invasion of an enemy, or some great calamity. This was a judgment from the Lord to bring them to repentance and reformation, a heavy stroke, but from a kind and loving Father. Even the renowned Shunammite had to face the situation. The righteous are not always exempt from national distresses, but God is not unmindful of those who "sigh and cry for all the abominations that are done among them" by the ungodly.

Such were preserved when Jerusalem was destroyed by the Babylonians and also when it was destroyed by the Romans. As certainly as the Shunammite was provided for while the wicked of her nation were starving, so certainly God has provided and will provide for the righteous in all ages, even for ever and ever. "They that seek the Lord shall not want any good thing" (Psalm 34:10).

The Duration

A month or a year with the enemies of God's people is not a little thing, but she had seven long years with strangers, foes and idolaters! She and her household had found a place of sojourn, however, and "He who has the hearts of all men in His Hands, and turneth them whithersoever He pleaseth" was her portion and defence. He who taught the ravens to feed Elijah taught the Philistines to deal friendlily with the hostess of Elisha, his successor.

Piety is a diamond that but few are base and blind enough not to admire, especially after it has been washed of the filth of the quarry whence it was dug and its beauties have been made apparent by the skilful hand of the lapidary, though many are foolish enough to neglect to take possession of it, even when it is thus set before them and they are entreated to accept it.

The pious have now and then to "sojourn in Mesech" with those who "hate peace". Generally, however, if they live not unto themselves but unto Christ who lived and died for them, always doing the will of God, they will find friends among enemies and bounties and blessings amid barrenness and curses.

Righteousness is exalting personally as well as nationally, and "when a man's ways please the Lord, He maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him".

So it was with the Shunammite and her family in the land of the Philistines. She had virtues to recommend her and was an inestimable treasure wherever she was found.

Next we will see the Shunammite as a suppliant.

Editorial

TWO articles in this issue put the balancing factors before us concerning one of the difficult problems of our day. James T. Bradley writes pointedly of the need for personal evangelism and for church members in general to feel their personal responsibility towards the world of lost men and women. Andrew Parfitt deals with the need to study, his main thrust being towards the necessary development of mind and thought within the framework of faith. The two contributions are complementary

To deal with the latter first, it must be seen that to be satisfied with beginnings is unscriptural and unwise. The Bible abounds in exhortations to spiritual development and growth and has no quarrel with the use of the powers of thought as a means to receiving spiritual revelation — as Mr. Parfitt demonstrates — a means to, not a substitute for. There must be some who excuse either laziness or lack of application by reference to spirituality. Surely the gospel is a whole message for the whole man to make him whole.

The point made by the Secretary-General is of equal importance. The splendour of grace sometimes dazzles us. The glorious bestowal of salvation and of all the consequent blessing and privileges is so breath-taking that we fall into the error of being falsely modest or of imposing all manner ofprohibitions and regulations between the heart and its loving Saviour. We even err by suggesting that "probation" periods have to be served before folk can be baptised in water or baptised in the Holy Spirit. It is at least arguable that many spoken of in the Acts of the Apostles did not comply with any such ideas, for they seem to have been saved, baptised in water, and baptised in the Spirit within hours!

Known sin must be confessed and wrongs must be righted, but we must ever shy away from the implied notion that we are thus "graduating" or "qualifying". God's grace is free. His gifts are without repentance. "He giveth and giveth and giveth again". We find this hard to grasp in a world of "What's in it for me?". Our latent pride demands that we do something, are something, achieve something.

We were hell-bound sinners in the first place, saved only by and because of God's grace. We get only what He graciously gives — and He loves to lavish His gifts upon us.

The time to start witnessing is the day of your conversion. The time to stop is never.

Hill End Youth Camp, Oxford

OVER the Spring Bank Holiday the Crusaders from Oxford held a Youth Camp at Hill End just outside of Oxford. We were joined by children and Crusaders from Wallingford, Cheltenham and Evesham. The Camp aimed to provide plenty of outdoor recreation together with Christian fellowship. Sunny weather ensured that the sporting side went with a swing. Our Padre, Pastor Len Magee, conducted the spiritual side of camp. We were all held spellbound on Saturday by the story of Snowflake, the lamb that got lost.

On the Sunday the Campers took the services at our Church in Oxford and on the Monday the Camp was open to visitors. Some of the young people are finding a year too long to wait for the next camp. We are hoping to make this a regular Spring Bank Holiday activity.

Extracts from letters sent by some of the Campers:

"When I went to Hill End Camp we had good food, swimming, games and lots of fun. Janet."

"I liked the chorus singing in the Barn and the barbecue. On the Sunday we went to Sunday school and church services at the City Temple. C.S."

"We went badger tracking and spent a lot of time in the swimming pool. It was a great weekend and everybody made friends and enjoyed themselves."

Report by Youth Leader JENNIFER LINDSEY

RAYLEIGH Pastor: W.R. West

WHEN we opened our new church building last December we had a debt to the bank of £5,000. We recently had a gift of £2,000 and also a loan of £1,000 interest free. This means that we owe the bank only £2,000 at interest.

The Lord is blessing our meetings with a real sense of His presence and recently one of the young folk decided for Christ.

LANE END, High Wycombe Pastor: L. Magee

WE recently held our third baptismal service since Pastor Magee came to us in June 1972. He was assisted by E.B.C. student Steven Challoner who had been ministering at the new Aylesbury Church for a short time. Six candidates followed the Lord through the waters of baptism, three from Aylesbury and three newly converted under our Pastor's ministry.

We are grateful to God for this further evidence of His grace at work in the lives of these young people. Their testimonies were fresh and glowing.

To God be the glory for His love and faithfulness!

BISHOP AUCKLAND Pastor: R.M. Kingsbury

WE were recently privileged in having a visit from Pastor and Mrs. Ian MacInnes who thrilled us with their accounts of what God is doing in Guyana. It was wonderful to see pictures of young men who, just a short while ago, were lost in paganism, and who are now on fire for Jesus Christ. Hearing of their programme of constant outreach certainly brought a challenge to all our hearts. There was also an interesting display of articles from Guyana which helped us to understand the Guyanese way of life.

We look forward every year to our Spring Convention. Our speakers this year were Pastors D.G. Holmes and G.N. Miller. Pastor Miller ministered to us at the Saturday and Sunday meetings. We particularly remember his exhortation to pray, given in the Saturday meetings. Messages in song were by the folk group Alethia, whose combination of talent and dedication brought blessing to all.

The church was packed to capacity with about 200 people for the Monday meetings. There was good support from neighbouring churches of other denominations and coach-loads came from our Sunderland and Newcastle Churches. We were challenged by Pastor Holmes's message on the fire of God and what it can do for us both individually and as a church.

Between meetings the Bishop Auckland ladies provided an ample tea. An open-air demonstration in the local market square was led by Vision Group. There was also a waiting meeting when one young man received his baptism in the Holy Spirit.

There was a great sense of joy in the evening meeting and God again blessed us through the ministry of the Word and in song. We are glad to see that these blessings did not end with the Convention, God is still moving in the church baptising in the Holy Spirit and saving young people.

A. KINGSBURY

STOWMARKET Pastor: M.A. Drew

WE have just completed a crusade with a difference conducted by Pastor A.L. Hawkes and a team of young people from our Grangetown Church. At the anniversary service on the Saturday night over 100 people came to give thanks to God for His blessing over the past year. On the Sunday the young people took our Sunday school, Pastor Hawkes preached at the morning service. The evening meeting was the highlight of the weekend, with all departments of the church taking part. Mr. Edwards, the Church Treasurer, gave a report on how God had met our needs. One of the children presented our Pastor with a Bible as a token of thanks. After the meeting tea and coffee were served during a time of informal fellowship.

During the week, the Grangetown young people worked very hard. Their duties covered the distribution of 1,000 copies of Elim News, street contact work, personal work in the pubs at night, and a meeting in the old folk's home. On the Thursday they went to the over-sixties' club, of which our Pastor is the Chaplain, and spent time talking to them. It was a thrill to see some of the folk who had been contacted during the week at the Sunday night meeting. We would thank Pastor Hawkes for all his ministry and the young people who were willing to rough it by sleeping in the Church, for all their help. We pray that God will give the increase.

HALIFAX Pastor: G.H. Wallace

AN evangelical Independent Methodist minister from Castleford, Rev. T. Jones, with Charlie, the ventriloquist's dummy, was guest speaker at our Sunday school anniversary. In the afternoon, astronaut Charlie tried to get to heaven in a spaceship. He thought that the further up he went, the nearer to heaven he came. After an argument with Mr. Jones and Pastor Wallace he was told that the only way to heaven was by letting Jesus come into his heart. Earlier in the service the Sunday school sang "There is Joy" and "Open my ears" and the Primary performed items called "Jesus the best Friend", "Things I love" and "Jesus knows". Andrew Halloway and Timothy Brierly were presented with prizes for winning a recent colouring competition in the Halifax Church magazine.

In the evening service, the Sunday school and Primary performed items round the theme: "Listening to God" (in nature, by reading the Bible, and through Jesus Christ). Miss P. Wallace sang a solo with guitar accompaniment. The power of God was felt as Mr. Jones sang two solos: "It's a wonderful, wonderful life" and "Some day life's journey will be over". Charlie told the boys and girls that, if they do wrong things, they will always be found out. In his message Mr. Jones asked those who profess to be Christians "Why am I a Christian?" and those who know not Jesus, "Why should I become a Christian?". The Sunday school superintendent, Miss E. Saunderson, convened both services and Mr. D. Harpin was the organist.

DAVID BRIERLEY

BLACKPOOL, MARTON Pastor: R. Clarke

PRIOR to our sisterhood week-end we received news that our special speaker, Mrs. G. Gorton, had been taken ill. We were disappointed, but the Lord marvellously undertook. A family from the Sheffield Church, Mr. and Mrs. Gregory with their daughter Jean, came as Mrs. Gorton's replacement.

The week-end began on the Saturday with a team from the Salvation Army, arranged by Mrs. D. Forrest and convened by Mr. W. Shepherd. We were greatly blessed by their ministry and exceptional display of talent.

Sunday morning was convened by our Pastor and the message in song was by Mrs. Holland. Our Pastor's wife brought an inspired message.

The evening meeting was led by Mrs. Clarke and Mrs. Gregory testified. Musical items were brought by our ladies. An excellent message was given by Miss Jean Gregory. Mr. Gregory closed in prayer.

On the Monday our ladies were led in a service of song by Mrs. Threader, which proved to be a much-appreciated climax to a most successful week-end.

(Miss) N. LAWRENCE

NORWICH Pastor: L. Reeves

"THE best Norwich Convention ever" seems to be the opinion voiced by the majority of God's people here at the end of the very able ministry of Derek Coates. After perhaps rather dry and hard beginnings in the public hall, the Spirit of God really fell when we moved into our own Church.

First came a spirit of conviction, then a paean of praise to God for all His mighty love and mercy. Services often went on until almost 10 p.m. and even then folk were reluctant to go. It is certain that everyone was mightily moved, some with sorrow for sin, some for coldness of heart, some in joyous love for Jesus. This mighty convention will dwell in our hearts for a very long time.

Once a year we have our "Jericho March". Members and friends come forward to put their gifts on the open Bible. This year it took place on the Sunday evening of our convention and amounted to £612.45. To God be the glory!

Some weeks ago a sister was prayed for and miraculously healed of glaucoma and inevitable blindness. We are deeply humbled and so grateful for the remarkable way in which the Lord is blessing.

In September two of our young men enter the Elim Bible College. They are deeply spiritual and actively engaged in our local outreach for God. They will be sadly missed, but we rejoice in that the Holy Spirit has laid hold on them for the extension of His Kingdom.

South Wales Presbytery Radio Seminar

EVANGELISM via radio is a door of opportunity that the Lord has opened in the twentieth century. We must be prepared to enter this door, especially as local B.B.C. and commerical radio becomes more widespread.

In any area of work for the Lord, preparation and proficiency should go hand in hand. To become proficient in new realms, one must learn the technique involved and follow in the footsteps of the experienced. You can imagine our delight, therefore, when, by kindness of the B.B.C., we were invited to the modern radio studios in Llandaff, Cardiff, for our radio seminar.

The Director of Religious Broadcasting for the B.B.C. in Wales, Rev. Tregellis Williams, together with Rev. John Stewart-Roberts, Producer of religious programmes both for radio and T.V. in the Welsh region, brought from their combined experience informed insights to illuminate our thoughts. Studio facilities were placed at our disposal with staff, though normally off duty, present on a Saturday afternoon to assist. Ron Williams, Pastor of our Rochester Church, who produces a weekly programme for B.B.C. Radio Medway, having been involved in local radio for nearly four years, also brought the benefits of his experience to us. He presented several tapes of broadcasts that he has made and criticised the earlier ones, showing how his language had had to change to make full use of this medium. His contribution was very beneficial.

Three tapes had been previously produced by J.H. Dick of Cardiff, J. Bristow of Bridgend and R. Hughes of Pontypridd for examination by the experts. They were most complimentary about the content, but gave constructive criticism regarding technical points which a good producer would normally help to iron out.

Here are three quotes from an inspiring afternoon: "Never lose your sense of responsibility in this remote medium. Remember that you are talking to one woman at a kitchen sink"; "The microphone shows any insincerity in an instant and portrays your whole personality. . . are you ready for that?"; and one that made us all sit up: "You may not be a broadcaster at all". Why not have a seminar in your area and find out?

In Defence of the Faith

3. Sinning Men: Apostates

by F. J. Slemming

READ Jude verse 4. Jude was under the compulsion of the Holy Spirit as he wrote this Letter that bears his name. In it he called to believers earnestly to contend for the faith of their fathers. He did this because apostates had by stealth crept in among the believers. Satan had sown his tares among God's wheat. False brethren had wormed their way into the assemblies of God's people.

The dangers and difficulties of such a situation were known and experienced by the Apostle Paul for, as he writes in 2 Corinthians 11:26, among the many perils which he faced were "perils among false brethren".

This very dangerous situation has been with us since the Church of Jesus Christ was born, but it intensifies and grows worse with the passing of time and will reach its consummation in the days immediately preceding the return of our Lord Jesus Christ, surely these present days.

Paul wrote: "In the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils [demons]" (1 Timothy 4:1). A few verses on in instructions to Timothy he adds, "If thou put the brethren in remembrance of these things, thou shalt be a good minister of Jesus Christ".

This being true, it is proper and right as well as instructive that we consider the subject of Apostasy.

In verses 14,15, Jude says that the condemnation of such men was written of old, for Enoch prophesied of them even before the Flood. Jesus Christ warned of this situation when He told us that Satan would come and sow tares while men slept; he would sow his men among the people of God. In Matthew 13:24-30 you get expressions such as "children of the wicked one. . . among the children of the kingdom".

Today men easily and willingly accept false doctrine. It is taught and accepted that a universal brotherhood of man is a fact, indeed it has been propagated for so long and so constantly that some even believe it to be a basic truth of the Christian faith. With it is taught the universal Fatherhood of God. This error is preached and taught in places and from pulpits where once men believed the Bible and preached the truth that only those who have received Jesus Christ as personal Saviour and Lord have the right to be called the sons of God.

Where the Lord Jesus Christ is denied, where the teachings of God's Word are perverted, there is apostasy. Recall the parable of the sower. Consider the sower, the seed and the soil. One type of person is likened to seed sown in rocky ground. When they hear, they receive the Word with joy, but they have no root. For a while they believe, and then, in time of temptation, they fall away. Luke uses the verb form of the word "apostasy" to express this idea of falling away.

An apostate, then, is one who receives the Word. believes it for a time, and then falls away. At first reading this may be a little hard to accept, but take into account the three Gospel records of this parable. Stony-ground hearers receive the word, but Mark uses a very strong word when he speaks of the folk likened to the good ground, that they receive "to the side" the Word of the Lord. They welcome it, take it into their hearts. Those who fall away, however, are not said to understand the Word or to bring forth fruit. They have no roots, no life in Christ. Jude verse 12 speaks of apostates as "without fruit", "twice dead", "plucked up by the roots". Be careful not to confuse apostasy with mere indifference to the Word, or with error, or even with heresy. A Christian believer may fall into error, he may be led away by some heresy, but that does not mean that he has become an apostate. An apostate has received light, but he has not received life. He has accepted the written Word maybe, but he has not accepted the living Word, the Son of God. Jude is quite clear about this, as he teaches us that apostasy has in it the ingredient of having received the truth, then purposefully and deliberately rejecting that same truth. As Paul expresses it, "They received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved." (2 Thessalonians 2:10).

Judas was an apostate and so were Cain, Balaam and Korah. Simon the sorcerer believed and was baptised, but remained in the gall of bitterness and in the bond of iniquity (Acts 8:13-23).

Jude verse 4, with which we commenced this study, describes these certain men as having crept in privily. This may be translated: these man "have settled down alongside". They sit in our churches. They are alongside us in our Christian service. Their voices are heard in Christian circles. Some of them preach from Christian pulpits. Hear what Peter says about them in 2 Peter 2:1: "There shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them". "Men sneak in among us, stealthily they introduce false doctrines" declare both Peter and Jude, and Jude says of them in verse 4: They are ungodly; they pervert the grace of God into lasciviousness; they deny our Lord and Master.

Of ungodly men, the original meaning of the word used here speaks for itself: "Destitute of reverential awe towards God". "A form of godliness, but denying the power thereof" says Paul (2 Timothy 3:5), denying the transforming power of God which alone enables the believer to live the life that is called for by Christ (see Philippians 3:10). The ungodly man about whom Jude speaks must not be confused with the wicked man or the immoral man. He may be quite a good man, a sincere man, but he is an ungodly man because he lacks the quality of godliness that the Bible speaks of again and again.

Perverting the grace of God into lasciviousness is the hall-mark of falling away from the truth. We are saved by grace absolutely apart from the works of the law (Ephesians 2:8). When this precious truth is perverted, changed, made an excuse, or used as a licence to sin, there we have apostasy.

I do not believe that the believer can go where he pleases that he may indulge fleshly desires and engage in evil practices. Let me commend to your notice and attention Titus 2:11-13: "Denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world; looking for" the second coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.

These "certain men" of Jude v.4 deny our only Master and Lord. On every hand now we have men who deny His sovereignty, His lordship, His saviourhood; they bring to us false doctrines and heresies and by reason of them the way of truth is evil spoken of.

Jesus said, "Whosoever shall deny Me before men, him will I also deny before My Father which is in heaven." (Matthew 10:33).

"Who is a liar but he that denieth that Jesus is the Christ?. . . the same hath not the Father"(1 John 2 : 22,23).

Wherever this apostasy abounds, child of God, fellow-believer, heed the word of Jude and earnestly contend for the faith once delivered!

Children's Corner

Daisy (Isaiah 1:3)

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

"I AM afraid to pass that field", said Betty.

"Why?" asked John.

"Because of the cows", replied Betty. "one of them is looking over the hedge".

"It won't hurt you", said her brother, "it looks quite friendly".

"Oh, she is", declared Farmer Brown, who had overheard the children, "Daisy is a very friendly cow".

"We are gathering blackberries", John explained.

"Well", said the farmer, "if you'd like to cross the field, I will let you pick some of the big, juicy ones that are growing at the far end".

He opened the gate for the children to enter the field, taking care to close it behind them. "Some people forget to shut the gate", he said, "and the cows wander off and get lost".

"Is that why they have bells around their necks?" Betty asked, "so that you can hear where they are?"

"That's right", said the farmer, "now you go ahead and pick your blackberries. The cows will not bother you. They are gentle creatures and quite harmless".

"How old is Daisy?" asked Betty.

"She is three," replied the farmer, "when I first saw her she was nervous and frightened in the strange surroundings of the market, but she has settled down happily here on the farm and has repaid me many times over, supplying milk for cheese and butter and cream. Daisy, like all cows, is a wise animal, too. She will not eat dry grass, for instance. She prefers good grazing ground where the grass is sweet and fresh, so each day I lead her to fresh pasture. In one of his Psalms, David says, 'The Lord is my Shepherd. . . He maketh me to lie down in green pastures".

"I know that Psalm", said Betty.

"So do I", said John, "It is the twenty-third".

"That's right", said the farmer, "and like all good shepherds, our Lord knows His children by name".

"Have your cows got names?" asked Betty.

"Yes, every one of them, and they come when I call, too. Just you watch! Daisy!" he called, "Bluebell! Buttercup!".

At the far end of the field the cows turned and began running towards their master.

Why Study?

by Andrew Parfitt

ANDREW PARFITT, aged 30, son of the late T.S. Parfitt, Assembly of God minister and Executive Council member, was saved and baptised in the Spirit as a child. He is the Deputy Headmaster of a modern, progressive primary school in Maidstone, Kent. His wife, Ann, is also a teacher. They have a two-year-old son, Matthew. He is the Youth Leader of the Assembly of God, Maidstone, General Secretary of the Students' Pentecostal Fellowship, Chairman of the Maidstone Convention Youth Committee and Secretary of Maidstone Graduates' Fellowship.

PENTECOSTALS have often been wary of intellectuals. In turn, many intellectuals have been suspicious of Pentecostals, because their emphasis on tongues and other supernatural manifestations appeared to by-pass natural reason. For the same reasons various evangelicals have criticised the Pentecostal movement. Old theories die hard: in his recent booklet Your mind matters (I.V.P.) John Stott maintains that "one of the most serious features at least of some neo-pentecostalism is its avowed anti-intellectualism".

Limitations of the Mind

Without condoning the attitude of a minority of Pentecostals who do belittle the intellect, we are right, surely, to appreciate the limitations of the mind. Contrary to the teaching of the old natural theology, it is not possible by philosophical argument to discover God: "The world failed to find Him by its wisdom" (1 Corinthians 1:21, N.E.B.). Christian conversion involves the work of God's Spirit on the heart and will as well as on the mind of man. Full understanding follows, not precedes, faith: in Anselm's dictum, "I believe so that I may understand."

The more man discovers, the more obvious it becomes just how much more there is to know and understand. Some of the world's greatest thinkers readily acknowledge the limitations and fallibility of the human mind. It is still true that "Divine folly is wiser than the wisdom of man, and divine weakness stronger than man's strength (1 Corinthians 1:25, N.E.B.). Some aspects of Christian belief - in particular God's plan of redemption through the cross of Christ - defy human explanation. The Pentecostal does not try to rationalise miracles, because he believes that they are truly supernatural. He sees great value in speaking in tongues to God, because in this way his spirit can pray without the limitations of the human mind and emotions. I cannot agree with John Stott when he infers from 1 Corinthians 14:13-18 (about praying in the Spirit) that "Paul could not contemplate any prayer or worship in which the mind was barren or inactive"!

The Pentecostal emphasis on the power of the Spirit has led some to abandon their studies. They may have argued from Scripture that "they that seek the Lord understand all things" (Proverbs 28:5). They may have felt, in view of the brevity of life and the importance of eternity, that they ought to devote themselves entirely to spiritual things. They may have feared that intellectualism per se leads to pride, unbelief and even sin.

The Mind in spiritual Life

I agree wholeheartedly that our prime need is the power of the Holy Spirit, but I do not believe that we can resolve the tension between the mind and the spirit by "killing off" the mind. The intellect may not be all-important, but this does not mean it is unimportant. There is a surprising number of exhortations in Scripture to use our minds. God mainly reveals Himself to us through the gateway of our minds because we are "not like the horse or mule, without understanding, which must be curbed with bit and bridle" (Psalms 32:9). As Martyn Lloyd Jones says, "The Bible is full of logic and we must never think of faith as something purely mystical". Paul stressed the need for careful teaching of the Word of God (1 Timothy 4:13-16, 5:17) and it is obvious from his own writings and sermons that the Spirit of God worked through his natural powers of logic and argument: his intellect had definitely not been put to sleep. The main argument of John Stott's booklet (notwithstanding the attack on Pentecostals) is surely right - our minds DO matter in Christian belief and practice.

The study of God's Word may be a spiritual exercise, but it also requires many of the qualities demanded in secular studies - discipline of time and mind, correct exegesis, logical thinking and presentation, and balanced judgments. It has always seemed significant to me that the two "giants" of the Testaments - Moses and Paul - were highly-educated men. God can and does use "unlearned and ignorant men", but many of the outstanding leaders in Church history - Wycliffe, Luther, Calvin, Wesley - were scholars as well as being men of great spiritual insight. In our desire for action we must beware of shallow thinking: we must be prepared to give a reason for our faith to those who are genuinely looking for answers (1 Peter 3:15). That great Pentecostal missionary W.F.P. Burton was a man of study as well as action. In a fine article called Man's mind in God's Work he wrote: "It is a mark of good stewardship if we develop our intellect and dedicate trained minds rather than dull ones to his service".

Secular Study

There are certain areas of non-theological study that have an obvious usefulness in Christian service, such as medicine, education or languages .

I believe that there are other disciplines that can be of direct help to the cause of Christ. Only in recent years have Christians begun to realise that secular writers and producers have a lot to teach us about communication. I am perturbed by the poor content and presentation of much Christian literature, films and radio: if we are going to use a medium we may as well learn to use it effectively.

It is not only a matter of acquiring techniques, however. We need Christians with specialised knowledge who can give authoritative guidelines on some of the serious issues, such as evolution, that concern young people in particular. Some of the so-called Christian answers to academic problems display such ignorance and misinterpretation that they are a disservice to the Church. In the field of literature and art, I fear that, in our righteous desire to condemn the exploitation by evil men, we fail, sometimes, to appreciate the serious message of some avant-garde writers and artists. In order to answer them effectively we must first understand - genuinely understand - what they are saying. This will save us from answering non-questions; from merely beating the air. As Luther realised: "If I profess with the loudest voice and clearest exposition every portion of the truth of God except precisely that little point which the world and the devil are at the moment attacking, I am not confessing Christ, however boldly I may be professing Christ."

Professor Rookmaaker (Modern Man and the Death of a Culture) and Francis Schaeffer have shown the value of answering modern man from a position of strength. They know what he says, why he says it, and from there they expose logically the weaknesses of his philosophy. Such an approach involves close contact with today's culture, but this by no means leads to compromise or unspirituality. It is no soft option, but it has shown many that, far from needing to fear ungodly ideas, they have every reason to have confidence that the Christian message is the only rational answer to life. This approach is more likely to help today's enquiring youth than glib answers, cliches and unexplained quotations from Scripture.

It is not only in the realm of apologetics that Christian thinkers are needed. There are many spiritual and moral issues at stake in the professions today and I am convinced that there are genuine opportunities for Christians to use their influence at all levels. Some students switch off their minds when they leave college and, true, the world of salaries, families and mortgages is demanding, but we can hardly complain about godless new philosophies and policies in education, economics, politics, medicine and so on if we have neglected the opportunity to act as salt in our particular world. Such effectiveness demands that we are committed to our professions and have a lively awareness of developments.

Not everyone is called to deep, prolonged study, but everyone has a mind that could be used, to a greater or less degree, in God's service. As the first and greatest commandment says: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy soul, and with all thy mind." (Matthew 22:37). That kind of love will save us from becoming either arid intellectuals or fiery ignoramuses.

Evangelism - without Money, without Price - and without Training!

by James T. Bradley, Secretary-General

WE are well aware that half an hour on a bicycle will teach us more about how to ride a bicycle than a thousand volumes read in the comfort of one's home. Half an hour in the water will teach us more about how to swim than reams of theory read in an armchair.
We can be assured that the act of witnessing will teach us more about witnessing than simply reading about it. Do it and we learn to do it. With the Holy Spirit as our Guide we shall be led, each in his own way, to witness.

The fields are more than ever "white unto harvest"; we cannot honestly say today "the labourers are few", unless it be that we are not doing our duty as witnesses.

As touching this, and immediately I had written the paragraph above, I saw our brother Leslie Northcote's review of The Kennedy Explosion in THE ELIM EVANGEL of June 9th and his comment on training for soul-winning: "It is significant that hesitant workers became successful after the commencement of practical work."

We may promote evangelism as a project but promotion and projection do not accurately reflect the New Testament approach to the winning of men and women for Jesus Christ. Promotion and projection savour too much of passing on the responsibility for the winning of men and women for Jesus Christ to others who, we may think, have a special responsibility, and maybe a special gift, for evangelism.

The New Testament approach to the winning of people to Jesus Christ is completely different. It is more personal and more dependent upon personal vision, personal attitude and personal love for the souls of men. Paul wrote to the Corinthians, "Most gladly therefore will I spend and be spent for you, though the more I love you the less I be loved".

Here was a man saved by Jesus Christ to be an example to all who should follow after him (1 Timothy 1:16), who first gave himself and then gave his talents to the task of winning people for Christ. He witnesses over and over again that it was his own personal love for men and women that moved him to seek them for Christ, and the love of God that was shed abroad in his heart by the Holy Ghost was the dynamic that moved him to spend and be spent for the souls of men. His passionate words of personal dedication come to us through all his Letters, and others were inspired to emulate him.

There seems to have been very little organisation or promotion, as such in those days; it was simply that those who were converted went everywhere preaching the Word. When they were scattered they got together in companies, as they were able, and they began to witness and to testify. As a result churches were formed by these scattered groups. They had a passion for the truth that they believed and they had a passion for the souls of men.

They had little money, in some cases none at all. They had no "modern methods of communication". They had no printing presses. Yet Paul, by the Spirit, writing to the Colossians was able to testify that, even in his time, so enthusiastic were the converts to witness, that "the Gospel which ye have heard. . . was preached to every creature which was under heaven whereof I Paul am made a minister."

I am reminded again of the challenge that was made at the Royal Albert Hall on Easter Monday, to which thousands responded, to win someone for Jesus Christ before next Easter. It's a fantastic thought that if every one of us in Elim won even one person for Jesus Christ this year more than 30,000 would be rescued from a lost eternity, and maybe even many new churches established.

The true requisite is not training, or money, but a sense of the experience that Paul gives expression to when he says, "Knowing the terror of the Lord we persuade men". Maybe we don't sufficiently stand in awe of the Judgment Seat of Christ; maybe we do not sufficiently think of the fate that awaits those without Christ. If we lack courage or know-how, or if we think we do, God can meet our need if we pray for His guidance and His help. No plan that I have studied, and any amount of them come to my desk, is sufficient to meet the need of lost humanity. Tens of millions of unconverted in our own land await the message!

If we listen to the Devil he will tell us that the times are too hard, the people are too indifferent, the circumstances are not propitious, society is too permissive and so forth; but the conditions for witnessing are certainly not less propitious than they were in the early days of the Church, and in most of the periods since those days.

This matter of winning men and women for Jesus Christ is one that needs our personal concern, our personal and united prayer, our personal challenge by the Holy Spirit that we have responsibility to make known to everyone the message that we believe.

As Paul states, God saved him in order that "he might make all men see what is the fellowship of the mystery which from the beginning of the world has been hid in God." Personal concern, personal vision, a sense of personal responsibility will carry us through. Let us pray that God will guide us to speak to people and that His Spirit will prepare their hearts to receive the Word. Is it not amazing how often in the New Testament, when personal witnessing was done, that the hearts of those to whom the witness was being made had already been prepared by the Holy Spirit?

by F. H. Coleman

THE story of revival thrills us. I read the other day of the revival which has broken out in Bolivia in South America through a young man, twenty years old, who attended a Kathleen Kuhlman meeting and was gloriously saved. Now he is back in his own land preaching the gospel and seeing the sick wonderfully healed. The result is that thousands are hearing the gospel for the first time in that mainly Roman Catholic country and are turning to Christ for salvation.

How we long for this to happen in our own land! God is moving by His Spirit in many parts of the world, but we in Europe need God to move again here in revival power. Can it happen? I am sure that it can, for Jesus died for all the world. What has so often preceded revival is PRAYER, so my appeal this week is for prayer that God will send us revival.

Some years ago, a Swedish Pastor who was visiting Great Britain spoke at our Swansea Church. He found the Assembly vibrant with life. Souls were being saved and many were being baptised in the Spirit. He soon discovered the secret. They were having constant prayer around the clock each day. On returning home, he reported this to the great convention in Nyhem, an annual event. It was decided to take up this great idea.

A few months later, I was speaking in the second largest Pentecostal Church in Sweden in the well-known sea-port of Gothenburg. The Members of the Church had decided to adopt the idea of continuous prayer for revival. At the close of the service, hundreds of people came forward to meet their Pastor, who spoke to them of prayer. All promised to pray, some during the day, others at night. Eventually it was arranged for someone to be praying right round the clock. It was the start of a revival which lasted for years. When I visited the Church again a few years later, I was told that the membership had increased by 2,000.

Will you pray daily for God to visit our Land and Europe?

Letter to the Editor

Dear Pastor Walker,

Christian greetings in Jesus!

I read in the EVANGEL that you would like us to tell you if we had been able to lead a soul to Christ. I was not at the Royal Albert Hall as I was not able to risk the whole day owing to my condition, but I would like to tell you that I had the joy of leading the cleaner of my chalet at the Conference to the Lord.

I always take my Scofield Bible and daily readings when I go to the Conference and leave them on the chest of drawers. On Tuesday morning I went back to my chalet after breakfast when the cleaner came in. She said, "Oh, I don't have anything to do in this and next door," where was my daughter, Mrs. Drew. She spoke about my Bible and said, "I read my Bible a lot, but I don't feel anything, I don't know why".

I told her that if she accepted the Lord into her heart she would, so I asked her if she would like to give her heart to the Lord and she said, "Yes". I asked her if she would repeat a prayer after me and really mean it in her heart. She said yes, so I prayed the salvation prayer to the full and she was so delighted. She asked me to write the prayer out as she would like her friend to say it. So I wrote the prayer out and left it on the drawers and next morning she took it.

I wrote to my friend in Birmingham and she sent me two tracts that are very good. I went back to my chalet on Friday and I asked the cleaner if she would like them. She said, "Oh yes, I will share them with my friend".

I am perfectly sure that she had at last found her Saviour and probably her friend had, too.

I give God all the glory. What a wonderful loving Saviour we have! It makes me want to join Him on His higher plane.

Yours sincerely,
A Sister in Christ Jesus,
(Mrs.) A. Barker

That Dreadful Day

by Malcolm J. Frith,
Pastor of our Church in Wellington, New Zealand

THE most momentous day in the Old Testament is surely the day which Genesis chapter 3 records, a day of action and reaction. If we could have walked in that Garden of Eden, we would have been surrounded by the glory of God and we would have revelled in its idyllic freedom and tremendous beauty. We would have enjoyed the unique relationship with God and no doubt we would say that we could never leave it behind as readily or as quickly as did Adam and Eve.

Temptation

A shadow began slowly to come over the scene as the devil began working to spoil that perfection. Those first sad verses of the chapter are a warning to us of the workings of the evil one. He is described as a serpent, the most subtle of God's creation, and apparently one of the most beautiful. As the devil spoke through a serpent or took the form of one, there is no indication that Eve was even disturbed at meeting a talking serpent.

Not only is Satan described as a serpent. Elsewhere Jesus calls him "the prince of this world", strong enough to erect his throne in every heart. Paul describes him as the "god of this world" before whom people fall down and worship. In Ephesians 2:2 he is called "a spirit", which means that he has access to the secret places of the hearts and minds of men. Thus he is omniscient as far as man is concerned, apart from the operation of God within our lives, but in the Garden he came as a serpent – deceitful and crafty.

He deceived Eve about his designs and about God's goodness. So successful was this deception that he still operates in this way, deceiving the masses about himself and his existence, about the great Deliverer and about their own needs.

He was also crafty, for it seems that he gradually tempted Eve over a period of time, undermining her gradually as he wove the web of doubt. She did not see his real design until she had become entangled in his net and had taken the bait. There in the Garden he cast doubt upon God's Word and has been doing so ever since.

Disaster

So subtle and skilful had been the temptation that Eve took of the forbidden fruit. Can you picture the scene? There is a chuckle from the serpent, a sob from heaven, a gasp from the sinners, then all is silent. A cloud dims the sun and a gust of cold air zips through the Garden. Sin has entered the world.

Its most terrible effect was to break man's living link with God. In a sense, the moment that fruit was taken, Christ was crucified. Certainly in heaven's eternal present the cross would have been seen following hard on the heels of the fall.

The reaction of the sinners is almost incredible. They had been accustomed to living in the beauty and the presence of God. Where is the record of their rushing to God asking forgiveness? Where is the confession of their sin? Where is the story of their humbling themselves and praying for mercy? Where do we read of their tears of sorrow? In that one act they became blind to their awful condition, and unaware of the implications of their sin. Indeed they seem already to be hardened to God. What a picture this is of the awfulness of sin!

Then, when God came to the Garden, Adam showed how human he was by blaming everyone for his sin except himself. He even blamed God! He refused to accept any personal responsibility for his deeds. It had been the devil's fault; it was Eve's fault; it was God's fault for He had given Adam the woman. How had the mighty fallen!

But God...

In direct contrast to the behaviour of the sinners was the reaction of God. No words can describe what He could have done to punish that rebellion, but instead we are introduced to the grace of God.

That day God had been greatly offended and treated with contempt, for in effect Adam and Eve had said, "We will not have our God to reign over us". A lie had been trusted rather than His truth and His easy yoke had been broken as though it were a sordid restraint. Despite this, God still came again to the Garden, for, though He hated sin, He still loved the sinners.

He could have come with a thunderbolt in His hands, or with a host of avenging angels to sweep the rebels into hell, but instead He came prepared to make every move. They ran, but He came. They hid, but He looked for them. They did not ask for forgiveness, so He spoke the first words of grace to a lost world and provided them with coverings. They heard the voice of the Lord God and were afraid, when all along it was a voice of mercy bringing tidings of deliverance and the first promise of the Stronger than Satan. They could not have known that, in tampering with God's creation, Satan had signed his own death-warrant, but none the less they heard for the first time the promise of life and of salvation.

The Promised Deliverer

The course of history was changed that day, and another change was promised (v.15). It can be described as the seed plot of the Bible. "I will put enmity between you and the woman, and between your seed and her seed. It will bruise your head, and you will bruise his heel". As God saw Satan standing smugly in his great victory, He saw him as strong, great, mighty and wily, so He promised to send One far stronger and gloriously greater, the One who would be Almighty and All-wisdom. That day Satan forged chains; he was a conqueror and an enslaver. Now God promised that he would become enslaved, enchained and the conquered one, and, praise God, heaven sees him as this already.

It is fitting that Jesus should be called "the seed", for not only was he the seed of woman, He was also the Seed from which a great Church of countless millions has sprung, each member of which is a testimony to the world of the defeat of Satan.

Writing of this promise, Bishop Henry Law has said: "If the greatest King became the meanest beggar, and if the richest prince left his palace for the vilest cell of a loathsome prison, it would be as nothing compared with what God promised that guilty pair", for He promised them that Jesus would leave heaven to put on the rags of our mortality, that He would lay aside the sustaining strength of the universe to become as weak as a babe. So much more was promised before that proud couple, even the humbling of Jesus.

Still there was no indication of repentance from Adam, or of rejoicing in God's provision of a Redeemer for the world which they had just ruined. Against such an attitude how wonderful the grace of God is shown to be!

No matter how hard he tried, from that moment on, Satan would have God's words ringing in his ears: "The seed will bruise your head, and you will bruise his heel". After his every triumph on earth, those words would haunt him, for in them Satan was doomed to ultimate ruin. His moment of triumph at having marred the beauty of creation became his greatest defeat.

We can understand that statement of God. Think of a hunter out shooting. One wild animal comes within his sights, but his bullet only goes through its foot. For a time the animal is disabled, crippled and loses blood. Soon the wound will be healed, but the animal will be marked for life. Another animal comes within the hunter's sights and this time his aim is true. The animal falls and the proud hunter poses for a photo standing with one foot on the dead beast's head to show that he has conquered.

Christ was to be temporarily disabled and marked for life, but He in turn would one day show the world his complete triumph over Satan.

Centuries went by. The Seed was born. He grew to manhood. Satan did his best to reverse the roles and to many it seemed that he was successful, until the day the bruised Christ rose from the dead.

Then Satan knew that the promise had been fulfilled.

Points for Preachers

by J. Alexander Wright

An Outline

"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ"
2 Corinthians 1:3

THIS beautiful doxology is thrice repeated. In the three is seen the largeness of the Father's provision to meet all our needs.

1. All the Circumstances of our outward lives (2 Corinthians 1:3). "Comfort" is paraklesis, i.e. "One alongside us, to help".
2. All the Needs of our inner lives (Ephesians 1:3) "in Christ". He is the golden Casket in which reposes our Charter of Liberties.
3. All the Uncertainties of our future lives are removed (1 Peter 1:3) – a lively, or living hope. Think of the living Bread, the living Water, living Fountains, and the living God.

An Incident

Take time to listen and practise what you preach

DR. A.T. Pierson once went to visit a fellow-minister who had been ill for six months. He said to his friend, "You are a very good man, brother, but it may be that God has something special to say to you. Perhaps you were too busy to listen, so He has laid you on your back that you might hear His instructive voice and perceive His will." As he left the house, Pierson was reminded that he too was always hurriedly going about the Lord's work, not allowing himself much time for receiving heaven's message for his soul. So he determined to practise what he had preached by beginning a new programme of personal devotions. First he would study the Word and ask the Holy Spirit for guidance and enlightenment. Then he would sit meditating and waiting for the Lord to impress His way and will upon his soul. This proved to be a tremendous blessing in his life.

A Poem

Only a Word

Only a word, yes, only a word
That the Spirit's small voice whispered, "Speak",
But the worker passed onward, unblessed and weak,
Whom you were meant to have stirred
To courage, devotion, and love anew,
Because, when the message came to you,
You were out of touch with your Lord.

Only a note, yes, only a note,
To a friend in a distant land.
The Spirit said, "Write". But then you had planned
Some different work, and you thought
It matters little. You did not know
'Twould have saved a soul from sin and woe.
You were out of touch with your Lord.

Only a day, yes, only a day,
But oh, can you guess, my friend,
Where the influence reaches, and where it will end?
Oh, the hours that you frittered away!
The Master's command is, "Abide in Me."
And fruitless and vain will your service be
If out of touch with your Lord.

35. Mizpah (Genesis 31:49)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

"MIZPAH. . . the Lord watch between me and thee, when we are absent from one another". How often these words have been used as a bond between lovers or friends who have been parted for a while, yet they were actually first used by two men who distrusted each other. Laban and Jacob had engaged in a battle of wits, cheating and deceiving one another to try to obtain an advantage. As they were parting, they set up stones to form a "heap of witness" and called upon the Lord to be a witness between them, in case either planned to do mischief to the other during their absence! After this, Jacob continued his journey to Canaan while Laban and his sons returned home.

Although Mizpah may not mean what so many have fondly imagined, it nevertheless recognises a fact of great significance, which is that we are never hidden from the sight of God. However closely related two people may be, they cannot be always together for twenty-four hours a day; but the Lord is always present. Nothing is able to hide us from Him. If we do what is wrong, this thought of the nearness of the Lord will bring great uneasiness and will trouble our consciences. So, before we permit evil, let us remember that He is the all-seeing One. This may save us from doing wrong, for it is a purifying thought. If we are seeking to do right, the thought of His presence will strengthen us. His eye is upon us for good. No matter who may misunderstand what we do, He will uphold and encourage us.

Teachers needed

"BUT among all our joys, there was no one that more filled our hearts, than the blessed continuance of the preaching of God's sacred Word among us; which is that inestimable treasure, which excelleth all the riches of the earth" wrote the translators of the Authorised Version of the Bible in their address to King James. Many of us echo their words today.

Here in our Salisbury Church we have enjoyed the preaching and teaching of the Scriptures in a unique way by Pastor Christopher Gornold Smith. His splendid series of lectures, entitled "The Bible Comes Alive", with such lucid explanations and dramatic presentations has held us almost breathless in our seats, not daring to move. The Bible is very much alive, pulsating with the life of God, "God-breathed", as George Jeffreys so often used to say, and absolutely up-to-date in its prophecies concerning events in the world today.

It was a particular pleasure for my husband to listen to Mr. Smith and to learn from the lectures of recent archaelogical discoveries, scientific research and of the people of Israel today in their national home, because he recalled that our guest preacher, as a teenager, was for four years a member of his Bible Class at the Ulster Temple, Belfast. Now the teacher was sitting at the feet of his one-time pupil, and why not? This is as it should be. The Scriptural principle is that faithful men, having been taught, should pass on their knowledge to others (2 Timothy 2:2).

Regrettably, though, the writer to the Hebrews lamented sadly that the Hebrew Christians, despite all the sound teaching that they had received, still needed to be taught and could not communicate their beliefs and faith. They were slow at grasping facts and easily forgetful, imperceptive and lethargic, according to the full meaning in Greek of the expression, "dull of hearing" in Hebrews 5:11. Thus they were immature, for v.12 states, "When for the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need that one teach you again". So were the believers at Corinth, as evidenced by 1 Corinthians 3:2.. "I have fed you with milk, and not with meat: for hitherto ye were not able to bear it, neither yet now are ye able". How discouraged their earnest instructors must have been! The inference is plain: a teacher delights in an eager pupil who makes progress and a parent desires a child to develop into full maturity. William Barclay comments: "Here the writer to the Hebrews is face to face with a problem which haunts the Church in every generation. He is face to face with the problem of the Christian who refuses to grow up."

Let us check our development. Are we diligent students of the Word, well versed in the Scriptures and sure of the great, glorious truths of our faith, or are we muddle-headed and vague with only a superficial knowledge? Can we teach? Do we want to teach? The Amplified Bible translates v.13: "For everyone who continues to feed on milk is obviously inexperienced and unskilled in the doctrine of righteousness, for he is a mere infant – not able to talk yet!". Bottle-fed believers are pathetic. If we are no longer newly converted let us take the meat of the Word and we shall by God's help begin to mature and to instruct others in His way.

May I appeal, as Paul did to the Ephesians, "That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro . . . but speaking the truth in love, may grow up into Him in all things" (Ephesians 4:14,15).

Oh teach me, Lord, that I may teach
The precious things Thou dost impart;
And wing my words, that they may reach
The hidden depths of many a heart.

Book Reviews

They put me Inside, by Tony Grestone, published by Scripture Union, price 50p, postage and packing 8p extra.
IN this book Tony Grestone relates the story of his own life and portrays the grim realities of growing up in a home where there is little if any love. Readers who have known only a Christian environment might be shocked at the appalling conditions but, if such a shock leads them to concern and action, the book will have been well worth writing.

Christian workers who are seeking to win young people for Christ will gain a better idea of the fears and oppressions which build up inside the unconverted. The stark situation inside reform schools and borstals is vividly portrayed. The book closes with Tony Grestone in the company of Christians and, while their influence is evident, it will be apparent to Pentecostal readers that their witness and manner could have been much more positive and helpful. None the less we have here a young man cheated of love in early life who later finds fulfilment in a personal relationship with Jesus Christ.

Set free from my Dilemma through the Teaching of Holy Scripture, by Arthur Thrush. Published by the author, price 25p, postage and packing 4p extra.
YOU may not consider yourself to be in any dilemma! Even so a perusal of this work will stimulate your devotion to the Lord as you are reminded of His return in glory and majesty. There are just over forty pages all lucidly written with quotations clearly marked and sources noted. This booklet contains no flights of fancy in the realm of interpretation. The author sticks to the plain statements of Scripture. Those who have desired to enquire into the things concerning His Coming may have been discouraged when attempting larger books and much wordiness. A short sitting will take you through this book, which is easily understood. The writer has tried to communicate his theme to the ordinary believer. It is honest and frank in dealing with why the author changed his beliefs from those which he had been taught at first. It is certainly worth reading.

C.J. Watkins

No pat Answers, by Eugenia Price. Published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott Ltd., price 40p, postage and packing 4p extra.
LIFE is made up of many strange happenings. Circumstances baffle reason. Events do not fit any known pattern. Inevitably we ask, "WHY?". Very often superficial answers are given and the mind of the sufferer is left in confusion and unrest.

In this excellent book the writer strips off the veneer of superficiality and probes deeply into conflicting problems. One cannot always provide perfect solutions, but, if human experiences like disappointment, failure, grief, physical suffering, handicaps, and even death are accepted and committed to God, they can yield a wealth of personal enrichment.

Sympathy and understanding pervade the handling of delicate problems. Having read this book you will be better fitted to help others who are being buffeted by misfortune.

(Mrs.) Vera Burton-Haynes

Christians and Showbiz, by Dale Rogers. Published by Coverdale House, price 35p, postage and packing 4p extra.
IT is not my intention to enter into the rights and wrongs of Christians who have stayed in "Showbiz". Obviously some feel that they have a case for staying in and equally others for coming out. It seems to me that a great deal depends on the type of person involved, when and how they had made it to the top and a number of other factors which I need not mention.

The title of this book is somewhat misleading, for it does not deal with Christians in Showbusiness, but rather with the personal testimony of Dale Rogers, coupled with some excellent thoughts and advice on day-to-day Christian living. It has a simplicity of expression and a real honest-to-goodness content about it that brought me much enjoyment. This book touches on things that we meet every day and proves beyond any doubt that, when the Lord is given first place, He works out His good will in our lives. You will not be surprised, therefore, to know that there are chapters on such things as money, success and sex. If you are wanting to read something which will bring tears to your eyes and yet challenge the quality of your experience as a Christian, then this is the book for you.

Archie A. Biddle

The Easter Story told by Mark, A Mind at Ease, Gair I Chi and Violence, four leaflets published by B. and F.B.S., price 2p each, postage extra.
NEW from The British and Foreign Bible Society come these four folders. Their content is above critical assessment, as they are entirely Scriptural quotations from the T.E. Version. I like Mind at Ease and Gair I Chi, which are well-presented, colourful and attractive. They would be useful in hospital visitation and helpful to the troubled. The latter is the Beatitudes in Welsh and hence will have limited usefulness. The Easter Story told by Mark did not appeal to me, though it is beautifully printed. I thought that the presentation was sombre. Violence is difficult to assess. This is a tract designed to combat the modern trend of violence and uses off-beat, varied type and cartoon-like illustrations. Whether the bold heading "Love your enemies" will appeal to those at whom it is aimed is debatable, for the Sermon on the Mount is mainly to Christians, but knowing the perversity of human nature, who can predict its impact? On balance it is worth trying.

YOUTH PAGE

How can we know God's will?

by Philip G. Parsons, Pastor of our Romsey Church

HERE is a problem that must have weighed heavily upon the heart of every Christian at some time or another. This really is a matter that affects every Christian all the time. For successful Christian living we need to know the will of God, not only at the crossroads of crisis, but day by day. Some Christians drift aimlessly through life, satisfied with second best, and contented with spiritual infancy. Such an attitude is disastrous. A drifting ship is doomed! It is vital to know God's will. We must set our sights. We must define our aims and go for them.

Communists have a programme of advancement. Businessmen have a programme of expansion. Politicians have a programme of introducing various policies. What programme of growth and development have you? Where are you going? God has a programme for your life. He wants you to discover it and to put it into operation. The question is how? Perhaps you like many Christians, desperately pray for God's will and then sit back and do nothing but wait for a sound or sign from heaven. This kind of action is not only irrational, but unscriptural.

Within a few minutes you can know much more of the will of God for your life. Just pick up the Bible! Start reading. You will soon need to pray, not to know God's will, but for power to live it (Psalm 145:10)! Paul told the Thessalonian Christians, "This is the will of God, even your sanctification", and, "In everything give thanks, for this is the will of God concerning you". God has a whole book of 1,189 chapters which unfold His glorious will.

God's will is discovered by a close relationship with Him. When you become close friends with a person, you gradually discover his likes and dislikes, his joys and delights, his wishes and will. You can know the will of the Lord only by a close relationship with Him. Jesus said, "If you are My friends, obey Me". Obedience is another indispensible factor in knowing God's will. You will never know it by doing nothing. The discovery comes only by active obedience. You must do everything according to the will of God. Ask for His will as you pray (1 John 5:14), as you make business plans (James 4:13-15), as you make travelling arrangements (Romans 1:10), and for the whole of your life (1 Peter 4:2).

You may feel that there are dangers in going ahead when you are not certain of the Lord's will. There are dangers in doing nothing (Ecclesiastes 10:18; Matthew 25:24-27) If our hearts are right with God and we are obeying His Word, walking by faith and walking in the Spirit, then we can be confident, sure that we are walking in God's will. If by human error we become diverted from His will, God will bring us back into line.

On one occasion Paul's brilliant planning did not have the seal of God's will. Paul planned to follow the western coastline of Asia Minor to the southern coast of the Black Sea (Acts 16:7), but that was not God's plan. God revealed His will in a vision, telling Paul to go to Greece. On another occasion, God's will was revealed by a prophecy (Acts 21:10,11). God still uses the Gifts of the Spirit today to convey His will, as well as Scripture.

From the moment of conversion, every Christian should do the will of the Lord. On the Damascus road, Paul, though still blind, asked God what He wanted him to do. Don't lazily wait for a dramatic call from the echoing heavens when there is so much that God has already told you to do, but go ahead in faith, asking His will. He will ensure that you are kept in His will. Prove what is that good, acceptable, and perfect will of God (Romans 12:2), perform it from the heart (Ephesians 6:6), and never be diverted from it. Paul found that it was not only the devil who endeavoured to divert him from doing the divine will, but even believers (Acts 21:11,12). You may be tempted into distraction from the will of God even by kind-hearted, well-meaning Christians, but, with Pauline determination say, "The will of the Lord be done" (Acts 21:14). Remember that there was One who said, "Not My will, but Thine be done". What effects that had!

Monday, July 23rd — 1 Kings 20:22-43

"Because the Syrians have said" (v.28).

GOD is always incensed when men limit His lordship or try to steal some of His glory (see Isaiah 42:8; 48: 11). He refused Moses entry into the promised land because he struck the rock when God had told him to speak to it. This seems to be harsh, until we realise that eastern shepherds know rocks with a thin outer casing which house pockets of water within. The critic could hereafter have said that the miracle resulted from the shepherd's special knowledge, whereas he would now have to acknowledge that God made the rock break open.

"Jezebel his wife came to him, and said" (v.5).

EVE, Jezebel and Herodias are examples of female pressure for perversion, while Hannah the mother of Samuel, Mary the mother of Jesus and Lydia are examples of those who lifted lives above base clay and strove to please God in every way. The man should be the head of the household (Ephesians 5:22,23) and should not be dominated by the woman and God should be above all. For further Scriptures regarding relationships between the sexes see 1 Corinthians 7. Notice that Naboth guarded his inheritance. In days of modernism, humanism, extremism and continuing heresy let us guard our inheritance (2 Timothy 2:2, 15; 4:2-4).

Wednesday, July 25th — 1 Kings 21:17-29

"Hast thou found me?" (v.20).

SIMILAR sounds from the convicted soul have been heard in every century. Long before the servant of the Lord has spoken, the Lord of the servant has spoken. He speaks again and again as in the case of Saul of Tarsus: "It is hard for thee to kick against the pricks" (Acts 9:5). Prick after prick of conscience and conviction come to the sinner as he tries to shrug off divine pleading (John 16:7-13). "Why don't you leave me alone?" is the modern equivalent of Ahab's remark, but the answer is still the same. Peace comes when we humble ourselves before God (1 Kings 21:29).

Thursday, July 26th — 1 Kings 22:1-23

"I hate him; for he doth not prophesy good concerning me, but evil" (v.8).

EVEN Christ was "despised and rejected of men" (Isaiah 53). As he was subject to political pressure before Pilate, so here the prophet is pushed by the king's servant (1 Kings 22:13, see also Jeremiah 26:8). Whether it be by kings and rulers, Pharisees and priests, the iron hand of Roman Catholicism as in the Inquisition, or the crushing cruelties of the communists in the twentieth century, the answer of a true man of God will always be the same: "What the Lord saith unto me, that will I speak" (v.14). Notice that the sinner recognises the truth, even though he rebels against it.

"Feed him with bread of affliction" (v. 27).

MOSES and Saul chose affliction and were in the will of God (Romans 15:3,4). Mark well the accuracy of the prophecy (1 Kings 21:19) that was fulfilled (22: 38), and notice that the schemes of sinners come to naught, but the Word of the Lord is sure. We are not told of the release of Micaiah, but the spirit of the man had been freed by God long ago. This is echoed in the New Testament, for whom the Son sets free, is free indeed (John 8:36).

Saturday, July 28th — 1 Chronicles 19:1-11

"Nevertheless there are good things found in thee" (v.3).

IT has been said, "There is so much good in the worst of us, and so much bad in the best of us, that it behoves none of us to criticise the rest of us." Although the Kingdom was divided into Judah and Israel, God spoke through various prophets to both. In days of denominationalism, it is good to find God's faithful servants in many denominations walking in truth (3 John:3,4). The words of faithful Hanani fell like an accurate stone from the sling of shepherd David and caused the straying sheep Jehoshaphat to return and set things in order. "The Lord who is with you" is "to be feared".

Sunday, July 29th — 2 Chronicles 20:1-19

"The children of Moab, and the children of Ammon, and with them others. . . came against Jehoshaphat" (v.1).

THE Devil's children always gang up on those who try to please God. In this year we have seen nations gather against Israel and the Prime Minister of Egypt has said, "We will push Israel into the sea". The six-day war is a recent reminder that God's promises and protection cannot be broken by a host of enemies (Leviticus 26:7-9). This record also points to the power of fasting (Matthew 17:21) and the response it brings, "for the battle is not yours, but God's".

Final Separation (Genesis 4:16)

by F. Lavender

I WENT to a hospital to visit a Christian lady who was desperately sick. I knew that I would not see her again on earth so, as I left her, I used the ancient farewell of Christians who would not meet again on earth. I said, "Goodnight, I will see you in the morning".

The pain of parting from another believer is eased by the knowing that it will be for only a little while.

There was, however, something terrible and final about Cain's separation from God. For a long time God had dealt patiently with Cain and had pleaded with him to choose the right way, but his murder of his brother Abel and his callous indifference when God gave him a last opportunity to repent, took him beyond hope or remedy. The judgment of God fell swiftly and Cain went out of His presence for ever.

In the book of Judges we read the story of the Bible strong man, Samson. He was called by God to use his great strength in the service of God as the judge and deliverer of Israel, but Samson was more concerned with gratifying his lust than with doing the things that were right before God. Samson was given time to change his ways, but he stepped beyond the limit when he gave up his God-given secret to a treacherous woman. He thought that he could do as he liked. He trusted his own strength and ignored the Lord, so the Lord gave him up and he became his enemies' plaything.

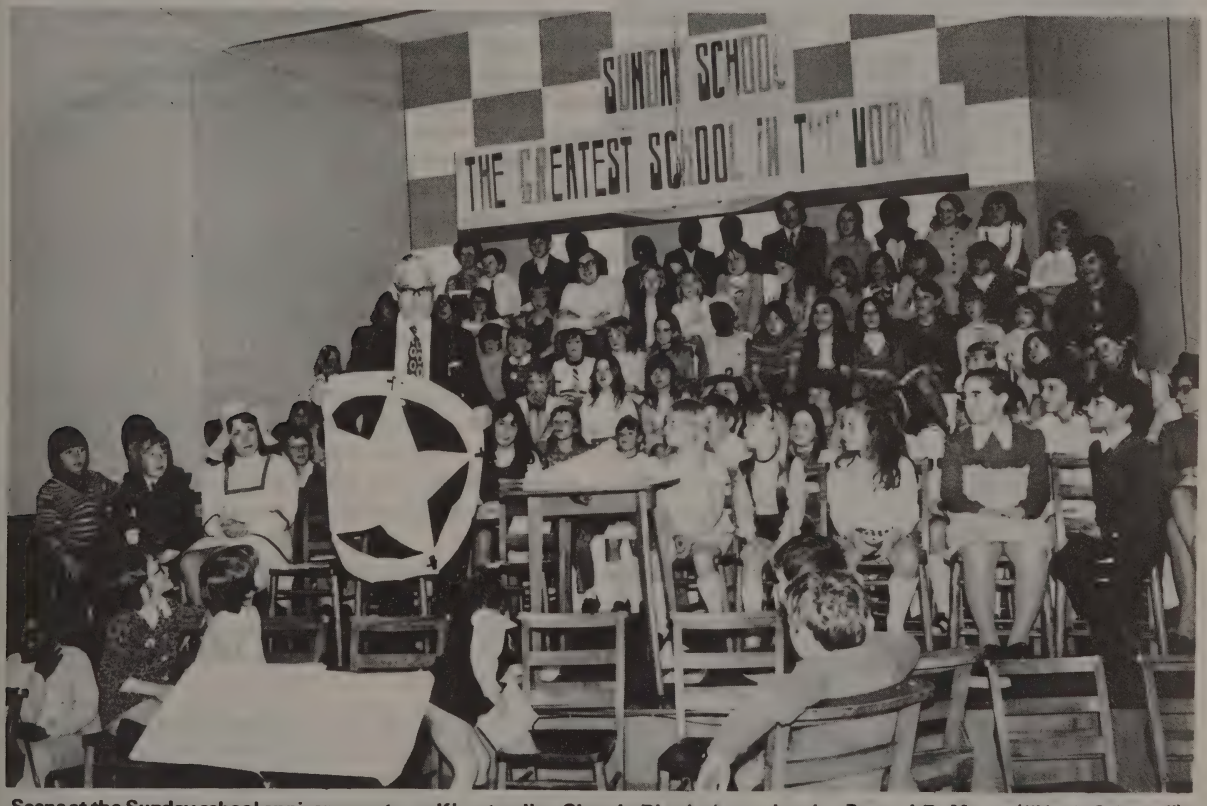
Most of us are familiar with the name of Pontius Pilate, the Roman Judge associated with the events of Easter week. He was a harsh, cruel man with a bitter hatred of the Jews, but we are mainly concerned with him because he became the unwilling judge of the Lord Jesus. He seemed anxious to set Jesus free, provided he could do so without interfering with his own comfort, but in the end he was forced to answer his own question: "What will you do with Jesus?". When, in spite of solemn warnings, he passed what he knew was an unjust sentence, Pilate separated himself from life – and he paid with his eternal soul for a few more months' uneasy power.

Another man associated with the Easter story was the thief who died on the cross by the side of Jesus. He faced physical death and eternal misery, yet by his side hung One who had power to give him eternal life. Instead of asking for mercy, however, he hurled insults and blasphemous curses at the Lord Jesus – even the conversion of his fellow thief did not move him – so he died unrepentant, unforgiven, and was cut off from God eternally.

I would mention one more man, Felix, who was a Roman judge like Pilate. Felix heard the message of salvation faithfully given by the apostle Paul and, as he listened, he shook and trembled under deep conviction of sin. He never had a more wonderful chance to be saved. Then Felix's greedy mind thought that perhaps Paul would give him a bribe to secure his release. His lust for money swamped his desire for eternal life and, when he left the district two years later, he had become an utterly hardened, lost soul.

Are you, like Cain, indifferent to God? If so, you are in great danger. You are only a step from eternal disaster. Perhaps, like Samson, you think that you are strong enough, or good enough, not to need salvation, yet God says that we have all sinned and none of us is good enough for His home.

Like Pilate, you may feel your comfort is more important than doing right and becoming a Christian. Will you forfeit your eternal soul for a little period of physical pleasure?



You may be one who is wickedly putting off becoming a Christian until your death-bed. Then remember that, when the thief came to die, he had no desire for salvation. If you continue with your intention, you will find that you, also, have left it too late.

Possibly, like Felix, lust for money or position is blinding you to your deepest need, you are so occupied with making money and pursuing your ambition that you have no time for God; you are losing your soul in seeking to gain the world.

Maybe something else which I have not mentioned is separating you from God, but whatever it is you know that you are lost. The Lord in mercy earnestly and urgently warns you that, unless you repent, you will perish eternally, like those whom we have mentioned, but He promises that, if you will turn to Christ with all your heart, He will save you from sin and give you eternal life. He is standing at the door of your life knocking, asking for admission. You need not face the horror of eternal separation from God. You can be saved now if you will open your heart to Christ.

"IN view of the extensive agitation for a change of the law controlling Sunday trading so as to permit a greater range of goods to be sold on Sunday in markets and shops, the Lord's Day Observance Society wishes to make it known that it will resist any such change to the utmost of its power."

So says a publicity handout from the Lord's Day Observance Society. It advances eight reasons for its stand, viz. that Sunday trading is in direct disobedience to the law of God, totally unnecessary, opposed by genuine tradesmen, the shopworkers' trade union and the National Federation of Market Traders, and never spontaneously demanded by the public, but demanded by antisocial opportunists. It further states that the L.D.O.S. recognises that there are anomalies in the present Sunday trading laws and will not object to attempts to remedy these, provided that there is no extension of Sunday trading. The Society is taking steps to put the other side of the case to the Home Office as by comparison with the submissions of money-making interests. Adds the handout: "The erosion of the Christian Sunday has already gone too far. These proposals would destroy it altogether to the infinite loss of all sections of the community, even including those whose greed blinds them to the ultimate disaster which must inevitably follow."

Some Christians feel that the Church is now such a minority in the United Kingdom that it has no right to dictate to the rest of the nation. It must be prepared to take its stand within a secular society, they say. This sounds fair enough, but does it go deeply enough into the subject? Is there not every right for maintaining the Lord's Day for the benefit of the nation? There are many laws which inhibit the individual to the communal good, laws which must earn the commendation of Christians even though their restrictions can occasionally be irksome to believers and to non-believers alike. They are imposed with the general co-operation of the people because they realise that they are to the national benefit even though their imposition may at times be restricting or constricting to the individual.

Again there are some laws which limit some folk even though the prohibitions serve only to irritate them. They are maintained, however, because sections of the community would fall into problems were there not these rules. The Christian would think of this as the famous "weaker brother" argument.

In any case are not Christians the salt of the earth and the light of the world? Would you not feel that too many things have gone by default in the last few years? Christians are afraid to become involved in PARTY politics, but have they failed to recognise their responsibilities to the so-called body-politic?

"Stand up and be counted" has become almost a cliché these days, but there is much in it with reference to the Lord's Day.

Do we want to lose even the remnants of our traditional Sunday?

Church Reports

KINGSTANDING, Birmingham
Pastor: R.J. Morrison

AT our Sunday school anniversary services, the speaker was Pastor I.R. Moore, who delighted the children, Sunday school staff and, we are sure, the parents, with his paper patterns. It was fitting that Pastor Moore should be our speaker as, not only is he a former Minister of the church, but this was probably his last Sunday school anniversary before his retirement.

Although previous weeks had given rise to many teachers' headaches, the general opinion on the day seemed to be how well the children "sang forth the honour of His name".

E. PEARSON

SPRINGBOURNE, Bournemouth Pastor: J. Osman

MUCH blessing has been experienced recently at this beautiful seaside church.

The District Superintendent, Pastor W.J. Maybin, convened the recent Presbytery rally, at which Pastor Derek Edmonds was the speaker. His anointed ministry was a source of challenge and was supplemented by the singing of Pat Groenenburgh from Southampton, which was greatly appreciated.

On the following day we held the Sunday school anniversary. The children played their part with great effect and there is obvious musical talent developing among the young people. The Bible Class, ably directed by Miss Gitti Niknejad, presented "Scenes from the Gospels", then our Pastor gave a very humorous, illustrated talk which, nevertheless, brought home the gospel message most powerfully and clearly. Many boys and girls took Jesus as their Saviour and were counselled by helpers.

The Whitsun Convention was another source of blessing as Pastor and Mrs. Morrison ministered with refreshing unction. The final night was especially searching, when, after the ministry of the Word, we were challenged through the Gifts of the Spirit. Additional blessing came through two lovely choruses which Mrs. Morrison taught us, and their visit will remain long in our memories.

HIGH WYCOMBE Pastor: T.G. Hills

TO mark the first anniversary of Pastor Hills and his family about eighty people gathered at the evening Gospel meeting to hear the Word of God ministered by Ray Tyrell from Dublin, a friend and compatriot of Pastor Hills. After the service, the ladies of the Church provided a buffet supper and a happy time of fellowship was enjoyed by all.

It has been a momentous year, with many changes and new ideas and God has blessed the ministry. The people have taken Pastor Hills and his family to their hearts, and we all hope that they will remain with us for many more anniversary celebrations.

The pictures show Mrs. Hills being presented with a bouquet by Estelle Davis, and the Pastor, Mrs Hills and Ray Tyrell with the iced cake made especially for them by one of the Crusaders.

J.F. REEDY

WOOLWICH Pastor: L. Jones

WHAT a joy it was to have Pastor W.R. West to take our Sunday school anniversary service (with the help of his accordion!). He soon had the children singing at the tops of their voices, "Round the Walls of Jericho", so much so that we were fearful for the walls of our Church!

We were thrilled to see so many parents who came to encourage their children, from the tinies in the "band" to the well-versed older children. The theme was, "Have you got heart trouble?". We believe that many had a heart-searching evening and we shall know in Glory the results of this particular anniversary.

(Mrs.) A.D. SMITH

BARKING Pastor: B.C. Richardson

I MUST write to try to express our deep loss, our esteemed brother Ardley, for many years Senior Deacon and valued Treasurer of our Church. We felt the miss of Brother and Sister Ardley when they moved to Wickford at our brother's retirement. They still held that warm place in our hearts.

Our God will sustain our dear sister Mrs. Ardley and her family who are all saved and serving the Lord.

My husband and I knew our Brother and Sister when we were children. Our friend was a faithful follower of Jesus. One would pay tribute to the preacher for his sincerity and Christian love in his address at the funeral service. A word of gratitude goes to our esteemed brother Pastor D.B. Gray for his spiritual and homely comforting remarks to Mrs. Ardley and family. Our beloved Pastor spoke with warmth and sincerity of our dear brother and his wife and of how he would miss Mr. Ardley because he was always so dependable.

May we all be found worthy to meet our brother and many other loved-ones who are awaiting that great day of reunion.

(Mrs.) MARGARET WEIDNER

GRIMSBY Pastor: E.T. Carter

WITH great joy and thanksgiving we record the blessings which the Lord richly poured out at our recent crusade. During the whole crusade, we felt God's presence mightily. The decision to hold it was taken last year and the Assembly, though small in numbers, has worked together with one accord to prepare for the event. Constant prayer was offered that the venture would receive a mighty blessing. We felt the Lord's guidance and it was wonderful how the Lord met our needs. The interior of our church building was given a thorough face-lift from floor to ceiling, and a coffee bar was constructed and completed in time for the Crusade. Huge posters appeared and Christian homes displayed window bills. Approximately 25,000 leaflets were distributed.

The crusade was led by Pastor J.M. Cuthbert, assisted by the singing team of Robert and Stuart Kinning from his Church at Northampton. The Crusade ran for twelve consecutive nights and included coffee bar outreach, late night films and ladies' coffee mornings. The untiring Pastor Cuthbert and team, ably assisted by our Pastor and Grahame McLachlan from Elim Bible College, also brought the gospel to over 600 children at morning assembly in a nearby secondary school. Although the time they were given to minister to the children and staff was short, the meeting was truly blessed of God. Maureen from Rugby made a special contribution to this service with her anointed singing.

The crusade meetings were attended by an average of about seventy people. We were all thrilled by the evangelical power of God's Word. The Holy Spirit was certainly with us. It is difficult to assess the true depth of the good work done. Five souls were saved and eight Christians were gloriously baptised in the Holy Spirit, seven of them from our own church. We praise God also for two people who felt God's healing touch.

For all these blessings we are truly grateful to the Lord and we praise Him for the new fervour in our church.

Eastern Presbytery Sunday School Day.

"ALL roads lead to Dunmow" said the advertising and many coaches and cars travelled these roads to bring children, teachers, parents and pastors to the Sunday School Day and Rally, the first of its kind held at Presbytery level in this area.

From the outset the Lord answered prayer by granting glorious weather and giving travelling mercies to over 300 who attended from Colchester, Rayleigh, Chelmsford, Hadleigh, Leigh, Lowestoft, Braintree, Ingatestone, Dunmow, Southend and Westcliff, the last two using the occasion for their annual Sunday School outing.

Games, organised by Mrs. Linge, Mrs. Harrison, Messrs. G. Stringer, H. Stringer and Linge, took place during the afternoon. Ice cream and other refreshments were available. Mr. B. Wicks ably conducted the races.

The Dunmow Church, under the competent guidance of their Minister, Pastor R. Cavinder, served squash and tea while sandwiches were being enjoyed by all.

A march of witness through Dunmow High Street was the highlight of the afternoon and certainly made an impression on observers. Various placards and banners with names of Sunday schools and Gospel texts, plus the hearty singing of choruses and the distribution of Elim News made for a profitable witness.

At the rally following, a Jungle Doctor film was shown, after which Mr. C. Warder (Chairman of the Council) briefly and officially welcomed the event to the town. Interspersed with choruses was a talk by Mr. Linge on a beauty contest with a difference, and then the special speaker, Pastor Ron MacKenzie, with his now famous Robbie the Robot. took over. Everyone enjoyed his challenging ministry.

Organised by Pastors J. Harrison (Youth Commissioner), P.J. Hill and R. Cavinder, the event took place especially in Dunmow as a prelude to a tent crusade planned for the end of August. We thank God for a great day and ask that you will pray with us for the Dunmow Church.

A Tribute to Pastor W. J. Allen, given at the funeral service by the Secretary-General

WE gather, friends and colleagues, to lay to rest the outward casket of our friend, brother in Christ and ministerial colleague William John Allen. He entered the Elim ministry twenty-five years ago, going directly to our Briton Ferry Church, where he and his wife ministered for nearly five years.

Once again we are reminded that we are pilgrims and strangers; that, though we are in time we do not belong to time. "God," says the Bible, "has set eternity in our being," and our brother has simply gone where he belongs. Though we are reminded that in the midst of life we are in death, yet the glorious complementary truth for us believers is that in the midst of death we are in life.

I recall Brother Allen as a stimulating conversationalist. He did not conform to set ideas; he was provocative in presenting new ideas and promoting new angles of truth. He was a great believer in preaching and teaching Divine healing, and believed that there was more of the supernatural to be experienced than either he or we realised.

I knew him also as a thought-provoking contributor as a writer. His presentation of new ideas provoked a re-examination and re-thinking of one's ideas.

William Allen was a man who was able to bring to his ministry experience that resulted from long years of the rough and tumble of secular employment for he was forty-eight when he took up his first pastorate. For nearly twenty years he exercised his ministry as a faithful Pastor in Briton Ferry, Glossop, Warrington, Leicester, Whitehaven, Wells and then Falmouth on his retirement in 1967.

Disabling sickness in the closing years of his life caused great concern and suffering, patiently borne in victory. His dear wife has been graciously upheld during this time of her husband's sickness.

We lay the outward form to rest, but the real man is "with Christ", among those of whom it is written: "These are they which came out of great tribulation and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. Therefore are they before the Throne of God, and serve Him day and night in His temple; and He that sitteth on the Throne shall dwell among them. They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat. For the Lamb which is in the midst of the Throne shall feed them, and shall lead them to living fountains of water, and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes."

One reunion has already taken place.

We pray that our sister Mrs. Allen will know in a way as never before the gift of the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness, and the sustaining strength of God's Spirit.

A series on the Epistle of JUDE
— some great Subjects from a little Book

In Defence of the Faith

4. Sinning Cities (Jude v.7)

by F. J. Slemming

"REMEMBER Sodom and Gomorrah and the neighbouring towns; like the angels, they committed fornication and followed unnatural lusts; and they paid the penalty in eternal fire, an example for all to see." (Jude v.7. N.E.B.).

Two cities are held up before the Church as examples to notice. This is not as strange as may seem at first when one remembers that this record of sin and judgment is prophetic of the awful apostasy that affects the Church in the last days, this apostasy being the subject of Jude's Epistle. Recall the four things that Jude says about the activities of apostates: they turn the grace of God into lasciviousness (v.4); they defile the flesh (v.8); they corrupt themselves like beasts (v.10); and they walk after their own lusts (v.16). This is tremendously strong language, but it is characteristic of the speaking of the Holy Spirit, whose speech is always direct and plain.

Jesus Christ spoke about the last days, saying that they would be like the days of Noah and of Lot (when the heavens rained fire and sulphur and made an end of them all), adding "Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed." (Luke 17:26-30). Paul warns against the sins that should not even be named among true followers of Jesus Christ (Ephesians 5). Today, ancient sins and perversions of all kinds are in fashion, hence we have much talk, publicity and propagating of crime, immorality, brutality and downright filthy uncleanness. It would therefore be good for us to read and accept literally the teaching of Jude's Epistle. I read somewhere: "Intellectual doubt may sow the seeds of apostasy, but its fruit is spiritual and physical degradation."

The example of apostasy before us in this study is the sinning cities of Sodom and Gomorrah. The whole inference is that the people of these cities were guilty of this tremendous sin. Reading the records in the Scripture no-one can possibly doubt the wickedness of those people, a wickedness that called forth the judgment of God.

They once had a knowledge of the truth; they knew of God's holy character. According to Ussher's Chronology over 450 years separated the waters of the flood and the fires of Sodom and Gomorrah. Noah's son Shem was still living, indeed a further fifty years of life ahead of him.

Paul wrote on apostasy in Romans 1:18-32. When men who once knew God fail to glorify Him as God, they become vain in their reasoning, their foolish hearts are darkened, and God gives them up to uncleanness, vile affections and a reprobate mind. This is exactly what happened to the people of Sodom and Gomorrah. I believe that these things are true of the days immediately preceding the coming again of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Here are some facts about Sodom and Gomorrah that can be gleaned from the Book of Genesis. In 10:19 the cities are said to be in the border of the Canaanites. In chapter 13 we are given a thumb-nail sketch of Lot, who chose this locality as his dwelling-place. He chose a border-line life, as near as possible to the wicked Canaanites, a place that looked most attractive to the flesh, and he chose this place even though it meant separation from Abraham, the man of God. He pitched his tent toward Sodom. Chapter 19 informs us that he became known in the place, for he sat in the gate. His very efforts to live a righteous life were contemptible; 19:14 shows how completely he had lost his testimony. Lot's wife perished; she found the pull of the city to which he had introduced her too great to break away. Lot's daughters adopted the ways and behaviour of the wicked city in which they lived. Lot was saved so as by fire. The last picture of Lot in the Genesis record is a sad one (19:30). We see him dwelling in a dark cave in misery and sin.

Call to mind the cities that so long ago were destroyed and are set forth as an example of suffering the vengeance of eternal fire. Genesis 19:18 makes sad reading. Abraham looked toward Sodom and Gomorrah, and toward all the land of the plain and the smoke of the country went up like the smoke of a furnace. In one brief hour four cities were overwhelmed; they perished as God rained down fire and brimstone.

The words written by Jude nearly 2,000 years ago are still the truth of God. They were written to us believers who are beloved, kept and called. They teach us to be earnest, zealous, diligent and devoted in the matter of winning souls for Christ. The day of grace will close and then it will be too late for all who have not received the love of truth that they might be saved. All who believed not the truth but had pleasure in unrighteousness will be condemned. We are their only hope. Like Abraham we must intercede for the cities that were under impending judgment. We must seek the salvation of sinners by every means available to us.

Vile and filthy sin brought judgment upon Sodom and Gomorrah. The rejection of Jesus the Son of God, the Saviour of mankind, will bring upon the rejector the judgments of a righteous God. Sodom had sinned, so Sodom must burn, but there came two angels to Sodom. God sent His messengers even to Sodom and He sends them still, while there is time. Lot went to Sodom and to Sodom God went after him. That reveals the love of God for sinning men. To a guilty sinning world God sent His Son and now He sends you to declare to men in sin that great love of God and to seek the salvation of all men everywhere.

"Here am I, send me"!

The Call

(Psalm 63:1)

Words and drawings by Sheila Price

ALL was peaceful down on the farm until Henry, as usual, perched on the roof of the chicken-pen. "Cock-a-doodle-do!" he called, in his deep, powerful voice. "Come on, sleepyheads, it's time to get up!".

"Oh dear," sighed Mrs. Sheep, "I was hoping to lie in this morning."

"So was I," said the donkey, "but it's impossible to sleep in all this noise. Henry is always waking us with his crowing."

"I'll have a word with him," Mrs. Sheep decided.

"Could you make less noise in the mornings, Henry? You can be heard right over in the barn. It's not very nice being disturbed at five o'clock, you know! Why don't you call us later, say at about ten?"

"I call you early," replied Henry, "so that you won't miss the warm, morning sun or the sweet, fresh grass. Besides, you'd be quite content to sleep all day if I did not call you!"

"But you make such a noise," declared Mrs. Sheep. "Surely you can be quiet once in a while!"

"Impossible," said Henry, "quite out of the question. Something makes me want to get up early and sing to welcome the new day. God has given me a special sort of alarm clock and I will continue to call until you are all awake, just in case one of you does not hear me the first time."

"I give up," declared Mrs. Sheep, "but I must admit how nice it is to be awake early and run in the fields before breakfast!"

God calls us in life's morning, but some people are content to carry on sleeping. "I'll answer Him later," they say, "I'm much too busy now." All through our lives God continues to call, repeating His message over and over again in case someone has not heard or responded to His earlier call. When Simon Peter heard Jesus call, he immediately left his fishing-boat and promptly and completely gave himself to the service of his Lord and Master. God desires that each of us will respond in like manner.

Christ or Antichrist?

2 Thessalonians 2:8-12; Revelation 13:16,17; 14:9-11

by F. Lavender, Pastor of Croydon Church

DR. MARK JOEKES, one of the world's leading experts in kidney transplantation and consultant physician to three London hospitals, wrote an article entitled "Jilting Death" in the Weekend Telegraph of May 31st, 1968. The article was mainly concerned with "spare-part" surgery and it contains the suggestions that, in twenty-five years, all the main organs of the body will be replaceable and that men's thoughts and actions will be controlled by a computer. Dr. Joekes added: "Truly man would then be in search of his soul". Many of us would go further and say that man will then have lost his soul.

Many may think that Dr. Joekes, although he is an eminent medical scientist, has descended into the realm of science fiction. A more recent B.B.C. radio report will soon dispel this illusion. It stated that scientists in the United States have made just such an invention as Dr. Joekes indicated in "Jilting Death". Perhaps he knew of the invention at the time when he wrote the article? It seems that a tiny gadget operated by remote control is inserted in the head close to the brain. By means of this device a man is directed as though he were a robot and can be made to do whatever the controller wishes - eat, sleep, talk and even fight! Here is a more horrible and vile invention than even "the Bomb"; that can destroy the body, but this invention can destroy the mind so that man endures a living death, a hell on earth.

Perhaps readers will again object and say, "Man would never use such a dreadful invention on his fellow-men!", but this ignores the historical fact that, no matter how devilish his inventions may be, man will use them on other men. How else can one account for the reported and undenied instances of people with incurable cancers and with no known relatives being bombarded with massive doses of atomic radiation in hospitals, by order of the Pentagon, to see how much the human body can take?

This very device has already been used on men though, admittedly, so far as we know, in the form of agreed experiments.

In Revelation 13:16,17 we are given an ominous warning of some gadget such as this being actually used on a world-wide scale. Many believe that a new, utterly ruthless figure will shortly rise in the political world. His objective will be to "take over" the whole of mankind. The name which men will give him is unknown, but the Bible calls him "Antichrist" and "the man of sin". The verses quoted from the Book of Revelation show the absolute demands that he will make upon men.

Some years ago I heard one of our ministers, George Backhouse, answering the question: "What do you understand by "the mark of the Beast?", with reference to these verses in Revelation 13; he tapped his head and said: "Why, the control of the mind!".

Whatever the device may be, the mark is set in the forehead and hand. This indicates that both the mind and the activities will be totally controlled. Please note that this is exactly what Dr. Joekes states in his article, written by a scientist not by a controversial Bible student. These things are foreshadowed by this United States' invention, for this has proved that man's mind and therefore all his actions can be totally controlled.

Now the Bible tells us that God loved the world so much that He gave His only begotten Son and that His Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, loved us with such love and He died to save us from our sins and restore us to God as His sons. All those, therefore, who sincerely turn from their sin, believe the Gospel and receive the Lord Jesus as their Saviour are assured of forgiveness and of eternal life. Multitudes of people, however, both in our own land and others, have heard the gospel of Jesus Christ and have scornfully rejected it. In the words of the Bible, they have set themselves against the Lord and against His Christ (Psalm 2:2). The apostle Paul declared that, because of this, God will send to the world a strong delusion (2 Thessalonians 2:11). Having wilfully rejected the truth of God men will believe a lie instead. The Lord Jesus Himself indicated that, although He came in His Father's name, people would reject Him, but another would come in his own name and he would be accepted (John 5:43). Refusing to give their minds and service to Jesus Christ, men will give them instead to the Antichrist. The issue is clear that men must choose Christ, the righteous

One or Antichrist, the man of sin, either the Truth or the lie!

Antichrist may already be in the world. Such inventions as have been mentioned certainly indicate that some scientists are demon-inspired – by their fruits we can know them – and that they are preparing the way for their master.

The Bible shows that, before Antichrist is fully revealed and makes his bid for control of mankind, the Lord Jesus will come again to remove all true Christians from this earth, just as Noah was saved from the judgment of the Flood, and even as Lot was spared prior to the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah. Those who belong to Christ will be saved before the fiery judgments of God fall on Christ-rejecting, devil-deceived men (Luke 17:22-30; 2 Thessalonians 1:6-10). Those who refuse the offer of divine mercy will be left to face the great period of divine judgment. The Bible declares concerning those who believe the lie and reject the Truth: "If any man worshippeth the beast and his image, and receiveth a mark upon his forehead, or upon his hand, he also shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is prepared unmixed in the cup of His anger, and he shall be tormented in the presence of the holy angels and in the presence of the Lamb: and the smoke of their torment goes up for ever and ever; and they have no rest day and night, they that worship the beast and his image, and whoso receive the mark of his name" (Revelation 14:9-11). This could be the awful lot of some who read these words, for unless you turn to Christ from your sin you are doomed. Only those who have given their lives to Christ and who have had their sins cleansed in the blood of the Lamb will escape the wrath of the Lamb (Revelation 6:15-17).

Turn from your self-righteousness and sin. Receive Jesus Christ as your Saviour and Lord while there is still time. Soon it will be too late.

If you are a Christian, then let your life be holy, as will those who have the hope of His coming truly in their hearts (1 John 3:3). Give earnest, urgent warning to those who do not know Christ, so that you are not held responsible for their eternal misery (Ezekiel 3: 18,19).

The Shunammite

2. A Suppliant (2 Kings 8:1-6)

by A. S. F. Horne, Pastor of our Ipswich Church

Before whom?

SHE besought the chief magistrate of the kingdom, Joram or Jehoram, who removed the statues of Baal that the wicked Ahab, his father, had set up. He was the king who rent his clothes when visited by Naaman, the Syrian general who wanted to be cured of his leprosy. In his reign Samaria was besieged until women ate their own children for want of other food. He was at last slain by his general, Jehu, in the thirteenth year of his reign, and cast in the portion of the field in which his ungodly father and Jezebel, his lying and abominable mother, had the innocent and courageous Naboth stoned to death.

For what? – "Her house and her land"

The Jewish law, as made by God, decreed that the land of Canaan should be divided into twelve parts, one to each tribe, and that each part should be subdivided according to the number of the families of the different tribes. This law was acted on, for it seems that the house in the city of Shunem and the land attached, which the Shunammite left, had been taken possession of by another person who was unwilling to quit. As a consequence, she was under the painful necessity of taking a legal course against the intruder in order to remove him from her house and inheritance. He was holding it unlawfully, unfeelingly and unrighteously.

It would appear that her husband was dead, as we hear nothing about him in this affair, he being old when Elisha promised his wife her son. If he had been alive, it was his duty to bring the case to the king, whereas she did it herself in the presence of her child, the heir, who was under age and incapable of acting for himself.

With what success?

More than she asked was done for her. "The fruits of the field from the time that she left . . . until now"

Towards a Christian view of Ecology

by Stafford Carson

Stafford Carson has just completed his final year at the New University of Ulster, Coleraine, and this article is the essence of a paper which he presented at the Christian Union there.

RECENTLY there has been an upsurge of interest in the realm of ecology. Such words as "environment", "pollution" and "conservation" have become almost magical in their effect. Many writers have cashed in on this so that there is a resultant mass of literature on many and varied aspects of the topic. The dictionary definition of ecology as "biology dealing with the inter-relations between organisms and their environment" really means two things: (i) the inter-relationships between organisms and (ii) the inter-relationships of organisms and their environments. The main emphasis has been put on this latter consideration of the balance of nature and the realisation that this balance is being upset by man's influence. The problem now being raised is what to do about this imbalance and, more importantly for Christians, upon what basis can something constructive be done.

The charge that Christianity has been responsible for the present ecological crisis has been levelled by Lynn White (1967), Professor of History, University of California, in his article "The historical Roots of our ecological Crisis". Schaeffer (1970) has dealt in detail with this accusation. White argues that in this post-Christian world we still retain a Christian mentality in the area of ecology and, because Christianity has had a "bad" view of nature, i.e. man has dominion over nature, it follows that man can exploit nature without limit. Some of the points made by White have been taken up by Richard Means (1967), Associate Professor of Sociology, College of Kalamazoo, Michigan, who states that, for two millenia, Christian missionaries have been chopping down sacred groves, and Means assumes therefore that Christians are against trees (?). Basically, what these two writers are saying is that our present ecological crisis is attributable at least in part to the application of Judaeo-Christian principles of resource-use to the environment. If Christians do not refute this charge, it would seem as though it is nobody else's business to do so.

When we turn to Christianity, however, we do not automatically find an answer, since it has been true that much evangelicalism has not recognised the real value of nature. We have emphasised the importance of saving the soul and getting it to heaven, with the result that there has been a strong tendency to see nature as nothing more than an apologetic weapon - a classic proof of God's existence. This point has been taken up by Jason Wych in a letter to The Ecologist (February 1973): "Christianity has taken a short term view of the world: 'Take no thought for the morrow'. Christianity teaches you to anticipate doomsday when the graves will open, Christ will come and the world will come to an end. Most authorities accept that St. Paul thought that the Second Coming would be in his own life-time, which is why he gave no advice on long-term or environmental questions. Christianity is unconcerned with the world, for there is a life hereafter where even the poverty and suffering of this world will be rewarded".

Are these things true? Are Lynn White, Richard Means and Jason Wych right in blaming Christianity for our ecological crisis? We must reply with a truly Biblical view of the balance of nature.

Creation

The beginning of the Christian view of nature is the concept of creation, that God was there before the beginning and that God created everything out of nothing. Schaeffer has diagrammed it in the following way:

The Personal - Infinite God

Man	Chasm
Chasm	Man
Animal	Animal
Plant	Plant
Machine	Machine

On the one side we see that God alone is the Creator; He creates all things and everything else is the creature and finite. When we consider God as infinite, then man, animal, flower and machine are all equally separated from God, in that He created them all. We can therefore appreciate the chasm between God and the created things.

As well as this, however, God has created man in His own image, therefore man's relationship is upward as well as downward. Man has personality and as such he is unique in the Creation, but he is united to all other creatures as being created. Man has a two-way relationship, both upwards (because he is made in the image of God) and downwards (because he is a created being.)

We read of God making a covenant, not only with man, but with every living creature (Genesis 9:8-17). "behold, I establish my covenant with you and your descendants after you, with every living creature that is with you, the birds, the cattle and every beast of the earth with you, as many as came out of the Ark" (Genesis 9:9,10 R.S.V.). This is important since God will treat things as He has made them. He will always treat a plant as a plant and an animal as an animal without violating the orders of creation. God will not ask a plant to behave as a man, neither will He deal with a man as though he were a plant. So if God treats each thing with integrity in its own order, shouldn't we as Christians do the same? Since we love God the Creator, therefore we should have respect for the thing He has created.

God, however, has given man "dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moves upon the earth" (Genesis 1:28). This dominion is probably best understood as a mandate from God to work with the natural world in the role of a manager or steward responsible to a non-executive Director. Jesus Himself uses the analogy of the absentee landlord for God (Luke 12:42-48; 19:12-27; 20:8-18).

The Fall

This ideal state has, of course, been affected by the Fall. Man with nature should be like a library user: entitled and expected to make the best use of the contents, but trusted to handle the books properly so that they are available to others. This situation has been upset, as can be illustrated by man's dominion over woman. At the Fall, man was given dominion in the home over the woman, but fallen man takes this and turns it into a tyranny and makes his wife a slave. So, first in the Old Testament Law, then later and more specifically in the New Testament, man is taught to exercise dominion without tyranny. The man is to be the head of the home, but the man is also to love his wife, as Christ loves the Church. Thus everything is back in its right place.

So, man has dominion over nature, but man uses it wrongly. The Christian is called upon to exhibit this dominion, but to exhibit it rightly, treating the thing as having value in itself, without being destructive. Because of the Fall we recognise that not only has man been separated from God (spiritual), but man is divided from himself (psychological), from other men (sociological), and, especially relevant, man is separated from nature as well as nature being separated from nature (ecological).

Redemption

When we turn to Romans 8, we read of Paul looking forward and anticipating what the situation will be when Christ comes. When our bodies are raised from the dead, at that time, too, nature will be redeemed (as was the case in Egypt at the time of the Passover when the blood applied to the doorposts saved not only the sons of the Hebrews, but also their animals). In Romans 6, Paul applies this future principle to our present situation. It is obvious that we are not at present in a perfect relationship with God, but we should look forward to the time when we will be perfect and when the spiritual division will be completely healed. This should be our attitude to all areas affected by the Fall. There are these multiple divisions (psychological, sociological, ecological and spiritual) and one day, when Christ comes back, there is going to be complete healing of them all.

Schaeffer has said that Christians who believe the Bible are not simply called to say that "one day" there will be healing, but by God's grace and upon the basis of the work of Christ, substantial healing can be a reality here and now. The Bible-believing Christian should treat nature now in the way nature will be then. Christians should be able to exhibit this, individually and corporately, on the basis of the work of the cross. Dealing with things according to the world-view and basic philosophy of the Bible, we can produce something that the world has tried to produce and failed, i.e. we should exhibit a substantial healing here and now between man and nature and nature and itself as far as Christians can bring it to pass. The significant point in the God-Man-Nature hierarchy is that, as a result of God's redemptive work on the cross and the work of His Spirit in individuals, higher standards are expected and are possible for Christians.

Christians, of all people, should not be destroyers, we should treat nature with an overwhelming respect. We may cut down a tree to build a house or make a fire, but we should not cut down the tree just to cut it down. Christians who understand the Creation principle have a reason for respecting nature and, when they do, it results in benefits to man. Truly biblical Christianity has a real answer to the ecological crisis. It offers a balanced and healthy attitude to nature arising from the truth of its creation by God; it offers the hope here and now of substantial healing in nature of some of the results of the Fall, arising from the truth of redemption in Christ, while waiting for the coming complete healing at Christ's return.

1. "I am not inferior to you". (Job 12:3)

by John Harris, Pastor of our Lurgan Church, N. Ireland

THE modern Pentecostal Movement had its beginnings early in the 1900s. As the century grew older claims of a Pentecostal experience came at an increasing rate from all over the evangelised world. These claims represented a wide variety of cultural, social, educational and ecclesiastical backgrounds in the individuals and groups concerned, but there was one unifying factor acknowledged even by the opponents of the new Movement. The claims, almost without exception, were within the context of a confessed evangelical fundamentalism. It was also agreed, again with few exceptions, that such people became more ardent for their evangelical faith following their Pentecostal experience and remained uncompromising, evangelical fundamentalists.

Indeed it was probably true that it was this factor, just as much as their Pentecostal experience and claims which led to opposition and ostracism in some areas of the religious world because the professing Protestant Church was largely non-evangelical in belief. Within evangelical circles, however, there was also much opposition to "the tongues people", as Pentecostal Christians were often called, because of the phenomenon of speaking in tongues associated with the claims of being filled with the Spirit. Even the broad area of agreement on gospel fundamentals was insufficient to create tolerance however, and many were compelled to leave evangelical churches because of their Pentecostal convictions and experience and also to have liberty for a Pentecostal expression in the congregational life and worship of a local church.

Those who were thus crushed out of the older denominations began to establish churches, some of which came together to form denominations. These churches were not only Pentecostal, but also thoroughly evangelical. The Pentecostals could therefore look their non-Pentecostal evangelical contemporary in the eye without any sense of inferiority, rightly claiming to believe all they believed and more. The Pentecostals therefore became a part of the evangelical section of Christendom, but contended for a Scripturally validated experience of the Baptism and Gifts of the Holy Spirit today. Their controversy with non-evangelicals was of a different kind: it concerned the fundamentals of the gospel. They contended that it was pointless to discuss the filling and Gifts of the Spirit with those who did not accept such truths as being born of the Spirit, which were foundational to all spiritual experience. A claim to be non-evangelical and yet Pentecostal was seldom if ever heard, and would have been regarded as at least inconsistent if not outrightly self-contradictory.

About mid-century, a small trickle of Pentecostal testimonies began to flow from these denominations which in an earlier generation made it impossible for practising Pentecostals to remain within them. Within a decade such testimonies had become fairly widespread, but the persons concerned now found in evangelical circles a tolerance, if not acceptance, of their claims. Another new but more spectacular element was the emergence of Pentecostal claims in non-evangelical areas, but again the Pentecostal was tolerated and there was virtually none of the secessions as in previous generations, nor did any observable change from modernism to conservatism take place in the realm of belief. Within another decade, an even stranger situation was to develop. Claims of Pentecostal experience were heard in areas which had always been regarded as anti-evangelical, particularly from both laity and clergy of the Roman Catholic church. Once more the claimants found it possible to accommodate their new experience within their old religious environment without any apparent radical change. By this threefold-direction enlargement the charismatic movement, as it was now called, became a factor within the whole of Christendom.

This extension of Pentecostal claims raises some questions to be faced by the traditional Pentecostal. Those problems connected with the evangelical Pentecostal are not unimportant though not fundamental. The issues raised by the non- and anti-evangelical Pentecostal claims are much more serious.

The general Question of the Relationship between Experience and Doctrine

tecost is an experience, not a doctrine". They seem to hold the opinion that people may have a Pentecostal experience irrespective of the beliefs they hold. There is thus room for a charismatic experience within the whole spectrum of "Christian" beliefs, whether evangelical, non-evangelical, or anti-evangelical. Indeed some have alleged that this point of contact in a similar experience among those who differ so widely in doctrine shows the irrelevance and unimportance of doctrinal beliefs. They also suggest that the unity of the professing Church may well be developed in terms of common experience and not by finding a common doctrinal belief. Such an approach to the present situation is both ridiculous and dangerous.

If it is implied that a Pentecostal experience cannot or should not be expressed in a doctrinal form, then we reject the idea as foolish. When the original Pentecostal experience was known, Peter immediately related it to Scripture: "This is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel" (Acts 2:16). Such an example is one which all should follow. There is something of a dearth of Scriptural understanding and teaching on the question of being filled with the Spirit; all that many seem able to do is merely to relate their experience. This has the unhealthy tendency of making people seek an experience which is based on the experience of others rather than on the Word of God. It tends also to bring about an unbalanced approach, where the experiential is over-valued in comparison with the doctrinal, when all that people want in a service is "a blessing", and even count it a blessing sometimes to have no preaching! It must be an accepted principle, surely, that a Spirit-energised experience can and should be expressed in the context of the Spirit-inspired Word. To suggest otherwise would mean that an important part of the Christian life has not been covered by divine revelation. To leave such a gap would be foolish, and God is wise. Therefore we feel that wisdom demands that "Pentecostal" must include both experience and doctrine.

The dangers of divorcing experience and doctrine are very serious. Taken to a logical conclusion it means that man is the ultimate authority and his experience is unchallengable; for this reason alone it should be rejected. Man, even as a Spirit-filled person, must always be subject to the authority of Scripture and any experience claimed may be challenged on the same grounds. It will be argued by some that the Spirit will never give an experience which is at discord with Scripture. Exactly, and thus Scripture is the means by which we authenticate genuine Spirit-experience and expose the false. We must beware of the folly and danger of using experience to verify the Scripture. The proper way is just the reverse, to use Scripture to validate the experience, as Peter did in Acts 2. Moreover, experience, with its emotional element, needs a Scriptural framework to keep it within its true borders. It is very easy and dangerous for experience to develop to an extreme position. Some people are more emotional than others and are very liable to this tendency. The Spirit does not remove their emotional temperament, but neither does their claim to be "led of the Spirit" justify all excessive emotional experiences. The teaching of Scripture must be applied and, if the experience falls without its framework, then such an experience must be identified as just emotional and not truly spiritual. Then, too, personal experience from God must issue in practical service for God and this is particularly true of being filled with the Spirit. One of the primary objectives of being "endued with power" is "and ye shall be witnesses", but again, in the outworking of practical living, we still need the guidance of Scripture. The Bible will not cover every detail of life, but it will provide guidelines which, if followed in practice, will keep our witness correct in general terms and minimise the likelihood of being wrong on details. Scripture must be applied to living in order that the Spirit-given experience may be translated into practical service and His power directed into avenues of witness. Without such authoritative guidance the blessing received may just as readily be diverted into a personal-experiential cul-de-sac which benefits no-one else and provides little opportunity for progress to the one concerned. When such a person comes to the "dead end" of that cul-de-sac it can be a devastating experience which forces them to question the genuineness of their original experience as "of the Spirit". Emotional people are usually sincere. They are also more open in their disposition. These very characteristics may well be the reason why many such people seem to receive an experience of blessing in the Spirit while others are left "high and dry", but it is heading for disaster to place sincerity, or even a seeming experience of the Spirit, above the authority of "what is written".

It is clear that the Corinthian Christians had become obsessed with an "experience" complex. In chapters 12-14 of his first Letter to them, Paul does not doubt the genuineness of their experience, but seeks to relate it to other aspects of Christian life. His conclusion of the matter is very significant: "If any man think himself spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things I write are the commandments of the Lord".

The principle here laid down applies to all Christians and their experiences, but in our present context it is vital to note that the command to acknowledge the written Word was given originally in relation to a charismatic experience.

were restored to her, as well as the house and the land.

How singular this was! The king was talking with Gehazi, the man who had been Elisha's servant, who had lodged with his master in the "little chamber on the wall", who had shared in the hospitality of the Shunammite, and who was present when her son was restored to life. He knew her well.

Here he was telling the inquisitive king about all the great things that Elisha had done, one of which was the raising of "a dead body to life". Meanwhile, she came forth with her son by her side and cried, in her distress, "unto the king for her house and for her land".

At once Gehazi recognised her and cried out in astonishment and wonder, "My Lord, O king, this is the woman, and this is her son whom Elisha restored to life"! When the king asked the woman, she told him. So the king appointed unto her a certain officer, saying, "Restore all that was hers, and all the fruits of the field since the day that she left the land, even until now". What a providence this was, strikingly sublime, gloriously and unspeakably good!

This wonderful story is full of instructions.

It shows us the great, good God who is ever looking after His people who trust Him.

There are many, like king Joram, on whom the truth has not influence enough thoroughly to reform and renew. They can listen without weariness to the recital of things that are rare and uncommon, even though they be chimerical and false. They will listen and read for hours of ghosts and fairies and yet fall asleep under a gospel sermon.

"Wisdom is the beginning of knowledge, and to depart from evil is understanding; therefore get wisdom".

Our next article will see how the Shunammite repossessed her house.

36. A Lesson in Prayer (Genesis 32:9-12)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

AFTER parting from Laban, Jacob had another problem to face – his brother Esau! It was more than twenty years since he had tricked Isaac and Esau, so he sent word of his coming and hoped to obtain Esau's good will. When the messengers returned, however, it was with the ominous news that Esau was coming to meet Jacob with four hundred armed men. In great distress, Jacob sought the Lord earnestly. There are some important points in his prayer: his return to Canaan was in obedience to the Lord (v.9); he confessed to the Lord his own sin and unworthiness (v.10); he acknowledged the goodness of the Lord toward him; he poured out his fear and asked for deliverance (v.11); and he reminded the Lord of His promises (v.12).

Jacob's prayer can be a model for us when we face a time of danger and distress. True prayer must have its roots in obedience to the Lord. There must be confession and forsaking of sin if we are aware of failure and wrongdoing. In our distress we must not be blind to the many blessings which we have received from the Lord; we should always make known our requests with thanksgiving. We can then pour out our fears and distresses to the Lord in humble confidence. We can cast ourselves with faith upon the promises of God. Heaven and earth may pass away, but His Word shall endure for ever. His promises never fail. Such prayer is certain to obtain His approval and blessing. He will never turn away a child of His who prays with such earnestness and sincerity. Shall He not with Christ freely give us all things (Romans 8:32)?

Letter to the Editor

Dear Sir,

There has been a great deal of local publicity recently about the controversial film "Last Tango in Paris" that was to come to Eastbourne. Protests forced the Town Hall to appoint a committee to view the film, with the result that they passed it for showing in the town.

If these protests were the limit of Christian involvement, then the Church's job remained unfinished. It is not our task to pull down, prohibit, ban and destroy, but to present a positive answer to the world's thirst for satisfaction. With this in mind, our young people obtained some leaflets entitled, "Last Tango. . . A last Reflection", from the Festival of Light, 37 Eastwood Road, London E18 1BN, written by someone who has seen the film. They are designed to reach folk as they come out of the cinema to present them in an effective way with their need of Christ.

We are all very quick to complain about the pornography that abounds today, but here is a constructive way of putting one's feelings into action. If any of your readers live near a cinema where "Last Tango" is being screened, I sincerely hope that they will make use of this excellent literature.

Yours sincerely in Christ

Eric R. Gaudion.

Teenage Guru or the Son of God?

ON Good Friday 1972 in Salisbury Market Square I had an encounter with three young women who were ardent followers of "The Divine Light", the Guru Mahariji. Their enthusiasm has evidently paid dividends for a year later Salisbury was the venue for a large gathering of his worshippers. The city was plastered with posters and young people held forth in shopping precincts, actually singing choruses made popular by the National Festival of Light but with altered words in keeping with their cult. Our son, Andrew, witnessed the "goings on" in the city and came home very perturbed, so much so that he put an appropriate text on a poster and, armed with gospel tracts, sallied forth to try to counteract this subtle propaganda.

My husband also met disciples of the Guru in a rather unexpected way. To assist a friend in Christian Aid collecting, he called at a large terrace house with window frames and door gaudily painted in bright stripes, photographs of the Guru adorning the panes and door panels and a flag bearing an Indian emblem flying from a pole in the garden. The bare-footed young lady, wearing a long dress of Eastern design, who answered the door-bell insisted that he came in and had a cup of tea. The interior was sparsely furnished. Indian mats were on the floor, Indian musical instruments were hanging from the walls and various drums lay in the corner of the room. The occupants, all young people, were living in communal fashion. Babies played on the floor and bearded young men dressed in hippy style sat around. While tea was served they eagerly told how, as drug addicts and drop-outs, they had found deliverance and inward peace through the teachings of the Guru. They insisted that this Indian boy is a re-incarnation of Jesus Christ and "The Living Word", that the Bible is no longer necessary and that it has no authority, for all must now be guided by the word of the Guru. My husband's witness to the gospel and the truth as it is in Christ Jesus seemed, alas, to fall on deaf ears.

Now what of this Guru who out of the blue has been made known to all three of us? Is he "the dispeller of evil", "possessor of all knowledge", who has been broadcasting his message of eternal love since the age of three as his followers claim? Are his six million adherents right when they claim that he is Jesus Christ returned to the earth? Dare a fifteen-year-old Indian boy claim to be the Christ and to be able to spread this message of peace and love as Jesus did?

A Guru is a Hindu spiritual or religious instructor and this makes these claims suspect immediately, for there has been such a trend in the last decade towards the mysticism of India mainly fostered by "The Beatles" and the hippy and flower people. This young Guru, however, unlike some of his followers who glory in a simple life of poverty and meditation, flies first-class by jet, revels in fast cars, wears trendy clothes, owns three planes, a Rolls Royce and T.V. and radio studios, according to the reports in the national press.

What a contrast this is to the true Christ, the Light of the World, the Son of Man who had so few earthly possessions. "All things are possible for the Guru" claims his henchman, but the majestic words of the Lord ring down the centuries: "All power is given unto Me in heaven and in earth". The Guru's message is designed "to promote international peace and harmony on earth", a worthy cause, but we know that only the Prince of Peace can bring it to pass. When our Lord ascended, the heavenly messengers said: "This same Jesus shall so come", and so we look for the return to the world of One in whose hands and feet and side are the scars of the wounds received on Calvary's cross. The so-called "Divine Light" can never outshine the Lord of Glory, who stated: "I am the Light of the world, he that followeth Me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life" (John 8:12). This is enough for me. I follow the true Light and refuse to be side-tracked by lesser, deceptive lights, no matter how popular and attractive. It is necessary for us to be on our guard and to warn our new converts, our teenagers and particularly our student friends to beware of this cult and to cleave always to the true Saviour.

...when it comes to Music

SHARON has the answer

Roland Friday

The HAMMOND ORGAN

- ✱ Requires the minimum of maintenance and the tone wheel generator cannot go out of tune.
- ✱ Remains unaffected by changes in temperature and humidity.
- ✱ Provides extreme variety of tones with the simplest method of selection.
- ✱ Has a specification to satisfy the accomplished organist.
- ✱ Can be transported for trouble-free use on any location.
- ✱ Represents a lifetime investment with a negligible depreciation factor.

The Hammond Organ has found an important place in the Pentecostal church with its unique tonal quality. The very nature of the harmonic tone registration allows the instrument to be played in direct keeping with the service without distracting from it.
We are therefore convinced that a Hammond can make an essential contribution which renders it a sound investment in the Lord's work, and to this end Sharon Music welcome your consultation as to the most suitable model for your church.
With experience gained from many church installations throughout the country we feel confident to select an instrument certain to meet your requirements.
Our showroom stock of ORGANS and PIANOS includes the entire range of Hammond Organs, consisting of 18 different models from £265 to £5,500. Special financial arrangements are available to your church and we shall be happy to supply further details relating to any specific model on request.

Are you a REV?

by Ian Gardner

"JESUS Christ said the gate that leads to destruction is wide and the way is broad, but the gate which leads to life is straight and the way narrow. He was the greatest of revolutionaries, and He seeks true revolutionaries today, who have been transformed by the power of His Gospel and who are prepared to row against the mainstream, to go through the straight gate and follow the narrow way. This way may be filled with suffering, hardships, ridicule and ostracism . . . it is difficult to follow Jesus Christ."

This passage is taken from Dr. B. Graham's book The Jesus Generation. The book contains many striking comments and shows great insight into human relationships, but this passage struck me in particular because it defines very concisely what my role as a Christian should be in the world in which I live. I am to be a revolutionary.

This word beginning "rev." is in vogue. It sounds good and is in common use. We have "rev." students in our universities, communist revolutionaries in colleges and in industry, and, of course, "Jesus Revolutionaries", who, doubtless, if they lived in Antioch in the days of the Early Church would have been called Christians (see Acts 11:26; 17:6).

A revolutionary is one who wishes to overthrow the existing order and fundamentally change things, usually violently. To qualify to be a "rev." then, requires you to hate and loathe the system in which you live. I have spoken to a number of left-wing political "revs." and they have this one thing in common. They hate the squalor and the exploitation and are prepared, indeed look forward with eagerness, to violent revolution and the elimination of all their opponents. They believe that, by changing the system and order of government, one can change the people, that, given world government and a right political climate, war, famine, disease, poverty, exploitation, etc., can be eliminated.

There is no evidence in history to substantiate this view. They have put the cart before the horse. It is not the system which produces the people, but the people which produce the system. Adam and Eve lived in a perfect environment with everything working in their favour. They lived in communion with God and could not have wished for anything better. Their actions in rebelling against God destroyed their environment. Their sin brought a curse upon the earth introducing sickness and death. Their son, Cain, became filled with jealousy towards his brother, Abel, therefore he murdered him. As men and women multiplied on the earth so the corruption within their hearts corrupted the society in which they lived. "And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually." (Genesis 6:5).

To quote again from The Jesus Generation, Dr. Graham, referring to the philosophical backing to the beatnik cult, says, "Like other seers, philosophers and religious prophets, these speckled birds diagnosed the human conditions with uncanny precision. Evil is in the nature of things and cannot be removed by legislation. Man and all he touches is corrupt and eventually loses control".

To change the society in which one lives, one must therefore change the people. Only by doing this can the society be fundamentally altered. No superficial change will suffice. In Jeremiah 17:9, the heart of man is described as desperately corrupt. Only Jesus, the Son of the Living God, can change the heart of man. He is the greatest Revolutionary. He gets right to the root of the human problem - sin. He died on the cross to cleanse us from sin so that our old natures could be crucified with Him. He gives us a new nature, making us partakers of the divine one. He sends the Holy Spirit to dwell in us to impart His resurrection power to us and He intercedes for us at the Throne of Grace. Hallelujah!

Our revolutionary activities as Christians stem from a hatred and loathing of sin, the corruption in the human personality which produces all human suffering. We must be like our Master, whose heart was full of love and compassion towards people, yet who hated the sin in man which degraded and caused untold misery. Our constant aim must be to overthrow sin and introduce a new order. Only Christ can do this. Personal evangelism is the order of the day. We must win the lost for Christ, only He can change them. "If any man becomes a Christian he is a brand new person inside; old things pass away, everything becomes new".

What is the difference between a left-wing philosopher and a left-wing revolutionary? The former talks a lot, complains a lot, but that is as far as it goes. The true revolutionary looks upon this constant philosophising with disdain. He has analysed the situation and that analysis demands action. His aim is to change things. His whole way of life becomes geared to the revolution. He sacrifices much for his cause. He preaches socialism and in turn makes disciples of men.

The Family Altar

Monday, July 30th — 2 Chronicles 20:20-37, 21:1

"Every one helped to destroy another" (v.23).

RECALL that when Gideon fought with trumpets and pitchers, "The Lord set every man's sword against his fellow" (Judges 7:22) and compare this with 2 Chronicles 20:23. Like New Testament Christians, Jehoshaphat and the people shared in the spoils of the victory (2 Timothy 2:3-13) and returned to give God thanks. How heartbroken the Lord must be at our lack of thanksgiving at times when we are taken up with the gifts instead of the Giver (Philippians 4:4-7; Luke 17: 11-19), just as a child at Christmas tends to forget the giver. Some Christians never grow up!

Tuesday, July 31st — Psalm 29:1-11

"Give unto the Lord the glory due unto His name" (v.2).

REMEMBER yesterday's reading. David here encourages the people of God to give thanks and then mentions again and again "the voice of God". Could it be that the man who is humble and has a thankful spirit is trusted to hear the voice of the Lord and that "the beauty of holiness" brings forth a resplendent response from the Almighty, causing the saint to skip with life and joy?

Wednesday, August 1st — 1 Corinthians 1:1-19

"Called to be saints (v.2).

WHEN Cromwell was campaigning to conquer, his funds were very low. He raised money wherever possible. On one occasion he entered a church, where there were a series of silver statuettes of the "saints". He turned to his men and said, "Melt them down and put them into circulation", which is a good recommendation for all saints. His men may have been fearful, but the master had spoken and he was with them. Here Paul says that we are called into the fellowship of God's Son, who confirms His testimony in us (v.6), giving "every spiritual gift and power for doing His will. . . during this time of waiting for the return of our Lord Jesus Christ" (v.7, Living Bible).

Thursday, August 2nd — 1 Corinthians 1:10-25

"Speak the same thing. . . there are contentions among you" (vv.10,11).

THE main purpose of 1 Corinthians was to correct corruption that had crept into the Church and to educate the people against excesses in the pentecostal presentation of the gospel. As with all constructive criticism, the danger to divide and take sides was present, so Paul gives an early warning against this. He points to the one thing that unites men of all classes and nationalities, i.e. the cross. Like C.T. Studd, he wanted the Corinthian Christians to say, "If Christ be God, and he died for me, then no sacrifice I make could be too great for Him." Personal pride and worldly wisdom were to be laid aside for the cause of Christ.

Friday, August 3rd — 1 Corinthians 1:26-31; 2:1-5

"God hath chosen the weak. . . to confound the mighty" (v.27).

WHATEVER our shortcomings, when we seek to serve, God supplies our needs (Philippians 4:19). In the words of John Wesley's favourite text, "Christ. . . is made to us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption". By the provision, protection and power of God we, as well as the mighty Paul, overcome our "fear and trembling". Like the prophet Jeremiah "whose knees smote together", we prove Job 4:3, to be true.

Saturday, August 4th — 1 Corinthians 2:6-16

"Now we have received, not the spirit of the world, but the Spirit which is of God" (v.12).

THERE is a clear contrast between the world and the Church, the natural and the spiritual man, the unconverted and the converted. Spiritual revelation brings with it spiritual responsibility. It requires response to God's ability. In the words of Eugenia Price, "I found that I was not only converted, but I was invaded".

Sunday, August 5th — 1 Corinthians 3:1-17

"The fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is" (v.13).

THERE is not only the distinction between the unconverted and the converted, but a marked difference between the carnal (or flesh-loving) and the spiritual. The Amplified Bible says, "I could not talk to you as to spiritual (men), but as to nonspiritual (men of the flesh, in whom the carnal nature predominates)." One builds to satisfy the human ego, whereas the other seeks to please the Lord. The Apostle emphasises that all work will be tested by God, who is a consuming fire (Hebrews 12:28,29). A good Christian worker should be like a good watch: open face, busy hands, pure gold, well-regulated, and full of good works (Matthew 5:16).

"Where does the money go these days?" asks one of our Ministers

MONEY belonging to God's people, like the rest of their lives, comes under Divine administration. It is false to suppose that it has the same value always and everywhere. With God's blessing upon it, it can stretch further and with His ban, it goes nowhere.

"A man may spend freely and yet grow richer; another is sparing beyond measure, yet ends in poverty" (Proverbs 11:24, N.E.B.). "The man who has [by wise investment and faithful stewardship] will be given more [for further investment and more faithful stewardship], till he has enough and to spare; the man who has not [by his neglect, indolence, and poor stewardship] will forfeit even what he has [by way of capital]." (Matthew 13:12, Amp.). These, and similar Scriptures, can mean only one thing: money is not merely a means of material exchange, but is an avenue by which we express ourselves, an index of our spiritual character. A spiritual value attaches to all our material possessions. To think of money as a mere medium of exchange is a fallacy of materialism and opposite to the truth of God's Word.

The Lord told His people through the prophet Haggai (1:6-9) that, because they refused to fulfil their moral obligations to Him, His house, and His service, they would suffer impoverishment in all the produce of their labour. It can be expressed: great expectations. . . "Ye looked for much"; meagre realisation. . . "It came to little"; God's explanation. . . "Consider your ways." This may seem strange, and even harsh, but it shows that the whole of nature, as well as the human family, is under God's rule.

The principle abides and the responsibility is the same through the centuries. We cannot spend our money just as we like and leave it at that. God steps in to multiply or wither, to bless or impoverish.

There are many ways of wasting or losing money. How barren is money spent self-indulgently. Talk about a hole in your pocket (Haggai 1:6). Some say that their money goes nowhere these days. May not this be for the very reason here stated?

When a degree of prosperity comes, say by way of a legacy, or in increased income – and, let's face it, things are better than they were in earlier times – some raise their standard of living proportionately, a car, a new car, a larger house, and, of course, all the modern gadgets. More is spent on food, dress, etc. Overheads rise – and income tax! Often the increase is soon swallowed up and the economic drought is followed by the spiritual – the "bag with holes"! Though they are earning much more than they used to, God's work is not profiting by their prosperity, rather it languishes through their self-indulgence, and so the wind of God's judgment blows upon their economics. When we rob God we are never better off in the long run.

Many Christians on small incomes with all its attendant problems, faithfully and regularly put by the Lord's portion, and the smile of God is on their budgeting! There is no hole in their bags or pockets, and so no money is wasted. How wonderfully God honours them and demonstrates His favours in their spending.

One of our retired pastors can testify to the value of "double-tithing" over the years. It was impossible to save much for retirement on a modest salary and modern house-costs made the prospect of finding a dwelling-place "at the end of the day" almost impossible, but, giving themselves to the work of God on hand, without undue care or striving for themselves, he and his wife are now living in a beautifully-appointed little modern home of their own, of God's provision, the purchase of which, in the normal way, would have been quite beyond their means. "God moves in a mysterious way, His wonders to perform".

Let us examine our spending in the light of God's challenge to us through the prophet Haggai. Be very honest towards God in budgeting, giving priority over all other claims to His dues, keeping our personal expenses to a minimum. Somewhere we really should draw a line about this. "Prove Me now" says the Lord (Malachi 3:10).

In like manner our knowledge of the human sickness and of the cure must compel us to action. The love of Christ must constrain us to go out and bring people to the Saviour. We are not in a game, but in a battle. All our resources and energies must be thrown into the fight. Nothing should be spared. We must fight to win. How much do we deny ourselves for the sake of Christ and for those He died to save? Read Luke 9:23. If we are to be true revolutionaries for Jesus Christ, then all our energies, talents and resources must be presented to God for His service. Our commitment must be total, all-embracing. Our free time must be given over to God for prayer, Bible study and that work which is so close to God's heart – soul-winning. Our resources should be given to God. Do we tithe to His work? One tenth of one's earnings was the order of the day in the Old Covenant. Under grace, one tenth should be the minimum of our giving.

Before you vow before God to be His disciple, His revolutionary, count the cost. Are you prepared to row against the mainstream? "This way may be filled with suffering, hardships, ridicule and ostracism. . . It is difficult to follow Jesus Christ".

(Ian Gardner is in fellowship with our Church at Kensington Temple, London, and teaches at Battersea Grammar School.)

Editorial

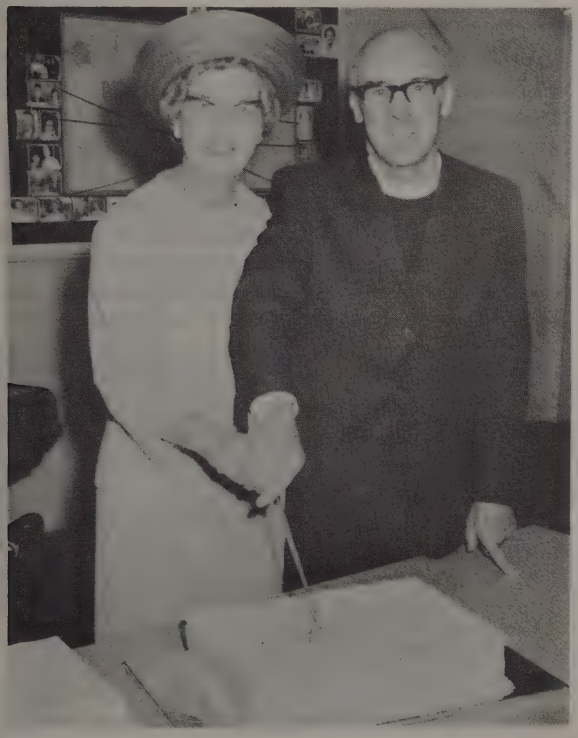
THE beautiful but telling way in which the apostle Paul puts side by side commands and deeply appealing truth is one of the delightful aspects of his Letters.

An excellent example is found in Titus 3:1-8. Advising Titus to teach and uphold certain matters of civil obedience, good works in general and loving attitudes to all men (negatively and positively), he goes right to the fulcrum by contrasting what Christians were before conversion and what they became. Drawing attention to the sorry list of misdemeanours and wrong approaches which characterise the ungodly and therefore the believers before their new birth, Paul develops his theme with this gem of a verse: "But after that the kindness and love of God our Saviour toward man appeared". He makes it sound like a watershed, which indeed it is. Before and after are sufficiently revealed. Before Christ and after He appeared underline the tremendous difference that His coming made. The inference is that God was kind in Christ and Christians ought to be kind in Christ—and to all men, not just to selected ones nor even only to the Church.

It mounts ever higher, however, though it first details the total inability of men to save themselves: "Not by works of righteousness which we have done", he says, "but according to His mercy He saved us". What a salvation it was: "the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy Ghost". This is marvellous, but there is more: "Which He shed on us abundantly through Jesus Christ our Saviour; that being justified by His grace, we should be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life." We cry a glad, "Hallelujah!"

Paul does not leave it there, however. The point has to be made, and strongly so. "This is a faithful saying, and these things I will that thou affirm constantly, that they which have believed in God might be careful to maintain good works. These things are good and profitable unto men."

One gets the feeling about so many who constantly affirm the need for holiness that it is such a grim business, that their attitude is instinctively censorious, like the mother who called, "Go find our Tommy and tell him to stop doing what he's doing whatever it is!". The Scripture teaches a standard of holiness which is demanding in the extreme, but it is all in the light of Calvary, through the beneficent, munificent love of God revealed and demonstrated in our Saviour. There is of course the matter of discipline and it must be recognised that there are Gethsemane experiences for all Christians, but does an expression like "That they might reign in life by one Jesus Christ" suggest a cringing, half-defeated attitude?



Even in his straight dealings with the necessity to live rightly and do good works, Paul never strayed far from Calvary in all its glory. There is both our pardon and our enabling.

Church Reports

SHEFFIELD Pastor: A. Brooks

"I THANK my God upon every remembrance of you" expressed the feelings of so many on the occasion of the retirement of Pastor and Mrs. Gorton. A large congregation gathered on a recent Saturday for an informal service, led by the Church Secretary, Mr. F. Gregory. As a special treat for Mrs. Gorton, all the men were invited to sing the hymn, "I must needs go home by the way of the Cross". Testimonies were given by those who had been especially blessed through the ministry of Pastor and Mrs. Gorton. Contributions were made by members and friends of all ages, including a brother representing the Presbytery who knew them in Plymouth during the war years. Telegrams and letters were read from churches where Pastor Gorton had previously ministered and also from Headquarters.

Pastor Gorton spoke of the numbers of those who had been saved, baptized and received into membership. A few weeks previously we held a baptismal service when eight were baptised, including one man who had been healed of hiatus hernia and deafness.

The treasurer presents the cheque to Pastor Gorton, while Mrs. Gorton and the secretary look on.

At the end of the service everyone was invited to stay for refreshments. A retirement cake in the shape of a Bible, made by one of the members, was presented. Another cake was cut and a piece given to everyone.

Sunday was also a busy day. Two babies were dedicated and Pastor and Mrs. Gorton were invited to the Sunday School to receive the gift of a clock from the staff and scholars. The church was full for the evening service which was led by the Secretary. Mrs. Gorton gave her testimony and said that, between them, Pastor and Mrs. Gorton had been in full-time service for about ninety years! Pastor Gorton announced the previous week's offering a record one of £590. Eleven new members were received into fellowship. Presentations were made at the end of the service. The Treasurer, Mr. G. Revill, presented a cheque and the Crusader Secretary, Mr. K. Dickinson, a folding coffee table. On behalf of the Sisterhood, the vice-president, Mrs. B. Gregory, presented a trolley, a case and a purse.

As we look back over the last seven years we thank God for the blessings received through the ministry of Pastor and Mrs. Gorton and pray that they may know His continued blessing in the future. J.G.

LEICESTER R. Morrell

THERE was standing room only at the induction service of Pastor R. Morrell. It was a wonderful time of blessing, one of those unforgettable occasions when the presence of Christ is realised and the fellowship of God's people richly fulfilled. No fewer than six ministers were present.

Pastor D.E. Dean convened the service and Pastor J.W. Newman gave the charge to the Church in a manner which typified the moment. Pastor D.C. Lewis gave the charge to the new Minister. The singing was great; so was the contribution by the Leicester Crusaders when they sang "God's Love". The Church Secretary welcomed Pastor Morrell to Leicester and a representative from Burton-on-Trent spoke of the good work that he had done as their Leader and Minister. The local Vicar (who is baptised in the Holy Spirit) was present and, after opening in prayer, welcomed Pastor Morrell "to the Parish". There was much humour and appreciation in a united atmosphere. Other ministers present were from various Pentecostal churches.

The power fell when, at the climax of the meeting, the Ministers laid hands on Pastor Morrell as he knelt and dedicated himself to the task that lay ahead. Local members have little doubt that the future will be charged with Pentecostal blessing and power.

A glorious evening was concluded with further fellowship when refreshments were served by the ladies of the Church.

BURTON UPON TRENT Pastor: D.C. Crawford

THE last three weeks of Pastor R. Morrell's ministry at Burton began with a youth weekend. Pastor J. Kay was the guest speaker. There were items by the Crusaders. On Sunday evening we had the youth choir from Leeds who lead the meeting in song and testimony. A very blessed time was had by all. Over 100 people were present, and two souls were saved, one of them a member of the choir.

The following weekend was the Sunday school anniversary and prizegiving. The Saturday meeting was a convention meeting. Our guest speaker, Pastor T.W. Walker, spoke on Acts chapter 1. At the Sunday Breaking of Bread he continued from where he finished on Saturday night. We all felt the Lord's presence among us..The children sang and said their pieces very well. The theme of the anniversary was the creation and the seasons of the year. Everyone enjoyed Pastor Walker's talk to the children after which he presented the children their well-earned prizes.

Then came Pastor Morell's seventh anniversary and also his farewell. Mr. Norman Walker of Coventry was our speaker. On Saturday evening quite a few friends from other Pentecostal fellowships gathered to say goodbye to Pastor and Mrs. Morrell and David. A blessed time was had around the Lord's Table on Sun day morning when brother Walker spoke on Abrahan and his faithfulness. The final meeting in the evening was one of great liveliness and blessing when our timbrel group played and a trio sang "God's Love". Presentations were then made, from the congregation, the Sunday school, the Crusaders, the Sunshine Corner and the women's sections. Then followed a wonderful gospel message on Zacchaeus, thus bringing to a close seven years' ministry at Burton on a note of triumph.

We all pray that Pastor Morrell will win souls and build up the Leicester Assembly. May the Lord richly bless him.

Singing we go along Life's Road

Around with the London Crusader Choir

INTO the summer months with melody and praise, the London Crusader Choir visits town and country centres with melody unto the Lord. Within the walls of Reading, Maidstone, Wandsworth, Wormwood Scrubs,and Sheppey prisons,hundreds of men gathered to listen to these ambassadors of Christ. A record voluntary congregation attended the fortieth anniversary of Elim prison evangelism at the Scrubs. Guests of the choir were members of The Harbour Light folk group. Men present that afternoon have, by request, been visited by Pastor D.B. Gray,for personal spiritual ministration.

From prison, through the pleasant, beautiful countryside of Kent the Choir went to Smarden and was lavishly entertained to tea at a typical English farm, followed by an evening service at the local Assemblies of God Church.

On the following Sunday the Choir gathered outside Wandsworth Prison, that soulless, giant slum of a gaol. At 9.15 a.m. 300 or more men gathered for a most moving morning service conducted by D.B. Gray and the choir. Less than four hours later the Choir entered Wormwood Scrubs Prison where a further 400 awaited the message. On went the Choir for an evening anniversary service in a north London Baptist Church, the speaker being the wife of a local Anglican Canon. What a stirring Pentecostal message was declared!

A new experience was the visit to Hainault Parish Church. Here was Pentecost reminiscent of the early days of Elim in the East End of London. Testimonies by Choir members were requested on Christ the Saviour, the Healer and the Baptiser in the Holy Ghost. Part of the service was assigned to praying for the sick and anointing members of the congregation with oil by the Vicar and Curate. In this Church wonderful evidences are taking place of the outpouring of the Holy Ghost with signs following.

Guildford Cathedral was crowded when D.B. Gray directed a united chorus from the London Festivals of Male Voice Praise. Guests included Kelvin Thomas of Cardiff City Temple, Ray Isom, the brilliant pianist from Colchester, and John Blanchard, the preacher. The Dean was present and participated.

These are but a few of the events of recent weeks involving the London Crusader Choir in spear-heading the witness and message of Pentecost.

Report of a crusade conducted by Pastors L. E. Lambert and B. C. Vidamour

Miracles at Middleton

The gospel marquee

THIS was our first real pioneer crusade. We have conducted a number of church crusades, but now we were going to a town where we knew no-one. We prayed, advertised, pitched a tent, and left the rest to God.

Miracles of Provision

God wonderfully provided us with a tent site right in the centre of the town, on view to all, easily accessible and with plenty of car parking. We had to get a bull-dozer to level the site as some old buildings had recently been demolished there. God gave us a fine team of helpers. After many disappointments trying to get folk to help, almost at the last moment we had musicians, conveners, ushers and many other willing helpers. A super little church building seating about 100, with class rooms, kitchen and other facilities, had come our way. It had been a Brethren Gospel Hall, opened only ten years ago, and closed down through lack of support.

Miracle of Protection

During the very first night after the tent was erected, at 2.30 a.m. a gang of lads tried to let the whole marquee down. At other times the tent was slashed and my minibus was scratched, but God kept us safe through it all. The Evangelists had to sleep in the tent and watch it all day - so it meant that we were working almost night and day, but it was worth it. We caught one lad at 1 a.m. trying to attack the tent. We had to smile when he said that he had come to ask about "Faith Healing" . . . at 1 a.m.?

Pastor L. E. Lambert praying for the sick.

Miracle of Proclamation

Night by night the gospel was preached and decisions for Christ were made. On the opening night, ten minutes before the meeting there was no-one. . . not one person in the tent. Our faith sagged, but we finished with 130 and over twenty decisions for Christ. Youth nights proved to be very successful, with the tent full of young folk, some of whom decided for Jesus. God confirmed His Word and many were healed in answer to prayer.

When it was bitterly cold in the tent, numbers were small. On some nights we had large numbers, and we are grateful to those Elim friends who stood by us. It is sad that some fairly near were too busy to come and support. My co-evangelist and I shared the preaching, and I have never known better harmony as we worked together. We were "labourers together with God." During the Crusade over 140 decisions were made.

Miracle of Perpetuation

The new Church was packed for the opening and also on the succeeding nights as we continued the Crusade in the Church building. It was opened by Pastor R.B. Chapman, the Field Superintendent, who ministered the Word. In that meeting and in each meeting in the Church, people found Christ. We tried now to teach the people the great doctrines of the Pentecostal Churches — the baptism in the Spirit, Water Baptism, Breaking of Bread, Separation, The Coming of Christ and Tithing.

The Lord has sent a fine young man as the first minister - Pastor Vivian Thomas. Pray much for him. We only started the work; he will have far more to do than we did. The task is enormous and the opportunity great. It is a very Roman Catholic town, with Roman Catholic schools, but, as there is no other Pentecostal witness, I feel sure that the work will grow. Already the congregation have purchased an electric organ, are repairing some slight damage to the Church, and are planning to redecorate.

Thank you, Elim friends, for praying for us, and supporting us, and to all our helpers we say, "May God bless you!". Now please pray for the new minister.

In Defence of the Faith

5. Saved and Lost

by F. J. Slemming

"But I wish to remind you, though you once knew this, That the Lord having saved the people out of the Land of Egypt, afterwards destroyed those who did not believe." (v.5, Emphatic Diaglot).

THERE is on every hand a departure from the faith and from the truth of God. We are inclined to think of it as being new and peculiar to our day. This can be traced back to the very beginning of the human race, however, for Cain was an apostate. Israel, the sinning angels, the citizens of Sodom and Gomorrah, all fell away from God.

Spritiaul declension can so easily overtake anyone. Because of this we should remind ourselves of the dangers to which we are exposed. As Jude said, "Earnestly contend for the faith". To show the urgency of this and to urge us to be on our guard, note how apostasy is revealed in Jude vv. 5,6.

The sin of Israel and the subsequent punishment must be considered in relationship to the great theme of apostasy about which Jude wrote this Letter.

Read v.5. In our concern to protect our belief in the grace of God and the security of the believer we might be tempted to soften the words of this verse, but the words are there. They must be taken at their face value and we must come to a decision about what they mean. The people were clearly saved people, saved out of the land of Egypt. They had been under the blood of the passover and the Lord called them His people (see Exodus 3:7: "I have surely seen the affliction of My people that are in Egypt").

Moses was instructed by God to say to Pharaoh on behalf of God, "Let My people go". They knew the protection of the passover Lamb with its shed blood. They experienced God's delivering power and this salvation implies more than just an escape from Egypt and its taskmasters. This people was a vast multitude and it would be strange indeed if there were not many among them whom we could count as unbelievers. It cannot be argued that all who perished in the wilderness perished eternally, for, if we sought to argue along this line, we would have to say that only Caleb and Joshua were genuine believers, for they were the only two above twenty years of age who crossed the Red Sea and entered the promised Land.

We must look at the words "believed not." Compare Numbers 14:1,2. The spies had searched out the land and had discovered strong enemies entrenched there. They gave the people an evil report. The reaction of the people is seen in these two verses. Read them.

God heard this cry of unbelief, this expression of doubt in Himself and in His ability, and He answered the cry as though it were a prayer: "As truly as I live, saith the Lord, as ye have spoken in mine ears, so will I do to you: Your carcases shall fall in this wilderness, and all that were numbered of you, according to your whole number, from twenty years old and upward, which have murmured against Me. . . ye shall not come into the land" (Numbers 14:28-30). By solemn covenant the land had been given to Israel (Genesis 15:18-21) To believe initially and to continue in that belief are quite different things. Because of unbelief the joys and enjoyments of Canaan were lost.

We should carefully note Hebrews 3:18,19; 4:1: "And to whom sware He that they should not enter into His rest, but to them that believed not? So we see that they could not enter in because of unbelief. Let us therefore fear, "lest we likewise fail to enter into God's rest."

Jude 5 is like a flashing, red warning light; so important is this sin on the part of Israel that Paul takes it and uses it as a warning (1 Corinthians 10:1-22). He says that we are not to be ignorant of these things. He desires that we be instructed and not ignorant in these matters. These things happened to Israel by way of example. They were written for our admonition. In 1 Corinthians 10 we have Paul's spiritual commentary on Jude 5, of this people who died in the wilderness: they were all under the cloud; they all passed through the Red Sea; they were all baptised unto Moses; they all ate the same spiritual meat; they all drank of the same spiritual drink, "for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them: and that rock was Christ". Now comes verse 5: "But with many of them God was not well pleased: for they were overthrown in the wilderness". The spotlight now falls on us: "We should not lust after evil things, as they also lusted."; "Neither be ye idolaters" (v.7); "Neither let us commit fornication" (v.8); "Neither let us tempt Christ" (v.9); "Neither murmur ye, as some of them also murmured" (v.10). Now take in v.12: "Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."

Jude 5 declares that a man may be saved and then become guilty of unbelief and by that unbelief put himself under the judgment of God. I do not wonder that the writer of Hebrews 3:12 cries out: "Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God."

What was the judgment that fell upon Israel?

Let us not state anything more or less than what we have in the Scripture: "Afterwards destroyed them that believed not" (Jude 5). This was the destruction of the flesh. They lost the opportunity of life in the promised Land. When Jude speaks of judgment upon the fallen angels and the unsaved Gentiles the language used is "everlasting chains" and "eternal fire", but in this case it is plainly and only "destroyed them". The voice of Jude is not a lone voice on this subject. Paul in 1 Corinthians 11:29,30, talks of weakness and death resulting from unworthily partaking of the Lord's Supper. This serious warning is given, not to enable us to sit in judgment on others, but to bring us to judge ourselves, as Paul expressed it in 1 Corinthians 11.

We must, however, recall one of God's precious promises which has a bearing on all this: "God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able, but will with the temptation also make a way of escape, that ye may be able to bear it." (1 Corinthians 10:13).

Book Reviews

Divine inspiration of the Bible, by L. Gaussen. A Kregel publication by Marshall, Morgan and Scott Ltd., price £3, postage and packing 20p extra.

YOU may care to think about a gift, perhaps in appreciation of your pastor's ministry, or of a reference book for use of the students at our Elim Bible College. Although this is a reprint of a work written in the last century, it will be a delight to the studious minister. It is basic and fundamental in its choice of subject, for the verity of the Bible as the inspired Word of God in its entirety is challenged in every age. Do read the preface. In the style of yesteryear, it is yet worth consideration, for the teaching abides. It is written for "Christians of all classes" so make sure that you read it before you pass it on!

A nation's well-being and its relation to the Christian Faith as revealed in Scripture is a relevant point in view of our national plight. Emphatic and dogmatic in presentation, in these days of "believe as you please" this book is all to the good.

In these days of endless translations, often superfluous in my opinion, the author's dealing with the subject of plenary inspiration and the translations of over a century ago have an even greater bearing on the position today. His five considerations are worth our consideration. He has an interesting portion on alleged errors in narratives and on philosophical objections. I appreciated his distinction between Divine inspiration of "thought", viz. men's teaching on the Word of God, and of "word" as seen in the inspiration of Holy Writ. "The whole written Word therefore is inspired by God", and, "The Lord has watched miraculously over His Word", are two quotations which sum up this valuable reprint and with which Elim people will agree.

Ken Smith

Fifty Lives for God, by Cyril Davey, Published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott, price £1.95, postage and packing 9p extra.

FIFTY compact and well-written life stories can't be bad value at under four pence each. The author, however, draws some material from World Council of Churches' sources and this might cause evangelicals conflict of conscience, while the author also uses the word "Christian" in a way that would differ from the Elim viewpoint. The sparse use of "quotable quotes" or punch lines will disappoint preachers intent on illustrations to illuminate an address, nevertheless the book provides informative and inspirational reading. The brief biographical sketches, Readers Digest "My most unforgettable Character" style, point, on the whole, to that which is most uplifting in man and highlights characteristics which should grace Christian lives.

Ray Hughes

Women and the Liberator, by William P. Barker. Published by Lakeland, price 40p, postage and packing 4p extra.

THE Introduction gives views as to the place of women in society past and present, mainly as possessions or a necessary evil. Jesus is set forth as the Liberator. Dorothy Sayers observed, "Perhaps it's no wonder the women were first at the cradle and the last at the cross". W.P. Barker takes the woman's viewpoint with sensitivity, opening up the Scriptures and giving us fourteen cameos of New Testament women. His evident knowledge of Jewish history and customs brings these portraits to life. "If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed".

HERE is an obviously honest, sincere account of a personal struggle. The author is torn between the pull of the entertainment world and that of Jesus Christ. The question arises, "Can a person be a Christian and be an entertainer?" and it is most certainly shown that compromise on Christian issues for the sake of his career brought crisis conditions to Pat Boone's career, marriage and family. He says, "I was at the bottom, with nowhere to look but up".

The book contains a challenge as it tells of God's use of available personalities in His rescue operations to bring the Boone family from financial and spiritual bankruptcy to solvency and full Pentecostal experience and blessing. Strong emphasis is laid on the "Prayer language" aspect of speaking with tongues and on the Holy Spirit's power for personal witness.

This is a readable book of real experience.

Songs that lift the Heart, by George Beverly Shea. Published by Lakeland, price 40p, postage and packing 4p extra.

MY own memory of George Beverly Shea, the veteran gospel soloist of the Billy Graham team, is of his humility of spirit and of how the manner of the man made the message of the song. One feels this same quality of graciousness in this book as he pays tribute to many past and present personalities of renown in the world of Christian music and to their influence on him and his ministry. Much mention is made of the old, well-loved songs, with numerous warm, personal anecdotes to explain his affection for them and to prove their power still to affect people – even an enemy soldier in war-time. He quotes comments made to him by two of the three U.S. Presidents before whom he has sung. This easily-read book will be of special interest to any who have heard Bev sing, or who possess one of the million of his records which have been sold.

Rock, written and composed by Peter Bye, Roger Hurrell and David Winter. Published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott, price 75p, postage and packing 6p extra.

THIS musical based on the life of the Apostle Peter will be of interest to churches which have the talent and the desire to present the modern idiom. The title is an eye-catcher, but it will probably militate against success in some circles, because of the vivid memories, which still persist, which the original rock and roll left in the evangelical world.

The sincerity of the production team is well known however, and this modern presentation may repair a little of the effect of some present-day controversial plays. A few items could be interpreted into solo material by expert gospel singers, but "Rock" is material for semi-professional artistes and may cater for a need outside our ranks.

L. Wigglesworth

Love goes on forever, by Marvin K. Mayers, published by Oliphants, Price £1.50, postage and packing 8p.

AT first glance this book appears to be expensive. Of the sixty-four pages that make it up, forty-one are used in introduction, credits and full-page photographs contain less than fifty words of print. At the same time it could be considered welcome and important, presenting as it does the value of the Christian home in society, and the real meaning in personal terms of marriage. Many of its pithy quotations could be learned and practised with profit. The family unit is being attacked in this age, so the book should serve well on the reference shelf for many years. This book would make an ideal present for engaged couples or for newly-weds.

An Outline

The good Shepherd and His Sheep

"MY sheep hear My voice. . .and they follow Me: And I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of My hand." (John 10:27,28).

1. The Believer's Relationship – "My sheep".
2. The Believer's Privilege – "hear My voice".
3. The Believer's Walk – "follow Me".
4. The Believer's Portion – "eternal life".
5. The Believer's Security – "never perish".

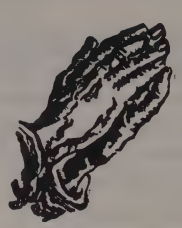
A Quotation



"I want to be liked, Lord"

"IN the course of a wide experience, extending over many years, I have had much to do with ministers and missionaries, and one has naturally come in touch with failures. In nine cases out of ten, perhaps in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, these excellent workers came to grief, not through any lack of ability or devotion, but simply on account of their pitiful incapacity for getting on with other people. Congregations will display the most affecting loyalty to a man of the most slender ability, IF THEY LIKE HIM. A minister may be most severely handicapped–physical frailty, an invalid wife, an impediment in his speech or what not–but the people will rally enthusiastically around him IF THEY LIKE HIM. But how can they be expected to like him if he is everlastingly rubbing them the wrong way? When men fail in the Christian ministry it is almost invariably because they have not acquired the delicate art of harmonizing their personalities with the personalities of those, as sincere and as consecrated as themselves, with whom they have been called to co-operate."
(Dr. F.W. Boreham, The Passing of John Broadbanks.)

Five good reasons for not smoking

1. The Hygenic: Let's face it – it is a dirty habit!
2. The Physical: Now proven, beyond all doubt, to be harmful to health.
3. The Financial: How impoverishing! What could not one do otherwise with all that money!
4. The Psychological: It is weakening and divisive to the personality, especially in Christians.
5. The Spiritual: We have been made priests unto the Lord. "Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord". "Your body is the temple of the Holy Spirit".

PRAYER and PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

WE are familiar with the story of Christ in the Garden of Gethsemane and with the awful agony of the Saviour. What we may not know so well is that John in his Gospel tells us, "Jesus ofttimes resorted thither with His disciples".

These words give us a glimpse of the devotional habits of Jesus. The quiet Garden on the gentle slopes of Olivet just beyond the busy City of Jerusalem was His "prayer closet". There were other places, too, to which He resorted, mountain tops where He prayed alone with His Father. What seasons of Communion were spent there!

Jesus thus gives us an example that we should spend much time in devotion. Some people seem to get by without much prayer, but to what expense in their spiritual lives? Their souls are not fed and how lean and flabby they become! Trees have roots which go down deeply into the earth, roots which are not seen by human eyes. Without its roots a tree cannot live. Without that quiet devotion which others do not see, the spiritual life of believers withers and dies.

Here in the City of London, I see many who have come from other lands, who no longer attend a place of worship. They have succumbed to the influence of the world and its attraction to get and get. Speaking to many of them, I find that their spiritual life had been so much on the surface. There had been much effervescence, but they had an appalling lack of knowledge of God's Word and their prayer life was almost nil.

The Lord gives us an example of the importance of regular praying habits. Some people are so afraid of formalism that they will not have prayer at set times but whenever they can snatch a few moments. We are creatures of habit, however, and, if we do not pray at regular times each day, we shall very soon not be praying at all.

If Jesus needed regular habits of prayer and communion, how much more do we require them?

Believe it or not, you matter!

SHE looked at me a little disbelievingly and smiled. "Go on," she said, "you didn't really miss me - not in all that crowd." She had been missing for a week or two and, when I eventually found her at home, I told her how much we had missed her from the meetings, but she found it difficult to take me seriously. "All that crowd" referred, of course, to the rest of the congregation which, though quite good in number, was not really as big as she made it sound.

The truth was that we had missed her. I had looked round the congregation, as I suppose every pastor does, and noted that she was absent. Others, too, had mentioned the fact. Yet, like so many people, she imagined that she was not important enough to be noticed and that her absence would make little, if any, difference to the Church.

As we talked, I tried to point out to her how mistaken she was. She might not have many gifts or talents, but her very presence was a contribution in itself. The very fact that she was there, sitting in her usual seat, was an encouragement to me, her Pastor, and to those who sat around her with whom she shared fellowship after the meeting. Her prayers, silent though they might be, her participation in the singing, her murmured "amens", her thoughtful listening to the messages, her contributions to the offerings, small though they might be, her smiles and handshakes – all these things were valuable to the life of the Church as a whole, and to the Lord Himself, who declared that a cup of cold water given in His name would not go unnoticed in heaven.

For every Christian who has inflated ideas about his own importance, there are probably ten who do not realise just how important they are. Too many of us consider ourselves spiritual "write-offs", when, if the truth were known, we have not even got down to the business of discovering our real potential as Christians. "But I can't do anything," is the lament of many a Christian. How sure are you that this is the real truth about yourself? Have you seriously, definitely sought the Lord in order that you might learn from Him what He wants you to do? Have you really prayed with Saul of Tarsus, "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?" Such a prayer needs to be prayed not casually and momentarily, but earnestly and persistently until we do find out His purpose for our lives.

Some people complain of lack of opportunity, when the problem is really lack of faith or lack of obedience to God's revealed will. Sometimes we pray, "What wilt Thou have me to do?" with our eyes firmly fixed on the particular thing that we ourselves wish to do, and when God points us to a certain task we hold back because of a sense of inadequacy – which is really lack of faith in God's enabling power – or maybe because we do not like that particular assignment, which in reality is our pride saying, "Not so, Lord." Like the young man who prayed, "Lord, I will follow you to the end of the earth," and then added, fervently, "but don't call me to the mission field," we are so prone to want to follow Christ on our own terms instead of His.

Our excuses about lack of ability or opportunity are so often the protective shell into which we retreat from the challenging realities of the Christian life. Instead of mounting up with wings like eagles, we crawl to church like tortoises, slow-moving and anonymous.

"What is that in thine hand?" asked God of Moses. "How many loaves have ye?" asked Christ of the disciples. In both instances God's servants were made to look at what they did possess and then made to realise what God could do with those limited resources. The results were staggering.

The strength - or weakness - of a local church depends to a great extent on the spiritual calibre of its individual members. If they are on fire for God, their

1,200 pack Worcester Cathedra for Elim Presbytery Rall

Report by Kathleen Lawrence Smith

THIS was a fitting climax to the Worcester church's exhilarating day as host to the Birmingham Presbytery on July 7th. The lovely riverside Cathedral was crowded to capacity, with extra chairs down the aisles, for the evening rally. The counted attendance was 1,201.

In fact, this was the climax to several months of growing blessing in Worcester. Souls have been saved Sunday by Sunday and a new zest has become apparent in the Church. "The diaconate", says Pastor Brian Garrard, "did not 'turn a hair' at the expected involvement of over £400 for this great day of fellowship.

In the afternoon three steamer-loads cruised up the River Severn in bright sunshine enjoying relaxation and song, then disembarked to join the open-air service on the river bank. Here Pastor Garrard led the meeting. Pastor Alexander Tee gave a forthright message and 400 stood around in testimony to the power that saves and gives life a meaningful joy. Over five hundred were given tea at the Worcester Church before threading their way, through streets thronged with Carnival crowds, to the scene of the evening rally – the happiest rendezvous of them all.

They were, as one Cathedral official said, "a splendid crowd", not only in number, but in the sense of liberation and exuberance which they brought to that place of stone and sanctity. Yet somehow there was no sense of incongruity; the joyous notes of praise and thanksgiving rose to the vaulted roof as if it were designed to that end. Who shall say that it was not? One felt that the men who founded, defended and venerated this lovely place would have been well pleased with the atmosphere generated by that happy crowd.

Also evident was a keen awareness of privilege - how refreshing in an age which takes so much for granted! At the outset, Pastor Garrard expressed appreciation for the use of the building and the Dean of Worcester, Dr. Eric Kemp, responded with words of welcome and goodwill. Archdeacon and Lady Alethea Elliott congregated with us and several other Cathedral clergy were observed in the background. Pastors J.T. Bradley and Desmond Cartwright were with the platform party, and Pastor Tom Walker was at the piano. Geoff Cooper excelled at the grand organ. Worcester, Kingstanding and Selly Oak Choirs contributed well to the programme, while Clifford Hughes motored over 300 miles to delight this audience with his dedicated talent. The congregational singing was in no whit subdued by unfamiliar surroundings. "He's alive! He's alive!" activated the spontaneous handclaps which no Elim crowd can resist. Worcester-born Sir Edward Elgar's "Pomp and Circumstance March" made a novel and appropriate setting to "Thine be the glory, risen, conquering Son".

It was a joy to have Pastor Alexander Tee in the lovely pulpit of carved marble. He asserted that today's society, despite its affluence, is looking for reality and satisfaction. He charged the mass media with having misled our generation and declared that meaningless, dead ceremonial has also left an aching void. He went on to describe as "the miracle of the moment – that the Holy Spirit is leaping over denominational barriers". He counselled Pentecostal people everywhere to avoid extremism and excessive emotionalism, concluding with the plea: "Let us love one another and show how blessed it is to be filled and to keep filled with the Holy Ghost."

It was a wonderful day! The impact on the City has been tremendous, as reports from every quarter have indicated. "History was made in Worcester" said the local Press, "when, for the first time, the Elim Pentecostal Church held a service in an Anglican Cathedral".

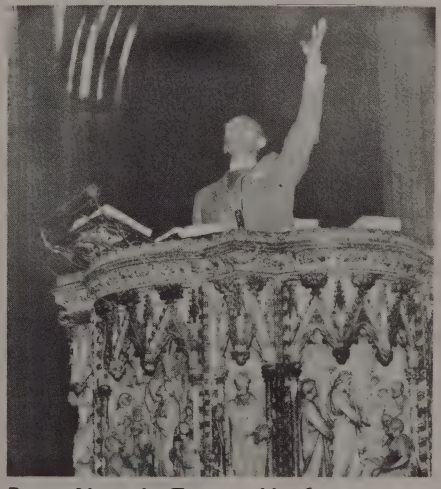
Perhaps the most touching tribute came from the steamer skipper who exclaimed to his booking clerk on return: "They were singing hymns! Hymns, mind you! And it was lovely". Later that day he observed the contrast when other passengers fought their way to the bar to "enliven" their spirits. Yet the sense of peace and wonder lingered with him. Looking upon his sleeping child in her bed that night, he was moved to say: "If there are still people like that about, maybe there is some hope for the sanity of the world after all. . . ".



We had spent our day tasting afresh, with eager delight, the reality of that blessed hope.

The new Pentecostal Evangelical in the non-Pentecostal Denomination

2. "Seek that ye may excell to the edifying of the Church"

by John Harris, Pastor of our Lurgan Church, N. Ireland

GENERALLY speaking, the older, larger evangelical denominations have, for a variety of reasons, acquired a certain amount of prestige in the estimation of the religious and secular worlds. Because of this, some old Pentecostals have developed a religious inferiority complex. This has revealed itself in an over-zealous courting of new Pentecostal evangelicals and in the promotion of such personalities in the hope of improving the Pentecostal image.

I would be the last person to argue that other evangelicals have no contribution to make to the Pentecostal churches. When we want the stated beliefs of evangelical doctrine we turn unhesitatingly to the theologians of the older denominations. In the process of time, they have studied Scripture, engaged in controversy and, in conjunction with the school of experience, have arrived at a considered understanding of fundamental doctrines.

In matters Pentecostal, however, the old Pentecostal has much more to contribute than the new. This arises from the same fact as mentioned above. The old Pentecostal has been studying the Bible longer on this question and has received that education which can only be obtained in the school of experience. This does not conflict with the supremacy of the written Word, but recognises progress in understanding it as the passage of time forces reconsideration of interpretation and application.

There is a remarkable similarity between statements preached and printed by the new Pentecostals and those recorded fifty years ago by the old Pentecostals. In both cases there is a great deal of naivety. The impression gained is that a baptism of power and the exercise of Gifts of the Spirit will solve all the problems of the Christian and of the Church. The old Pentecostals have had this delusion shattered by the facts of history, because, in the majority of cases, Pentecostal Christians and churches in the United Kingdom have not made the impact upon their communities which was at first envisaged. The new Pentecostals could benefit greatly from what the old Pentecostals have been taught by experience and history, if they are willing to learn! One vital lesson is that charismata alone will never build a strong Christianity, either individually or congregationally. It must be related to sound preaching, persistent prayer, doctrinal understanding, practical service, brotherly love, and daily godliness. Failure to realise this implies a deficient understanding of the Book of Acts and a gross misinterpretation of 1 Corinthians chapters 12-14.

The Challenge of congregational Pentecostal Involvement

Much of what we have already said assumes the involvement of an individual Christian in a local church. The absence of such participation leaves a person outside much of the New Testament, a large part of which is written for Christians in a congregational context. This fact is indisputable with regard to the use of spiritual Gifts as 1 Corinthians chapters 12-14 shows. There is a real need for new Pentecostals to face the congregational responsibilities of the Gifts which they have received from God.

It is sometimes alleged that the new charismatic movement has not attracted so many "cranks and oddities" as the old, but surely the reason for this is obvious. In many cases the new Pentecostals are avoiding, either deliberately or unconsciously, a Pentecostal involvement at congregational level. Meetings are often arranged in private homes or in other venues which have no church connection, where people are present by direct invitation. Such hand-picked gatherings almost preclude unstable or emotional persons with low intelligence, who can so easily become obsessed with some spectacular element of the Spirit's work, and become a real problem because of their one-track minds.

Exclusive gatherings, consisting of the cream of the church, have no countenance in the New Testament. Part of the root of the problems in the Corinthian Church probably sprang from the composite nature of the Church, see e.g. 1 Corinthians 1:20-28; 6:5-11, but God did not order any exclusiveness to avoid or eliminate the problems. The local church must accept all kinds of temperaments and be a cross-section of the society in which it exists. The Pentecostal message and ministry must be taken into such congregations irrespective of the difficulties raised in temperamental responses. Anything less than this is not New Testament Christianity. Any exclusiveness which suggests that Pentecostal experience is only for the elite in a congregation is derogatory to the Spirit and His work and denies to the remainder a part of their spiritual inheritance. Pentecost is for all Christians in their local church (see Joel 2:28,29; Acts 2:17,18; 1 Corinthians 12:7-28).

These exclusive gatherings exist mainly for two reaons. Either those concerned find an absence of opportunity or the existence of hostility in their evangelical environment in relation to things Pentecostal. On the first point we question the wisdom of remaining in a fellowship which is inadequate in providing opportunity for a full expression of spiritual experience. If an individual's experience has developed so far beyond their church, then we feel there are only two alternatives.

The first is to educate the congregation to a higher degree. To the non-minister this possibility will be so remote as almost to preclude it. If the person is a minister then he should attempt to lead the congregation with him in the path of spiritual and doctrinal development toward establishing a form of worship which caters for Pentecostal experience and practice. Where no progress is made, then the one concerned must face the responsibility of seeking a church which is adequate for and in sympathy with their experience and beliefs. Where open hostility exists and remains in spite of attempts to convince by Biblical reasoning, the situation is much more acute and especially for those in the ministry. A scriptural command is: "Quench not the Spirit" (1 Thessalonians 5:19) and surely silence, because of hostility, must sooner or later involve disobedience to this injunction. Some will argue that by remaining in such circumstances they hope to wield influence "behind the scenes". The validity of this principle is open to question as it would justify a person remaining in virtually any association for any length of time. Few evangelicals would admit such as being right or Scriptural. Therefore the Pentecostal believer in a non-Pentecostal denomination must face the challenge of secession from the unsuitable church and admission into one which meets his spiritual needs. Failure to face this must ultimately lead to a deterioration of spiritual experience and to detraction from Pentecostal beliefs.

Those who profess to be Pentecostal in experience and conviction, remain in churches which are neither, and go outside their churches for Pentecostal fellowship, leave themselves open for serious criticism. In the estimation of others there will be a suspicion of hypocrisy. That the person is unwilling to stand publicly by his convictions and experience will cause doubts as to the genuineness of the latter and the strength of the former. If true, then they will ponder if material gain and social prestige have taken priority over Scripture and spiritual experience. To those concerned there will be the problem of divided loyalty between denominational obligations and divine revelations: the difficulty of being true to God and man where there is a divergence apparent to the one who has responsibilities toward both.

There is also the danger of developing a split-personality, when a person adapts to the surroundings and may be thought of as "a real Pentecostal" in some circles, while in his own church he is not considered or known as any such thing! Such issues as these are real and not unimportant. Anyone in touch with the contemporary situation will have no difficulty in illustrating them. Those involved need to face a challenge which has so many implications.

"Seek to excel to the edifying of the church" is a guide-line for every Christian and particularly for every minister of the Word in relation to their fellow-Christian responsibility. It demands involvement in a local church with a view to contributing toward the upbuilding of that church.

It is surely significant that this command was originally given in a charismatic context in relation to a local church. Thus it has specific application to a charismatic situation and experience today. Those in such a position are commanded to edify "the church", and that church is their local one. They are commanded to "excel" in such edification, which will demand opportunity of a congregational nature in public gatherings of that church. Such excellence they are to "seek", which implies a diligent pursuit of the end in view and can hardly be accommodated with working quietly in the back in relation to individuals. This statement, even if there were no other considerations, should compel every Pentecostal in a non-Pentecostal church to consider seriously his responsibility to his local church and whether he is discharging this supreme duty toward it.

Mark 10:46-52

Words and drawings by Sheila Price

BARTIMÆUS had been blind for many years and was unable to work for his living. He depended upon the odd copper tossed to him by kind passers-by.

Can you picture Bartimæus sitting day after day on the pavement, his begging-bowl in his hand, hoping to get enough money for a piece of bread for his supper?

Can you picture Bartimæus in the evenings, when it was chilly, pulling his coat closer to him for warmth? Can you see how shabby the coat was? Perhaps someone had given it to him many years before. Now it was thin, tattered, torn and dirty, held together by a piece of string and much too big for his frail body.

Day after day Bartimæus sat on the pavement, praying that one day he might see Jesus. Now, at last, his prayer was answered, for he heard that Jesus was passing through Jericho.

"Thou Son of David, have mercy on me!" he called.

The crowd tried to silence Bartimæus. They were embarrassed by the beggar. "Be quiet", they tell him, but Bartimæus could not be hushed. This was the day for which he had waited all his life.

Jesus heard him and commanded Bartimæus to be brought to Him. Bartimeus dropped his begging-bowl and got to his feet. He felt his way through the crowd and tried his best to hurry to Jesus, but, in his eagerness, he kept tripping over his old coat. The coat that had kept him warm for many a year was now a nuisance to him, and Jesus was waiting!

Bartimeus untied the old string, took off the coat and threw it away! Now nothing hindered his coming to Jesus! His sight was restored and he found a friend in Jesus. How happy he was.

As you picture Bartimæus laughing and rejoicing, can you see the lesson he teaches us? We must cast aside anything that gets in the way of our coming to Jesus!

37 Wrestling and Leaning (Genesis 32:24-26).

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

WHEN Jacob reached Jabbok's Ford he sent his family across, but he himself stayed behind to think and to prepare for his meeting with Esau. While alone, he was confronted with a man whom he took to be an enemy. For a long time he struggled with him, until, in the end, the stranger dislocated Jacob's leg. Suddenly, Jacob realised that this was no enemy, or he could easily have destroyed him. Here was a mighty friend, so he clung to him and pleaded with him for blessing. As a consequence, Jacob was given the new, wonderful name of "Israel", "A prince having power with God and prevailing with men". This name was undoubtedly the answer of God to his earlier, earnest prayer, for it contained an assurance regarding his meeting with Esau that he would prevail over his brother. So what he first regarded as a threat contained the very answer which he sought!

The purpose of God was to bless Jacob and to assure him regarding his meeting with Esau, but He could not bless Jacob until he stopped wrestling and learned to lean. There is a lesson for us in this incident. The Lord comes to bless and to encourage us in time of need, but we see only our menacing circumstances and do not recognise the Lord. Instead of leaning on Him, we struggle and fight. His purpose is unfulfilled until we learn to trust Him.

Let us truly believe that God loves us and that His desire is to bless us. Whatever our circumstances appear to be, however events seem to menace us, let us trust Him to fulfil His intention toward us.

Kneedrill gives Strength

I ADMIRED Herr Willy Brandt for his willingness to visit Israel recently, for it must have cost him many sad and guilty thoughts and some apprehension, too, as he recalled the history of Jewish persecution in Hitler's Germany. Nevertheless it was a step in the right direction and all lovers of peace surely approved of this attempt to bury the hatchet and make amends. The B.B.C. commentator, speaking of the visit, remarked that, thirteen years ago, Herr Brandt had said, "No nation can grow powerful on its knees". He meant, of course, that Germany could never become strong and influential in world affairs if she were to be kept for ever on her knees, pleading forgiveness for past misdemeanours.

Listening to those words I could only think that in the spiritual sense the very opposite is true. The only way to achieve national greatness is for a people and its leaders to be constantly on their knees acknowledging their need of God and seeking His forgiveness for our wrongs. To His chosen nation Israel, God said long ago, "If My people, which are called by My name, shall humble themselves and pray, and seek my face and turn from their wicked ways; then I will hear from heaven and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land" (2 Chronicles 7:14). I believe that this statement is relevant to today and that a merciful God will graciously "bend a listening ear" to a repentant and humble nation.

The moral decline in Britain today should surely drive us to our knees in confession and sorrow for all our sins. In trains and buses, when talking to complete strangers, I have heard them deplore the deterioration of Britain. Only this week I chatted with a lady at the bus stop and she remarked regretfully, "We used to be Great Britain, and we had an empire, but look at us now!"

The General Assembly of the Free Church of Scotland has indeed been having a look at our nation. The Assembly did not like what it saw and called on our leaders to bring the nation to its knees in repentant prayer, but thus far the response has been nil. It is most unfortunate, to say the least, that leaders of other denominations have dissociated themselves from this call and our political leaders are too busy trying to survive to give heed to what to them is obviously so unpractical an exercise as prayer.

During the war years we did have a national Day of Prayer in which the Sovereign joined. I believe that Almighty God answered us and we came through the conflict. All this is now forgotten or dismissed by the so-called enlightened thinkers of today, some of whom consider it a rather naive superstition. Yet one of those leaders, who today would perhaps be dubbed a fuddy-duddy, so believed in the power of prayer that he sent a printed message to all the householders in his town. I refer to the Mayor of Slough, who, to encourage the people to participate in the National Day of Prayer, sent these wise words into every home, "The secret of steadiness and inner strength is to listen to God and do what He says. God speaks directly to the heart of every man and woman who is prepared to listen and obey". I share the very same conviction that both the individual and the nation can find the source of strength by seeking God in prayer. I believe that a nation can grow powerful on its knees.

For sins of heedless word and deed,
For pride ambitious to succeed,
For crafty trade and subtle snare
To catch the simple unaware,
For lives bereft of purpose high,
Forgive, forgive, O Lord, we cry.

Let the fierce fires, which burn and try,
Our inmost spirits purify;
Consume the ill; purge out the shame;
O God! be with us in the flame;
A new-born people may we rise, church will be. If they are Spirit-filled men and women, their church will reflect their personal spirituality. The reverse, of course, is also true.
More pure, more true, more nobly wise.

In this, every individual member matters. You cannot live on the spiritual capital provided by other people. You may not be a superstar Christian, but your godly life, your personal involvement in the worship and witness of your assembly, your faithfulness in the meetings, your loving concern for the other members of the church, your giving, your praying, your singing, your witnessing, your fellowship in the things of God will be like one more rivulet of loyal Christian living flowing down into the valley helping to make the river of God fuller and deeper and of greater benefit to a dry and thirsty land.

We might paraphrase some well-known New Testament words like this: "What God hath highly valued, that call not thou cheap."

Believe it or not, you matter!

Aflame for God!

A challenge from National Youth Director Eldin R. Corsie

Paul Newberry

PENTECOSTAL youth is on the march!

Throughout the world the fires of revival are being lighted and young people are moving out for God. It is our firm conviction that nothing but Pentecost can meet the need of the hour. We are privileged to sit in churches where the doctrine of Pentecost is not only taught, but also believed and experienced.

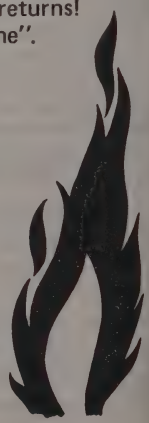
The world must know what we believe! There are many religions appealing to youth today. The prominence given to the fifteen-year-old guru and his Divine Light Mission emphasises this fact. The enthusiasm engenderec by his visit to Great Britain is a challenge to the Christian Church. We have been impressed with the sacrifice that young people have made to be in his presence. Some travelled from distant parts of Europe for the occasion. We know that they are worshipping a false god.

On September 22nd at 3.00 pm and 6.30 pm in the Central Hall, Westminster, the Elim Youth Movement will celebrate its annual National Youth Rally. We have been unable to book Trafalgar Square, but we plan to conduct a grand Pentecostal meeting in the Central Hall entitled, "Light the Flame". Between the services we will have a march of witness taking in as much of the Westminster area as possible. I am sure many will remember the success of this venture last year.

The evening meeting will bear the title, "Spread the Flame". Our prayer is that many will be saved and filled with the Holy Spirit. It is significant that the symbol of fire rests upon the dome of the Central Hall.

Our preacher is Pastor Paul Newberry, who is a member of the Assemblies of God Youth Council and Pastor of a thriving church in the Manchester area. We know that you will not forget the dynamic ministry of this servant of God. The Lord has blessed this exchange of ministry between the two denominations. Pastor L. E. Lambert represented the Elim Churches when he spoke at the Assemblies of God National Youth Rally last year

The Capel Choir under the direction of Douglas H. Fincher will sing as will the Portsmouth Gospel Group 2, whose music is in the modern idiom. The Buckley Four will make their unique contribution. This talented group has thrilled many audiences of young people throughout the nation. There will be testimonies and items of interest to all age groups.



Admission to the services will be by ticket only. The prices of tickets are: 15p for both services, and 10p for the evening service only. The ticket will ensure that you get a seat and also help with the increased costs of the rally. We hope that Elim young people will take advantage of the opportunity to bring their friends under the sound of the gospel. Our desire is to see God glorified as the flame of Pentecost touches every heart. Who knows?—This could be the last National Youth Rally before Jesus returns! Let us come together and "Spread the Flame".

The Family Altar

Scripture Union Portions — Notes by Ray Hughes

Monday, August 6th 1 Corinthians 3:18-23; 4:1-5

"It is required . . . stewards . . . be found faithful" (4:2).

IN Matthew 25:14-29 we have a parable by our Lord among a long presentation regarding his second coming to earth. Purity, preparedness and practical faithfulness are all presented in this parabolic discourse. Faithfulness according to our capabilities as enlarged by the Spirit of God is what God requires of us. Too often in these days, men, as if to prove that God is alive and with them, make exaggerated claims. On the other hand, to impress men they try the intellectual approach. God, who is faithful Himself (1 Corinthians 1:9), calls us to follow Him, to present the truth to modern man even if at times it is "foolishness unto him" (1 Corinthians 2:14).

Tuesday, August 7th 1 Corinthians 4:6-21

"No one . . . be puffed up" (v.6).

"PRIDE goes before destruction, and an haughty spirit before a fall" (Proverbs 16:18). There is no cause to be proud of one's achievments in the work of God, for every good gift comes from God (James 1:17) and every servant is only passing on what God has given to him. Paul states that, while he was a minister of the gospel who should "live of the gospel", he was not too proud to work with his hands in order that he might not remain a theoretical theologian or teacher, but that he might become a father to give and to sustain life, whatever it may cost in energy, effort and self-sacrifice.

Wednesday, August 8th 1 Corinthians 5:1-13

"A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump" (v.6).

SIN must not be allowed to remain in the camp (Matthew 18:15-17), for, if it is as in the case of Achan (Joshua chapter 7), many will suffer because of it. The New Testament teaches that we are to guard against sin in the Church (Hebrews 12:14-17), where its creeping influence is like petrol trickling towards a naked flame.

1 Corinthians 5:11 tells us not to "keep company" with corrupt persons. This does not mean that we can not be civil and polite to them, but that we should not seek their companionship (Romans 16:17).

Thursday, August 9th 1 Corinthians 6:1-11

"Do ye not know that the saints shall judge the world?" (v.2).

FIRST, correct judgment of one's own life is necessary. As Matthew 7 puts it in the Phillips's Translation: "Would you look at the speck of sawdust in your brother's eye and fail to notice the plank in your own?". As mentioned in yesterday's portion there is also a judgment within the Church (Matthew 18:15-17) that should not be shrunk from, for many matters should be settled by the saints here and now before we aspire to judgment seats in the hereafter. It would seem from vv.9 and 10 that Paul is giving guidelines in the matters where Christian concern and judgment should be exercised.

Friday, August 10th 1 Corinthians 6:12-20

"I will not be brought under the power of any" (v.12).

"BOUGHT with a price" and set free, we should no longer be bound by sin, sex or society. We are "temples of the Holy Spirit" which should manifest His glory within and without, this being best done by our relying on divine power, realising our weaknesses and remembering to "flee fornication".

Saturday, August 11th 1 Corinthians 7:1-11

"It is better to marry than to burn" (v.9).

PRE-MARITAL and extra-marital relationships are forbidden by the Word of God. We do well to remember this in a year when the divorce rate has almost doubled due to the relaxing of the divorce laws and the lustfulness of the age. Thoughtful tenderness is encouraged within marriage by the precise use of the word "benevolence", which is derived from the Latin, "bene" which means "well" and "volo" which means "wish". When partners wish each other well by every action and consideration it is "better".

Sunday, August 12th 1 Corinthians 7:12-24

"God hath called us to peace" (v.15).

THESE are wise words, especially in the context of the domestic scene, but equally beneficial in the turbulent 'teens or in the realm of the retired, where pre-marital and post-marital conflicts need to be viewed calmly while re-adjustments are being made. Notice that the Christian partner, presumably converted after marriage and therefore not guilty of taking that stupid and unscriptural step of being "unequally yoked" with an unbeliever, is to live for Christ and influence their partner towards faith in God. The peace spoken of here is the "peace of God which passeth all understanding" and, as someone has added, all misunderstanding as well!

It seems to me....

Another Question for Evolutionists

FOR some years I have made it a practice when borrowing books from the library to take a book at random. The results have been stimulating. The practice also helps one to avoid getting into a rut in one's reading.

A week or two ago I picked up a book on mathematics. It was fascinating reading and proved to be a good bed-time book; I went to sleep in no time!

Among the many interesting items of information, especially in the context of large numbers, however, was Sir Arthur Eddington's calculation of the number of electrons and protons in the universe: $136.2^{256}+136.2^{256}$. Here is his number 136.2^{256} accurate, he claims, to the last digit: 15,747,724,136,275,002,577, 605,653,961,181,555,468,044,717,914,527,116,709, 336,231,425,076,185,631,031,276, that is 15 followed by 78 digits.

Presumably, therefore, if the universe is expanding, according to Sir Arthur the amount of matter is not increased, it is simply that the space between the constituent parts is increasing. On the other hand, of course, one has Fred Hoyle believing that matter is in a process of continual creation and he has told us how much is created as time passes!

One man's guess is as good as another's. Let us have a go! Sir Arthur's calculation of the exact number of protons and electrons in the universe seems to me to have a bearing on evolutionary theory. According to this, the first living cell came into existence about two thousand million years ago. Living cells reproduce themselves by division. If we assume division only once a year this would give, according to evolutionary theory, two thousand million doublings to date, one which would give a figure far ahead of that of Sir Arthur Eddington. For example, 2 doubled only 271 times gives 1 followed by 81 digits, a figure already higher than Sir Arthur Eddington's. What then must be the evolutionist's figure of 2 doubled 2,000,000,000 times? – and, as biologists know, living cells double themselves every few minutes or hours, not once a year.

Comments, please, from mathematicians, physicists, computer operators and others!

Testimony Time

NEW-FOUND FAITH

I HAVE NOT always been a Christian, although I married into a Christian family. Very soon I realised that they had a quality of life that I did not have and I came to know the love of the Lord in my life and decided to be baptised in water to show my faith and obedience to God.

Two months after my baptism in water, I received the Baptism of the Holy Spirit and spoke in tongues. It happened one Sunday night when my husband was on night duty and our little girl was staying with her grandparents. I was lying in bed praying aloud. On and on I went praising and praying until I couldn't go on any longer, so I lay quietly and said, "Dear Lord, I can't go on any longer, if tonight is the night for me to receive the Holy Spirit, so be it." After two or three minutes I began to feel hot inside and it gradually crept over me. I knew it was happening. I opened my mouth and out came words, words I had never heard before. I could not stop them; they just kept coming out. I leapt out of bed and knelt down to thank the Lord for the wonderful gift He had given me and prayed that He would use me and give me one of the Gifts of the Holy Spirit.

I got back into bed and turned over to go to sleep, but these new words kept coming and, though I was so tired, I could not stop. I think I must have gone to sleep still murmuring those words!

My life is now so full; it has a different meaning. I thank God for my husband and our little girl. I thank Him for every new day. I have a peace of mind I never thought possible. Looking back, my life before I knew Jesus was meaningless and empty. I have so much now and I thank the Lord for all His love and mercy.

ONE'S point of view can make a great difference. During the visit of the Portuguese Prime Minister last month I heard two reports which contrasted vividly. One newsman said something like, "Of course we cannot possibly doubt the word of a priest", by reference to the reports of a massacre in Mozambique. The Portuguese Prime Minister was reported to have said, "We have only the word of some Spanish priests" or words to that effect.

The first man thought of "priests", the second of "Spanish"! The Portuguese have no dealings with the Spaniards if they can help it, especially seeing that at one time Spain incorporated Portugal in her territories.

There were those who regarded our Saviour with the gravest suspicion. "Samaritan" was among the kindest ephithets used against Him. "The Friend of publicans and sinners", they called Him. How could such an one be the Messiah? He seemed to be keeping the wrong company.

We suspect that the initial point of view makes a great difference to many reports that are given and many allegedly learned opinions that are advanced. Psychologists and psychiatrists often seem to ignore clear evidences of human guilt and the need for forgiveness, due to their preconceived notions. Statisticians arrive at some conclusions simply because of their jumping-off ground, which begged the question for everything else. It sometimes looks as if scientists do the same.

All of which underlines the great need for regeneration. When Christ saves a man it is a new birth; he becomes a new creation. His whole thought processes take a new turn.

Testimonies often show how that "religion", as they would then have called it, seemed irrelevant, even obnoxious, to those testifying - that is before they fell in love with Jesus Christ. When they came to know Him, however, oh, what a change!

Our world is grappling with inflation. As a commentator rightly said the other day, the leaders of the nations think that they are solving everything by simply printing more and more paper money. It was, he said, like seeking to put out a fire by pouring petrol on it! This old world needs the gospel to be proclaimed in every greater measure. "When Jesus comes," wrote Smith of Toronto, "the Tempter's power is broken".

Fiddling with palliatives to relieve symptoms is no answer to men's needs. They need Christ!

Church Reports

BLENHEIM, NEW ZEALAND

Pastor: Ian Bilby, B.Sc.

WHAT thrilling months the past two months have been in this small Church in a largely unresponsive town. Over recent months the Pastor has had many opportunities at camps, churches and at the local air force base to speak and to present the truths of Pentecost. Little direct fruit was seen in the life of the Church as a result, until a young Congregational minister took a wonderful series of meetings on prophecy and the second coming.

After the second meeting, the Church became too small for the crowds, which packed a local hall to capacity for the final meeting. During those six days eight people found the Saviour and a number were baptised in the Holy Spirit. What a thrill it was to see others magnifying and praising God in a new language. In addition thirteen people were baptised in the freezing waters of the Wairau River, when not even the bleak weather or cold water could spoil the joy of obedient hearts.

Since that occasion, attendances on Sunday evenings have increased as Pastor Bilby ministered on "Jesus Today". On the last Sunday in June, God moved in a remarkable way. At the close of the morning service, following powerful prophecy concerning the need for purity in the Church, all the mainstays of the Church responded to the appeal.

In the evening the Church was full of expectant people. That night many came forward for healing. One girl was saved and then, when the last one in the prayer line was prayed for, people started coming forward again, many weeping. The meeting could not be closed, as people kept coming to the front. Others simply knelt in the aisles crying out to the Lord. Some were getting right with God, some were rededicating their lives to God, some had a real burden for their unsaved friends and others wanted deliverance from habits and doubts. What a thrill it all was! It was the Lord's doing in answer to prayer and we want you to rejoice with us, and pray that the presence of God in our little Church will continue and become even more real.

S.E. Presbytery Children's Rally

THE South-East Presbytery held a children's rally at our Hove Church. The weather was hot enough to make most people head for the beach, but children from nearly every Church in the Presbytery attended. The Rally soon got into full swing. There were recitations, singing and musical items in addition to a banner competition. Our photograph shows the winning banner triumphantly held aloft by members of the Portsmouth Sunday School. Pastor A.A. Biddle addressed the children and illustrated the subject with paper cut-outs. At the end of the rally the children sat spellbound as a kilted girl piper marched round the Church playing, "Amazing Grace".

Winners at Sunday School Rally: Hove

PORTSMOUTH Pastor: A.A. Biddle

WE were blessed with sunshine for the Portsmouth Sunday School outing to Bournemouth. Two coaches taking almost one hundred children, parents and teachers set out from Portsmouth through the New Forest. The beach at Bournemouth was duly invaded! The sun was hot and strong and the sea cool and refreshing. For those who did not stay on the beach, a walk round the gardens or shopping centre was an enjoyable change. For tea a short journey by coach brought the outing to Christchurch where high tea was enjoyed in the restaurant at Pontin's Holiday Camp overlooking the river. An hour was given after tea for the children to play in the park alongside the camp and finally a tired but happy set of people set off home for bed.

DAVID LAVIER

MOTHERWELL Pastor: F.W. Jones

TWENTY–ONE years have passed since Elim came to Motherwell following a tent campaign conducted by Pastor Alex Tee. He remained as the first Pastor and during his ministry the new church building was built

An anniversary weekend was recently held to mark the occasion. A number of those present had had a continuous association with the Church. After tea had been served many took the opportunity to witness to God's goodness over these years. Among them was Pastor J. McBurney, a former Minister of our Church, who was the guest preacher for the Saturday evening and Sunday services.

Kind wishes were received from some separated by distance while fellowship was renewed with other friends from both far and near. Attendances were good and altogether a time of blessing was enjoyed.

ROBERT McKILLOP

BIRKENHEAD Pastor: P.A. Epton

"WHAT'S happening in there?". This question is one among many being asked about Elim's young Church at Birkenhead. On Sunday, March 25th, Pastors W.M. E. Plowright, K.J. Cave and D.G. Holmes stepped on to the stage of the Town Hall, Birkenhead. The leader of the team, Pastor Alexander Tee, well known as one of Elim's pioneer evangelists, quickly led the congregation into song. The pioneer crusade was under way. After two weeks in the Town Hall the crusade moved into the newly-bought Elim Church some one and a half miles away. The opening night saw this lovely church full to the doors. New converts and visiting friends shared the same joy as the Lord poured out blessing upon blessing.

Saturday, April 21st, was the induction of the new Minister. Every service has seen blessing, souls saved or bodies healed. Over nine weeks twelve people decided for Jesus and two have been baptised in water at our Southport Church. Each Saturday and Sunday we look forward to seeing new faces. The family grows, both in number and in spiritual desire.

One point of great encouragement is found in the Sunday school and midweek children's meeting. On the first Friday we had twelve boys and girls. Within three weeks we were trying to fit eighty children into a hall holding fifty. This month we are holding a children's crusade and we trust that the interest shown by parents will bring them right in.

In many ways we feel like the Early Church. Everything is new. Please pray that this new Church will continue to grow and to experience new blessings every week.

INGATESTONE

"BURN, fire of God" was the hymn which opened the farewell service of Pastor P.K.G. Rose and family, and this was certainly a fitting resume of the substance of our Pastor's faithful ministry throughout two years. A warm welcome was extended to the Minister and friends from the United Reformed Church, who had joined us for the occasion. Our Church Secretary, Mr. Alfred Gardiner, spoke with appreciation of the blessing of Pastor Rose's ministry, and of his faithfulness to the work, although he had simultaneously to hold a secular job. He had given much enthusiastic effort to the youth work of the Church and had introduced the coffee bar outreach. Our brother was wished "God speed" to Clacton and presented with the gift of a cheque.

Mrs. Huttley then thanked Mrs. Rose for her quiet, unobtrusive services and praised God for the fragrance of Christ which she would leave behind. She presented her with a copy of The Living Bible. Miss Shirley Gardiner for the Crusaders thanked Pastor for bearing with them so bravely and for all that they had learned from him, and presented him with a writing set, after which the group sang the moving piece, "Fill all my vision".

Rev. Francis Dixon of the United Reformed Church said how greatly he had enjoyed fellowship with the Pastor and wished him God's blessing in his new sphere of service.

The Pastor and his wife expressed thanks for the gifts and encouraging remarks and promised to remember the work in prayer. The service concluded with the hymn, "Blest be the tie that binds". Refreshments were enjoyed by all who were able to stay.

(MRS.) MARY V. DAY

WINTON, BOURNEMOUTH

Pastor: G.N. Backhouse

ON the Saturday evening, our Church was full to overflowing for the anniversary service to mark Pastor Backhouse's forty years in the ministry. Pastor W.J. Maybin, the District Superintendent, chaired the meeting and he read many letters of greetings and good wishes which had been sent from ministers of many demoninations in the town who, for various reasons, were unable to attend. It was a joy to see many other ministers and friends in the congregation, including a contingent of some fifty friends from Cardiff City Temple, Pastor Backhouse's home Church. Included in the greetings received were good wishes from the Editor of The Life of Faith and from Headquarters.

The Church Secretary brought greetings from Chelmsford, Lowestoft and Westcliff-on-Sea, the three churches previously pastored by our minister, the greetings from the last church being in the form of a gigantic greetings card signed by many members. Mr. House then turned to Winton Church and there was a poignant moment when he read a letter from our much-loved Church Treasurer, Mr. Sidney Preston, who was unable to be present owing to his serious illness. Mr. House presented an illuminated address to Pastor Back-house. The oldest member, Miss Elsie Ridewood, then presented a basket of flowers to Mrs. Backhouse. The friends at Winton had contributed towards a cheque which Mr. House said that he felt he should give to Mrs. Backhouse, which he then proceeded to do. In his reply Pastor Backhouse, who was much moved, thanked all the friends for their great kindness. He went on to say that anniversaries are times for remembering, rejoicing and renewing. Winston was very fortunate to have as the visiting preacher, Pastor P.W. Brewster. His message on the will of God was very appropriate. The Wessex Gospel Choir, under the leadership of Mr. Don House, who have ministered in the Church on many occasions, made a significant contribution to the service.

We were privileged to sit under the ministry of Pastor Brewster on the Sunday. At the close of the evening service we rejoiced when twelve people raised their hands to signify their desire to seek God for help in their spiritual problems.

(MRS.) D.F. KEMP

TREALAW Pastor: K. Lannon

MID-JUNE saw the commencement of our long-awaited ladies' weekend. Our guest preacher was Mrs. Eileen Glass, who was so loved and enjoyed by those who heard her at last year's ladies' weekend, that she was immediately asked to return this year. So expectation was great and the entire series of meetings was rich in blessing.

We began with a banquet to welcome Mrs. Glass on the Saturday afternoon, and then each evening, Saturday through to Tuesday, and around the Lord's Table Mrs. Glass ministered ably in word and song in demonstration of the Spirit to the edification of all.

The ladies participated in the services and our ladies' choir ministered each evening. Mrs. Jeanette Lannon convened over the week-end.

We give thanks to God for His grace in the glorious spiritual uplift received.

KEITH LANNON

RYDE Pastor: I.R. Hall

OUR forty-second Anniversary was marked by a greater measure of blessing and greater numbers than usual. The guests were Pastor and Mrs. G.L.W. Ladlow. Mr. Ladlow preached with his customary vigour and forthrightness. He and his wife sang a duet in each meeting. In the opening service friends of the Assemblies of God at Northwood and Sandown joined with us. The meeting on Sunday evening saw ninety-one people in the congregation and seventy-two remained for the after-church rally on "The Ghana Revival". Both Mr. and Mrs. Ladlow were dressed in national costume. They spoke of the work there and showed slides. Ministry in song was also given by Messrs. P. Rowe and B. Parkman and Miss G. Whitney was the pianist. Truly the Lord met with us and inspired our hearts for renewed efforts during the coming year.

SOUTHEND–ON–SEA Pastor: A. Nicolson

THE successful completion of another session of the Junior Crusader Youth Club was celebrated by a special Youth Sunday. We were pleased to welcome Pastor J. Harrison, Youth Commissioner of the Eastern Presbytery, as our preacher. We were also glad to have our Pastor, just back from Australia, to convene the services. We had the company of Pastor and Mrs. J.A. Wright, who were visiting their family. Pastor and Mrs. Wright left Southend two years ago when they retired to Cheltenham. It was a delight to have them in our midst.

The day commenced with a prayer meeting followed by a Communion service. The latter was attended by some of the older Crusaders, of whom a number have recently made decisions for Christ. This was a memorable occasion as it was the first Communion service they had attended. Mr. Harrison concluded the service by ministering God's Word.

Mr. P. Roast, Sunday School Superintendent, convened the afternoon activities and Pastor Harrison also participated. When he gave his message, he emphasized the text, "Be sure your sin will find you out." The children have had this Scripture brought to them repeatedly over recent weeks by a variety of speakers and clearly it has impressed them.

An enjoyable tea was provided by the Sunday school and Crusader Youth Club workers so that the children were able to stay for the evening service.

A number of parents and about fifty young folk were in the congregation for the special evening programme. This included a criss cross quiz, narrowly won by a girl's team, Sword drill, at which the boys excelled, duets with guitar accompaniment and an item by the newly-formed tambourine or timbrel group who did very well indeed. Pastor Harrison then gave an illustrated talk on "Living in Orbit". We trust that all those who heard will centre their lives around Christ and acknowledge His lordship. The service concluded with Mrs. Wright presenting the Junior Crusader Youth Club awards.

It is very encouraging to know of the steady continuance of this work and our sincere thanks go to all who labour or have contributed in any way to the work among our youth.

In Defence of the Faith

6. A Missing Body

by F. J. Slemming

"Yet Michael the archangel, when contending with the devil he disputed about the body of Moses, durst not bring against him a railing accusation, but said, The Lord rebuke thee." (v.9).

HERE is wonderful drama. Jude's little but important Letter has a tremendous sweep of vision and touches so many interesting subjects. It speaks of princes, prophets, sinners, saints, eternal fires, everlasting darkness, men and angels. This verse brings to our attention a dispute between the archangel and Satan. The subject of the dispute was the body of Moses, a human being.

What a picture is conjured up! Against the scenes of blazing fires licking upward toward the heavens, we see two mighty angels, one fallen, the other unfallen, disputing over the body of the man Moses. Jude says, as he refers to the attacks of evil and evil men threatening the Church and seeking to undermine the faith once delivered, that these evil men are false in their doctrine and corrupt in their morals, and that, to all the warnings and exhortations of the Christian Church, they return irreverance and arrogance. They speak evil of dignities and rail against the truth, whereas Michael, the great archangel, when in dispute with the devil over the body of Moses, did not bring against him a railing accusation but said, the Lord rebuke thee.

Judgment and its pronouncement belong to God.

Where and why this incident happened are veiled in mystery, but there are some things on which we can comment.

Michael is the archangel. The term means "chief angel". It would seem that there is but one in this high office. "Michael" means, "Who is like unto God?"

What a contrast we have here. "Satan" means "adversary", very descriptive of his antagonism to God and to the things of God. There had been a time when these two beings had been colleagues, for they served before God's throne prior to Lucifer's fall.

Michael is mentioned in Daniel 10:13. He went to Daniel as God's agent for the defeating of Satan's purposes against God's people, Israel. The margin says of him, "The first of the chief princes". In Daniel 10:21, in a message addressed to Daniel, he is called "Michael, your prince". In 12:1 we read: "And at that time shall Michael stand up, the great prince which standeth for the children of thy people".

Michael is mentioned again in Revelation 12:7-9 "And there was war in heaven: Michael and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought and his angels, And prevailed not; neither was their place found any more in heaven. And the great dragon was cast out, the old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world; he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him."

Note, then, that Satan ever seeks to defeat God's plan and programme, and that Michael is shown as God's chosen instrument in overcoming Satan's attempts.

Michael the archangel and Satan are the two great characters standing toe to toe in dispute. Jude records, surprisingly, that they contended about the body of Moses.

There are more than 500 references to Moses in the Scriptures, yet only one refers primarily to the body of Moses, namely Deuteronomy 34:5,6: "So Moses the servant of the Lord died there in the land of Moab, according to the word of the Lord. And He buried him in a valley in the land of Moab, over against Beth-peor; but no man knoweth of his sepulchre unto this day."

Of all the fascinating things to be seen in this great little Epistle, this is perhaps the most fascinating. What questions come to mind! What was it all about? Did Satan want the body of Moses, and, if so, for what reason? Why did God bury this servant of His?

I have heard it argued that Satan wanted the body of Moses so that, at a later date, he could not appear with Elijah and Jesus Christ Himself on the Mount of Transfiguration. I have heard it said that, because Moses died and yet did appear on the Mount of Transfiguration,that this argues for his resurrection after his burial. This we know – Satan was interested in the body of this man and Michael, who stands for Israel, opposed him. Fausset wrote of this incident: "Buried by Jehovah in a valley in Moab over against Beth-peor, Moses was probably translated soon after, for he afterwards appears with the translated Elijah and with Jesus at the transfiguration. His sepulchre therefore could not be found by man. It is interesting and maybe instructive to remember that the archangel is associated with the future resurrection, for in 1 Thessalonians 4:6 we learn that, when Jesus returns the second time, we shall hear the Lord Himself descend with a shout and with the voice of the archangel and the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise. . . It could be that he was associated with the resurrection and translation of the body of Moses and had been opposed by Satan."

Michael the archangel dared not bring against the devil a railing judgment, but said, "The Lord rebuke thee!" There is something akin to this in Zechariah chapter 3. The devil is seen in opposition against the Lord and Joshua and we hear the Lord say to him, "The Lord rebuke thee, O Satan; even the Lord that hath chosen Jerusalem rebuke thee".

Jude v.10 reads: "But these speak evil of those things which they know not; but what they know naturally, as brute beasts, in those things they corrupt themselves." The thought that is expressed in vv. 8-10 is this railing at dignities, about which Michael is shown as a warning to believers who are tempted to do the same. Michael, possessing a more perfect knowledge, would not speak in judgment, but these evil men rail at whatsoever things they know not. They speak out in condemnation about people and things about which they do not know enough to make them competent in judgment. This is the way in which apostates behave. Do not forget that Jude is not writing about atheists who revile our faith in blind ignorance, nor about the saints; it is written about some who once had a knowledge of the truth and who fell away. We have something akin to this in 1 Peter 3:16: "They speak evil of you". It is tragic to hear men who abide not in the truth speaking pernicious words to the deceiving of their hearers. They do not know whereof they speak. They are blind leaders of the blind, speaking evil of things that they do not understand.

In Jude 10 we learn that in this case an apostate is one who rails at the truth, who has but a natural knowledge, and who finally perishes eternally in his own corruption. We see this quite clearly in v.11: "Woe unto them! for they have gone in the way of Cain, and ran greedily after the error of Balaam for reward, and perished in the gainsaying of Core."

The Shunammite

3. Repossessed of her house and inheritance

by A.S.F. Horne, Pastor of our Ipswich Church

Peacefully

"THERE is no peace to the wicked"; they are disturbed both from within and without. The righteous, however, have peace that "flows as a river", even when there are storms and tempests without, for "Christ [is] in you, the hope of glory". Piety is productive of peace, inasmuch as it departs not from honour and equity, though, as it was with the Shunammite, injustice may reign for a season. The triumph of the wicked is short, but "they that trust in the Lord shall be as Mount Zion which cannot be removed but abideth for ever". Who would dare to disturb her whom the sovereign defends and protects? She received peacefully.

Prosperously

The righteous shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; and his leaf also shall not wither; and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper. There may be hostile winds and untimely frosts that for a time will check the buds, kill the blossoms, or even destroy the embryo fruit, but the roots are deepening and strengthening and the branches are enlarging and increasing, so that, when these ills are passed, the crop will be the more rich and plentiful. Pilgrimage was painful and robbery was distressing to the Shunammite, but no doubt these things made her lot happier than it otherwise would have been when she had settled again in her native city, as thereby she learned the lessons that only experience can teach.

The Lord led her from Shunem. He protected and preserved her while she was with strangers. He brought her again to her home. He was there to bless her with all that was necessary.

Permanently

Her years were passing fast, her graces had become strong, her virtues abounded, her faith was nearly sufficiently tried. Hence, as a river becomes silent through its increased depth as it approaches the ocean, we hear no more of her.

As a field of corn, or a garden of fruit, that has felt the pinching cold, the shaking winds and the drenching rains and wants now only the soft zephyrs, the silent dew and the genial warmth of a fervent sun to bring it to perfection, the wanderings of the Shunammite were now over. She was allowed to rest in the busy, active quietness of an earthly home, until she had fully ripened for one of consummate perfection, "eternal in the heavens".

In the next article we shall see the truths of which all these things remind us.

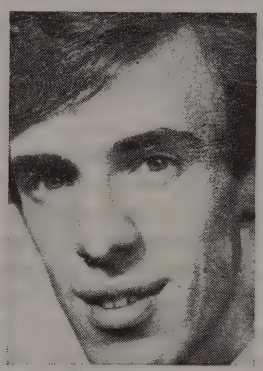
A Time to be Angry

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

SINCE He had been a boy of twelve, Jesus had gone to Jerusalem every year for the Feast of the Passover. There He joined the great crowd of Jews from every land who had come to worship in the Temple. Jesus had a great love for that Temple. He called it "His Father's House".

One year He arrived to find the outside of the Temple littered with stalls. The greedy priests were getting rich from buying and selling cattle. His beloved Temple had been turned into a noisy cattle-market. The worship of God was being interrupted by the shouts of the stall-holders. The prayers were being disturbed by the cries of the cattle and the rustling of money. Perhaps some of the people did not like what was happening, but they made no attempt to stop it, because they were afraid of the priests.

Jesus was filled with anger. He marched up, scattered the cattle, threw the money to the ground and turned to the priests. "Get these things out of here", He commanded. "You shall not treat My Father's House like this!"



The priests tried to make excuses for their wicked behaviour, but Jesus would not listen to them. They never forgave Jesus for shaming them in front of the people for, at the Passover two years later, they made their terrible plans to kill Him. Jesus did not care. They had brought shame on His Father's House and He was extremely angry.

Jesus can be very angry at times. He is angry when someone hurts one of His children, when people are mean, and when men teach wrong things about Him. He expects us all to be angry on these occasions, but He does not expect us to be angry just to get what we want, for this anger is spiteful and selfish and makes everyone unhappy.

God is angry when we say unkind things and when we do wrong, but, as soon as He sees that we are sorry, He is filled with tenderness and love and welcomes us back with forgiveness. God's anger is a part of His great and wonderful love.

The new Pentecostal Evangelical in the non-Pentecostal Denomination

"Try the spirits whether they are of God" (1 John 4:1)

by John Harris, Pastor of our Lurgan Church, N. Ireland

LET us state categorically that a claim to speak in tongues, even if it is factually correct, does not of itself prove that the person concerned is filled with the Spirit or is even a genuine Christian, nor is any related experience indisputably authenticated as being of God. The old Pentecostals have become accustomed to speaking in tongues in genuine utterances of the Spirit; they need to beware of assuming that all speaking in tongues must necessarily be a gift from God. There is a great deal of truth in the view held by some scholars, that for every true manifestation of Divine power there is a Satanic counterfeit.

The strength of a counterfeit is determined by how close it comes to the original. In Scripture we have instances of such things as when the magicians of Egypt produced miracles similar to those performed by Moses. Speaking in tongues has a central place in the current charismatic controversy and the possibility of a Satanic counterfeit must be recognised. Those who have studied and observed heathen religions, spiritism, devil worship, and such like, have recorded instances, which in their form, though not in their content or context, were similar to speaking in tongues as found in true Christian churches. Moreover, speaking in tongues has been part of the belief of sects and movements judged as false by the evangelical church, e.g. No. 7 of the Articles of Faith of the Mormons states, among other things, "We believe. . . in the gift of tongues."

Such facts should not deter any person from seeking the true. If we discarded everything simply because of the possibility of a counterfeit, we would be left with very little! Such facts should, however, make us aware of the possibility and thus be more careful and discerning in accepting any claim or person. We are commanded, "Believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God" (1 John 4:1). The possibility of Satanic counterfeits is clearly recognised by the apostle and the responsibility to test all spirit-operations is therefore laid upon all Christians. John proceeds to show that one of the vital factors in such examinations is the belief professed concerning the person of Christ. The doctrinal content of any proclamation is thus invaluable in determining the supernatural forces at work behind the utterance. This principle is of fundamental importance.

Salvation is a personal matter; the minimum of true knowledge required for faith unto salvation is known only to God. It is therefore possible for one in an anti-Evangelical denomination to gain enough truth for a true experience of saving grace through faith, but because of the regenerative work of the Spirit, who has brought truth to the fore in spite of much surrounding error, one would expect an awareness of error to develop in association with an increase of knowledge of the truth. The Holy Spirit is the Spirit of truth, part of whose ministry is to guide into all truth. Any further experience from God, such as being filled with the Spirit, will give impetus to growth of the truth. The truth which is thus growing will be derived, directly and indirectly, from the written Scriptures. As the Spirit inspired the Scriptures, all that He teaches anyone will harmonise with what is written.

Some will raise the problem of differing points of view on doctrinal matters within the Evangelical Church, but such differences need to be put in perspective. There is a wide range of fundamental doctrines on which Evangelicals agree, especially in the sphere of personal salvation. This unanimity becomes amazing in the light of the long period of Church history and the different cultures and eras which were the background to doctrinal discussion and development. Indeed the measure of Evangelical harmony on doctrinal foundations is a strong indication of one Teacher: the Spirit of Truth. While an individual may find minor differences, which arise from the freedom of his own conscience, if he is taught by the Spirit he will be led into an Evangelical understanding of the truth.

The church life of a person is also important and has a very influential role in the practice of religion. It is not enough to point to the stated beliefs of the church as contained in the official articles of faith. The actual practice of the church must also be considered, for othodoxy on paper has in many cases produced hypocrisy in practice in departure from, and denial of, what is contained in official documents. The denomination which is anti-Evangelical in word and deed avoids the sin of hypocrisy by being consistent, but where either belief or practice of a church denies the basic truths of the Evangelical gospel, how could anyone led of the Spirit find pleasure participating in such things? The idea that an anti-Evangelical practice could be used by the Holy Spirit as a means of grace to a Christian is at variance with His ministry and character as the Spirit of Truth. Surely in such cases the conflict between truth and error is taken from the realm of theory and made more substantial and acute by the practical, physical involvement. The guidance of the Spirit into truth must then be applied to practice as to belief and involve a separation from church participation in that which is opposed to the gospel of Christ.

Holiness is directly related to the Spirit of God in a title used some one hundred times in the New Testament: "The Holy Spirit". If usage means anything, the emphasis is on the third Person of the Godhead as the One who produces holiness. This sanctifying work has its origin in the act of regeneration, which is the initiatory act of personal salvation. Any continuing, new, or recurring work of the Spirit will maintain the sanctifying process and stimulate its growth. Biblical holiness, expressed in the terms used in secular society, simply means the development of moral character to a high standard. The moral character of a person is therefore another index which can be used in cross-checking to establish or disprove the indwelling and the infilling of the Holy Spirit. An individual whose life is habitually unholy has no Scriptural grounds for claiming to be born of the Spirit, let alone to being baptised with His power (1 John 3:7-15).

Such truths as these provide a framework and supply terms of reference which are adequate with regard to speaking in tongues. They apply in circumstances where the utterance is understood, either by the Gift of interpretation of tongues or through a language being understood by natural means. In such cases, these truths can be applied in addition to the examination of the content of the message given. Thus both the message and the messenger may be examined in the light of Scripture. Where the Word of God does not directly sustain both, the greatest caution should be exercised, for the danger of a counterfeit is related to the degree of its similarity to the genuine. Where the message or messenger contradicts Scripture they must be rejected as not being of the Spirit of God. Where speaking in tongues is not understood naturally nor revealed by interpretation, the application of divine truth to the speaker is the only recourse left open. The creed, character, and church connection of the person must then be scrutinised. If their doctrine agrees with the basic gospel doctrines, this must settle a major question, but character and church must also be in agreement with the same professed doctrines. Where there is no clear confession, and where the character or church is questionable, then there can be no fellowship as with a fellow-believer.

When such people claim to speak in tongues, such claims are very suspect and should not be accepted as genuine. When the Word of God in its fundamental teaching is departed from, disobeyed, and denied, utterances in tongues by such persons must be rejected as spurious and false. They either proceed from the person's own corrupt mind or from Satanic sources. No other courses are open to men who can look only on the outward appearance and must judge by the standards of the Word of God.

The question will inevitably be asked: "But what about their experience?". First of all experience can be induced by, so arise from, different things. Such things as physical and emotional conditions, psychological pressures, specific type of surroundings, human company, supernatural agencies either good or evil, can all make very definite contributions to experience. So experience is a very variable thing. A Christian experience must always be brought to the bar of truth in Scripture and be subject to the Word of God. The experience originating in God and communicated by His Spirit will be discovered by its agreement with what is written. When the experience is otherwise, it must be rejected as not of God. In defending an experience we must be able to follow Peter and declare: "This is that", which paraphrased is: "This experience is the fulfilment of that Scripture". The Word of God must be given priority and authority over all experience. In all things therefore we must not believe every spirit, but try the spirits (by Scripture) whether they be of God.

ON the last day of Billy Graham's Evangelistic Crusade in Korea 1,100,000 people attended the service. This was the largest religious gathering in the history of the Christian Church. Such a meeting would have been impossible, of course, before the advent of amplifiers. Yet George Whitefield spoke to crowds as large as 20,000 in the eighteenth century and all could hear his voice. Graham had a congregation fifty-five times as large and all could hear his voice. I would have supposed that the T.V. networks and the newspapers and magazines in America would have covered this memorable event in detail, but they paid little attention to it. Can it be that for those who have a "nose" for news the "good news" of the gospel isn't particularly newsworthy even when more than a million people gather to hear it?

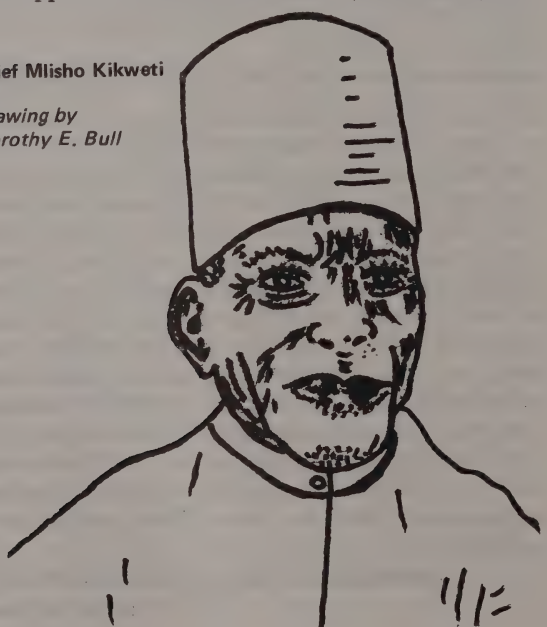
Mzee Bull



None other name

"MWINYE", they saluted him. "Who is that?" I asked. "Mlisho Kikweti, chief of the 40,000 strong Wakweli tribe," my informant replied.

Sixty years ago, when Mlisho was a boy, the German rulers of Tanganyika, as it was then, had given orders that each family must send one boy to school. Very little was known about schools, but the elders heard that sometimes boys were beaten by the teachers. "Better to send one of our slaves", the fathers decided. Slaves had usually been captured during inter-tribal wars, but some were Wakweli in pawn. The eldest brother had absolute authority over the family. He could – and sometimes did – take a nephew or a niece and pledge them, it might be for goods, salt or satisfaction of a debt. Many were never redeemed. Their owners usually treated them well, sometimes as well as their own children, but the slave stigma remained. The autocratic Germans had no knowledge of this. They never dreamed that some of the intelligent pupils whom they promoted were despised for their slave background. Mlisho was a free man.

Unlike the other tribes of Tanganyika the Wakweli had no chief. Stools were held by clan leaders. Witchcraft, sorcery and the secret societies precluded the possibility of any real unity. The German authorities had appointed him to be "akida" (commander) of a district. In time he became the head of the tribe. Mlisho remembered God when he was acting as judge in his court. A man came secretly at night to his house and left a bribe. The next day he was called before the packed court. Mlisho exhibited the money to all present. "This man", he explained, "endeavoured to blind my eyes with this." He then returned the money to the culprit with a stern rebuke. Later he sentenced him as his case deserved.

Chief Mlisho Kikweti

Drawing by Dorothy E. Bull

Mlisho and the Roman Catholic priests were at enmity. It was said that their schoolchildren were taught to despise him; they actually passed him without greeting. Obeying the Scriptures, the children in our eight schools were taught to respect all in authority. The poor and maimed were helped. Medicine was dispensed to all in need. Mlisho, a Moslem, was attracted to our interpretation of Christianity. He and I became friends. I told him of the Friend of sinners.

At the dedication of our first church, he was present with many of his subordinate chiefs. Hearing that the Christians were taking an offering for the poor, he sent his contribution.

Some years ago, on his retirement, his son built him a large house with a room for each wife, of whom I did not know even one. Occasionally we met. One day, as he was seated beside me in my vehicle, I questioned him: "Mzee, what will you say when you stand before God?" He considered a moment and then replied, "I will tell him that I am a friend of Bwana Bull." Shocked, I retorted, "There is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved. That name is Yesu Kristo".

He died last year when I was in England. The funeral befitted one so respected. Many came from afar to pay their tributes. I should certainly have attended, but with a sorrowful heart.

Another friend had entered eternity without acknowledging "the Name which is above every name".

Letters to the Editor

Dear Sir,

I FOUND Pastor McGowan's article most interesting, but the big question was left unanswered. Do we, as a Pentecostal movement, believe that Christ was crucified on a Wednesday and if we do, what are we doing about it?

If it can be shown according to the Scriptures that our Lord was crucified on a Wednesday, then surely this is the day to which it is expedient to conform.

Yours in Christ,
John Stretton

Dear Editor,

YOUR contributor in June 23rd issue of THE ELIM EVANGEL stated in an article entitled, "What's so Good about Friday?" that the "Friday myth comes about by a misunderstanding of the Word of God". If those who press for the Wednesday crucifixion equally fail to understand Scripture, then we beg the question, "What's so Good about Wednesday?"

First, let it be clear that this is not a new point of view put forward so forcefully. I feel certain that neither the article in question, nor the controversy it must inevitably spark off, will not settle the dust of debate. Surely there is something more wonderful than being able to state the exact day in question and that is that the sin question was settled on that day.

Secondly, I would like to ask: Where does the Scripture suggest that we literalise to the extent of demanding a period of seventy-two hours in the tomb? Can we even argue with any degree of dogmatism that the duration of Jonah in the interior of the fish was a seventy-two hour period? I beg to suggest that, if we interpret the words of Matthew 12:40 in the sense in which they were spoken, in Jewish law part of a day stands for the whole; then our Lord may have been said to have been in the tomb "three days and three nights." In Jewish parlance "on the third day" is equivalent to our "day after tomorrow". Therefore the interval between a late hour on Friday and an early hour on Sunday would constitute the three-day period. Your contributor may be right, but some of us object to being told that we have no understanding of the Word of God if we do not accept his view. I humbly suggest that to hold the Good Friday crucifixion infers that the time is idiomatic for parts of three days (Friday, Saturday and Sunday).

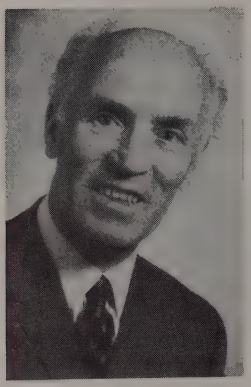
I would ask that since the matter is far from conclusive, even after this letter suggesting that there could be truth in the traditional view, that we be tolerant of another's view-point.

W.J. Maybin

Dear Editor,

IN REPLY to Mr. Maybin's letter, I would wholeheartedly agree with him to "let it be clear that this is not a new point of view". Furthermore I would state emphatically that I am not intolerant of another's point of view.

However, I would cordially ask Mr. Maybin to take an honest look at the words of Jesus in Matthew 12: 40: "Three days and THREE NIGHTS". If the Saviour had only mentioned three days, then our brother might have some basis for his objection, but the "day after tomorrow" explanation only allows for two nights. The Scriptures make it quite clear that our Lord spent the same duration in the heart of the earth as Jonah did in the fish's belly. In Jonah 1:17 we are told, "three days and three nights" and the Lord Jesus said, "As Jonah was. . . so shall the Son of Man be".



Thank God the sin question was conclusively finished at Calvary and Paul's message was, "How that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures and that He rose again the third day according to the scriptures," not the traditions of men (1 Corinthians 15:3).

I thank Mr. Stretton for his comments and his honest enquiry, but I would point out that I wrote with personal convictions and not to express the beliefs of a Pentecostal movement, or any other movement for that matter. Whether a man accepts or rejects the theory is entirely up to himself. If a brother is fully persuaded in his own mind let him remain that way and act accordingly.

I believe that I did point out according to the Scriptures that our Lord was crucified on the Wednesday.

The keeping of the Sabbath day does not enter into the question, for we know that the disciples of Christ in the Early Church observed the day on which Christ arose, namely the first day of the week (Acts 20:7; 1 Corinthians 16:2).

Hugh B. McGowan

From T. H. Stevenson

I REQUESTED of our worthy Editor that I be excused writing two of my regular columns in THE ELIM EVANGEL. This was to givethe readers a rest, as several successive features concerned the situation in N. Ireland; though I do not feel I owe any apology, since very few readers may see a day pass by without gaining some mass media news aspect related to the subject, and not too much of that is absolutely reliable.

When visiting various places in N. Ireland over several weeks, one can be more isolated and insular; maybe the thoughts become more closely and narrowly concentrated on the environment. Unexpectedly, after a brief visit to my home in England, I am back again in N. Ireland to fill a gap. I find myself in Armagh, a church which I have pastored twice in much earlier years. On Sunday we began with blessing, to be followed the next day by the bombing of a bank and considerable damage of a minor nature in the surrounding residential area. "Minor" and "normal" here are words with an almost different pattern of meaning from their customary significance.

I am really constrained to write about something that I have refrained from earlier as it is yet again about N. Ireland. It is almost as incongruous as it is incomprehensible.

For some days I lived in a lovely farm overlooking the entire range of the Mountains of Mourne – but inland, not from the aspect where they "sweep down to the sea". I was living almost midway between two small towns of striking contrast. About two miles to my right lay Rathfriland, a prosperous, overwhelmingly Protestant town, but a loyalist town that is almost a fortress with elevated camouflaged military nests, military vehicles and personnel, road diversions, and strong iron gates to close streets, police checks, foreboding ramps which cause every driver instinctively to stop his vehicle before moving again in lowest gear. This is a town whose strongest wish is to remain a part of the United Kingdom. In the other direction from the farm where I lived is Hilltown, with a long and deep Nationalist and Republican tradition. There is not a solitary soldier or policeman. The former police station is now a pleasant, private house. It is a small town of modern estate houses and first class roads. The only evidence of a special nature to attract any attention is a political one. On many windows is the prominent notice: "NO RENTS. NO RATES". Hilltown looks like a peaceful garden. Rathfriland, where we have a faithful Elim Church, is like a garrison.

38. Reconciliation (Genesis 33:4)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

THIS was the moment that had been so often in Jacob's mind! The old saying declares: "Conscience makes cowards of us all", and certainly Jacob's memory of his deceit had brought many unhappy hours. The last few days had been a constant anguish of mind. At last, however, the long-awaited and dreaded meeting took place and, as it turned out, was something of an anti-climax, for Esau was most friendly and greeted Jacob with warmth and affection. No doubt the Lord had been dealing with both men and in different ways had prepared the ground so that His own purpose would be fulfilled by their reconciliation.

Mark Twain is reported to have said: "I am an old man and have seen many troubles, but most of them never happened!" We sometimes get ourselves into an awful state and are almost overwhelmed by worry as we anticipate trouble and disaster. We forget the truth of the words which we often sing: "God is still on the throne". Our eyes are turned away from our eternal, almighty Friend and we look with distress of mind at the circumstances which seem to threaten us, so that we go through much unnecessary agony of heart.

Let us sincerely and trustingly commit our way to the Lord, believing implicitly that He will intervene and undertake for us. Thus we shall find that He will dispel all our fears and that He will work all things together for our good. We shall find that, miraculously He has brought reconciliation instead of separation, friendship rather than enmity, joy in place of sorrow and a building up instead of destruction.

How great is our God!

Blowing your own Trumpet

MOST visitors to Salisbury Cathedral make a second pilgrimage to the Church of Sarum St. Thomas, an ancient chapel of ease built on the site of the original wooden church founded in 1219. The stone-masons and carpenters of the Cathedral worshipped God there during the long years of building. In today's grey stone sanctuary one can see evidence of another craftsman's art – the carved oak panel dated 1671 proudly inscribed: "His own Work, by Humphrey Beckham". This inscription is said to have originated the retort to local boasters, "Be you a Beckham?", or, in more familiar phraseology, "Must you blow your own trumpet?".

This question brings me to trumpets and trumpet blowing. I like the catchy tune of the popular negro spiritual, "Hand me down my silver trumpet, Gabriel", but, as a gospel piece, it hasn't much depth or appeal. I think we can firmly dismiss any suggestion of boastful trumpet-blowing or the acquisition of a silver trumpet, but the need for humble, consecrated musical service in indicated.

In 1878 Charles Fry and his three sons offered their service to William Booth to protect the fervent evangelists who proclaimed the gospel in Salisbury Market Square. "The fact that they were instrumentalists was quite incidental; first of all they were committed Christians and felt that the evangelists needed protection from hooligans who were pledged to destroy them. Their music provided a useful accompaniment to the gospel singing. It was therefore remarkable that from these few men and the dedication of their musical talent on the Market Square of the cathedral City of Salisbury, that bands throughout the world now sound out the gospel message." So, from an apparently insignificant beginning, a great ministry of consecrated talent developed in the work of The Salvation Army.

Music is delightful for music's sake alone and has been a joy and solace to mankind even from the time of Jubal, but music which is composed and played for the sole purpose of glorifying God and telling of His love can be anointed and owned of Him and can possess that indefinable "plus" quality.

Over forty years ago a well-known British Pentecostal preacher on a visit to the U.S.A. made a rather disparaging remark at a large camp meeting when speaking on the qualifications for the Christian ministry. He said, "It appears to me that to be a successful evangelist these days all one needs is to possess a large Thompson Chain Reference Bible and to be able to play a trombone!" Sitting in the congregation was a nineteen-year-old Bible school student who had been asked to play a trombone solo in the evening rally that same day. Naturally, he felt perturbed at this remark. In the interval between the services, he told the convener he could not now play. Fortunately, this wise, sympathetic minister encouraged the young fellow to ignore the remark and to play his gospel piece. That night he sat on the platform very nervously awaiting the time for his contribution to be announced, when someone in the congregation burst forth into a prophetic utterance which was an exhortation to the people of God to praise the Lord. It concluded with words from Psalm 150 where all manner of instruments are named upon which His praise should be sounded forth. There was one alteration, however. Instead of the words, "Praise Him with the psaltery and harp", the speaker said, "Praise him with the sackbut and harp". The heart of young Watson Argue leapt for joy, for he had recently read in his Bible dictionary that the sackbut is an ancient form of the trombone! In that moment all nervousness left him. He realised that he was not entertaining a congregation, but that he was praising the Lord. When he rendered his piece, he did so under the anointing of the Holy Spirit. When he finished, the whole great congregation burst forth into praise and worship.

So you see that there is a place for genuine trumpet-blowing in God's work. We can link all our service for Him with the zeal and dedication of another young man of whom read in Judges 6:34: "The Spirit of the Lord came upon Gideon and he blew a trumpet".

JABEZ

by Ken Legg

HAVE you ever heard of Jabez? He appears in the Bible, but you'll have to look very carefully and closely to find him. He is mentioned in only two verses (1 Chronicles 4:9,10). He finds his place in the list of the chronologies of the children of Israel as one of the "sons of Judah", yet he is not listed in chronological fashion. We do not know who were his father, mother or brethren. It is almost as if it seemed good to the Holy Ghost to put in this piece about Jabez for our benefit.

He was called "Jabez", i.e. "Sorrowful", because he was born in sorrow. Through pain, sorrow and anguish he was brought into the world and his name went with him to remind him of the inconvenience he had caused to his mother. He was off to a bad start!

What did he do? Did he accept this as his lot for his journey through life? Did he regard his inferiority as a thing which would handicap him for the remainder of his days. No, he believed that there was a way for man to rise, no matter how much the odds were against him. He was confident that his God was the God, not only of the nation or of the tribe, but of the individual. He came to God with faith in his heart and this prayer upon his lips, "Oh that Thou wouldest bless me indeed, and enlarge my coast, and that Thine hand might be with me, and that Thou wouldest keep me from evil, that it may not grieve me!".

God granted him what he requested. He became more honourable than his brethren. The last became the first. The lesser became the greater.

This shows us something tremendous about the heart of God. He is no respecter of persons; He has no favourites. He does not only bless and use those whose merits place them in a position to be blessed and used of God, on the contrary, it seems to me that those who are weakened by certain inabilities of their own are most likely to receive the grace of God and be used in His service. In their weakness they see their need of God's blessing in their lives and cry, "Oh that thou wouldest bless me indeed!" As Isaiah said in one of his prophecies: "A bruised reed shall He not break, and a smoking flax shall He not quench."

Never say that you have had a bad deal in life. Never consider yourself as insignificant or unimportant. Rather see yourself as you really can be in Christ Jesus. Rise and do well for Him! According to the sincerity of your determination to know the blessing of God in your life He will grant unto you what you have requested.

There is no limit to the blessings which God has in store for you. God granted Jabez "that which he requested". Had he asked for less he would have received less; had he asked for more he would, no doubt have received more. What do you stand in need of? What will you ask God for? It will be given unto you, even that which you request.

The Death of our Saviour

JESUS had courage to die on the Cross,
He wanted to save us all.
To people who loved Him it was a great loss
But the rest didn't care at all.

He suffered such pain before He died –
The nails driven through His hands.
People prayed and people cried,
But some did not understand.

On that cross He hung between two thieves,
His hands and feet were nailed
On His head a crown of thorns and leaves,
"King of the Jews", they hailed.

"Forgive them, Father," Jesus cried,
"They know not what they do".
He said those words before He died
On that cross for me and you.

The Family Altar

Scripture Union Portions — Notes by Ray Hughes

Monday, August 13th — 1 Corinthians 7:25-40

"The time is short" (v.29).

THERE never do seem to be enough hours in the day to do all that we would like to do! Here Paul points to the hindrance that family responsibilities can be to a person who is trying to serve the Lord. "I would like to be in the prayer meeting, but there is a parents-teachers' meeting at the school"; "I would like to go out tract distributing, but I promised my girl friend that I would go with her to look for a new coat"; "I know I'm a deacon, but I must get my car repaired before Monday, so I will have to miss the services on Sunday". . . and so one could go on. Paul talks about "redeeming the time" (Ephesians 5:15-17), i.e. buying it. True service is always costly, for denial is part of discipleship (Matthew 16:24).

Beware of thinking that "this once won't matter". As Benjamin Franklin once said, "A small leak will sink a great ship."

Tuesday, August 14th — 1 Corinthians 8:1-13

"Take heed lest by any means this liberty of yours become a stumbling block to them that are weak." (v.9).

FOLLOWING yesterday's portion, which pointed to possible hindrances, the inspired writer goes on to emphasise that the strong ought to help the weak (Romans 14:21; 15:1). Someone once asked the late President Eisenhower the secret of leadership. He quietly placed a piece of string on the desk and tried to get it to go forward by pushing it; it just buckled and bent. Then he put his hand in front and pulled it; it moved immediately in a straight line of response.

Paul could say to Timothy: "The things that thou hast heard of me among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men" (2 Timothy 2:2). We are read and known of all men (2 Corinthians 3:2). Let our witness be true.

Wednesday, August 15th — 1 Corinthians 9:1-14

"They which preach the gospel should live of the gospel" (v.14).

THE living of many pastors would be more enjoyable if members of churches were more scriptural in their approach to the ministry from which they derive great help and comfort. The priest in the Old Testament was adequately taken care of; should any priest become gripped with greed, God dealt with him without mercy (see 1 Samuel 2:12-17,22-36; 4:11). Paul had worked to maintain his ministry, but he reasoned that the flock should provide for the shepherd (v.7). In return, the good shepherd, in the words of Jesus, "gives his life for the sheep".

Thursday, August 16th — 1 Corinthians 9:15-27

"I made myself servant unto all, that I might gain the more" (v.19).

BY this conscious act of will, Paul applied himself to the winning of precious, undying souls. Like Jesus before him, he "made himself of no reputation" (Philippians 2:7). As a servant he would be at everyone's call, but as God's servant he obeyed the divine voice (John 13:4-17). Some work to win the approval of God; others work as an act of gratitude for all that God has done for them. As has been said, "Service can put a new coat on a man, but only the grace of God can put a new man in the coat".

Friday, August 17th — 1 Corinthians 10:1-13

"Take heed" (v.12).

IT has been said, "It is a wise man who learns by his own mistakes, but it's a wiser man who lets the snake bite the other fellow". Twice in the close confines of ten verses, Paul says that historical events in which God's children were involved are recorded in Scripture as "examples" for us. No wonder Jesus told his followers to "search the Scriptures", for they not only testify of Christ (John 5:39), but also reveal pitfalls and problems that men have to cope with, and often show the "way of escape".

Saturday, August 18th — 1 Corinthians 10:14-33;11:1

"All things are lawful for me, but all things are not expedient" (v.23).

A WALK in the park is good, but is it godly when it takes place at the time of the worship and Communion service? It is not what we do, but when and why we do it to which the apostle is pointing here. He advises: "Flee from idolatry". Many who would not think of having friends who were practising Satanists do not draw the line of separation with anything like the required firmness. Separation is "from sin unto God". As D.L. Moody said, "Sin is anything that comes between you and God", and this means that even ordinary pursuits can push God into second place. Hence Paul's plea, "Do ALL to the glory of God".

Sunday, August 19th — 1 Corinthians 11:2-16

"Any woman who (publicly) prays or prophesies (teaches, refutes, reproves, admonishes or comforts) when she is bareheaded dishonours her head (her husband); it is the same as (if her head were) shaved." (v.5, Amp. N.T.).

BOOK REVIEWS

Tell it to Jesus, by Elspeth M. Stephenson. Published by Scripture Union, price 40p, postage and packing 7p extra.

HERE is a little book that may be of value to parents, Sunday school and day school teachers. Tell it to Jesus gives short prayers for the 5–8 year olds on twenty-four subjects including, "My home", "Things I like", and "I'm sorry, God". There are illustrations suitable for children throughout the book depicting each subject. Some children will be able to read the prayers by themselves.

"Ascension and Heaven" is the best subject dealt with, although most of the prayers are secular with no connection with positive Scriptural values, for example, the section entitled "When someone's not well" should have a prayer asking for God to heal. Nevertheless the book contains basic ingredients for introducing children to a healthy prayer life.

I commend this book to parents and those who are interested in the spiritual welfare of this age group.

David E. Tattersall

"Have you read This?", by Joyce Chaplin. Published by C.P.A.S. Publications, price 40p, postage and packing 7p extra.

I DOUBT whether many people will bother to spend 40p – which sounds dear when you say eight shillings – on thirty two pages plus some leaflet samples about discrimination in the distribution of literature. But a lot of people ought to!

The image of Evangelicals as mindless cranks with one pet theory about God has been built up as much by trashy tracts as by anything else I could name. By trashy I don't mean cheap. Some are quite expensive and arty, but they are still trashy.

Joyce Chaplin says that everybody is different and needs a different piece of literature. One man's Sun is another man's Express hate. She says it with proof and from experience and as a writer out to help us all. I'm most grateful.

A Time to Seek, by Lee Fisher. Published by Lakeland, price 45p, postage and packing 7p extra.

THIS great little book of just 125 pages is packed with the kind of help and guidelines that young people so desperately need today. The all-important matters of love, the new morality, honesty, involvement, sin, suffering, God, the Trinity, conversion, the hereafter, and what life is all about, are dealt with in such a way that, not only will attention be retained throughout the book, but the thinking of young people will be directed to the very practical logic of the Christian life.

Even more importantly it will challenge every reader to an act of commitment to Christ for the chapter on conversion is straight down the line. It can profitably be put into the hands of unconverted young folk.

Lee Fisher is personal assistant to Dr. Billy Graham and is an undoubted specialist in youth work. He understands young people and in this book he sets out to help them to understand themselves. Because he is an American, some of his illustrations and phrases have their own American flavour, nevertheless, I not only enjoyed reading this book, but was so impressed by its message and presentation, that I now hasten to pass it on to my daughters Glenys and Rhiannon. Be sure to do the same for your youngsters.

Human Like Us, by Terence Kelshaw. Published by Scripture Union, price 40p, postage and packing 6p extra.

THIS book was written with the intention of providing subjects for discussions, especially for groups meeting in homes as well as in church. How well the author succeeds! The book contains forty-three discussion outlines on Bible characters and is divided into four main sections. The first contains eleven outlines on well-known personalities from the Old Testament. The second has ten outlines on the Apostle Peter. The third has twelve outlines on the Apostle Paul, and the final section has ten on lesser-known men (what? No women!) from the New Testament. Each outline is divided into an information point, discussion point and think point. The discussion point section poses a number of questions which are calculated to get to the heart of the subject matter. I was pleased to note that difficult subjects were not avoided, viz. "The Keys of the Kingdom" supposedly given to Peter and "The great Controversy" between Paul and Peter.

Every group leader will find this book an excellent investment and an essential part of his equipment.

Travelling Man, by Dave Foster. Published by Word Books, price 50p, postage and packing 7p extra.

DAVE Foster is an evangelist now working with Eurovangelism. His ministry has involved him in extensive travelling, and his book centres around these travels. It consists mainly of travel anecdotes. These are interesting and often amusing, but I found myself looking in vain for something more substantial. There is not much substance to the book and no clear objective. The anecdotes are too superficial to rank as autobiography and we learn little of the author's real ministry. Travelling Man is none the less very readable. The style is easy and friendly and Dave Foster's dedication to preaching Christ emerges clearly. The book is entertaining light reading and the sense of commitment is its best point.

Puritans and Calvinism by Peter Toon. Published by Reiner Books. Price £1.20, postage and packing 10p extra.

THIS book is one of quite a few from the pen of Peter Toon of Edgehill College of Education. Some of the titles reveal that the writer is at home in this field of investigation.

In the Preface to this book he gives his reason for producing it. The first four chapters have the laity and the busy cleric in view, while the last two chapters cater for the reader who is really prepared to fathom the history of Calvinist theology. Here is a book well documented and ably supported by references from a very wide field of research.

Seeking to explain what a Puritan was, he reveals that, among other characteristics, they were committed to Reformed theology, but there were variations of theological emphasis. Some preached a limited atonement, while others favoured general redemption. Peter Toon avers (page 100): "Biblical doctrine is not capable of being reduced into any finally neat and fully tidy system since it contains seemingly irreconcilable elements – e.g. predestination and free-will".

The final chapter, "Calvinists in Dispute" makes interesting, if sad, reading. Controversy ripened in the latter part of the seventeenth century and so often those in debate could not always define the finer points in the contention, yet it was on these issues that communions were divided. We are bound to agree with the author when he suggests, "Dialogue instead of controversy amongst those who claimed to be brethren in Christ could have bequeathed a very different theological ethos to Non-conformity of the eighteenth century."

Here is a book well written and worth the money.

THE Inside Room is a book for those spare minutes of quiet, thoughtful reading. You will enjoy it because it is intensely practical and it is written with a deep understanding of the human heart born out of experience. You will read about those fears and worries which so often invade our souls. It will also tell you about those personal fears which are locked in the deepest depths of one's own heart, but from which there is glorious, blessed release. Instead of doubt, you may know faith; instead of despair, hope; instead of darkness, light; instead of sadness, joy. As you read the chapters you might feel that this is a book about yourself. If you are prepared to face up to yourself, its counsel will direct you to new heights of Christian experience and joy.

Strong Son of God, by Frank Colquhoun. Published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott Ltd., price 45p, postage and packing 4p extra.

STRONG Son of God, by Frank Colquhoun, a Canon of Norwich Cathedral, is a collection of instructive, devotional readings in Mark's Gospel. On the outside cover is a picture symbolising the four Gospels – the eagle, the lion, the ox and the man, the one dealt with being emphasised. Each of the ninety-one readings has an apt, well-chosen title and is followed by a fitting comment. On one page, dealing with what might be considered to be the key chapter of Mark, you will find the words: "The power of Christ is displayed in the face of three terrible enemies – devils, disease and death". This splendid book ends with the resurrection and the great commission to Christ's followers.

THE FAMILY ALTAR–from page 19

WHY should the simple act of covering the female head during worship cause so much controversy? A woman's hair is her glory; thus, when an eastern woman had committed adultery, or disgraced her husband in some other way, he would shave her head as a public proof of his personal displeasure. He would "shame" her. We are told that a woman's hair is given as a covering, but we cannot presume that this is the covering required before God, for our key verse indicates that "bareheaded" is "the same as if. . . shaved", though it is not the same. At worship One alone should receive all the glory, i.e. God. It is an act of humble worship to cover one's prize possession, glorious hair in the case of the woman, while the upright stance of the male bows before a greater power, thus showing his humble approach to God. Some hats are more glorious than the heads that they sit upon and one cannot help but ask whether women are pandering to pride? In Denmark, a simple head-scarf is worn and removed after the service, thus the simple symbol of subjection is beautifully portrayed.

THERE never was a day when so many words were spoken, not only because the world population is greater than ever before, but also because communication (that "in" word!) has become so widespread. What once were thought of as remote fastnesses have been invaded by cheap transistor radios. Some tribes of the world have been overtaken by radio and even by television before they have sanitation, running water or even rudimentary housing by Western standards!

How prodigal our generation is with words! It is said that some music hall comedians used to trot round with the same old little group of sketches and jokes for year upon year. One exposure on television is often enough nowadays to kill stone dead a whole ingenious script, not to mention the insatiable appetite of the box for so-called comedy. No wonder the standards of TV material are goind down; there has to be so much of it.

Superficial natter is given an outrageous proportion of air time. An announcement is to be made in Parliament so out has to come some captive B.B.C. "spokesman" or I.T.V. "political correspondent" or some such to pontificate on what is going to be said, why, by whom, in what tones, during how many drinks of water, despite what the other lot said in the 1930s. . . and so on ad nauseam. When the pronouncement is made it often goes off like a damp squib because we have endured a whole wearing wet bonfire of prediction as to what was going to be said!

All this went through my mind as I read 1 Peter 4:11: "If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God: if any many minister, let him do it as of the ability which God giveth". What a programme and what a challenge there are in this statement!

I once spoke at a sisterhood. I hope I preached Bible truth. To my consternation I had to endure about fifteen minutes by the lady chairman, who unravelled my address and reknitted it. I could not recognise it as the same "garment" or even that it came from the same "wool". By the time the worthy lady got through she had a few sleeping partners. I was nearly "off" myself!

To be serious, though, doesn't it make you think? We desire and proclaim that our ministry is in the name of and for the sake of the Lord and Master whom we serve.

Don't we need to wait upon our ministry!

Church Reports

BRECON Pastor: G.H. Neale

WE thank God for His continuing blessing on the work here. For our Sunday school anniversary, the Church was packed to witness an excellent programme of items.

During May the young people conducted the evening service and demonstrated that young people can find satisfaction in Christ. Also in May we held a baptismal service when our Pastor baptised five young people. The preacher was Pastor J.H. Dick, who ministered the word of God to a congregation of over 160 people.

June was the start of something new when we held the first of our Pentecostal rallies when Pastor G.J. Feasey was the preacher. We thank the Lord for the presence of the Holy Spirit.

The Sunday school held its annual outing when we were able to fill two coaches with children and their parents.

Indeed we can say, "God is good"!

Pastor G. H. Neale with baptismal candidates

CLACTON-ON-SEA Pastor: P.K.G. Rose

A LARGE congregation assembled in our Clacton Church to pay tribute and to say farewell to Pastor and Mrs. H. Burton-Haynes. We praise and thank God, for their untiring spiritual leadership during the twelve years of ministry here. Our prayers are that God will richly bless them in their new home in their retirement years. The Secretary-General, Pastor J.T. Bradley, was the preacher. His ministry brought a real blessing upon the service. After Pastor Bradley's message, the Church Secretary, Mr. C.G. Armstrong, gave tributes on behalf of the Church to Pastor and Mrs. Burton-Haynes and then he introduced the sectional leaders who presented their gifts. The Sisterhood presented to Mrs. Burton-Haynes an electric food mixer. The Crusaders and Sunday school gave cheques and five year old Mary Howard presented Mrs. Burton-Haynes with a posy of fresias. The Church Treasurer, Mr. P. Emmerson, presented on behalf of the Church a four-piece stereogram, wishing them many hours of happiness in their retirement. This service was followed by Communion, when Pastor Burton-Haynes gave his farewell message, and thanks from his wife and himself to the people of Clacton for their support and love.

Almost two weeks later, the induction service of our new Pastor was held. A big welcome was extended to Pastor P.K.G. Rose and Mrs. Rose. Their two young daughters who could just see over the pulpit were also warmly received by the congregation. Pastor D.W. Anthony, District Superintendent, convened the service, and Pastor W.R. West gave a stirring message. Piano and other musical items were rendered by a party from Rayleigh Church.

The Church Secretary welcomed Pastor and Mrs. Rose and family, wishing them Gods blessing on their pastorate. After the service tea and refreshments were supplied, when the congregation enjoyed fellowship with their new leaders.

C.G. ARMSTRONG

SHEFFIELD Pastor: A. Brooks

SATURDAY, June 30th, saw the beginning of a new era in the life of the Sheffield Church with the induction of Pastor and Mrs. A. Brooks. The service was convened by Pastor P. Smith, the District Superintendent.

On behalf of the Church, the Secretary, Mr. F. Gregory, welcomed the new Minister and his wife. He told them that they were returning home, as they were both brought up in Rotherham, only five miles from Sheffield. A telegram from our previous ministers, Pastor and Mrs. A.V. Gorton was read.

Pastor G.H. Wallace gave a very challenging message and spoke of the Church's responsibility toward the new Minister and the necessity to give him, among other things, love, liberty and praise. He is to be highly esteemed for the Lord's sake.

Pastor Brooks, in reply, said that he felt it was really a move of God; he had such peace of mind. There was a glorious sense of oneness; he really did feel at home. Mrs. Brooks said that it was in Sheffield that she had first dedicated her life to the Lord and that He had brought her back to the beginning.

The Sunday services were a real source of blessing.

There was such a sense of God's presence around the Lord's Table and the Lord crowned the day by bringing a soul to Himself.

YORK

FAREWELL services are always sad occasions and the one at York for Pastor and Mrs. A. Brooks was no exception. After some ninety people had sat down to tea, tributes were paid to the love and patience shown by our Pastor and his wife during the five and a half years that they have been with us.

We will remember the wonderful baptismal services during the early part of his ministry, when we had three such services in a very short time and some fifty people were baptised in water. Great appreciation of Pastor Brook's ministry in prayer was expressed. His faith and trust in God were always evident as one listened to him. I liked to hear him exclaim that he got excited with the love and goodness of God. One of his favourite choruses, especially when he is with the children, is, "The Love of Jesus is so wonderful".

During the meeting some slides were shown of some of the events that had taken place in York during Pastor Brook's time, such as weddings, dedications and baptismal services. Mr. Atkins made a presentation to the Pastor on behalf of the members and Mrs. Atkins presented Mrs. Brooks with a bouquet of flowers.

Our loss is Sheffield's gain and we know that they will greatly benefit from the ministry of our brother and sister as they take up their work for the Lord there.

"Sing as we go - keep singing"

OUR hymnbook, Redemption Hymnal, is one of the finest and best. It is used and appreciated far beyond the circle of our own Elim Fellowship.The writer, an Elim pastor, makes a plea for a wider use of it in our worship and witness.

Talking on this particular point with a senior minister, much-travelled among our churches, he remarked kindly, but caustically (and maybe it was just a little over-drawn) about "the usual forty-two hymns" which are sung. Of eight hundred this was the total range of some!

There are hundreds of grand hymns of worship and praise which one rarely hears. Is it possible that there is a church where they are all known? Strangely, too, distinctively Pentecostal hymns, written by brethren known and beloved among us, seem, in particular, to be passed over. One forbears to enumerate them. This is a great loss.

The weakness seems to lie with pastors and leaders. Where they have musical knowledge, taste, and perception, then the assembly is blessed indeed, but if, as is the case with so many, knowledge in this field is small and taste limited, then the congregation suffers the deprivation accordingly.

In other demoninations the musical side is often in the care of the organist or choir-master. This can be of great benefit. Where they exist, church choirs and singing bands could be used to introduce fresh hymns to the congregations, and weeknight meetings are the best time for this.

I suppose that the two-year College training-time is all too brief a period in which to try to teach our students the foundations of theology, but one could hope that, somewhere in the curriculum, time is found for a comprehensive "sweep" of our Hymnal.

If your pastor needs a prod on this line, give it to him! He may afterwards be very grateful to you. The exercise will do him, and you, good; the worship will be deepened and extended, and the preached Word, without a doubt, enriched.

In Defence of the Faith

7. A trio of bad examples

by F. J. Slemming

"Woe unto them! For they have gone in the way of Cain and ran greedily after the error of Balaam for reward, and perished in the gainsaying of Korah" (Jude v.11).

THIS tremendous verse is the very heart of this one-chapter Book. Every phrase demands careful attention. Every word vibrates with interest. Here it stands between illustrations of apostasy as seen in the supernatural world and as seen in the natural world. Three characters are paraded before us: a son of the soil, Cain; a prophet, Balaam, and a prince in Israel, Korah.

Apostasy attacks and affects all kinds of people, so we are shown just how it affected peoples, princes and prophets. Someone has suggested that we have a sequence of thought in the three examples: the choice of a wrong way, then running riotously down that same wrong way, and then, at its terminus, finding final perishing.

Take notice of this divine commentary on the error and the peril and the concluding inevitable darkness that follows a turning away from the truth of John 14:6, where Jesus plainly states, "I am the way, the truth and the life." How utterly foolish it is to refuse the reign of Jesus Christ over the life and deliberately and definitely to choose the way of Cain, to accept the error of Balaam, and to find the perishing of Korah rather than to experience and to enjoy the life of Christ. Apostasy has been well summed up as a way, a wandering and a rebellion.

The Way of Cain

Genesis 4 gives the information we need about this man and his way. Cain brought a sacrifice to God, consisting of the fruits of the earth, the cursed ground. Abel brought a sacrifice to God: a lamb of the flock. Both Cain and Abel had been taught that God could only be approached through the blood of an innocent substitute, as made clear in Hebrews 11:4, for Abel brought his sacrifice "by faith", that is by believing what God had said. Cain brought God something other. No matter what it was, or how pleasing it may appear beside a slain lamb, it was displeasing to God. Whatever sets aside the Word and the teaching of God, displeases Him. This is the first step in the way of Cain.

To set aside the shed blood of Jesus Christ the Lamb of God and to believe and propagate some other message contrary to the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, is to walk in the way of Cain. It is not necessary to murder as did Cain. One need not stain one's hand with a brother's blood. To spurn God's salvation through the shed blood of His dear Son and to teach others that same error by word or by example is to walk in the way of Cain and to be guilty in the sight of God of their blood. One can never over-quote the terrific words of Ezekiel 3:18; "When I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die; and thou givest him not warning, nor speakest to warn the wicked from his wicked way, to save his life; the same wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand."

How solemn and serious this is! Jude, speaking of this, says that "they went away", literally, "in the wrong path." It means, "to pass from one place to another, to depart." It is the same term used by our Lord in Matthew 25:41: "Depart from Me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels."

In the Sermon on the Mount the Preacher, the Lord Jesus Christ, could not have used plainer words, not capable of two interpretations, when He spoke of two ways, two gates, and two destinies always dividing mankind. Jude speaks of those who, of their own free will and choice, depart from the true way and spurn their opportunities. They will one day hear the tremendous words from the lips of the Christ whom they have refused: "Depart from Me. . . for ever".

The Error of Balaam

Take a close look at the words that are used to introduce this particular character: "ran greedily after the error of Balaam for reward." The A.S.V. translates it: "riotously they live before they perish". The R.V. says: "ran riotously". The original is even more astounding and strong: "They have been poured forth", the picture of a river in full flood, rushing along in unabated fury. When a man puts aside the restraints of God, there follows such a flood-tide of error and evil.

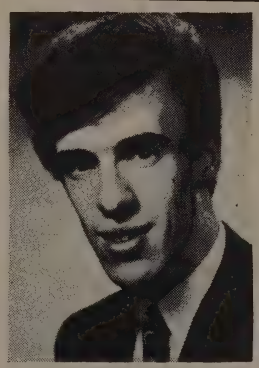
Balaam was greedy for gold. Israel, after her years of wilderness wanderings, was about to enter the promised land. Moab and Midian, the idolatrous nations, were in great fear of her and desired someone to curse her, and they wished Balaam to give them his services for this purpose.

Balaam made a great show of seeking the guidance of God and God plainly and definitely answered: "Thou shalt not go with them; and thou shalt not curse the people: for they are blessed." (Numbers 22:12). The answer should have satisfied anyone, but Balaam did not want such an answer. He went to God about it the second time and God responded: "Alright, you want to go, then go, but you will not be allowed to curse this people, You will utter only blessings upon Israel". Read Deuteronomy 23:4,5, a wonderful word, but for Balaam it meant that he was deprived of the rich reward that Moab would have thrust upon him for services rendered.

As a result the covetous heart of Balaam conceived a sinister, sordid, evil way. He sold his foul brain-child to Balak. "Behold, these [women of Midian] caused the children of Israel, through the counsel of Balaam, to commit trespass against the Lord in the matter of Peor, and there was a plague among the congregation of the Lord." (Numbers 31: 16). "The doctrine of Balaam, who taught Balak to cast a stumbling-block before the children of Israel, to eat things sacrificed to idols and to commit fornication." (Revelation 2:14). Is it hard to understand that the anger of the Lord was kindled against Israel as Numbers 25 informs us? Balaam followed the way of Cain, then ran riotously and greedily, and he perished miserably.

The error of Balaam for reward is the error of all apostates. They turn away from spiritual riches to seek temporal gain, lusting for the pleasure of sin for a season, desiring the treasures of Egypt whatever the price demanded. Of more than one can it be said that they have forsaken God, having loved this present world.

The Rebellion of Korah



Korah, a Levite, was a cousin to Moses. A rebellion against Moses and Aaron, led by Korah, Dothan and Abiram, ended with the deaths of the three leaders and of a host of others who were involved with them. Numbers 16:31-33 makes dramatic reading.

What kind of sin called forth such judgment and death? Korah had rejected God's appointed mediator; he spoke evil of God's chosen, God's appointed dignitaries. In this rebellion, he showed himself to be in rebellion against God. It pictures the rejection of Jesus Christ, the one and only Mediator between God and man. Korah and all his associates came under the judgment of the God against whom they had shaken their puny fists. The ground opened beneath their feet and they went down into the pit, a picture of the judgment that will overtake all who rebel against God and who reject Jesus Christ and God's so great salvation.

Korah, a mere man, dared to presume that he could approach the holy God without the required mediator. There is no way to God save by Him who said, "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by Me.".

The HAMMOND ORGAN

- Requires the minimum of maintenance and the tone wheel generator cannot go out of tune.
- Remains unaffected by changes in temperature and humidity.
- Provides extreme variety of tones with the simplest method of selection.
- Has a specification to satisfy the accomplished organist.
- Can be transported for trouble-free use on any location.
- Represents a lifetime investment with a negligible depreciation factor.

The Hammond Organ has found an important place in the Pentecostal church with its unique tonal quality. The very nature of the harmonic tone registration allows the instrument to be played in direct keeping with the service without distracting from it.
We are therefore convinced that a Hammond can make an essential contribution which renders it a sound investment in the Lord's work, and to this end Sharon Music welcome your consultation as to the most suitable model for your church.
With experience gained from many church installations throughout the country we feel confident to select an instrument certain to meet your requirements.
Our showroom stock of ORGANS and PIANOS includes the entire range of Hammond Organs, consisting of 18 different models from £265 to £5,500. Special financial arrangements are available to your church and we shall be happy to supply further details relating to any specific model on request.

The Men behind the Messag

"Redemption Tidings"

AARON A. LINFORD was converted in the Salvation Army at the age of nine, came into Pentecost in 1924, entered the ministry in 1932. Has edited REDEMPTIO TIDINGS for sixteen years and has been a member of the Executive Council of Assemblies of God for this same time. Has served on the Board of Governors and Court of Appeal and was a Tutor at Kenley Bible Colle for twelve years. The author of six books, he served in pastorates at Norwich, Crawcrook, Heywood, Smallth Darlington and Bury before taking up his duties as Edi

In my Lectures on preaching there is a section on Apostolic Homiletics in which I attempt to define the elements of the tremendous ministry of the Early Church leaders. As I studied the subject I was brought face to face with the important fact that it is impossible to discuss apostolic methods apart from apostolic men. The two go together. If we want a return to the mighty preaching of the first witnesses of the Gospel, we must first return to their dedication, their dynamic, their intimate experience of Christ. Behind the apostolic message were apostolic men.

Phillips Brooks in his famous "Lectures on Preaching" defines preaching as truth flowing through personality. You can't have preaching without preachers. The man is important. He is not just a messenger, as a telegraph boy with a telegram, he is his own message. His character can commend his words; on the other hand, his life can silence his lips – a foolish act can cause "the ministry to be blamed." The ascended Christ "gave some apostles; some prophets; some evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers" (Eph. 4:11), that is, He gave men, not merely ministries. The apostles and their helpers were mighty in preaching because they themselves were mighty in God. It will do us good to consider their characters – the men behind the message.

THEY WERE MEN OF TRANSPARENT SINCERITY

There was no deceit in their ministry (2 Cor. 4:2) nor did they adulterate the Word of God by watering down their message (2 Cor. 2:17). They delivered without fear or favour a Gospel which lived up to its promises. Their motives were pure. They had no personal axe to grind. They sought only the glory of God and the salvation of men.

Paul said: "I say the truth in Christ, I lie not, my conscience also bearing me witness in the Holy Ghost" (Rom. 9:1). Apostolic ministry was from conscience to conscience. Persuaded themselves of the truth of the Gospel, they persuaded others; convinced, they brought conviction. They moved their hearers because they themselves were wrought upon by God.

They preached as though God were at their elbow. "We cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard," said Peter to a hostile Sanhedrin. "In the sight of God speak we in Christ," affirmed Paul. These men feared lest they should distort in any way the message they had received of God; they yearned that it might flow through them intact.

THEY WERE MEN WHO APPRECIATED THEIR FELLOW-MINISTERS

The apostles and elders at Jerusalem referred to Barnabas and Paul as "our beloved Barnabas and Paul. Men that have hazarded their lives for the name of our Lord Jesus Christ" (Acts 15:25-26). Peter refers to "our beloved brother Paul" (2 Pet. 3:15) forgetting, in Christian charity, their clash at Antioch, when Paul publicly rebuked him (Gal. 2:11). What an encounter that was – fisherman versus scholar! Peter must have been hurt by the biting words of Paul on that occasion, but no rankling bitterness was left behind. Nor was Paul less ready to forget a quarrel. How kindly he refers to Barnabas in 1 Corinthians 9:6. The contention of Acts 15:39 where they separated in a "paroxysm" of emotion, is consigned to oblivion, and not a single ember of feeling is left to glow in the ashes of memory. And think of Paul's gracious attitude to Apollos. In spite of the fact that many members of the Corinthian Assembly preferred the oratory of Apollos to his own plain speaking, Paul pressed him to visit this factious church. Apollos on his part just as graciously declined. Gentlemen all!

Paul had a favourite term for his companions in the Gospel. They were fellow-workers (sunergoi) – "my co-operators." They were more than mere associates, they were co-workers, fellow-soldiers marching shoulder to shoulder in the fight of faith, companions-in-arms in the great work of saving men.

THEY WERE MEN WHO LOVED TRUTH MORE THAN LIFE

Before angry authorities Peter could say: "We ought to obey God rather than men" (Acts 5:29). And he spoke for them all. The Council was furious at their stubborn refusal to cease preaching about Jesus, and but for the wise restraint of Gamaliel would have done them injury. Soon after this, Stephen was martyred. Thereupon broke out a vicious campaign, led by Saul of Tarsus, to crush the infant church. "I compelled them to blaspheme," says Paul in Acts 26:11. Here the Authorised Version is at fault. The Imperfect Tense implies that he kept on trying but was not successful. The Jerusalem Bible puts it thus: "I often went round the synagogues inflicting penalties, trying in this way to force them to renounce their faith." No pressure could break the spirit of these early believers.

Paul himself, after conversion, was filled with the same loyalty to Christ. At Lystra he was stoned to death by infuriated Jews, to be quickened to new life through prayer. Then, after a brief visit to neighbouring Derbe, "They returned again to Lystra and Iconium." What indomitable courage! Listen to Paul as he chides with them who wanted to restrain him from going to Jerusalem, a visit fraught with peril. "What mean ye to weep and to break mine heart? For I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus" (Acts 21:13). And what a ministry he exercised! "I shunned not to declare unto you all the counsel of God" (Acts 20:27). The word "shun" (hypostello) means "to furl sail". He did not hold back, but sailed right in. His ministry was like the broadside from a man-of-war. When he preached, people wondered what had hit them. But they loved him for it.

The key to the attitude of apostolic men is in Acts 20:24, "But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the Gospel of the grace of God."

THEY WERE MEN WITH A MIGHTY SENSE OF VOCATION

Paul taught that a preacher should be commissioned from Heaven: "How shall they preach except they be sent," he declaims (Rom. 10:15). He himself laboured under a tremendous sense of obligation to bring the Gospel to sinful men. "Necessity is laid upon me," he cries. "I am debtor both to the Greeks and to the Barbarians; both to the wise and to the unwise." Civilised and uncivilised, cultured or illiterate – all had a claim on him. He owed them the Gospel. He was a steward dispensing the grace of God, a custodian of a rich deposit of truth.

Paul lived under perpetual constraint. "The love of Christ has me in its grip," he says. He must preach; he could not help but preach. This feeling of inner compulsion is characteristic of all great workers for God. "My heart overflows with a goodly theme" said the Psalmist (Psalm 45:1. RSV). Jeremiah felt his message "as a burning fire within my bones". "I feel compelled to do so; I would be utterably miserable if I failed to preach it" (1 Cor. 9:16. JBP), said Paul of his preaching of the Gospel. Spurgeon once shocked his students by saying: "Gentlemen, don't preach if you can help it." The true preacher cannot help it. He must – or bust. The saintly Dr. J. Henry Jowett puts it thus: "I love my calling. I have a glowing delight in its services... I have but one passion, and I have lived for it... the absorbing arduous yet glorious work of proclaiming the grace and love of our Lord Jesus Christ" (The Preacher: His life and work, p. 4).

THEY WERE MEN OF UTTER CONSECRATION

Selfless men; men dominated by the love of Christ. They had a passion for God – "the love of God shed abroad in our hearts" (Rom. 5:15) – an all-absorbing, self-effacing devotion. They had a passion for souls that consumed them. "That I might by all means save some," said Paul, who strove to preach the Gospel where Christ was not named (Rom. 15:20). They persistently canvassed for Christ, pressing men to cast their vote for the Son of God. They had a passion for the saints. Paul speaks of "the daily care of all the churches," the yearning anxiety for the well-being of the assemblies founded by his ministry.

My mother had a zither upon which we children played with delight if not tuneful harmony. I loved to pluck the strings and watch them disappear as they vibrated. So with the apostles:

"Love took up the harp of life
And smote on all the chords with might;
Smote the chord of self, that, trembling,
Passed in music out of sight."

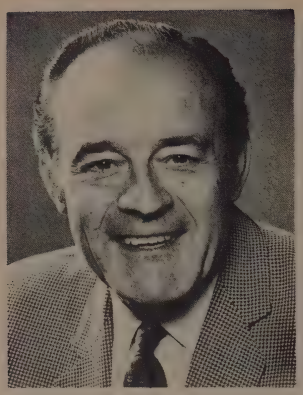
THEY WERE MEN OF THE BOOK

Peter's first sermon is replete with Scripture. He began his Pentecostal ministry with "This is that" and continued throughout to link experience with the written word of prophecy. He later counselled his converts to "be ready always to give and answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you" (1 Pet. 3:15). His own example shows how this should be done – by inspired, intelligent application of the revealed word of God.

The twelve apostles soon requested to be relieved of secular duties that they might devote themselves wholly "to prayer and the ministry of the word" (Acts 6:4). Stephen's defence before the Sanhedrin is a running commentary of Old Testament history. Philip's evangelistic ministry was full of the Word. He led the Ethiopian eunuch to Christ by expounding Isaiah 53.

Paul was a man of the Word. His address at Antioch is a penetrating exposition of old Testament history (Acts 13:16-41). His method of presenting Christ was to reason out of the Scriptures; to expound the Christ of Old Testament prophecy and then demonstrate that the Jesus of history is the Christ of prediction. Even when he testified of his personal experience of salvation, his final appeal was to the Scriptures: "King Agrippa, believest thou the prophets? I know that thou believest." God's word was greater than his own testimony.

In the great conference of churches in Acts 15, president James gave clear guidance from the Scriptures, which was regarded as the last word, the final court of appeal. "To this agree the words of the prophets," he said. That ministry alone is great that harmonises with holy writ.



THEY WERE MEN OF PRAYER

Pentecost was born in prayer (Acts 1:14, 24) and nourished in the same atmosphere (Acts 3:1, 4:24, 6:4). The apostles prayed for power, prayed over their preaching, prayed when faced with danger and death, prayed in crisis and trouble. They prayed when they met, they prayed when they separated. Some of their richest experiences came to them in prayer: miracles were vouchsafed to them, visions were granted to them. Prayer opened Heaven. They lived and ministered in an aura of prayer.

THEY WERE MEN WHO KNEW THE LEADING OF THE SPIRIT

Philip, at the Spirit's command, left revival blessing to meet a needy soul on the desert highway. He was rewarded with a "rapture" – the Spirit of the Lord caught him away (Acts 8:29, 39). Peter, assured by the Spirit's voice, visited the Gentile household of Cornelius with outstanding results. His sole defence when questioned was, "The Spirit bade me go" (Acts 10:19, 20; 11:12). The voice of the Spirit launched a successful missionary enterprise at Antioch (Acts 13:2); a sense of Holy Ghost direction concluded the church council at Jerusalem (Acts 15:28). "It seemed good to the Holy Ghost and to us." What a satisfying statement to have in the conference minutes!

The Communicators sans Five Pounds

by George Canty

GAVIN Reid wrote the most depressing book I've ever read: The Gagging of God. Even the blurb is frightening —

> "Unless Christians can find ways of saying things to modern non-community man then not only is modern man in a desperate plight, and not only is the Church facing extinction, but Almighty God Himself is gagged".

The sinister word here is "modern non-community man".

In the 'twenties, the Jeffreys brothers came to our City and we all knew. It was not by a miracle, nor by the revelation of the Spirit, nor by the advertising, nor even by the healings. We always knew whatever went on, simply because it went around the community by ordinary conversation. Today it is different - there is no community. There were families in those days. Not micro-families — Dad and Mum feeding and sleeping two youngsters being brought up at school — but grandads and grandmas, uncles, cousins, married relations and their families all together in the same street. Doors were never locked day or night and neighbours popped in and out continually. There being no radio, and few morning paper readers, people had time to mingle and gossip. This was the perfect communicative society.

Today, the Planned Economy, serving the great god Industry, which demands the sacrifice of a mobile population, has vanquished the Christian family ideal. Assisted by town-planned housing and the theories of humanistic sociologists, "community-man" has become an extinct species.

One must hereafter communicate through the mass media, or one does not communicate at all. Nothing impinges on the minds of the people unless it is released by broadcasting or the Daily Mirror. They are brain-washed by the omission of any subject or emphasis by Fleet Street or television. Each small, insular circle of people talks only newspaper or on-the-air stuff, and nothing else. If it isn't on tv it isn't worth talking about.

A minority, such as Elim, is treated facetiously, a curiosity, providing light relief in the news. Only when we can speak directly to the public ourselves through the mass media can we be said to begin communicating.

So, Elim formed its Radio and Film Committee to develop its chances of communication via the media. Unfortunately, hardened theories of the authorities as to what constitutes good broadcasting - theories with which I, for one, often disagree - rather limit the value of many opportunities. Openings do exist, however, an and, for the size of our movement, Elim has grabbed a lion's share of them.

The local B.B.C. radio outlets represent our most frequent resort, though not every station manager is inclined to let us in. Some Elim men have leaped at the opportunity, or rather they were men leaping when the opportunity arrived and they were ready to catch it.

For instance, Ron Williams jumped in as soon as Radio Medway began and offered to organise its religious programmes. His help was welcomed and he can be heard locally around Chatham, Kent, on VHF 97 and Medium Wave 290m, twice every Sunday with "Songs for Everyone", and with different services of "Thought for the Day", broadcast church services, magazine programmes. In December he goes on the air live to answer written and telephone questions on Christianity. The impact of it all is obviously tremendous.

Fred Hodge, pastor of The Lanes Elim Church at Brighton, produced radio programmes for the European Evangelistic Society for Radio IBRA and Monte Carlo for fifteen years. He has used RadioBrightonto tell the history of his Church and has produced a pilot music and talk programme for B.B.C. Radio Brighton, as well as sitting in on "Quest" another B.B.C. programme.

Adrian Hawkes, who went to Grangetown to nurse a tiny Church and bring it into the Elim family, has gone a long way into broadcasting, partly due to his leading a B.B.C. producer to Christ. I have at the moment a thirty-minute tape of a magazine broadcast which he and the producer created, of the highest professional standards and compelling quality. Each week this programme goes out in an area where the only radio that can be heard properly is Radio Teesside.

In Adrian Hawkes's case, the "rule book has been thrown out of the window". Direct approaches to the communication of the gospel have flown in the face of normal assumptions and produced effects different from professional predictions. This has all happened within twelve months and now the chance is opening to this Elim pastor for television work. Last year he was able to get Pastor Alex Tee worked in for three epilogues and one interview, and contacts are improving.

Radio Leeds is putting out many good programmes, and a local church committee includes Pastor J.E. Moore, whose experience has been invaluable to Elim through his work on our own Radio Committee. Leeds is a city of half a million and has heard interviews with Christians like Colin Cowdrey, Professor Fairbairn, Dennis Healey, M.P., Richard Wurmbrand, and Eric Hutchings, as well as regular broadcasts for children, and series on every topic that arises, such as adoption, mental health, students, race relations, treatment of the offender and so on, all with a pertinent gospel commentary.

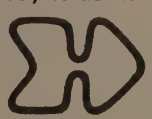
Ron Jones of Bristol has recently developed his share of work on Radio Bristol and now does a weekly programme. The manager of this Station took part in the Elim Radio Seminar at the Bristol City Temple. In this great City, as in Leeds, where we have only one Elim Church, the regular sound of an Elim voice on radio heard by thousands is equivalent to many gospel meetings.

Every district is not endowed with its own B.B.C. Radio, but commercial radio is on the way, and this could vastly expand Elim's entire vision. Elim people have often sung and testified on various B.B.C. stations, both radio and television, quite apart from those I have named. Ray Hunston of Cardiff has appeared in discussion panels on Welsh television. I have done a painter-preacher item on the same medium, several national radio items, such as on "The World at One", and Elim's first fully charismatic service on a Sunday morning across the entire nation and Europe.

Elim men can do it. We have been labouring for years to get across on the wavelength of the common man. I recorded a series recently on Radio Birmingham for instance, and the producer commented on the difference in approach to the normal religious "turgidity" to use his own expression. Radio is almost our natural field, musically, and verbally. Elim youth are heard every week from Graham Street on this station, for example.

Few have provided so much for broadcasting as Elim's former Musical Director, Douglas B. Gray, in any field. The London Crusader Choir has been heard countless times both in named programmes and in music behind other programmes. It is a worthy achievement of the highest merit.

Broadcasts from the Cardiff City Temple have been notable. When the B.B.C. televised "Songs of Praise", reactions echoed in further programmes, and a producer on commercial television told me that it was "the kind of thing that's always been wanted". I personally heard it praised wherever I went. It was pure Elim style.



So far as I know, the Elim Radio Committee is the only one still without any funds. We can help nobody financially nor can we commission anybody for any particular job of broadcasting. We can teach, and guide, and inspire, but the amazing fact is that our men are broadcasting at their own expense.

If anybody gave us any money we would help young ministers who otherwise pay their own costs of radio work out of their own meagre household budgets. Radio is for the enthusiastic, the sacrificing and the enterprising. Elim has a high proportion of such men. An American told me that Elim has the most resourceful men he has ever met in his daily and extensive meetings with organisations of every kind. Good — we wouldn't be on the air otherwise!

Only national broadcasts normally receive payment. Local radio stations are understaffed and the staff work all hours with limited studio space. They are often glad of help if it is capable help. They are not often interested in religion. They are only interested in one subject - broadcasting. If quality broadcasting is offered them on any subject - including the gospel - they want it.

Elim is in the communications business - that's our job given us by Christ.

Here's one chance today to do it.

Gifts - large and small please - to

A Life spared

1 Samuel 24:3-10

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

KING Saul wanted to be rid of David. He set off with his vast army of soldiers to find and to kill him. After searching the hot, dusty wilderness for some time, Saul took refreshment in a cave on the hillside. When he had eaten, Saul lay back against the wall of the cave. He intended to have just forty winks before resuming his search for David, but God caused a deep sleep to fall on him.

Some of David's followers ran to David and pointed in the direction of the cave. "Saul is fast asleep in there," they cried. "Now is your chance, David, to creep up on him and kill him."

"We will go to the cave," David told them, "but not to kill."

When he arrived at the cave, David went inside, cut off a piece of Saul's robe, and, together, with his men, made his way to the other side of the valley. Once there, he called Saul.

Saul awoke, yawned and rubbed his eyes. He could not believe what he saw.

"How did you get past me?" he cried. "I did not hear you! You could have killed me in my sleep!"

"Yes, I could have killed you," David agreed, "but I spared your life." David held out the piece of robe.

Saul gazed in astonishment. His heart filled with shame. "You have indeed been merciful to me, David," he cried. "I do not deserve this after the way in which I have treated you!"

So that our lives might be spared, God sent His only Son, the Lord Jesus, to die on Calvary. We do not deserve God's wonderful grace or His tender mercy, but God has promised to spare our lives the moment we make His Son, Jesus, welcome in our hearts.

BOOK REVIEWS

Signs Following, by W.F.P. Burton. Published by Coverdale House Publishers Ltd., Price 30p, postage and packing 4p extra.

THE Christian who dares to believe God will experience the "signs following" spoken of in Mark 16. W.F.P. Burton's book stimulates and creates faith as he recounts his experiences of the miraculous interventions of God. In salvation, healing, spiritual revelation, demon deliverance, snake encounters, attempts at poisoning, and in all facets of liberation from the effects of sin, faith is effectual.

Mr. Burton reminds us of healings which we have witnessed but scarcely mention lest we be accused of living in the past. God's own Word is full of pointers to the past, however, and why should not the healings of the last decade be retold for His Glory?

Signs Following will create a fresh hunger in the heart for new power and the faith produced will spur the reader to believe for a demonstration of the old promise, "In My name they shall. . .".

Escape from Witchcraft, by Roberta Blankenship. Published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott Ltd., price 50p, postage and packing 4p extra.

IF anyone should doubt the possibility of young people being involved in witchcraft or spiritualism, then this book should help to dispel those doubts. Against the background of an unhappy home, Roberta Blankenship found that "Witchcraft is not a thing of the past", that "Satan is not dead", but she also discovered the tremendous power of a living Christ which was able to set her free from Satan's domain. Here is a book that should help to discourage young and old from being involved or even curious about spiritism and witchcraft, a handy book to give to the unconverted who are interested or involved in these things.

A. J. Downes

Speaking Anonymously, by Harry Foster. Published by Victory Press, price 50p, postage and packing 6p extra.

HERE are ten portraits of thirty-four Bible characters. They make interesting, profitable reading. The first chapter on "Home Maker" is a gem, an indication of good things to follow. Each character is given a name which identifies the character, such as "Backward Look", "Forgetful Friend", "Royal Guardian", and thirty others. The reader will benefit from the thought and careful study that the author has put into this easy-to-read book and may perhaps pause at times to compare the Bible narrative as certain incidents are brought to one's notice which quite likely had not been realised before. Who, for example, thought of "Sturdy Comrade" commencing the Christian life with the first night in prison? Many will be blessed through reading these excellent portraits.

The Spirit-filled Church, by John Lancaster. Published by Grenehurst Press, price 45p, postage and packing 7p extra.

IT has been a pleasure to review this book from the pen of a colleague, Pastor John Lancaster, produced for this year of his Presidential Office. He is to be congratulated, not only in his appointment to such a worthy office, but in his production of this helpful book.

The purpose behind the book is so simply stated in the Introduction, i.e., to relate the teaching of the New Testament to our own situation. This is no idle statement, for in the ten chapters this is done.

The ten chapters are divided between doctrine, membership, fellowship, ministry, worship, outreach and continuance, priority being given to the matter of doctrine. The first four chapters on doctrine are basal to the book and are choice in their contents. As the writer states: "This emphasis on doctrine was one of the stablishing factors which steadied the infant Church in those exciting days." The need for balance is very rightly stressed.

Following the needed concentration on doctrine, the writer turns to church membership with one of his very pithy statements: "The whole New Testament Christianity is not mere diction but action."

Many more quotes could be given from succeeding chapters, equally well written, but after all this is only a review, not a reprint. I sincerely wish that you will add this inexpensive volume to your library. I have been helped and blessed by its contents.

Elijah and the Secret of his power, by F.B. Meyer. Published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott Publications Ltd., price 45p, postage and packing 6p extra.

MANY Christians are content to live sub-standard lives instead of living in the realm of the Spirit. They rely on their own feelings instead of being dependent on God. Knowing defeat continually, confused, bewildered, not knowing God's will for their lives – this book is a must for such friends. It will challenge, inspire, increase your faith and give you a desire to want to know God in a greater way.

The writer reveals Elijah in his moments of glory and also in the depths of despair. "Elijah was a man subject to like passions as we are", but he prayed! The men who stand straightest in the presence of sin bow lowest in the presence of God.

Elijah had to depend on God daily. He had to learn the secret of obedience, dedication, separation, and consecration. You can prove for yourself that "God's promises are the signed cheque, made payable to order, which we must endorse and present for payment".

One chapter deals with Obadiah (Ahab's governor) and Elijah, a contrast between a man on fire for God and a nominal believer.

What was the secret of Elijah's power? The answer is found in the last chapter on page 155, first paragraph, lines 11-13.

PRAYER AND PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

THE disciples of Jesus had forsaken all and followed Him. They had been with Him for some time, listening to His teaching and seeing the miracles that He performed. Then He sent them forth to preach and to heal the sick. We are told (Mark 6:30) that they returned and told Jesus of all the things that they had done and taught. In other words, they reported to Him. In this, they set us all an example.

We should tell Jesus when we have been trying to do any service for the Lord. Our service should be the best possible. We should do it with all our might and at the close of each day we should tell Him what we have done or attempted, how we have lived, how we have done our work, what words we have spoken and how we have tried to witness for Him.

We must not forget our failures. Did we yield to temptation? Did we lose our patience? Did we fail to speak a word for Him.?

I am reminded of what happened in one of our churches in London some years ago. One Sunday a missionary visited that Church. Some members volunteered to entertain him for lunch and tea. The missionary was a great success with the three girls and the boy of the family. They were thrilled with the stories that he told of the work among the Chinese people. The boy of about twelve years of age walked with this man of God to Church that evening. Again he heard of what God was doing, but unfortunately no appeal was given at the close of the service. On returning home, the boy said to his father that, if an appeal had been made by the missionary, he would have raised his hand. The moment was lost for ever. The boy grew into manhood, left the Church and as far as I knew never did receive Christ as his Saviour..

Tell Jesus! He is our Lord and as such has every right to hear our reports. Tell Jesus, it will do you good!

Spirit and to "covet earnestly" the greatest Gifts of the Spirit. This is the challenge of Christ. Christians have never arrived, but are ever pressing "toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God". No matter how much we have received by gift or grace, we should have much more to reach after. P.S. Brewster tells of going to the bedroom of Pentecostal pioneer Willie Burton at 7 a.m. to take an early morning cup of tea only to find the aged man of God, fully clothed, on his knees, with an open Bible before him. "I'm looking for something new – a promise to claim, a word to obey," he said – after more than forty years!

Sunday, August 26th 1 Corinthians 14:20-40

"In understanding be men" (v.20).

IT is impossible to cover the whole realm and regulation of spiritual Gifts in brief notes such as these, but I recommend those who wish to understand these things so that all things can be done decently and in Scriptural order to be "men", i.e. mature. When a young man starts out on his training for any calling, he is recommended to read certain books, and advised to consult experienced personnel from whom he can glean truths to transform his innocent, ambitious soul so that he can become one who "will be able to teach others also" (2 Timothy 2:2). I heartily recommend, Concerning Spiritual Gifts by D. Gee, Spiritual Gifts in the Church by W.G. Hathaway and Spiritual Gifts by Aaron Linford.

THE MEN BEHIND THE MESSAGE–from page 9

Paul sensed divine guidance, both restraint and constraint, in his missionary journeys (Acts 16:16,7) and was often helped by prophetic ministry (Acts 20:23, 21:5,11). The ministers of the Early Church often sought guidance from God and responded to each moving of the Holy Spirit. The Early Church was Christ-directed because its ministers were Spirit-controlled.

THEY WERE MEN OF GREAT HUMILITY

Peter and John styled themselves "elders" (1 Pet. 5:1, 2 John 1, 3 John 1), allying themselves with their less gifted brethren as fellow-ministers of God. Peter, remembering his Lord who girded Himself with a towel and washed the disciples' feet, counselled his flock, "Be clothed with humility", a livery he himself fondly wore. Paul claimed that he was "less than the least of all saints" (Eph. 3:8). He only emphasised his God-given authority when he had to. He disliked talking about himself, and called himself a "fool" for so doing. The apostles ever declined to draw attention to themselves that more attention might be directed to their Lord.

THEY WERE ALSO VERY HUMAN

"We also are men of like passions with you," cried Paul to the doting Lycaonians (Acts 14:15). And how true this was! Paul was hasty at times and inclined to be domineering. Peter collapsed under pressure. Barnabas allowed his good nature to cloud his judgement. Apollos was imperious. John Mark was cowardly as a youth, but recovered himself later. Timothy was timid and easily embarrassed. But the faults of these men only serve to make them more commendable to us. If God could use them – human as they were – he can also use us. Their frail flesh made them sensitive to the needs of others and better able to minister the corrective and restoring word of life.

Points for Preachers

by J. Alexander Wright

An Outline "O now I see the cleansing wave"!
1 John 1:7

1. A Cleansing that is Conditional: "If we walk".

2. A Cleansing that brings Communion: "we have fellowship". Clean and unclean cannot cohere. "If thy heart be as my heart, give me thy hand " (John Wesley).

3. A Cleansing that is Continual: "cleanseth" denotes a process. Through the eye-ducts the eyes are continually flushed, preventing blindness. By the circulatory system, the blood continually cleanses the body.

4. A Cleansing that is Complete: "from all sin". "Thou dost my vileness fully cleanse, till spotless all and pure." "I do not think I felt any more sense of guilt than if I had never sinned" (C.G.Finney).

An Illustration Words–Words–Words. . .

I REMEMBER one preacher whose system apparently was to prepare a short discourse and multiply it by three during the process of delivery, utilising for the purpose the abundance of synonyms which marks our language. "If there be anything that obstructs, anything that hinders, if there be anything that opposes, nevertheless let us advance, let us proceed, let us go forward. . .". By this method he easily made a discussion of ten minutes into one of half an hour."

(Acknowledgements to Kenneth Young in Chapel)

We have actually heard this man, and from Elim pulpits! We could wish it were possible for preachers to use the literary device of "ditto" verbally. A friend told me of his friend in New York, who listened to the great English preacher, Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, when he took up his pastorate there, after his years at Westminster Chapel. Dr. Morgan, used to preaching for nearly an hour, found the Americans walking out before he finished his sermon. It made him think. My friend's friend said to him, "Dr. Morgan, I heard you deliver that same address at Westminster Chapel. You then preached for three-quarters of an hour. This morning you took twenty-five minutes and I cannot tell what you left out". He had practised his precis, brethren, and so ought we!

A Quotation "Ho, every one that thirsteth"

"ONE day my soul was awakened by this word of Jesus about the Father's promise of the Spirit to them that ask Him. Was I not athirst for His coming? Was not my soul dry and dusty and fretted with the heat of its own conflicting desires? Then I heard the joyful news, "To them that ask". I could ask – and did. Then came the showers, the life-giving, healing showers! I opened every portion of my being and let it rain all over me. He had come, and at His touch the desert began to blossom as the rose. Things that I had tended to very patiently by my own efforts and had watched die before my eyes in spite of all I could do, now sprang to life in answer to His touch. My inmost being seemed made for just this. This was my life, because it was not my life. Real life had come. All I had to do was to stand out in it and let it rain all over me! It was the gift of God".

39. Jacob builds an Altar (Genesis 33:20)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

WHEN God delivered Isaac from death, Abraham built an altar and called the place "Jehovah-Jireh", "The Lord will provide". After Isaac had been brought out of a time of trouble, he called the place where he dwelt "Rehoboth", "Broad places", and built an altar to the Lord. Jacob built an altar at Luz at the beginning of his journey and renamed the place "El-Bethel", "God of the house of God". He raised another altar after his deliverance from Esau, which he called "El-elohe-Israel", "God, the God of Israel". The erecting of an altar seems to have been an act of thanksgiving and worship, a permanent reminder of the faithfulness of the Lord, especially in times of trouble, and an occasion for the renewing of consecration to the service of the Lord.

This brings a challenge to our lives. For us, there can be only one altar – the cross where Jesus died, an altar erected by the hand of man, but, even more certainly, by the will of God. The Sacrifice was not provided by man, but by God Himself. This is the altar to which we should continually return and where we have a constant reminder of the faithfulness of God in Christ. We surely can never visit this altar without thanksgiving and worship. Although our God is worthy of our worship because He is the great Creator of all things, the true inspiration of the worship of every redeemed sinner is the suffering of our Saviour-God. Constant returning to Calvary will keep our faith fresh. As we contemplate His self-giving, we will renew our consecration, so that we will find our greatest joy in serving the Lord.

Expert Craftsmanship

MEMORIES of childhood holidays can be surprisingly vivid. I have cherished recollections of happy times spent at the home of a village blacksmith and his wife, family friends who had a delightful house in a Nottinghamshire village. They possessed a light oak sideboard which I remember smelled delicately of spices and currant cake. Displayed on its top were several beautiful tea-pots. The piéce de resistance was one of blue Wedgwood and I admired it greatly. I don't suppose, in those far-off days, that I ever dreamed of visiting the home of Wedgwood. Nevertheless, through the great kindness of Elim friends of the Longton Church, I was taken there this year to the Barlaston factory and was given three lovely examples of fine pottery as a memento of my trip to the Potteries. I was both impressed and fascinated by all that I saw on the tour of the pottery and I was gladdened by the obvious signs of real craftsmanship and pride in being part of a great enterprise of world-wide fame.

The first Josiah Wedgwood, "the father of English potters", founded his company in 1759 at Burslem. On the conducted tour I learned that his perfection of the manufacture of fine earthenware called Jasper, revolutionised the industry and made high quality table-ware available for the first time to ordinary folk. The tour was most informative and our guide was really helpful. When she left us at the showroom where purchases could be made, I found it hard to believe that all the lovely Wedgwood and bone china came from an uninspiring mass of grey clay or "slip" as it is called in the trade. All the wealth of colour, texture and design is added and shaped by those working on the one basic substance.

This thought is very comforting to me when thinking of the Christian's usefulness in God's service. We have to admit that we are all "common clay" in God's sight, but how encouraging it is to realise that the great Potter is willing to shape and beautify all who yield themselves to Him. This is very evident from Paul's illustration in 2 Timothy 2:20: "But in a great house there are not only vessels of gold and silver, but also of wood and earthenware, and some for honourable and noble use, and some for menial and ignoble use. So whoever cleanses himself from what is ignoble and unclean, who separates himself from contact with contaminating and corrupting influences will then himself be a vessel set apart and useful for honourable and noble purposes, consecrated and profitable for the Master, fit and ready for any good work" (Amplified Bible). So there is variety in all the vessels and diversity in their function and all are to be consecrated to the Master's use.

I have before me a leaflet describing a very special Wedgwood creation, a handsome plate in fine bone china with a picture of Salisbury Cathedral in the centre. Only 2,500 of these collector's pieces are to be produced and they will cost £25 each, certainly "vessels unto honour", yet, remembering the display at the pottery, I know that plates, cups, dishes, vases, candlesticks, jugs and boxes, large and small, ornate or simple, all have a function, though they are not so valuable as the Salisbury Plate, and bear the mark of craftsmanship.

Take fresh heart. We are only common clay, but, when we are handed over to God, He moulds us and refines the texture of our lives, and design and colour are added, even the imprint of His own beauty. This is surely the perfection He wills for us – to be both useful and beautiful. Let us all pray to this end.

Have Thine own way, Lord!
Have Thine own way!
Thou art the Potter;
I am the clay.
Mould me and make me
After Thy will,
While I am waiting, Yielded and still.

ing thanking the speaker and enclosing travelling expenses. The secretary keeps full details of the group's programme and prods the leader should important matters have slipped his mind. It is advisable to keep a diary of activities and expenses (postage, etc.) so that the information is readily available.

The secretary is responsible for keeping records. The good youth leader keeps a small notebook in which he records important items which occur to him during the youth group activities, perhaps an observation about a member, or an equipment requirement. Some of these details are transferred to a card-index which will contain all the information necessary for good leadership.

The Treasurer must be accurate and have a knowledge of book-keeping. A straightforward cash analysis book with debit and credit columns is all that is required. It is wise to have the books audited each year by the church treasurer. A pad of petty cash vouchers and a receipt book add to the efficiency. Receipts should be clipped together in date order. A fire-proof box will save the embarrassment of money being lost through fire. It is suggested that amounts of more than £5 are kept in a bank or Post Office account. This will ensure that the amount deposited will gain interest and remain safe.

In the main youth departments, i.e. Sunday school and Crusaders, offerings will be taken up. Other departments, i.e. junior Crusaders, boys' clubs, etc., can be financed by subscriptions. It is sometimes possible to find adults, members of the Church, and parents of young people, who will make contributions to the youth work. The local Council youth officer will give valuable advice about grants. These are usually designated for renovation, redecoration, equipping and furnishing of youth premises.

The equipment officer sees that equipment is kept in a good state of repair. Anything that is particularly valuable should be locked away. An inventory will determine that items of equipment are not lost. You know the kind of situation that arises: just before the showing of a film you can't find the screen! The equipment officer will be present before the youth activities begin to get everything ready before people come in. If there is no caretaker he will arrange for the cleaning to be done on a rota system.

Organisation and Administration

by Eldin R. Corsie, National Youth Director

MANY people have the mistaken notion that anything will do for God. If there is one area in which things are sometimes done shabbily and insufficiently it is in the Church. Scripture shows that God's blessing has rested upon wise organisation and administration. In the Old Testament, in the journeys of the Children of Israel in every detail of their daily lives there are the marks of organisation, e.g. in their method of mobilisation, in the way they pitched their tents, in the construction of the Tabernacle. Each tribe had its special position and responsibility. There are New Testament evidences of organisation, e.g. our Lord instructed the disciples to arrange the hungry multitude into ranks of fifty. In Acts chapter 6 we note that the Apostles handed over financial and material matters to specially chosen layman. They recognised the value of organisation. Perhaps the classical biblical illustration is in the ministry of Moses. Feeling the burden of his tremendous responsibilities, Moses accepted the rebuke and advice of his father-in-law, Jethro: "The thing that thou doest is not good. Thou wilt surely wear away, both thou, and this people that is with thee: for this thing is too heavy for thee: thou art not able to perform it thyself alone." (Exodus 18:17,18). He suggested that Moses should delegate some of his responsibilities.

In considering Organisation and Administration, we look first at the subject of the staff.

1. The Staff.

THE essence of youth work is team-work. One leader out of harmony can disrupt a whole organisation. The efficiency of any department depends upon the reliability of the members of the staff. Youth work of any kind is seldom successfully conducted by a dictator or by the one-man-band approach. There must be smooth, co-ordinated team-work. The principle of Scripture at this point is: "Now, I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment." (1 Corinthians 1:10).

There are bound to be contentions and misunderstandings among the youth staff. Our Lord had to deal with such difficulties Himself. There was a clash of personalities among the Apostles. John and James asked Jesus, "Grant unto us that we may sit, one on Thy right hand, and the other on Thy left hand, in Thy glory" (Mark 10:37); but when the news came to the ears of the other disciples, they were "displeased with James and John (v.41). Out of this dissension came the principle enunciated by Jesus which must be the guide-line of every youth worker in a team: "Whosoever of you will be the chiefest, shall be servant of all. For even the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many." (vv. 44,45).

To uphold unity in Christian service all personal interests must be blended with group interests. Thus staff must be carefully selected. Sometimes talented people must be passed by if their temperament is not compatible with the group work. Unity is developed in prayer and fellowship. When did your youth group last pray together?

Having described the character of the staff, one must now define the work of the Committee.

2. The Committee.

"COMMITTEES make minutes and waste hours" is the caustic comment of one critic. If a committee is conducted effectively it can be the salvation of many a youth department. There is usually safety in numbers. Whether the department is the Sunday school, senior Crusaders, or boys' club, it is essential that the group has a proficient leader and a well-organised committee in which each person knows exactly what part he or she has to play.

The Chairman is the minister (see the Elim Constitution). He is present to guide and counsel the committee.

The Secretary has a most responsible job, on which hinges the success of the committee. Much of the work is done behind the scenes and, if it is conducted efficiently, it will save muddle and confusion. The secretary has the responsibility of the committee meetings. He (or she) sends out the agendas in advance, keeps minutes, sends out invitations to the visiting speakers, reminds them shortly before the meeting, sends details of how, when, where, and to whom they are speaking, enclosing a stamped addressed envelope for the reply. Remember to offer hospitality. Don't forget to write a letter after the meet-

The Family Altar

Monday, August 20th — 1 Corinthians 11:17-34

"If we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged" (v.31).

THE early believers often met in ordinary homes and it would seem that some at Corinth went to the believers' gatherings because they received hospitality (Romans 12:13) prior to the celebration of Communion. Greed, not God, motivated their attendance. Like the crowd that followed Christ around the lake after he had miraculously fed the multitude, they needed to hear the words, "Ye seek Me, not because ye saw the miracles, but because ye did eat. . . and were filled. Labour not for the meat which perisheth, but for that. . . which the Son of man shall give unto you" (John 6:24-29). Earthly desires are often accompanied by emotional divisions which can only bring discredit to the Church of God. The challenge to "examine" one's own life is an echo of Christ's teachings in the Sermon on the Mount (Matthew 5:23-26).

Tuesday, August 21st — 1 Corinthians 12:1-13

"The same Spirit. . . the same Lord. . . the same God" (vv.4-6).

PENTECOSTAL truth presented in a balanced, Scriptural manner is not a distortion of the divine, but is the same doctrine that the Early Church experienced and taught. It has been said: "The Church has been subnormal for so long that, when it becomes normal, it is considered to be abnormal". A normal New Testament Church presents the triune God in all His perfect purity, Passover pardon and Pentecostal power. It is a tragedy of Church history that for so long men lost sight of the pardon that God was willing to give and the power by which the Almighty wanted to work through man. Luther was raised up to re-form men's faith and in this century God has raised up thousands who can say with Paul, "All these work. . . by the selfsame Spirit".

Wednesday, August 22nd — 1 Corinthians 12:14-31

"Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular" (v.27); "Members should. . . care one for another" (v.25).

MOTHER: "Why, Bobby, you ate all that cake without thinking of your sister!"

Bobby: "I was thinking of her all the time. I was afraid she would come in before I finished it."

This simple incident illustrates the truth that we are all prone to seek selfish interests. The clear teaching of Scripture is: "Love your neighbour as yourself" (Mark 12:31). Our neighbour could well be outside the Church and even hostile towards it. We are told: "Love your enemies" (Matthew 5:44). It is easier at times to love an enemy whom we do not see very often than to love fellow-members of the family of God whom we meet regularly. We should accept the ministry within the Church that God has given us and pray for others who either irritate us by their lack of grace or by their obvious spirituality.

Thursday, August 23rd — 1 Corinthians 13:1-7

"I. . . love" (v.1).

MOODY said, "If you wanted to fill twenty bottles with water you would have some success if you threw a bucket of water over them. You might get a drop in each. If you wanted real achievement, you would do better if you took a bottle and filled it full then took it to an empty bottle and poured its contents in, bottle to bottle, and then did the same again twenty times." Personal Pentecostal fulness is judged by what comes out of the individual, not only in public ministry, but in everyday living. The pronoun "I" is used eight times in three verses. As Paul emphasises, "I"' must be loving above any gift of ministry or act of Christian kindness, both of which could be done for personal priase. Be full of love!

Friday, August 24th — 1 Corinthians 13:8-13

"We know in part. . . but then shall I know. . .as. . . I am known" (vv.9,12).

IN the previous chapter we are told that "God has set in the church" many interdependent ministries and many edifying spiritual gifts which cannot be fully realised because of the limitations of men who are subject to the failings of the flesh. With God's help through the Holy Spirit, however, the Church, with all its shortcomings, can experience tremendous blessings. In the words of Dr. Herbert Lockyer, "We have a little heaven within to go to heaven with". The truth set forth here is that of which Paul reminded the Corinthians in his Second Letter, "We have this treasure in earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power may be of God, and not of us." (4:7). If knowing in part is so blessed, how much more blessed will it be when we meet the only One of whom it could be said, "In him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily" (Colossians 2:9)!

Saturday, August 25th — 1 Corinthians 14:1-19

"Follow after love, and desire spiritual gifts" (v.1).

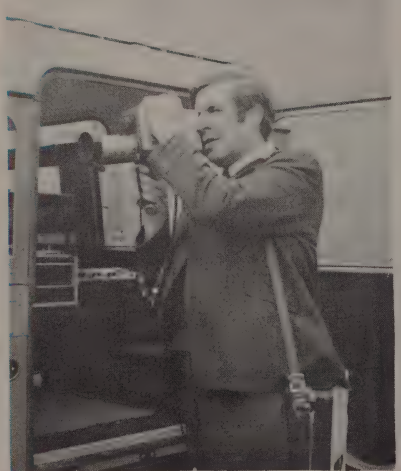
Evangelism on Wheels

by W. Ronald Jones



THE Lord Jesus was not giving us a choice but a command when He declared: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel." This was not just a piece of timely advice; HE WAS GIVING ORDERS.

While reading Matthew 28:18-20, William Carey woke up to the responsibility of going after the lost. As he read and re-read it he said, "Does Christ really mean it?" "He must mean it!" The fire began to burn within his soul until he felt compelled to place those burning coals within India's darkened borders.

What about us? Did He mean it? The world still speaks to us in desperate need. God forbid that they should look in vain because we have let the fires go out on our evangelistic altars!

Thank God, evangelism takes up much time in our discussions, but we must be careful lest our discussions on methods simply result in dividing our efforts. I believe that the hour has struck when we must use every form of evangelism, that by all means we might save some.

Mr. C. W. Smith

Because of this conviction I am thrilled with what I have called "EVANGELISM ON WHEELS." This is the vision of an Elim member in our Swindon Church.

There are eight wheels involved and, of course, equipment, and sacrifice and hard work.

Step inside the Landrover, a twelve-seater station wagon perfectly set out as a mobile video recording unit. How's this for first class equipment? There's a Sony video tape recorder, a six channel microphone mixer, camera kits, a portable camera and recorder and a talk-back system. By the way, here's the driver, the man with this exciting vision for reaching people for God, Mr. C.W. Smith. You've possibly seen him in action at our Conferences. He tells me that there is also a Morris Marina Estate which is to be used for travelling around our Elim Churches to show recordings made at our Conferences and at rallies.

The Estate is certainly not lacking in equipment either, for there are two recorders and ample television equipment.

Men and women can be reached for God in out-of-the-way places, e.g. in our villages, and let me say right away that Mr. Smith is willing to visit any of our Churches at his own expense in order to record material in old people's homes and wherever and whenever the opportunity is given. Already the local television station has shown great interest.

You might well think it worthwhile inviting Mr. Smith to your Church. You will see the great possibilities of "Evangelism on Wheels". All it will cost you is the offering. . . . . AND THAT WILL GO TO THE EVANGELISTIC COMMITTEE FOR FURTHER HOME EVANGELISM. Write to him at the Swindon Elim Pentecostal Church.

ONE of the thrilling aspects of the Christian life is our personal relationship with the Lord Jesus Christ. You can tell that someone is a born-again believer by the very ways in which they refer to our Saviour. They speak of Him in intimate terms. To listen to fellow-Christians leading in prayer or worship reveals the same closeness. It is remarkable, wonderful, but very real. Some religious but unsaved people make the mistake of thinking that it is presumption to mention the Deity in such personal words. While not yielding an inch to the standards and demands of reverence, we are sure that it is right, proper and indeed Scriptural to be in such a blessed, close fellowship with our Redeemer.

These precious realities are beautifully portrayed in the Revelation, not least in chapter 1. The description of the Lord Jesus Christ is breath-taking in its power, beauty and glory. One of my favourite quotations is in v.15: "His voice as the sound of many waters". "In His right hand seven stars: and out of His mouth went a twoedged sword: and His countenance was as the sun shineth in his strength" adds v.16. We wonder whether this was but a vision of the glory of the Lord. The "face to face" revelation and experience are surely reserved until the Second Coming. The actual person-to-Person reality must be even more tremendous.

No wonder John had to write: "And when I saw Him, I fell at His feet as dead.". This is an expected reaction. How could he uplift his countenance in the presence of the Lord of the everlasting burnings, the Son of God, the "consuming Fire" Himself?

Read on, however: "And He laid His right hand upon me, saying unto me, Fear not". Lest there be any misunderstanding, we must note that there was not the slightest dimunition in His deity, for the Lord further said, "I am the first and the last: I am He that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death."; but John could write, "He touched me!".

We can say, "Jesus, Lover of my soul", "Saviour, Lover, Lord", "The very thought of Thee with sweetness fills my breast".

"He touched me – and oh the joy that filled my soul!".

CARNIVAL Week always seems to draw great crowds of people to Eastbourne, and the 1973 parade was no exception. This was too good an opportunity to miss, and so we entered a float in the procession. It was based on the theme of road-signs, and had our girls' singing group on the back. It took days of hard work to prepare our entry, and although we won no prizes, (after all that was not the intention of our entry), yet it was very satisfying to know that so many would see the gospel as the procession went on. We were the only Christian witness in the parade. Other members of our Youth Group ran ahead of the float giving out gospel newspapers, and they distributed 5,000 in the space of one hour! We are grateful to God for this wonderful opportunity to reach so many with the Good News.

CHRISTCHURCH Pastor: A.V. Gorton

ON Friday, June 29th, Pastor A.V. Gorton was inducted at our Christchurch Church. The meeting got off to a dark start, as an electricity cable on a nearby building site had been broken by a mechanical digger. This plunged the neighbourhood into darkness. This certainly did not darken the spirit of the meeting, however, and the Church was full and overflowing, a total of 127 being counted in the church and vestry, and there were others sitting on the wall outside. Many local churches supported, including the Minister and some members of the Parkstone A.O.G.

Pastor W.J. Maybin, District Superintendent, convened the meeting and Pastor Felix Lloyd Smith gave an excellent message on the Second Coming.

Pastor and Mrs. A.V. Gorton were welcomed on behalf of the Members by the Treasurer, Mr. M.K. Galtor.

Truly the Lord has answered our prayers.

BATH Pastor: D.O. Ward

"THE Bible comes alive" was the title of a special series of lectures with a spiritual challenge – given by Pastor Christopher Gornold Smith. There were only six nights, but how the Bible did come alive!

Vital biblical truth, which lay buried under the dust of centuries, but are now revealed by the archeologist's spade, were projected on colour slide and film. Strange customs of the ancient east were explained, making difficult passages of the bible clear. We started from Ur of the Chaldees and God's call to Abraham, went to Elijah and the supernatural fire of Mount Carmel, to Hezekiah and the Assyrian invasion, to the exile, to Babylon and Persia, through the Holy Land in the steps of Jesus, and finally to Jerusalem as the key to word affairs, prior to the Lord's second coming.

"Bless Thy Word unto our hearts and glorify Thy name" was our opening prayer, and God graciously answered it. Each message closed with a fervent challenge to our lives. Many visitors were attracted to each evening's service.

Appreciation must be given to Mrs. Ragna Smith, for operating the projector in such an efficient and unassuming manner, and to Ray Cradock for showing the 16 mm. sound movie film.

ABERDARE

"THIS is the day that the Lord hath made". This chorus began the open-air service on our church lawn at the beginning of our convention. Pastor and Mrs. R.B. Chapman were with us for the weekend. On Saturday evening Pastor Chapman spoke on the conditions to be met if we want God's blessing, as individuals and as churches. Mrs. Chapman sang, as did our church choir, and choruses were led by our young teens' tambourine group. On Sunday evening there was great conviction on the preaching of the Gospel, but sadly no one responded.

For Monday and Tuesday, we welcomed Pastor Ivinson (Glynneath Assemblies of God), his wife, and some of his young people, singing and witnessing to God's saving power. On Tuesday, the choir of our Mountain Ash Church visited us, and our young people sang and played the tambourines. God really broke into the Monday service at the end, and it was difficult to persuade the people to leave the church for refreshments in the hall.

This was one of the best conventions yet. It was wonderful to see about ten of our congregation experiencing their first convention with us, having joined us during the year. May there be at least twenty more by next July!

SCARBOROUGH Pastor: S. Penney

AN expectant congregation, hearty singing, thrilling testimonies – this was the setting at the recent united baptismal service held in our Scarborough Church. Five candidates were from the Driffield Church and three from Scarborough. All gave sincere testimonies of their salvation and each one expressed the desire to go on with God. The Driffield youth group sang: "God's Choir in the sky" and Daryl Richardson, a student at London Bible College and a candidate for the ministry, gave a short inspiring message on the meaning and importance of water baptism. Pastor S. Penney of Scarborough church and Pastor D.B. Tinnion, of Driffield, then immersed the candidates. The meeting closed with the singing of a hymn and prayer. We left the church knowing that we had met with the Lord.

STIRCHLEY, Birmingham Pastor: J.B. Coleman

OVER the past few months we have been considering the theme "Helping Missionaries". For a few minutes of the Sunday school programme each week, we have been thinking about how we can help missionaries by praying, writing, giving and making things. We have fifty children with an age range of three to fifteen years. Several children have written letters to Elim missionaries and have been very pleased to receive news. Each class is encouraged to pray for and to write to missionaries in a particular country.

Some of the girls had a sponsored "knit in" in which they made squares for a blanket, which is big enough for a single bed and which raised £6.50. They are hoping to send the blanket to a missionary. Other girls made bathroom dolls to be sold in order to raise money for missionaries. Two small blankets and some soft toys were also made. The boys held a sponsored football match and raised £13.31.

Our missionary offering came to £7.50, which, together with the money raised and two gifts of £2.69 and £2 made a total of £32. At the climax of the project, we were pleased to have a visit from Pastor H. Jeffery, who has worked as a missionary in Brazil. He spoke about jewels in Brazil, how precious stones are sought for in mines under very arduous and difficult conditions with much hardship. He showed us a rock containing amethyst and explained how the precious stone must be separated from the ordinary stone, cut and polished in order to be fit for a ring or piece of jewellery. He described how missionaries have to work hard and go through difficulties and hardship in order to find people who by God's grace become jewels in Jesus' crown.

EASTLEIGH Pastor: M. Moore

SOME weeks ago Pastor Maldwyn Jones conducted his farewell services after spending nearly two and a half years with us as Minister of our Church. During that time he has seen our fellowship expand in numbers and also financially. We thank him for all that he had been able to do. In the evening service a presentation was made to both him and his wife and best wishes were expressed as he moved to a new Church, and that God would bless his ministry there.

On July 11th, Pastor W.J. Maybin, the District Superintendent inducted Pastor M. Moore as our new Minister. He had recently graduated from Elim Bible College. The service was ably convened by Pastor Maybin and was well supported. Besides friends from local churches, we had visitors from Gosport, Christchurch, Romsey, Southampton and even as far as Croydon where Pastor Moore had been helping in the ministry. Letters were read by Pastor Maybin from Beeston and from Croydon, which contained messages of appreciation and good wishes for the future of the Eastleigh Church. A welcome was given from the local Church by the Secretary and by Pastor P.G. Parsons on behalf of the presbytery. A timely message was given by Pastor H. Palliser both to the new minister and the Church. Refreshments were provided for the visitors who came from distances and thanks were expressed to them for joining us for the occasion.

We pray God's blessing on Pastor Moore's stay with us and pledge ourselves to help him as much as lies in us.

BRAINTREE Pastor: A.P. Atkinson

OUR Sisterhood anniversary services were held recently. A full church was a very welcome sight. Many other sisterhoods closed their meeting to join with us in our celebrations. Mrs. J. Eaton was our speaker. Her messages were very much blessed. We also had the Totham Ladies Choir. Their beautiful singing touched our hearts. Mrs. Langford ministered to us through poetry, including one of her own compositions.

During the afternoon service, Mrs. Anderson, our Treasurer, presented Mrs. Eaton with a bouquet. A bouquet was also presented to Mrs. Gowlett, our Secretary. We then enjoyed a splended tea served by the ladies of our Sisterhood.

During the evening meeting a group of young people from Coggeshall Baptist Church presented a programme of testimony and song. We all enjoyed a good sing and were grateful for the services of Mrs. D. Joslin at the organ and Mrs. Denam at the piano. Mrs. Eaton then gave an Epilogue and our Pastor closed with prayer. The meetings were convened by our President, Mrs. W. G. Turney. We thank and praise God for His kindness toward us and look to Him for blessing in the future.

E.V. GOWLETT

CLAPHAM Pastor: I.R. Moore

SUNDAY, July 8th was a memorable occasion for all our Members, it being our Pastor's farewell and retirement day. He can look back over his years of ministry and see the faithfulness of God. It was nice to have as the preacher Pastor J.C. Kennedy, a former Minister and a close friend through the years of Pastor and Mrs. Moore and family.

The evening service included words of thanks, song and poem appropriate to the occasion. One brother of 79 years of age from Guyana sang a piece called, "God bless our Pastor". A presentation was given on behalf of the Deacons and congregation of a Thompson Chain Reference Bible, cassette tape recorder and a cheque in expression of our love and appreciation.

We all wish Pastor and Mrs. Moore God's richest blessing, health and happiness in the days to come.

FRED WILLIAMS

DAGENHAM Pastor: J. McBurney

ON July 7th the Church gave a good account of itself in the Dagenham Carnival. This was made possible solely by the Crusaders, under the leadership of Norman and Edie Lay. The float driven by Mr. E. Woods, one of our Deacons, was outstanding. It was decorated with hundreds of paper rosettes with the words "God is Love" inset. The gospel was well presented with suitable verses from the Scriptures in bold letters. Many of the Crusaders rode on the float singing choruses, while others distributed hundreds of Gospel tracts.

Both Pastor and people are encouraged by the efforts of the young people. Peter Sleikerand his fiancee, Christine Smithson, Peter's sister Jenny and her husband Paul, played a great part in the preparations and inspired the younger members to play their part. The Pastor encouraged them in all their efforts and took part in the procession. We thank God for Peter's enthusiasm as he leads the choruses on Sunday evenings, for his inspired ministry in song, and for a group of young people who desire to let their light shine to the glory of God.

God continues to bless the inspired ministry of our Pastor. Many must have left a recent Sunday evening service greatly challenged after he spoke on Matthew 8:36,37.

We covet very earnestly the prayers of our Elim family, that God will move on behalf of our Church rebuilding plans, involving the constantly rising prices and the plans being still in the hands of the local Council. We encourage our hearts with the fact that "God is able".

(Miss) J. BERRY

DEWSBURY Pastor: G.N. Miller

GOD is really blessing us here in Dewsbury. In just over six months we are filling our Church especially with youth from the pubs here, for which we praise the name of our God. We have seen at least thirty youths baptised in the Holy Ghost in four weeks.

We saw our first demon cast out last week. It screamed out in agony, and again we praise our God for this deliverance.

D. HAIGH

RYDE Pastor: I.R. Hall B.D.

THE annual visit to our Church of the young people from the Elim Camp at Whitecliffe Bay is one of the highlights of the local calendar. This year's weekend lived up to all expectations. Not only were the attendances high (almost seventy on the Saturday and over one hundred and thirty on the Sunday evening), but also there was a great sense of the Lord's presence.

The opening meeting, which marked the fifth anniversary of the formation of the Isle of Wight United Pentecostal Fellowship, was supported by friends from the Assemblies of God at Cowes and Sandown. P.E. Streeter, a camp padre, gave a clear exposition of "Six reasons why we speak with Tongues". Various campers contributed testimonies and singing items.

The Camp Commandant, B.C. Richardson, was the preacher on Sunday night. Many were deeply challenged to believe in Christ and two responded to the appeal. Campers took part in the service, in particular one girl who was converted the day before at the Camp.

In Defence of the Faith

8. A Handful of Metaphors

by F. J. Slemming

"These are they who are hidden rocks in your love feast when they feast with you, shepherds that without fear feed themselves; clouds without water carried along by winds; autumn trees without fruit, twice dead, plucked up by the roots; wild waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame; wandering stars for whom the blackness of darkness hath been reserved for ever " (Jude vv. 12,13. A.R.V.).

WE continue with the theme of apostasy, the main subject of Jude. In these verses, we have a handful of illustrations taken from the everyday world: hidden rocks; waterless clouds; fruitless trees; raging waves; wanderings stars. Hidden rocks cause us to think of hidden dangers. Waterless clouds are suggestive of false promises. Fruitless trees speak of barren profession. Raging waves remind us of wasted effort. Wandering stars picture the aimlessness and final plunge into eternal darkness of apostates and apostasy.

Hidden rocks lie beneath the surface. They give no outward evidence of their presence and danger. With such a telling illustration Jude speaks of those who creep in unawares. By subtlety and stealth they make their way in among the people of God and then go about their evil business of making shipwreck of their faith. They are the tares that choke the wheat, the wolves that scatter the sheep, the shepherds that without fear look after number one and feed false pastors and deceiving preachers. The Word of God speaks to all such with strong warning words. Read carefully Ezekiel 34:2-10.

Waterless clouds picture the promise of refreshing rain followed by complete disappointment. The rain does not come and the ground remains parched, thirsty and unchanged. The word translated here "without water" is the same in the Greek that is used and translated in Matthew 12:43 "dry places". It seems to make a suggestion that there is a similarity between the evil spirits of Matthew 12 and the men of whom Jude is writing, clouds without water carried along by winds. In Ephesians 4 Paul points out that one of the purposes of the ministry Gifts is that the child of God should be established and not carried about by every wind of doctrine.

Some translate fruitless trees as "trees of the waning autumn". The winter of judgment will inevitably follow the autumn of apostasy. The full phrase reads, "twice dead, plucked up by the roots". "Fruitless" indicates death, uprooting surely spells death; where there is no root it follows that there is no fruit.

As to raging waves, we are familiar with the words of Isaiah 57:20: "The wicked are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest, whose waves cast up mire and dirt." Today we witness the troubled sea – the unrest and rebellion against God and the people of God; tomorrow what a change it will be for us – the crystal sea and the river of life that flows by the throne of God, rest and calm in contrast to the unrest and rebellion.

Wandering stars can be seen at times – shooting stars, wandering stars coming into our atmosphere. We witness their flashing brilliance and, just as speedily, they vanish out into space again, a fitting picture of some apostates who come into prominence as they seem to reflect the brightness of the Sun of Righteousness and then depart out of the ways and brightness of the Light of the world. A wandering star is not subject to the law of the solar system whose centre is the sun. Apostates are not subject to the Lord of the universe and the Master of men, and out they go into blackness and darkness and we recall the words of the Master in Matthew 8, where Jesus talks of those who will be cast into outer darkness.

These then are the terse, pointed, important metaphors used as illustrations by Jude as he warns us of lurking dangers, lying promises and the aimless, useless way of apostasy, leading, as it inevitably must, to eternal darkness. In the light of this we are wise to

The Meeting

by Sheila Price

PETER and his friends worked hard in their little fishing boat on the Sea of Galilee. They rode the tossing waves, enduring much danger on the rough sea. One night they cast their nets as usual, hoping to collect a big catch of fish to sell in the market place, but, when they pulled in their nets in the early morning, they were empty.

Peter, tired and disappointed at having nothing to show for his efforts, headed the boat towards the shore. "Come," he said to his friends, "let's go home. We'll try again tonight."

Suddenly they saw a Stranger walking along the edge of the shore. "I wonder who it is?" Peter asked. "Someone taking an early morning stroll, I expect," one of his friends replied.

As the boat drew up alongside, the Stranger asked, "Did you have a good catch?"

"We've caught nothing at all!" Peter replied. "We've been out all night, but our nets are empty."

"Try once more," the Stranger said, "but this time lower your nets over the right-hand side of the boat." At that moment Peter and his friends realised that they were talking with their risen Lord! They remembered the promise that He had made to them before He was taken to be crucified: "I will meet you again in Galilee". He had kept His promise and had come to help them. Eagerly they obeyed their Master and cast their nets as He had directed them. Soon the nets were filled to overflowing. Peter, overjoyed, raced for the shore, pulling the heavy nets behind him. How glad he was to have met his beloved Master that morning.

One day, we, too, will meet our Master and He will want to know how many souls we have won for Him. As His fishers of men, we must work hard and long telling our friends of the wonderful love of Jesus.

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

40. Purifying the Testimony (Genesis 35:2)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

AFTER delivering Jacob from the anger of Esau, the Lord told him to go to Bethel, the place where He had first revealed Himself. There Jacob was to build another altar to the Lord his God as a testimony that the Lord had kept the promises that He had made to him.

We find a strange contradiction, for there was idolatry in Jacob's family and, while his wives and children were nominally attached to the God of Jacob, they were still clinging to the old idols of Syria and Jacob appeared to condone this! At last, however, Jacob stood firm for the honour of the holy God whom he served. He called his family to put away their idols and to serve the Lord. His family obeyed this call and became a separated people.

We may feel that there is little possibility of our worshipping idols, yet, of course, our god is really that which has first place in our lives, the thing that claims our most complete devotion, whether home, family, friend, work, money, possessions, or the true, living God. Be absolutely honest and ask yourself in the quietness of your own heart, what does come first in your life, what claims your heart? If we have allowed other things to come into our lives and take the place which the Lord alone should have, then He calls us to renew our consecration to Him, to be separated from every idol of our heart, to have our lives cleansed and our testimonies purified.

The dearest idol I have known,
Whate'er that idol be,
Help me to tear it from Thy throne,
And worship only Thee.

It seems to me . . .

IN attempting to kill two birds with one stone the killing of neither is a risk to be taken. A letter to the editor of The Times provides one stone. Headed "COME TO SUNNY BAYSWATER" the letter runs as follows:

"Sir,

I have just spent a delightful summer holiday in Bayswater, W2. The sun shone twenty days out of twenty-one. The bathing – an exotic place called the Serpentine – was not polluted. The cuisine was excellent and the water safe to drink. The currency was simple to understand. The Times arrived every day at 7.30 a.m., and many of the natives spoke English. I noticed, however, that it was becoming popular with foreigners, especially Americans and Germans. I suggest that your readers sample it as a holiday resort before it becomes too crowded."

This is an inverted way of saying that the grass is always greener in the next field – or the next country! – or continent! The proverb "The grass is always greener in the next field" is a more mellow way of stating the blunt Bible proverb, "The eyes of a fool are in the ends of the earth" (Proverbs 17:24). The paraphrased previous sentence in the same verse points the contrast: "The man of understanding finds the objects on which to bestow his wisdom in his vicinity."

No question could be raised about door-to-door visitation and village evangelism in France, Spain, Germany, Italy, Belgium by Britishers who almost without exception do not know a word of any language but their own or, at best, have the barest smattering of French or German if they had already done, or were doing, similar work in our country.

Admittedly the command of our Lord is to go into all the world and preach the Gospel; but the first disciples did begin in their home country. ". . . beginning at Jerusalem . . ." (Luke 24:47; Acts 1:8). What I am saying does not apply, of course, to those whose call is to give their lives as missionaries and who prepare themselves for that work by language study and other training for expertise in their task.

Our spending scores of pounds and travelling hundreds of miles to preach the gospel to people whose language wo do not understand, while neglecting the scores of villages lying within a few miles of our homes inhabited by people whose language we speak and whose customs we know, does not reflect the New Testament programme.

Nor should we overlook the fact that also on the Continent there is as effective a nucleus of keen evangelicals as there is in Britain.

If it be thought that evangelism is "easier"(!) in Europe than in Britain, we should bear in mind that rationalism, Romanism, atheism, agnosticism, liberalism and communism grip that Continent much more than Britain.

As touching London W2, for some years now, Elim Crusaders have distributed each year some 8,000 to 10,000 invitations to the Royal Albert Hall Easter Monday Services. In the "village" of Bayswater itself, our Kensington Temple witness, under the ministry of the National Youth Director and his assistant, goes from strength to strength. All over our land hundred of thousands of pieces of gospel literature are distributed by our ministers and members.

This is a reminder that in concentrating on our big centres of population, thousands of small communities scattered throughout the British Isles still await the message that we preach.

If you need gifts of literature for this operation please write to me at P.O. Box 38, Cheltenham, Glos.

give heed to Jude's exhortation earnestly to contend for the faith and to see the dangers of falling away from God and His truth.

Jesus Christ is coming with 10,000 of His saints, coming as Judge to execute judgment (Jude vv. 14,15). This great theme of the Second Coming of Jesus Christ was in mind in antediluvian days, when it was announced that a dreadful judgment and doom would fall on the ungodly. Enoch, who walked with God, was translated. God took him. It all portrays the Second Coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.

In these dark days, these times of apostasy, we hold this great hope that we shall be caught up, translated, to meet our Lord ere the great and terrible judgments of God are let loose upon an ungodly world, as Jude makes so crystal clear – ungodly men engaged in ungodly works in an ungodly manner, demonstrating that they are ungodly sinners, murmurers and complainers using great swelling words and showing respect of persons for the sake of advantage, seeking favours, playing at religious politics, despising the poor, fussing the rich, mockers walking after their own lust, lust controlling them, and, most crucial of all, "having not the Spirit" (v.19). These are the subjects of the coming judgments. We who are true believers are sealed by the Spirit unto the day of redemption. "Having not the Spirit" – "sealed by the Spirit" – in which category are you?

Jesus Christ the Healer

by John Hyde,
Pastor of our Oxford Church

WHATEVER your opinions, you must agree that the human body presents us with many problems today. Its condition occupies very much of our time and it can sway our whole life one way or another. People go out for their health's sake and are kept in for the same reason. Some would give all that they possess for a healthier body. Some have already given most of what they possessed in an attempt to improve their health.

Medical science is ever searching for the solution to the problems of the human body and great advances have been made in the world of medicine and noble work is being done by doctors in hospital. I do not wish to undervalue the great contribution that has been made for the world of sufferers by the medical profession.

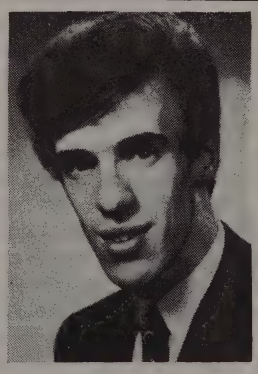
On the other hand, the problem of the human body still seems as great as ever today. The world is full of sufferers and incurables. Many lives are filled with misery and despair as a result. Surely, then, in a world of suffering it should be good news to hear of Divine Healing today.

The subject is Divine Healing and has nothing to do with so-called faith healing. Divine Healing is healing from God; it is God working the seemingly impossible. It is all of God; He is the great Physician.

Divine Healing is man coming in touch with God and the almighty power of the living Christ being applied directly or, as is often the case, through prayer, or by the laying on of hands by a chosen vessel, but it is God, not the vessel, who heals.

Being fully persuaded that the Bible is the inspired Word of God (2 Peter 1:21), my first inquiry must be into that Book, for whatever man may say, God's Word is true and will stand for ever (Matthew 24:35). The first question to settle is whether Divine Healing is scriptural or not. Look at some of the Scriptures on the subject. Exodus 15:26 is one of the first promises relating to Divine Healing.

In Psalm 103:2 David said: "Bless the Lord O my soul and forget not all His benefits, who forgiveth all thine iniquities, who healeth all thy diseases". God has provided both salvation from sin and healing for the body, spiritual and physical healing.



Isaiah 53:4 says: ". . . surely He hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows".

Churches of other denominations are fulfilling the scripture: "Is any sick among you? Let him call for the elders of the church and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord, and the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up." (James 5:14,15).

A very great part of the earthly ministry of Christ was devoted to the healing of the sick, and the same Christ is alive today and able to meet the needs of those who put their trust in Him.

The HAMMOND ORGAN

- Requires the minimum of maintenance and the tone wheel generator cannot go out of tune.
- Remains unaffected by changes in temperature and humidity.
- Provides extreme variety of tones with the simplest method of selection.
- Has a specification to satisfy the accomplished organist.
- Can be transported for trouble-free use on any location.
- Represents a lifetime investment with a negligible depreciation factor.

The Hammond Organ has found an important place in the Pentecostal church with its unique tonal quality. The very nature of the harmonic tone registration allows the instrument to be played in direct keeping with the service without distracting from it. We are therefore convinced that a Hammond can make an essential contribution which renders it a sound investment in the Lord's work, and to this end Sharon Music welcome your consultation as to the most suitable model for your church.

With experience gained from many church installations throughout the country we feel confident to select an instrument certain to meet your requirements.

Our showroom stock of ORGANS and PIANOS includes the entire range of Hammond Organs, consisting of 18 different models from £265 to £5,500. Special financial arrangements are available to your church and we shall be happy to supply further details relating to any specific model on request.

A NEW mood is darkening the counsels of the Church as it faces the challenge of our fast-moving modern world. More advanced concepts of tolerance call for gentleness and so a devious route is pursued in search of man's soul. No longer must we effect a direct confrontation in matters of Christian witness; we are to be more subtle, to catch our man by guile. "Softly, softly, catchee monkey!" is the up-to-date slogan. Away with the brutal "Thus saith the Lord"; it's too obvious. Be more apologetic. Don't get the ungodly against the wall and punch the message home having got him there: "That's not cricket, old boy!". So we are tempted to adopt a method of attack that would be scorned in any commercial enterprise or political caucus.

At a radio seminar for would-be broadcasters the young man lecturing to the group and commenting on their efforts to produce simple talks made a great deal of the fact that listeners are no longer prepared to take direct frontal statements from gospel preachers. They refuse to be preached at. We must lead them up the proverbial garden path and omit from our messages the old fashioned Bible-punching "crudities".

"Be more artful" is the accommodating technique, forgetting, of course, that, having used the wiles of the "Artful Dodger", we have the very fellow himself on the end of our line, and being more practised at the dodging game than we are, he manages to wriggle off the hook we have so carefully prepared in our counselling sessions. On no account must we give the impression that we are getting at our audience (which is what we really are trying desperately to do); we must be conversational and chummy. In a world rushing headlong in a rat-race to its own destruction, do not shock or disturb the conscience; people might think we are pushing religion down their throats. Try treacle rather than brimstone.

There certainly is a place for the smooth, comforting approach. Many people have broken lives; having succumbed to temptation they cry from their hearts for help, for deliverance from the awful bondage of sin. It would be insolence to brush aside their need and add to their burden of guilt. We must ever remember the words of our Lord to the woman taken in adultery, "Neither do I condemn thee, go and sin no more." We can injure rather than help despairing souls by rough-shod methods. In an atmosphere of repentance the word must be one of hope, of love.

There are areas of violent conflict, however, where the Beast with bared fangs menaces the Christian witness. We face hypocrisy in many places and nowhere is this more evil than when carping critics point mocking fingers at insincerities in the Church. Are we saying with flowers what we should be saying with fisticuffs? Our fear of giving offence can make us innocuous; we wait for the opportune moment which often does not arrive.

John Wesley tried the technique of the opportunity theorists when on a visit to Leicester. He describes the coach journey from London in his Journal for

The

by H. W

8th June, 1741: "For these two days I made an experiment which I had been so often and earnestly pressed to do - speaking to none about the things of God, unless my heart was free to it. But what was the event? Why, (1) That I spoke to none at all for four score miles together; no, not even to him that travelled with me in the chaise, unless a few words at first setting out. (2) That I had no cross either to bear, or take up, and, in an hour or two, fell fast asleep. (3) That I had much respect shown me wherever I came, everyone behaving to me as to a civil, good-natured gentleman. Oh how pleasing is all this to flesh and blood! Need ye 'compass sea and land' to make proselytes to this?"

Speaking some time ago in Church House, Westminster, to clergy of many denominations, Peter Howard said: "We are all to blame. Even some churchmen have become so determined to be 'with it' that they accept secularization as normal and try to make Christ conform to modern compromise instead of struggling, fighting, cleaving with our times until those times conform to the cross of Christ."

On no occasion did our Lord attempt to accommodate His teaching to the opinions or practices of His hearers. So direct and clear were His words that the startled listeners exclaimed, "Who then can be saved?" To the rabbi He said, "Art thou a master of Israel, and knowest not these things?" To the rich young ruler He demanded, "Go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor", a most offensive remark were the young man's eternal situation not so perilous. Today we would fear lest we drive such a potential source of income from our churches. To the highly-esteemed Pharisees the words of Jesus came with thundering menace: "Hypocrites, fools and blind, whited sepulchres, serpents, generation of vipers". All those who listened among that religion-conscious crowd knew how often these pious keepers of the law prayed and fasted and tithed, yet Jesus did not hesitate to tear aside the mask of insincerity and expose them for what they were: robbers of widows, canting showmen.

The impact of Jesus Christ on His contemporaries was direct and without ambiguity: no apologies were offered. He scathingly pictured the rich glutton who ignored the beggar at his gate lifting up his eyes in hell, crying for a drop of water to cool his tongue, and pleading for the very beggar to be allowed to dip his finger in water to ease his torment. Mammon to the Master was the cruel lord who had deceived humanity with false notions of power. Thus He became poor and accepted utter destitution in order to prove the true wealth to which man can become heir. "He was rich," says Paul, "yet for your sakes He became poor, that ye through His poverty might be made rich" (2 Corinthians 8:9). As a pauper He taught us the true values that have eluded the greed of men.

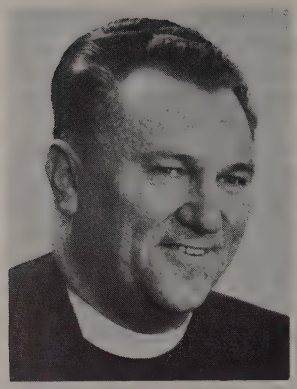
Peter was not unlike His Master when he stood to preach the first apostolic sermon on the Day of Pentecost. "Ye men of Israel," he cried, fully aware of the explosive mood of the crowds gathered on that memorable day, "hear these words; Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you by miracles and wonders and signs, which God did by Him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves know: Him being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain. . . Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ" (Acts 2:22, 23,36).

It was this very hard approach of the rugged fisherman that brought conviction among his hearers. "Now when they heard this, they were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter and the rest of the apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we do?" (v.37).

Most Bible commentators agree that we are living in perilous days, the very days foretold in the prophetic scriptures. Our society is corrupted by false notions and permissive codes of personal behaviour. These are not passing moments for smooth talk and weasel words, indeed, clerics who perform their "theological strip-tease" in order to come to terms with questionable, bored intellectuals are merely caricatured for their absurdities. The modern problem of pollution has affected not only our seas, atmosphere and environment, it has also defiled the mind of man with an effluent discharge of humanistic rubbish under the pretence that he is being taught the new sciences. "Love men. Slay errors," wrote St. Augustine, to which one writer adds, "Ecumenists must not only pray together. They must also slay together." Dogmatic atheism cannot be overcome by compromise any more than Gibraltar can be conquered by using pea-shooters. We need a militant evangelism to confront and to confute the encroaching secularisation of our generation.



The contamination of our doctrines has led to the destruction of morals. Renan, the French philosopher, wrote: "It is possible that the collapse of supernatural belief will be followed by the collapse of moral convictions and that the moment when humanity sees the reality of things will mark a real moral decline. We are living on the perfume of an empty vase." That moment to which Renan drew our attention has arrived with a vengeance. Those who believed that we could have effective moral codes without the Christian creed have been confounded by events. The erosion of Christian teachings concerned with moral standards has produced a callous, violent society, where the voice of protest is muzzled by the fear of giving offence. Thus the vulgar has become the norm of social behaviour. The nation that once sent missionaries to many parts of the world with a gospel of healing and light, now attracts the scum of humanity to indulge its lusts. "How then did it happen", writes James McMillan, "that London promptly won the titles, 'the Swinging City', 'The World Capital of Abortion', 'Dolly Town' and continentals sniggeringly referred to homosexuality as the 'English Disease'?. . . sexuality extended its influence from the market-place to Parliament".

Is it any wonder that this morning our radio announcers tell us that the abortion problem has now reached its lowest levels with the main concern among children under eleven years of age? Parliament interests itself with a solution that can only add tragedy upon tragedy by discussing the possibility of providing children with contraceptives. As well attempt to put out a fire in the house by pouring petrol over it.

The blame lies largely with those parents who fail to discipline children and with the mass media for its commercialisation of crudities. The ineptitude of the Church, which has lost much of its vigour, is a sad commentary on its departure from the experience promised by our Lord when He said that the coming of the Holy Spirit would give power to His disciples and that when the Comforter came He would convince the world of sin. How else can He do this but through His witnesses? There can be little satisfaction in our technological paradise, with the advantages of affluence it brings, if the foundations of our social behaviour are rotting away. "Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil," cries Isaiah, "and that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter" (5:20). Upon the Church, anointed with the Holy Spirit's energy, has fallen the responsibility to raise a banner of righteousness, to declare in its doctrine and practice the importance of right living, and to denounce in no uncertain terms the hypocrisy and filthiness of a generation doomed by its

by A. S. F. Horne, Pastor of our Ipswich Church

WE have considered the Shunammite woman as a Sojourner and a Suppliant and have seen how, in the providence of God, she repossessed her house and her inheritance. Now we examine the truths of which these things remind us.

We are pilgrims

We are strangers and sojourners as were all our fathers; our days on the earth are as a shadow and there is none abiding. Like the Israelites of old, we are travelling through this wilderness of a world. Soon we must be as "water spilt on the ground, which cannot be gathered up again". Earth's evils should not painfully trouble us, nor should its blessings unduly elate us.

Let us ever remember that, naked came we out of our mothers' wombs and naked shall we leave this life. Well and happy for us will it be if, when the battle of life is fought, we win the crown of glory and receive the "Well done, good and faithful servant". This is impossible if we have been neither good nor faithful. The day will come when life will be spent and all its duties discharged. We shall then stand before the Judge of all the earth, and everlasting life will be ours. Praise the Lord!

We are always dependent on the Almighty

Through Him we "live, and move, and have our being". It is He who "reneweth the face of the earth. The eyes of all wait upon Him and He giveth them their meat in due season. He openeth His hand and satisfieth the desire of every living thing". There is not one thing that we can do without Him and nothing should be attempted.

His "loving kindness is better than life" and "no good thing will He withhold from them that walk uprightly". "He that spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things?".

We are dependent upon Him and we can depend upon Him to keep every promise. Paul wrote to Titus: "Based on the hope of eternal life, which the never-falsifying God promised" (1:2, Berkeley).

Eternal Rest is promised

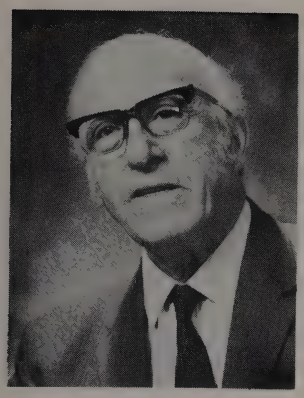
We are not always going to be pilgrims! "There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God". This is not the portion of the carnal and unholy, unless they repent and be converted. The people of God are resting on Christ alone for admission into heaven. Our faith may be feeble, but He is the Way and the Door, and through Him we shall enter.

Paul said: "We are not discouraged. No, even if we outwardly perish, inwardly we're renewed from day to day. The light trouble of this moment is preparing for us an everlasting weight of glory, greater than anything we can imagine. We don't look at the things that are seen but at the things that are not seen. What we see lasts only a while, but what we don't see lasts forever (2 Corinthians 4:16-18, Beck).

Let us rejoice with the hymn-writer:

Worthy the Lamb for sinners slain
Through endless years to live and reign;
Thou has redeemed us by Thy blood
And made us kings and priests to God.

Let us then journey on as pilgrims, seeking to increase the number of Emmanuel's subjects by teaching and preaching the gospel in every way possible. Work today, for the night is coming when all our opportunities will be past.



The chief reward of the servants of the Lord lies in the joy of duty done, an inward satisfaction and the overall comfort so beautifully expressed by Paul: "I have fought the good (worthy, honourable and noble) fight; I have finished the race; I have kept (firmly held) the faith - henceforth there is laid up for me the (victor's) crown." (2 Timothy 4:7,8, Amp. N.T.).

"Behold, I come quickly, and My reward is with Me, or I shall bring My rewards with me, so as to give everyone just what their actions deserve". (Revelation 22:12, 20th Cent. N.T.).

"How much owest thou unto my lord?"

LUKE 16:1-13

by J. Alexander Wright

IT startles us at first that our Lord should choose a case of deliberate dishonesty to teach His followers spiritual foresight, but it is in keeping with the general nature of His teaching, which so often appears to be paradoxical.

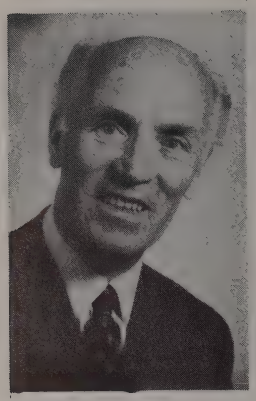
Whatever the steward's offence, it was grave enough to earn him his "notice". From his comfortable job he faced the prospect of unemployment with all its misery. He had no inclination for physical toil, and, as for charity, rascal though he was, he still had a little self-respect!

He was losing his job. Nothing could alter that. What had he had for it all? His ready brain quickly devised a plan. There was nothing now to be gained by turning honest, but much could be retrieved by further dishonesty. He might as well be hanged for a sheep as for a lamb! Thus came the liberal writing down of his master's creditors' bills. Consider the generosity of it! Some had a twenty per cent reduction and some as much as fifty per cent. Needless to say, he made fast friends of these, for the world ever admires a generous spirit and is not always overparticular as to the principle involved. He seemed a fine fellow indeed!

Dawned the day of dismissal and he left his employment, workless, but not homeless. He had a host of welcoming sympathisers who readily opened their doors to him for hospitality and shelter. The downright cleverness of the man in so providing for his future drew the grudging commendation of his erstwhile master.

Regarding the material things of this life our Lord taught the utmost abandon. Prudence and calculation He condemned, but, when He spoke of the things concerning the kingdom of God, He taught just the opposite. There prudence and foresight are commended again and again. Take but a few of His statements: Matthew 19:29; Mark 8:36; John 6:27; Luke 16:13. To choose the temporal world and neglect the eternal one was utter folly.

This parable teaches me that the prospect of "claiming my mansion in the skies" about which I so confidently sing may not be so glittering after all, if I have neglected to make the right use of my earthly possessions, "the mammon of unrighteousness" ("worldly wealth", N.E.B.). We are His stewards, let us not forget, and by the right use of what He has entrusted to us we may make friends for eternity. Every soul whom we win for the Lord is one such.



Let us then zealously put all we have into the service of God's kingdom and assuredly there will be those in the Gloryland who will bless God that our means were consecrated to Him and became the medium of their eternal salvation.

Now forget the steward and his lord for a moment, and think of your obligation to your Lord and Master, Jesus Christ. "How much owest thou unto my Lord?". Reckon it up. Make out the account. List the mercies, benefits and blessings that He has given you even this year alone. How many times has He pardoned you and given again to you His own sweet peace which you had lost? Recall His healing grace and His guidance in your perplexity. Stand by His cross and survey again the love so amazing, so divine.

What does it all add up to – a hundred measures of love, service and praise? Some have made it more, and paid it, too, in blood and sweat and toil and tears for His dear sake. But let it be a hundred. Are you paying it? Perhaps we listened when the Tempter told us: "You promised too much. Why make your life a burden? Take it more easily. Take your bond and write fifty!". Some of us have listened and have made it even less. Are we not ashamed to offer so little? "How much owest thou. . .?"

Let us take the bond and write it again; the full amount, all we promised, and by His grace let us pay it – every penny! Let there be no more scaling-down of our obligations to our Lord, or of our devotion or service.

Love so amazing, so Divine,
Demands my soul, my life, my all.

From T. H. Stevenson

A BRIEF time ago I wrote to a Christian particularly to inform and encourage her by a testimony relating to her late husband's faithful testimony many years ago. He was well known for his faithful, fearless personal witnessing to people about their need of Christ. I had been receiving the hospitality of one of our ministers and his wife and the lady of the manse enquired about a family in our Worcester Church. With her parents, she had lived in Worcester during the second world war. Her father was consistently and graciously spoken to about salvation by our late Elim brother. After the war, parents and daughter returned to Essex and were all wonderfully converted in our Chelmsford Church. The daughter now for several years has shared the ministry with her husband.

The zealous brother did not live to know of the fruit of his labour, which came "after many days", nor to see the worth of sowing "in season and out of season".

The fore-going was told me some weeks ago, but was recalled to memory as I returned to preach in a former pastorate last Sunday. At the end of the evening service I learned that in the congregation was a young man who had heard me preach the gospel in the same Church almost one year ago. He had at that time left the service unconverted, but deeply convicted, and during the night, after having heard the word of the gospel, he received Christ in his own home. Now he is a member of the local church and going on with God.

Minister and member, may we ever remember the exhortation of God's Word: "Let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap if we faint not". The reaping is the important matter, more important than whether we do or do not see it.

Wrote Dr. A.W. Tozer: "Until self-effacing men return again to spiritual leadership, we may expect a progressive deterioration in the quality of popular Christianity year after year till we reach the point where the grieved Holy Spirit withdraws – like the Shekinah from the temple." What would our Lord say to the Pentecostal Movement if He visited our churches today? Could we face Him unashamed? Have we tinkered around with inessential trivialities while the world gaily flaunts its abuse in the face of the Almighty and puts our blessed Lord to open shame? Have we no word of rebuke for the commercialisation of filth and the irreligion that parades in high places of government and academies?

In Pentecost we need to examine our attitude to separation and to make a fresh appraisal of our ethics and doctrine. Are we declaring the truth as we should, or are we losing our vision of the terrible doom that awaits our generation? With feet on the brink of eternal loss men must be awakened to their peril. If we hesitate, they may be lost for ever, and Pentecost may miss its great opportunity to bring God's warning Message to an age fast sliding to its doom.

"Cry aloud, spare not," is the direct command of Isaiah the prophet, "Lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and shew My people their transgression" (58:1). The message of Jonah to Nineveh at the word of the Lord was fearful in its threat: "Yet forty days, and Nineveh shall be overthrown." There was no time to consider niceties of approach or the feelings of the people in their dire need. They were told the facts through the voice of the prophet, "So the people of Nineveh believed God" (Jonah 3:5).

Referring to certain Galilaeans murdered by Pilate, Jesus said, "Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish" (Luke 13:3). There was no cover-up, He spake with clarity and severity. He did not shrink from the hostility of the crowd or from the fears of His followers. He said, "I am the TRUTH".

Peace, Perfect Peace

by Barbara C. Sawyer

MANY people today have the false impression that the Christian life is purely negative - a list of don'ts. This is far from the truth. We have been chosen to be fellow-heirs with Christ. Part of our bountiful inheritance is something very positive, the "peace of God which passes all understanding".

It seems that peace is something which our modern world lacks, due to the bustle of life and travel being so easy. Perhaps this constant hurry typifies something even deeper in man – a need to feel secure – a need for peace. We hear plenty about demonstrations to stop this and that war, and if man did such and such there would be peace; but is this so? People are so busy making a noise about being peaceful, that they do not have the time to stop and listen to the voice of God telling them that it is His peace that they need.

The bare facts are that without Christ, man's soul can never find true peace, hence the various searches into the mystic to satiate this inner thirst. Those who have found and accepted Jesus Christ as Saviour and Lord can realise that "He [Jesus] is our peace". They know that this is what God longs to give to all mankind. It is not until man drinks of God's boundless river of peace that he can "taste and see that the Lord is good". Before we were reconciled to God in Christ, we were sinful by nature. Because of God's holy righteousness, in His sight we were sinful and wicked - though He loved us just the same. Our spiritual eyes were opened to the fact that we fell short of God's standard and that we could never justify ourselves, but needed to be justified by Someone who had presented Himself as a living sacrifice on our behalf. Then we heard Jesus saying to us, "My peace I give unto you, not as the world gives". This is a different kind of peace, a deep, deep peace that assures us of God's love and faithfulness toward us.

This is why, in times of great stress and turmoil, Christians can know this wonderful peace. In the Old Testament the word "peace" is translated in the sense of the word "welfare", and in the New Testament "heartpeace" stands for the word "peace". In either instance, it is obvious that this is a state of complete security and rest, a place where we cease to struggle, where we rest in God's miracle of grace. "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on Thee, because he trusteth in Thee". This Christ-like quality is one way in which we can be recognised as belonging to Him. Let us keep close to God so that we can let the peace of God rule in our hearts.

In Ephesians we are told that Christ came to preach peace to those who were afar off and to those who were near, so let us all "seek peace and ensue it", so that we may learn how to bear this Fruit of the Spirit for the glory of God.

He careth for You
(Matthew 6:25-33)

Why are you so anxious and careworn
When God is still on the throne?
Why fret when Jesus has promised
He never will leave you alone?
He careth for you and has numbered
The very hairs of your head,
So cast all your care upon Jesus,
Believe what the Bible has said.
Consider the lilies – they toil not,
Yet God sees to them every day.
Solomon in all of his glory
Was not so arrayed as they.
So why not trust in the Saviour
When He clothes the grass of the field
And cares for the odd little sparrow
All fowls of the air He does feed?
So take no thought of the morrow
Saying, "What shall we drink or eat,
Or wherewithal shall we be clothed?"
Your Father knows all your need.
So seek first of all God's Kingdom,
His righteousness, too, and then
All these things shall be added to you.
He keepeth His promise. Amen!

THE PRINCIPLES AND PRACTICE OF YOUTH WORK—LESSON 1

Organisation and Administration

by Eldin R. Corsie, National Youth Director

5. A catering officer should also be appointed. Coffee bars have become an institution in certain aspects of youth work. Such facilities can be a boon to evangelism among young people if conducted in a business-like manner. If the catering is done with imagination and careful planning, it can become profitable. The profits from such a venture can be ploughed back into the coffee bar funds to improve the equipment. "It is worth while spending some time investigating popular tastes and also cheap sources of supply. Avoid the traditional tea and biscuits. Have as much variety as possible (chocolates, crisps, crunchies, cheese straws and so forth), and on the whole buy only those goods which can be stored and kept for several years. Several firms offer whole lines of goods, sometimes with special concessions for youth clubs and a bonus for equipment after a total purchase of £50". (Towards Tomorrow's Church p.57) For useful information one can purchase the following books: Club Canteens, M. Shipp and H.E. Higgins, National Association of Mixed Girl Clubs, 30 Devonshire Street, London W.C.1. Canteen and Youth Clubs, H.M. Stationery Office, Kingsway, London, W.C.1. These can be obtained by the local library. Many firms have a wide variety of drinks. Tea and coffee are the traditional beverages, but squashes and fizzies are always popular. Plastic beakers are quite cheap to purchase and save a lot of breakages. Straws will save washing up. A small Calor gas cooker is easily installed for light snacks for special occasions. We must avoid the danger of making the church a snack-bar. It can have its dangers and distractions. (We arrived at a Bible study one Wednesday evening and conducted it to the tantalising aroma of chicken curry!).

6. The Publicity Officer will be responsible for publicising the youth groups within and without the church. Editors of newspapers, particularly local ones, are usually most co-operative and are willing to print accounts of club activities. Naturally, newspaper space is limited and therefore any report has to have a news angle. Most papers are willing to send their own reporter to do a write-up and, if space permits, they will often employ their own photographer to take a picture. Some newspapers have a regular weekly column for youth activities. One of the bigger tasks to be done in the world of youth work is to build up public relationships with the adult world and a group may do this by using some of the same methods as the commercial world. Every shop has its display window. Many towns have their annual show or Ideal Homes exhibitions. Many shops are quite prepared to give free shop window space to a club that can produce a really effective visual display. Sometimes an empty shop can be used for a limited period, often without any rental.

How important it is to have publicity inside the premises used for youth work. There are many simple, easy, cheap, ways of putting across news to members of the youth group. Probably the most important single publicity medium is the notice-board. Here are some guide-lines for making a good notice board:

It should be large and in a well-lighted position. The notices should be easy to read.

Place at eye-level and in a place where young people linger. The entrance hall is not a good place, particularly on a cold night!

The board should be made of a light, fibrous composition material such as cork board or Essex board. This can be bought in sheets 8 x 4 . It will last longer if it is framed with 2" x 1" timber with a batten across the back. Paint the background in neutral colour (try to avoid the use of green baize) and the frame with a flock paper which gives the effect of velour and can be bought in many attractive colours.

A title heading improves the general effect such as, "Look at this!" or, "I'm telling you". Keep the notices fresh and up-to-date. Nobody is interested in last week's activities!

The value of a youth magazine produced by the group cannot be overlooked. The first essential is for a good designer. If no-one can be found within the group help can be obtained from the Advertising Christian Group, c/o Douglas Shallcross, 17 Oxford Crescent, New Malden, Surrey. The important consideration is the cover. Is it an eye-catcher? Is it likely to entice the casual church visitor to lift it from the literature rack? It should be simple and colourful. Resist the temptation to list all the church officers and youth leaders with their titles, addresses, telephone numbers on the front page. Push them to a more humble position on the back page. Break up the inside text into digestible portions by sub-heads, decorations and illustrations. The Church Pastoral-Aid Society has produced sets of blocks for use in magazines at very reasonable prices. They have produced a fine brochure describing the service, and they will be glad to send copies of it to magazine editors. Ask for Fifty Pictures for your Parish Magazine. Church Pastoral-Aid Society, Falcon Court, 32 Fleet Street, London, E.C.4.

To these important officers may be added two or three others who are dependable and practical. A good working committee will thus be made up, which will carry out the policy of the youth leader.

The Family Altar

Scripture Union Portions — Notes by Ray Hughes

Monday, August 27th — 1 Corinthians 15:1-19

"By the grace of God" (v.10).

THE crucifixion of Christ had taken place. Some of his fanatical followers had come out of hiding and had dared to say that He was alive, risen from the dead. Saul the Pharisee determined to stamp out this lie and remove from Judaism this tiny but troublesome group of "ignorant and unlearned men" before they did any more damage or raised any more false hopes. Like many an unbeliever since, he was stopped in his tracks when he met the Lord (see Acts 9). Now he writes about the risen Redeemer who had shown grace to such an undeserving opponent, grace to make him what he was, to enable him to labour, and to flow through him to other seeking souls. Like all New Testament saints, Paul knew that "great grace was upon them all" (Acts 4:33).

Tuesday, August 28th — 1 Corinthians 15:20-34

"He must reign" (v.25).

ADAM was the only other perfect, sinless man to walk the face of the earth. God's Word did not reign supreme in his life. His sins were visited on the children (Deuteronomy 5:9) and the whole human race has partaken of his corrupt, fallen nature. Since that time God has sought men who would love Him with all their hearts and trust in blood sacrifices to "blot out" the record against them (Colossians 2:13). Christ was God's final sacrifice for sin (see Isaiah 53) in which men were to place their faith. After His crucifixion, resurrection and ascension, He was enthroned in power at the right hand of the Father (Hebrews 1:1-4). He reigns now in heaven and one day He must reign over all his subjected enemies. Meanwhile the Lord seeks a people who will allow Christ to reign in their hearts, His recognised representatives on earth who "die daily" to selfish calls and "awake to righteousness" each new day.

Wednesday, August 29th — 1 Corinthians 15:35-50

"Flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption" (v.50).

CONVERSION of heart and attitude, followed by change of character and behaviour are to be completed by the transformation of the "natural body" into a "spiritual body". The Lord from heaven, who came to be our Emmanuel, God with us, will one day come as a "quickening spirit" to transport us to be for ever with Him. In order to hear His "well done" (Matthew 25:21) we must "Pray as if everything depended on God, and work as if everything depended on us" (D.L. Moody), trusting only in the blood that flowed on Calvary.

Thursday, August 30th — 1 Corinthians 15:51-58

"O death, where is thy sting?" (v.55).

SEEN on a tombstone was the following inscription: "I expected this, but not just yet". Death is one appointment which we must all keep (Hebrews 9:27). It pays to be prepared. The Christian message revolutionises our lives and it gives us an assurance beyond the grave. God gives us "beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness" (Isaiah 61:3). We do not sorrow at the loss of a loved-one as do those without hope (1 Thessalonians 4:13-18), for we have confidence in our Saviour to bring us safely to our eternal home (John 14). The Christian can say, "Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for Thou art with me" (Psalm 23:4). Atheist Robert Ingersoll could only say, "There will be no singing at my funeral". "Thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ" (1 Corinthians 15:57).

Friday, August 31st — 1 Corinthians 16:1-24

"Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong. Let all your things be done with charity (love)" (vv.13,14).

WATCH against divisions that destroy, against being puffed up with pride that perverts the purpose of the Body of Christ, which should be a co-ordinated company working together under the anointing of the Spirit (Psalm 133; 2 Corinthians 6:1). Watch against leading others astray, against mistreating your ministers, against idols that push God into second place in your life. "Be alert and on your guard" (Amp. N.T.) concerning spiritual Gifts and your behaviour in the house of God. Stand fast in your maintenance of the message with its simple salvation, with Christ's remarkable resurrection, which will be the eternal experience of all the saints. This will make you to "be strong", "grow in strength" (Amp.). Paul's summing up emphasises the main purpose of his Letter. In everything that Christians do, love should be easily evidenced. A Sunday school teacher said to her class of small children, "Say this text, 'God is Love', after me." In unison the class said, "God is Love after me".

Saturday September 1st — 2 Kings 1:1-18

"Is. . . there. . . not a God in Israel?" (v.3).

SOMEONE has said: "Unless there is within us that

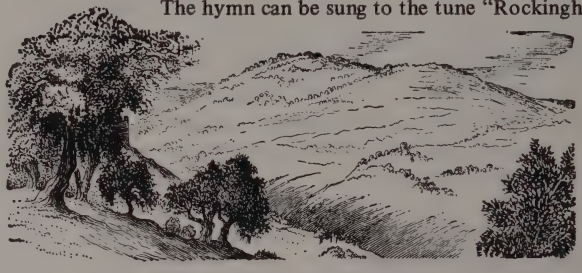
THE TRANSFIGURATION

by Tom Hamilton

LORD Jesus, lead us to the place
Where once Thy form in beauty shone,
There seek Thy glory and Thy grace,
With Peter, and with James and John.

Hear Moses and Elias talk
Of Thy demise that shall be done;
Foretell Thy sacrificial walk
For us, Thou God's beloved Son.



Lord, lead us to that holy sight
In contemplation clear and free,
Upon the Mount, in heavenly light,
Thy countenance, transformed, to see.

This glimpse of immortality,
Sweet vision of the world above:
We come so close, our God, to Thee,
But cannot here fulfil our love.

So we must leave this hill so high,
Descend to mundane spheres of strife.
From glory Jesus came to die,
His cross our way to heavenly life.

Based on Mark 9:2-7. The relevant passages are "Jesus was transfigured before them", and "This is My beloved Son; listen to Him".

The hymn can be sung to the tune "Rockingham".

which is above us, we will soon yield to that which is beneath us." In Israel there were good, godly kings. Both types left their impressions on the pages of history and on the lives of others. Unfortunately there were more bad kings than good. Their lives influenced people to personal unbelief, religious corruption, moral depravity and a loss of national character by seeking help from anyone but God (see 2 Kings 6:15-17). Character, like the oak, is made strong by the opposing elements. Faithless kings were robbing the people of the joy of seeing God put the enemy to flight. Ahaziah cried to the "god" of Ekron even though they believed Jehovah to be greater (see 1 Samuel 5), having good reason to remember His dealings with their forefathers. A king died without God's help whilst a captain lived because he asked for mercy (Psalm 103).

Sunday, September 2nd 2 Kings 2:1-14

"As they still went on" (v.11).

ONE of my favourite texts is James 1:12, "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation (patient under trial): for when he is tried (has stood the test), he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord has promised to them that love him" (parenthesis from the Amp. N.T.). Testings come to us all. Notice that when a testing time came – the imminent departure of a loved-one and the problems that Elijah sought to put in Elisha's path, not to mention the dissuasion of the sons of the prophets – Elisha had three things that would do us all good: faith in the living Lord (Hebrews 11, especially v.6), for he said, "As the Lord liveth"; confidence in his father in the faith (1 John 2:1, 1 Corinthians 4:15), for he said, "as thy soul liveth", and determination in his discipleship (John 12:25,26), for he said, "I will not leave thee". Others of his generation may have thought that there was no God in Israel, but he had walked with the master and knew differently. He not only went on, he achieved greater things (v.14).

Editorial

AS you pray and plan for your autumn programme, may I raise three important items for your interest, support and intercessory backing.

The Missionary Convention takes place in Cheltenham on September 6-9th. It is not too late for you to 'phone Missionary Secretary Leslie Wigglesworth for details. The visit of the Doctors Brien will be particularly welcomed.

Then there is the National Youth Rally at Westminster Central Hall, London, on Saturday, September 22nd at 3 and 6.30. Our Youth Committee was not able to secure Trafalgar Square for the afternoon, but they have arranged a march of witness after the afternoon meeting. The rally preacher is Paul Newberry, a member of the Assemblies of God Youth Council. Young folk are particularly asked to do their very best to attend and to encourage others to be there. Contact our National Youth Director for tickets.

Friends will recall that our Executive Council issued a Call to Prayer at the beginning of this year, asking all our Churches and colleagues to join in locally-arranged times of prayer and in personal prayer for revival. I would remind you that the next special Week of Prayer is planned for October 7th-14th. The response so far has been splendid and your continued and increasing backing are earnestly requested. "The need of the hour is Holy Ghost power" say the posters, and rightly so.

I had occasion to speak at a Sisterhood recently as a deputy for some one who was indisposed. Forty-five women gathered and the whole meeting was keen and live, though the Church to which the Sisterhood is attached is not Pentecostal. In discussion with the leader after the meeting I found that she and her husband had taken over the leadership of the Church some twenty-five years ago, when the building was almost derelict and attendances were seldom more than five. They felt guided to form a sisterhood and started with eight ladies. Over the years they have seen God moving and the Sunday attendances are in the twenties while the Sisterhood gets up to fifty and more. The building is in excellent order decoratively and in every other way.

Two people had a vision of what God could do. It goes to show!

Please remember that EVANGELISTIC SUNDAY this year is on the 14th October
Your thankoffering will be appreciated.

SALFORD

THE photographs show a section of our primary department and youth fellowship, at our Sunday school anniversary. The Church was full of people eager to listen to the children.

The Sunday school is enjoying the blessing of the Lord and almost every Sunday children are being added to our numbers, with many of our boys and girls finding Christ as their Saviour.

BURNHAM–ON–CROUCH Pastor: D. Scott

ON July 7th the Carnival Hall at Burnham-on-Crouch was packed with over 200 Elim friends who had journeyed from all over Essex and beyond to witness the opening Rally of the Elim Pentecostal Church. The air was filled with the glory of God as Church Leader David Scott welcomed everyone in the name of Jesus. Graham Martin, the Secretary, led the singing. The anointed singing by the Chelmsford Choir brought great blessing. Among the Ministers on the platform were the Field Superintendent, R.B. Chapman, and his wife, who travelled from Cheltenham to attend Pastor Chapman gave a word of greeting and encouragement. There were three interview testimonies to the saving grace of God from members of the Church. Mrs. B. Higginbotham testified to healing from curvature of the spine as a young woman. She is now the mother of four teenage girls and a boy of eight. Mrs. P. Martin was converted under the ministry of Pastor B.H. Tween when he was Minister of the United Reform Church at Southminster. Mrs. B. Robertson is the most recent convert. A challenging message was delivered by Pastor P.E. Streeter who came with many friends from the Romford Church.

On the following day the morning service was conducted by Pastor A. Greaves. The Secretary and his wife brought their third child, Emma Jane, to be dedicated to the Lord by Pastor Tween, who gave an anointed message from Ezekiel 47. The evening Communion service was conducted by Pastor Tween and Pastor Greaves preached on the meaning of fellowship.

The Church expresses sincere thanks to all who came and to those who have given prayerful support. They would value your continued prayers that they may experience Mark 16:15-20. Special appreciation goes to Pastors B.H. Tween, D.W. Anthony, A. Greaves and E.D. White, who from the beginning have given much prayer support and help. Mention has already been made in the EVANGEL of how God led us all together. Many will rejoice that God in His infinite wisdom and goodness has made the path clear and opened many doors. The Church meets for the time being in the Carnival Hall on Sundays at 10.30 for a Gospel service and Sunday school running concurrently and at 6.30 for Communion, on Tuesdays in various homes for prayer, and for Bible Studies in the Carnival Hall on Thursdays.

CHORLTON–CUM–HARDY Pastor: J.T. Glass

"REVOLUTION 73" Crusade commenced with the Crusade chorus: "Lift Jesus Higher". This was followed by the introduction of a new chorus: "Somebody's here and I know it is Jesus". The presence of the Lord seemed to fall on the meeting, a wonderful way in which to commence a crusade.

York Crusaders came over for the opening night and made a great contribution in word, song and testimony. Their programme was well-planned and packed with spiritual blessing. Thank you again, York Crusaders!

Our Evangelists, John Glass and Keith Lannon, gave up a week of their holidays to conduct this crusade in their home church. They were on the job from 9 a.m. until late in the evening. Their ministry brought great blessing to the Church and all who were privileged to hear them must have been conscious of a mighty anointing upon the Word. The coffee bar was well supported as a result of a lecture at the local high school and the distribution of cards.

The open air rally in one of the local parks on the Sunday afternoon proved to be a success since many listened to the gospel. There is a weekly open-air rally during the summer months by the local Church.

We thank all who supported the crusade by their presence and prayers and our people who supplied items nightly.

Unfortunately it rained all day on the last Sunday of the crusade, but we can record that it was a soul-saving "Revolution", others received the Baptism in the Holy Spirit and a credit balance of just over £23 accrued towards our next Crusade. This was a Church-financed crusade. To God be all the glory!

CLYDEBANK Pastor: I.G. Clarke

IT is with great joy that we write of the anointing of the Lord on the work in Clydebank. During the past four months many souls have been saved. Recently we held a great baptismal service when three of the converts and one of our own young men were baptised.

One of our young people has been praying for her mother for ten years. She was saved and baptised and on the same evening her teenage son decided for Christ and on the following Sunday he too was baptised. His mother's sister, who was an alcoholic, was gloriously saved shortly after and was at the prayer meeting that week.

Our prayer meetings are packed and we will soon have to move into the Church as the minor hall is getting too small. Some from other denominations are coming regularly to our prayer meetings as (to quote one): "The atmosphere is electric".

Another baptismal service has been arranged. We have waited for years for this breakthrough in the work here. Faithful past Ministers have sown and now is the time of reaping.

(Mrs.) N. TAIT

MARKETHILL Pastor: R. Cotter

WE have just celebrated our fiftieth anniversary. The Convention was held in the Methodist Church (kindly loaned) and was a tremendous source of blessing.

Pastor C.J.E. Kingston gave a short word concerning the commencement of the work. It was a tremendous privilege to have Brother Kingston as he was one of the founders of the work here. An enlightening missionary report was given by Pastor Ian MacInnes of Guyana. We received a very good missionary offering. David Hathaway gave a talk concerning the hand of God upon his life in a Communist prison and issued a tremendous challenge to Christians to pray through.

In the second meeting Pastor T.H. Stevenson gave a word of greeting telling of his time in the assembly (he has been Pastor twice). Pastor Kingston ministered with spiritual depth. Pastor W. McCandless, who assisted the Church in an honorary capacity before going into Elim Bible College, brought the closing message on "The Deity of Christ".

Special tribute was paid to the only remaining foundation Member, Mr. G. Gibson.

Pastor Kingston preached the next week with great blessing on the Second Coming. Pray for us. Our Assembly is growing. We have plans lodged with the local Council to erect a new building to enable the work to extend further.

A series on the Epistle of JUDE
— some great Subjects from a little Book

In Defence of the Faith

9. Multiplied Blessing

by F. J. Slemming

"May mercy and peace and love be multiplied to you." (v.2).

HERE is a God-inspired salutation. We are considering the great subject of Jude's Epistle, which is Apostasy in the last days; in these dark, perilous, difficult days, the children of God need God's mercy.

The general picture presented in this Book of Jude is dark and sombre, but, ere one can become depressed by the circumstances and times, this word shines, scintilates and inspires us – mercy. "Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need". (Hebrews 4:16). Jude expresses it, "Mercy. . .be multiplied to you."

"Peace be multiplied to you," he adds. Isaiah says that there is no peace to the wicked (57:20,21). The believer enjoys peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. This is our portion here and now, but here we have a blessed promise of multiplied peace. "But in everything let your petitions be made known unto God by prayer and supplications with thanksgiving. And that peace of God which surpasses all conception shall guard your hearts and minds by Jesus Christ." (Phillipians 4:6,7). D.L. Moody wrote in his Bible beside this verses: "This is ours when we worry about nothing, pray about everything and thank God for anything".

"Love be multiplied to you", continues Jude. By love we are bound to our Lord Jesus Christ – "bound to Him eternally by love's strong cord" – and by love we are bound one to the other. Someone has pointed out that, in the first three verses of Jude, in the original text as well as in some of the translations, the word "love" appears in some form in each verse. Lack of love causes apostasy. Does it mean anything to notice that, in the Book of Revelation, Philadelphia is followed by Laodicea?

The Book of Jude opens with this lovely salutation: "Mercy, peace and love be multiplied to you." In the closing words, here it is again in v.21: "Keep yourself in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life," and v.20 adds: "praying in the Holy Ghost." Mercy from above, peace within, and love in and around you – with these you will cope with the terrible apostasy of the last days.

Testimony Time

DURING the last year our church has been greatly blessed of God. My personal testimony is as follows. I was saved three years ago at a small Bible class in a member's house. I was then fourteen. My sister asked me to go. She had already encouraged me to accept the Lord Jesus into my heart and life, which I did, praise the Lord.

Then followed a difficult time. I left school at fifteen to join the army, but this just did not suit me. I returned home quite downhearted and then followed a succession of several jobs. My parents and Christian friends were really worried as I could not seem to keep a job. The Church prayed often for me and followed my progress with love and interest. At last, ten months ago now, the Lord provided a baker's job which I still hold today, praise His name.

Recently I became aware of my great desire to be filled with the Holy Spirit and was greatly blessed by the singing of Elim Bible College Student Choir at Kensington Temple. On July 4th this year the Lord wonderfully filled me with His Holy Spirit. This precious blessing has really changed my life.

If anyone has any problems there is only one Person to take them to, and that is Jesus. My problems were like mountains, but Jesus moved them. Now I love to pray for those with needs.

An Outline — A Harvest Sermon

Ploughing Luke 9:62

THE Church is the field under God's cultivation (1 Corinthians 3:9, Phillips). The preacher is the ploughman (see John Ploughman's Talks, by C.H. Spurgeon).

1. Ploughing: all weathers (Ecclesiastes 11:4); lonely work.

2. Straight furrow: "Draw out well". Fixed object at end of furrow. My Utmost for His Highest, Oswald Chambers. "I press toward the mark". "Looking unto Jesus".

3. Right Depth. Use depth-control lever. Danger of being too shallow, or too deep!

4. Consistency, evenness. There are many-furrowed ploughs, but the two-furrowed is best, says an experienced ploughman. Rather do a few things well than have too many irons in the fire. Many pastors are far too busy.

5. Curious Law in Israel re ploughing with an ox and an ass (Deuteronomy 22:10). Irregular pace leads to chafing. "Be not unequally yoked".

An Exhortation — Words

"OUR Pastor is a fine man, and a good preacher, but he talks too much". Have you heard that one? Brethren, restrain the temptation to give those little pep talks during the service besides the sermon, lest by the time you get to the sermon the people are wearied. It really is not necessary always to comment on that hymn we've just sung. Let the great hymns speak for themselves. A silence following can be more effective, whereas a chorus immediately following the hymn can kill that effect.

For the first few years of his ministry the writer gave sermonettes at the weekly prayer-meeting covering almost every passage in the Bible bearing on prayer. In subsequent years he learned that a better way was to keep exhortations to a minimum and to let the people get down to prayer. They learn to pray by praying!

A Quotation — "Jesus, Jesus, Jesus"

"I RESOLUTELY use the name that the writer of the Letter uses, in spite of the view held by some that we ought never to use the name in that way. That is a view with which I have no sympathy at all. This writer does not say 'the Lord Jesus Christ'. All that is true, and true of Him. It has recently been said that when we think of Him we should think with all reverence, and we cannot do so if we say Jesus. I do not understand that conception. I am speaking of Him as this writer does so constantly: Jesus; and in my thinking of Him is everything of awe and reverence."

41 The End of a Love Story (Genesis 35:18,19)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

WHEN Jacob met Rachel is was a case of "love at first sight". So great was his love that the seven years that he served for her seemed like only a few days. There were strains during their married life, mostly as a result of the callous, unscrupulous act of Laban, yet their love overcame their troubles, so that, when Rachel died, it was a bitter blow to Jacob. It left a deep, lasting wound in his heart which was shown by his special affection for Joseph and Benjamin, Rachel's sons.

We have all known, or will certainly know, periods of deep, searching sorrow. Perhaps, like Jacob, it may be in losing one whom we have loved dearly. Maybe, as with the disciples when the Lord Jesus was crucified, it will be the sudden shattering of our hopes. Like the father in Luke 15, it could be the agony of having a prodigal child. As in the case of the woman in Matthew 9, it might be the experience of a terrible, crippling sickness in ourselves or in a loved one. If you ask me, "Why did the Lord let this happen to me?", or if my own heart cries, "Why have I had to go this way?", I can only answer, "I don't know!". The nearest we can go to a reason is in the words of sorely-tried Job: "When He has tried me, I shall come forth as gold". If we reverently trust Him, the experience which cuts so deeply will make us more like Jesus. The Lord Jesus is the great Physician who can heal broken hearts, the mighty Conqueror who holds the keys of death and hell. All our suffering would be infinitely worse if we could not place our broken hearts in His loving hands.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Pastor Walker,

AFTER reading the tribute to Pastor W.J. Allen by Pastor J.T. Bradley, I would like to add a personal tribute to a true friend and brother in Christ.

I first met him in 1933, when with Mrs. Allen and their son Peter, he came on holiday to our home. In the years that followed, my brother and I enjoyed most precious fellowship with him at his home and at the Elim Pentecostal Church at Smethwick. Here at Evesham he inspired and encouraged us by his ardent zeal and exuberant joy, helping us to pioneer the truths of Pentecost by open-air witness and house-to-house distribution of literature. How we rejoiced with him when he told us of his call to the Elim ministry and prayed for God's blessing on his labours in various Elim Churches.

Then, in April 1971, he rejoiced and praised God with us, when, in answer to our mutual prayers, God sent such an able and faithful minister as Pastor J.R. Brown to open an Elim Pentecostal Church in Evesham.

Pastor Allen and my brother are now rejoicing together in the presence of Jesus their Lord, whom they loved so dearly and served so faithfully.

Yours sincerely in Christ,

Frederick D. Walker

Dear Pastor Walker,

HAVING read Mrs. A. Barker's testimony in the EVANGEL, it came to my mind how, on my way home from a day at the coast, I got into conversation with an elderly man who sat next to me on the train. I asked him if he had any family. He said, "No, and I have no one to leave our money to", meaning his wife too. He said, "We are going to spend it this way – days out at the coast etc. – and enjoy ourselves". He went on to say that he knew where he was going when his life was finished here, as he had been a stoker, and his place was booked below, as they would need a stoker to stoke the fires down there.

This opened up the way for me to witness to him, so I said that he need not be, as there was still time for him to find his way to Heaven if he wanted to. I tried to make him realise how important it is for us to make a decision, especially those who had reached retirement age.

After this, he returned to his paper. While sitting quietly, I prayed that the Lord would make him willing to accept some tracts that I had with me. I felt this was all in God's will. He got off the train at the same station as I did, so I had the opportunity. I asked him if he would accept the tracts and read them, as they could help him to become a door-keeper in Heaven, instead of being a stoker in Hell. With a broad grin he accepted the tracts and promised to read them.

We do not always see the fruit of our labours, but I think that we are going to get many wonderful surprises when we get to Heaven. One sows, another reaps, but God gives the increase. We give Him all the praise and glory.

Yours sincerely,

Another sister in Christ Jesus

Dear Pastor Walker,

SEVERAL months ago I was contacted by Pastor D.G. Woodfield concerning the possibility of giving a number of young people from troubled areas of Belfast a holiday at the Bridlington Camp. The plans were made and through the good offices of Pastor J.T. Bradley an appeal was made in the EVANGEL to help the project.

Twenty-four young people from churches in Belfast enjoyed that holiday at the Camp.

As Youth Commissioner for Ulster may I express through the columns of the EVANGEL our thanks and appreciation to all who helped in this project through their gifts, and to Pastor Woodfield and the staff at the camp.

The help in this practical way from members of the Elim Family is a source of strength to those who are going through a difficult time.

Please continue in prayer that the Lord will move through Ulster by the power of His Spirit and that peace may come again to this land.

Thank you all in the name of the Lord.

Yours in His Service,

Alan Seeman

The Challenge

Ephesians 2:8,9

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

DAVID entered the Israelite camp and greeted his three eldest brothers who were soldiers in King Saul's army. "I've brought you some bread from home", he said. As they exchanged news, a loud voice roared through the camp: "Give me a champion to fight!". David looked across and saw the biggest man he had ever seen.

"That is Goliath," his brothers explained, "the greatest fighter in the Philistine army. Every morning and evening for forty days he has issued his challenge, but none of our soldiers has the courage to face him. We are all afraid of him. Even our strongest, bravest soldier is no match for the giant. Why, the very sound of his voice makes us tremble with fear!".

"I will fight him," David said.

"Don't be foolish," cried Saul, when he heard of David's decision. "You are only a shepherd boy. You would not stand a chance against him!.

"God will protect me," said David, and he refused to wear the armour Saul gave him. "My sling will do", he said, and off he ran to meet Goliath.

"How dare you make a fool of me!" roared Goliath, as he looked down at David. "I asked for a champion, not a skinny little shepherd boy like you."

Saul and his soldiers were afraid for David. "He hasn't a chance!" they murmured among themselves, "He'll never win." But they reckoned without God.

Goliath, clad in his heavy armour, drew his sword and roared with laughter as David put a small pebble in his sling. Goliath was still laughing as David sent the pebble spinning through the air, but his laughter ceased as the pebble found its mark. It struck Goliath right in the middle of his forehead and sent him crashing to the ground, dead.

Goliath relied on his armour to protect him and to preserve his life, but his boasting was in vain. Many people today think that their good words and kind deeds will give them eternal life, but God would have us be like David, protected by His love. Only by faith in His divine forgiveness can we be assured of a full, wonderful salvation and everlasting life.

FIGHT EVIL WITH A WILL!

This is the Last Will and Testament

Do not leave the distribution of your estate to chance.
Here are some reasons why you should make a will:

1. It prevents misunderstanding over your intentions about your estate.
2. It provides opportunity for you to continue to exercise Christian stewardship.
3. It helps to avoid heavy expenses, which can sometimes drain away valuable assets.
4. It gives you opportunity to designate who shall benefit from your possessions.

You can show your gratitude for blessings received and also continue the fight against evil by making a gift to the Elim work in your will.

The following wording can be incorporated in a will or codicil:

I bequeath to the Elim Pentecostal Church, of 117 St. George's Road, Cheltenham, Glos, the sum of £ ..... free of duty for the general purpose of its work, and I declare that the receipt of the Secretary-General for the time being shall be a good discharge for the said legacy.

Is it not better to know that your possessions will be used for the Lord's work rather than be spent by those who have never honoured or revered His name ?

From the President's pen

God's Frontiersmen

I AM writing this during a visit to Elim's youngest Presbytery, the Tyne-Tees Presbytery. It has been a great joy to share fellowship with the enthusiastic band of ministers and to visit some of the churches which have been opened as a result of fairly recent evangelistic campaigns. There is something thrilling about visiting places which you have known hitherto only as names on your prayer list and being able to see the answers to your prayers. To those who support our evangelists by prayer and financial help let me say, "Pray on, and go on giving, because 'your labour is not in vain in the Lord.'"

If you could see, as I have seen, the happy faces of those who have recently found the Lord and if you could share in meetings alive with the infectious joy that comes where the blessing God is resting, you would realise that evangelism is worthwhile. May God give us a fresh vision of the needs of men and women and a new confidence in the power of the gospel to meet those needs! The gospel is still the power of God unto salvation when it is proclaimed under the anointing of the Holy Spirit. As a movement we need to pray for a fresh visitation of the Holy Spirit and a new willingness to reach out to the troubled men and women who live all around us.

A most enjoyable feature of my stay in this north-eastern corner of England has been an afternoon spent with some of the brethren during which we visited Housesteads, one of the major forts on Hadrian's wall. To watch the amazing course of the great white wall as it marches resolutely up and down the lonely Northumbrian hills – now cresting a distant skyline with its stony defiance, now plunging down into a deep valley in its determination to leave no part of its line undefended – is to feel a deep admiration for the courage and tenacity of purpose of the men who both built and defended this far-flung frontier of the Roman Empire. Perhaps it was appropriate that, while we picked our way through the ruins of Housesteads, the mist and rain came sweeping across the rolling hills and helped us imagine the discomforts of those rugged legionaries who once tramped these walls, peering through the northern gloom at the distant hills from which the enemies of the Empire might at any moment launch a fresh assault.

The guide-book told me that this wall ran for seventy-three miles from Wallsend-on-Tyne to Bowness-on-Solway and then turned south for another forty miles down the coast of Cumberland, figures which served only to underline the tremendous determination of the Romans to guard the frontiers of their Empire. This was not the only consideration, however. In the words of the guide-book: "This system was not designed for a static defence but to allow vigorous counter-attacks to be launched to the north from the spring-board of the wall."

Within the comfort of the lovely Christian home in which I stayed in South Shields, I pondered what I had seen and learned about Hadrian and his Wall. From the warmth of my own bed I tried to imagine the privations of those centurions and their men on that rain-swept wall. Surely the glamour of the Roman uniform was soon lost when its wearer, soaked to the skin, paced the lonely monotony of the wall; yet from that wearisome round of duty the interests of the great Empire were not only defended but extended.

Is there not a parable here? There are times when the Christian calling is likewise difficult to fulfil, times when the exhilaration of a convention or the thrill of some special opportunity for evangelism are superseded by the niggling frustrations and sheer ordinariness of everyday Christian living, times when the local Church seems too dull compared with the atmosphere of the church that we visited on holiday or the camp or conference that we recently attended. It is here, though, that the real worth of our profession of loyalty to Christ is proved. The glory of the Roman Empire was often won and maintained by the men who were stedfast in the northern mists. The glory of the Kingdom of Christ is likewise achieved by men and women, pastors and people, who stay at their posts in difficult places, guarding the truth, maintaining the standards of Christian behaviour, creating centres of understanding Christian fellowship and launching out in vigorous counter-attacks on the forces of spiritual darkness which hold the world under their despotic rule.

The good discipline and dedicated loyalty of the Roman soldier were a source of constant inspiration to the apostle Paul: "Guard what has been entrusted to you," he wrote to Timothy, and again: "Endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ". Yet again: "Fight the good faith", and "Put on the whole armour of God". Stirring as a trumpet call, crisp as a word of command, the Apostle's words ring out, calling us to become God's frontiersmen – loyal, stedfast and utterly committed to the interests of the Kingdom of Christ.

Nothing less is good enough for Him who loved us and gave Himself for us.

John Lancaster

Don't do it!

by Paul A. Epton,
Pastor of our Birkenhead Church

"DON'T do it", cried the young boy's mother. Only fourteen years old he was and already he was tired of life and wished to end this dead-end existence. He was such an intelligent child; at the age of three he could read and, before he started school, he could write. What a waste this was of a life so young, so full of potential. Where does the blame lie – parents, teachers, pastors, or friends? Is one to blame or are they all?

Parent, your child is an intelligent, living soul. He wants to read and so he should, but what does he read? Your help from his early years in choosing interesting reading matter may help to determine what he will be reading in twenty years' time. An interesting Bible story book will be good for a five-year old and not just Daniel in the lions' den, but the stories of Jesus and the cross. When he is a little older buy him a Bible in modern English.

Teacher, your position is of great importance. You are helping to mould that childs' attitude to society. You can help make him aware of God and His gift of salvation. Perhaps you can't preach, but you can answer questions. Question and answer lessons have done much to bring children to Christ.

Pastor, what a responsibility is ours! The future of the children in our Sunday schools is before us. We must strive to reach more children, persuade more parents, encourage more teachers, that the work of God may increase.

Christian friend, you too can share in this work. You may not be a parent, teacher or a pastor, but you are a Christian and a friend. Today there are fewer children in Sunday school and fewer parents in church. The children we have must be kept, encouraged and prayed over, not just as Sunday schools, but as individuals, one by one.

There are many young lives in our spheres of interest. They all need Christ and they all need you – to help, to pray, to love. If the need of this world in the future is to be met then "Don't do it", don't close your eyes to the need, but pray that God will help us and use us to meet the ever-increasing challenges in the ever-increasing population.

"Suffer the little children to come unto Me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven".

. . . . Woman's Touch

THE lady of my manse has the green-finger touch. Her garden produces delightful and surprising things. For fascinating charm, however, none of them surpasses her own do-it-yourself clothes-line. It binds together in sweet and unexpected fellowship the rain water pipe and the apple tree, with a twenty foot union of cast-off neckties, electric cable, old dog leads, curtain wire and a length of chain, all bound together in the bundle of life with a great muddley knot of hairy string. The normal plastic line between bare metal posts is more efficient, but far less interesting.

She claims that she is no artist. My den is full of artist's canvasses, brushes and paint, but it is a dark jungle of books, boxes and papers into which she alone has squeezed a little loveliness with a couple of small vases of roses. The woman's touch, bizarre or beautiful, is inimitable.

When she was in bed with a chill, I invaded the kitchen and reduced it to a state of clinical orderliness, re-organised the cutlery drawer, and stacked the contents of the pantry shelves with symmetrical exactness. My son came home for a midday meal and decided that it would be more homely to have it in the garden - which I hadn't interfered with.

Women are marvellous. They can remember who sent all the birthday cards and who sent which. Me? I can't even think who sent my presents — my best tie or my pungent after-shave. I wish I could. I arrive somewhere smelling like a violet, wondering how on earth I can explain my fragrant presence. If only I could remember who to blame: "Aunt Jemima sent me this stuff - got to use it". Why can't they make "after-shave comforts" odourless? That's a man I suppose. Woman - well the first rule of her highway code is perfume.

Somebody asked me if God wouldn't be a bit more likeable as a She instead of a He? Haven't the Catholics been a bit knowing in putting the Virgin Mary alongside Him in church? Mostly, God is thought of as living in heaven like the assize judge in his lodgings.

Such a picture of God, however, is as far removed from the New Testament God as the Attorney-General is from the Venus de Milo. We are told to come boldly to theThrone of Grace. God is not enthroned justice, but enthroned grace. A photographer promised his lady client that he would do her justice. She replied, "It isn't justice I want in this studio — it's mercy".

Who started the rumour that God was all-male? If only some would read the bits of the Bible which they do read a little more carefully, such as the creation story. It says quite clearly that when God made mankind in His own image He made them male and female. A star preacher of a couple of generations ago preached on the Motherhood of God. His text was: "As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you." For that matter, the second verse of the Bible describes the Spirit of God with a feminine noun.

Anyway, who gave woman her touch? The way people talk you would think that girls were invented in Hollywood, instead of in heaven. Woman sprang from the matrix of the mind of God, just as she is.

If there is one verse in the Bible I would like to re-write, it would be the one about God not being the author of confusion. It sounds as if He were the patron deity for martinets, pedantics, the exacting and the fussy, but, looking around Nature, it is obvious that He loves chaotic splendour. When I consider the Alps I can see where the woman's touch came from.

Men build featureless brick walls. God paints them with His weather into soft colour patterns. God makes trees all shapes and sizes. Men send out paid vandals to subdue them into disciplined rows of limbless sadness along the bus route.

Men have a dark competence — they can turn a tree's graceful beauty into a stark cross. God had another try with that same tree, and turned its blood-stained horror into the glory of divine mercy. He reshaped the unimaginative cross by the genius of His creature love into the supreme symbol of hope for all the crushed and guilty folk on earth. That's better than the woman's touch. It's the Jesus touch.

King David said, "Thy gentleness hath made me great". The woman's touch — God made it. God has it — the touch that soothes, heals, calms, forgives, saves, transforms, glorifies and beautifies.

Can a woman's tender care,
Cease towards the child she bare?
Yes, she may forgetful be,
Yet will He remember me.

PRAYER and PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

YOU may recall that I asked in this Column for your prayers for an Elim brother who holds an open air service each Tuesday lunch hour in Cheapside in the City of London. The service is actually held by the side of the famous Bow-bells Church, which bells Dick Whittington heard at Highgate, and returned to become thrice Lord Mayor of London.

I have received a letter thanking us all for our prayers on behalf of this witness for Christ. One week, two young men sat and listened and later were spoken to. Do pray for these and this witness right in the heart of the City of London.

As you know there is more than one City in London but the well known one is where the banking and other interests have their offices. Cheapside got its name because it was once a street with stalls lining both sides selling wares and food cheaply. As one proceeds west along Cheapside, St. Paul's Cathedral is on the left and on the right is Aldersgate Street. This is the famous street where John Wesley, coming out of a service, said that his heart had been strangely warmed. Dr. Leslie Church wrote the life-story of Wesley and, using the great preacher's words, entitled it, "The Knight of the Burning Heart."

Then again a little north of where this witness is given each week is Moorgate. Here Wesley and Whitfield held their mammoth services on Common land. Both erected places of worship nearby, but alas, Whitfield's Tabernacle is now a warehouse. Opposite Wesley's Chapel is Bunhill Fields where John Bunyan was laid to rest.

Thank God for this brother who, filled with the Holy Ghost, follows the great line of preachers, who, right in the heart of London, preaches the Gospel which alone can save. Wesley, Whitfield and Bunyan have passed on to their reward. Jesus Christ remains the same, yesterday, today and for ever, able to save and warm mens' cold hearts and make them fiery messengers of the gospel of Christ.

the gifts of God to his fellow-men (Matthew 10:8). Mark Twain said, "Always do right. This will gratify some people and astonish the rest." Jesus "went about doing good", not just being good!! Salt is useless if it is left in the jar (Matthew 5:13); cast it into the pot!

Sunday, September 9th 2 Kings 5:1-14
"A little maid" (v.2).

AS pastors our prayer should be that of Rachel, "Give me children or I die" (Genesis 30:1), for children are "an heritage of the Lord" (Psalm 127:3). We are encouraged, "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it". (Proverbs 22:6). The trouble today seems to be that men train them in the way that they should go while going another way themselves; children have always been better imitators than listeners. Thank God for every child you ever have a chance to influence for God and good, for who can tell what will be the result of your faithful labour A mother or a righteous rabbi had done a good job in teaching this little maid about holy things, for even being a captive in a strange land, probably separated from her own family, could not remove from her heart faith in God and his ability to prove Himself to the unbeliever.

A depressed Sunday school teacher in Nottingham complained to the Lord that she had only one child in her class. She felt that it was not worth carrying on. God said to her heart, "Do the best you can for the one you have got". Despite her discouragement, she continued to teach and pray for just that one. HE WAS WILLIAM BOOTH!

Harvest

by F. Lavender

IT is remarkable how the Lord Jesus was able to teach eternal truth by everyday things; a lost sheep, a piece of silver, a flower, a marriage feast are among the illustrations which he used. Even more remarkable is the constant application which His stories have all down the years so that they can be readily understood even today.

What we call the story of the tares tells of a farmer who sowed good wheat seed in one of his fields. This farmer had a malicious enemy who waited until darkness came and then sowed in the same field a weed called darnel which, in its early growth, resembled wheat. At first, therefore, the weeds grew unrecognised among the wheat, but when the farm workers realised what was growing, they wanted to pull the darnel up. The farmer, however, did not want to risk the wheat being uprooted with the weeds, so he told his men to let them grow together until the harvest and then they could separate the weeds to burn them but put the wheat into his barns. This very simple story has been enacted in many of our farms and gardens these past weeks – the cereals, fruit and vegetables harvested for food and the weeds burned.

From this story several important truths are taught. All people are not children of God, as some would have us believe. The Lord Jesus showed by this story that some are children of God, but that others are children of Satan – in fact, on another occasion He bluntly told some folk: "You are of your father the Devil" (John 8:44).

The Lord said that both kinds of people are growing together in this world. Sometimes God deals violently with a Herod or a Pharaoh, but generally He takes no immediate action to destroy the ungodly. Even those who blaspheme and deny Him are allowed to continue almost unchecked because, as Peter says, the Lord is patiently giving them full opportunity to repent and be saved (2 Peter 3:9).

The story shows us that harvest is certain; nature itself is constantly telling us that, what men sow, they will one day reap. James says that God is like a farmer waiting for the harvest to ripen. When the spiritual harvest of the world is ready it will be reaped; both good and bad will appear before God to be judged.

Not all that is reaped will be taken into God's home, for there is to be final separation. When God reaps the harvest of the earth the unrepentant sinner will be separated and cast out of God's presence into eternal night and misery, but those who have given their lives to Christ will be received and honoured by Him then.

Now the Bible shows that we are all by nature the children of wrath (Ephesians 2:3) and that the just reward for all of us would be destruction at the Coming of the Lord. Because of the great love and mercy of God, however, He has made a way for us to be saved from sin and judgment, for He sent His only Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, to save us and to bring us to Himself. God can do what no farmer on earth can accomplish: He is able to take those like you and me, who are by nature children of Satan, and make us His own sons and daughters. The Bible tells us that all who believe on the Lord Jesus are given the right to become the sons of God (John 1:12). It says of true Christians that God has delivered them from the power of darkness and has lifted them up into the kingdom of His dear Son.

Will you believe the message of this story of Jesus and let him take away your sin and make you a child of God? The harvest is certain. As you accept or reject Him now even so will He accept or reject you then. Eternal joy or eternal sorrow depends on the choice which you make. I urge you to choose Christ now.

Earthenware Pots

I WROTE in the EVANGEL of August 18th about my visit to the Potteries and of all the exquisite articles that I saw. The Wedgwood pottery alone employs 2,000 craftspeople and its premises extend over an area of 500 acres. The factory is among the most modern in the world with its electric tunnel ovens, yet even today many of the articles are thrown on the wheel and are ornamented by hand. The making of clay pots began many centuries ago, for the people of the very earliest of civilisations learned to make vessels for cooking purposes and for holding water and storing food and valuables.

When I was in Ghana I felt that I was transported back into antiquity for I saw many examples of hand-made earthenware. Some villages specialise in this craft because they possess suitable clay both red and black. How thrilled I was when one village woman, knowing of my love of flowers, brought me four large earthenware plant tubs to decorate my verandah. She had made them herself, beautifully and symmetrically shaping them by her own hands, with no help from a potter's wheel or a baking kiln. I have a well-proportioned water jug in rich red earthenware and, tougher still, a black mortar, both fashioned by hand and baked in the sun. There is something very satisfying about the quality and texture of these sturdy pots. In these days of so much automation and cheap plastic ware there is a return to an appreciation of hand-made pottery and many people attend pottery classes.

The Bible is very down to earth and gives many details of various vessels. I imagine that the cooking pot used by Gideon would be similar to those used by the women of Ghana on their charcoal fires. There were large open vessels for washing and bowls and cups for drinking. In the early nomadic stages of Hebrew life the utensils would be few and simple and of earthenware. The prophets Isaiah and Jeremiah made frequent mention of the potter and his art; the latter writes of the potter's house and of a potter's earthen bottle. In the New Testament we read only once of earthenware vessels – in 2 Corinthians 4:7 when Paul speaks of the glorious light of the gospel in our hearts and lives. I like the NEB rendering: "We are no better than pots of earthenware to contain this treasure and this proves that such transcendent power does not come from us, but is God's alone". Paul brings us all down to scale. We can harbour no false pride. We are but of clay, bearing no beauty of our own, but useful because of what we can contain of God's power.

It would seem that Paul was very conscious of his own "earthliness" and had to defend his apostleship on a number of occasions. There were those in Corinth who said: "His bodily presence is weak and his speech contemptible" (2 Corinthians 10:10). Such criticisms only confirmed that all that he accomplished was attributable to the power of God within him. Never let the devil prevent you form active service by the consciousness of your seeming lack of talent or "personality" as the world calls it. Remember how the earthenware pitchers of Gideon's band revealed the light concealed within and put to flight a mighty army.

O Jesus Christ, grow Thou in me,
And all things else recede;
My heart be daily nearer Thee
From sin be daily freed.

Each day let Thy supporting might
My weakness still embrace;
My darkness vanish in Thy light,
Thy life my death efface.

In Thy bright beams which on me fall,
Fade every evil thought;
That I am nothing, Thou art all,
I would be daily taught.

More of Thy glory let me see,
Thou Holy, Wise, and True!
I would Thy living image be,
In joy and sorrow too.

Fill me with gladness from above,
Hold me by strength divine!
Lord, let the glow of Thy great love
Through my whole being shine.

Make this poor self grow less and less
Be Thou my life and aim;
O make me daily, through Thy grace,
More meet to bear Thy name!

YOUTH PAGE

THE PRINCIPLES AND PRACTICE OF YOUTH WORK

Organisation and Administration

3. The Constitution

There are important youth items in the Constitution of the Elim Pentecostal Church. These should be studied and noted very carefully. It would be a good thing to write the appropriate rules into the minuted constitution of the group, as these are often valuable, for example, when one is negotiating with local authorities for grant aid. It is also wise to write out some of the aims of the fellowship, viz.

To lead young people into a personal experience of the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour and Master.

To deepen their fellowship with Christ and with one another through regular prayer, Bible study and worship, and to lead them on to active church membership.

To train members in Christian witness and service.

To foster interest in the work of the Church overseas.

To help members to a fuller understanding of the doctrine and worship to the Church.

To encourage the development of mature Christian character through suitable cultural, educational and recreative activities.

It is always a good idea to have a real objective. This must be a constant point of reference so that the standards of the youth group do not deteriorate.

4. The Premises

There is nothing that militates against successful youth work more than dirty, dingy premises. If there is a room available which can be used for youth activities, it can easily and quickly be transformed into the kind of place to which young people will want to bring their friends. The work can be done by the young people themselves under the supervision of an experienced decorator. Many paint firms will grant concessions to youth groups for paint and wallpapers. The local Youth Organiser is sometimes in a position to help with special grants. For further information on premises read The Parish Youth Club by Harold Willson, S.P.C.K.

A careful consideration of these matters will make the youth department efficient and progressive.

LESSON 2 Programme Planning

IF the suggestions of this lesson are to be of the greatest use, one thing must be emphasised: few programmes can be adopted in their entirety by different groups of persons with different leaders in different localities, circumstances and stages of development. Adaptation according to needs, persons and opportunities is the key to successful programme planning. The leader or worker must be wise and discriminating.

The Principles of Programme Planning

We have dealt with the importance and value of committees; in the realm of programme planning, the committee comes into its own. There is always the danger that an enthusiastic leader, perhaps with a strong personal interest in certain directions, will seek, perhaps unconsciously, to shape the youth work along the lines of his own pursuit. He provides the spearhead thrust, the group is expected to conform. A committee will obviate this danger.

The first principle of successful programme planning is Interest. Young people are interested in particular things: fun, vocations, personal appearance, personality, parents, manners, boy-friends, girl-friends, marriage, education, God's will for their lives. The subjects chosen for the programmes must be relevant to the interests and aspirations of the young people. A teenager is sure to enjoy leading a discussion if it is on a topic in which he is vitally interested. Perhaps the best way of finding the interests of a group is to conduct a survey. Open discussion and personal interview are also good methods of discovering what the young people need in the programmes.

The second principle of successful programming is challenge. Youth programmes can be merely entertainment. While the meetings must be alive and free from formality, they must contain substance that will build up the lives of the young people physically, morally, spiritually and intellectually. The programme should be aimed toward meeting spiritual needs and should be presented in an interesting and appealing manner. Which of the following comments do you hear after your youth activities?—

"What a boring programme! What was the point?"

"Let's have a meeting like that again soon! That programme certainly challenged me and helped me to understand the subject more fully."

Youth programmes for all age groups should always issue in some form of action. An evening's youth activity is unprofitable unless it sends the young person home to make a further contribution to his or her home and the world in general. Even recreation means re-creation.

The third principle in the quest for successful youth work is the important matter of variety. We all enjoy a plate of fish and chips, but what would we say if we had them for breakfast, lunch, tea, dinner and supper? "Variety is the spice of life" - particularly in the realm of youth work! We must have variety which combines spiritual depth with the built-in sparkle that appeals to today's youth, which stimulates creative thinking and emphasises participation and which brings young people to God's Word for answers to life's problems.

Monday, September 3rd — 2 Kings 2:15-25

"The spirit of Elijah doth rest on Elisha" (v.15).

JOHN Wesley said, "God buries his workmen, but his work goes on". This inscription is in Westminster Abbey on a memorial tablet. You will not find a memorial tablet to Elijah, but it was Elijah, who symbolised the prophets alongside Moses, who symbolised the law, who were seen on the Mount of Transfiguration with the glorified Lord. Elijah was taken up into heavenly places, leaving a gap in the ranks of the godly (Ezekiel 22:30). Elisha, by his devotion to the senior prophet and the demonstration of his belief that without the spirit of Elijah he would fall when he tore his own garments asunder, lived to labour on as one moved by the Spirit of God (Hebrews 1:1). David Ayling once said about the Spirit: "When the wind of God fills the threadbare canvas of human incapability, THAT'S POWER!".

Tuesday, September 4th — 2 Kings 3:1-12

"The Word of the Lord is with Him" (v.12).

PAUL says that Christians are known and read of all men . If we are consistent, even our enemies will have to say of us, as Pilate did of Jesus, "I find no fault in this man".

Here kings acknowledged a man whose words were with power (Luke 4:36,37), whose lips proclaimed the truth of God and whose miraculous ministry testified that God was with him (1 Corinthians 2:1-5). How sad that, then as now, many men who claim to serve God reject or reduce His Word and will see the day when they will be cursed of God (Galatians 1:6-9; Revelation 22:18-19).

Wednesday, September 5th — 2 Kings 3:13-27

"This is but a light thing in the sight of the Lord" (v.18).

WATER in a dry land was brought by the science of irrigation, revealed by the Almighty, who always works in co-operation with men who obey His Word. He had said, "Make this valley full of ditches", revealing the eternal truth that "Faith without works is dead". God could have worked without man, but He chose responsive partnership. The Lord went on to defeat the enemy whose heathen sacrifice (v.27) was to no avail and whose premature conclusions (v.23) probably led to laxity in the battle. Like Samson, they found that their strength was not sufficient. The wonder of winning in battle and wading in water came because the Lord loved even a half-hearted believer (vv.1-3; 1 Kings 12:28-32).

Thursday, September 6th — 2 Kings 4:1-17

"A certain woman"; "a great woman" (vv.1,8).

FROM the two ends of the social strata came one woman so poor that she was about to see her sons sold as slaves to pay her debts, the other so rich that she could afford a home improvement to provide for a passing prophet. God and God's servant loved them both. The poor one was a prophet's wife, kept poor by her husband's devotion to the Lord whom he "feared", not the kind of fear we have of an enemy, but the kind of fear that a young bride has when she cooks her husband's first meal, fearing that she might not please the one whom she loves most. The rich woman, with connections in the royal court (v.13) and among the army, was not only saintly in being hospitable (Romans 12:13), but also humble in heart and attitude (James 4:6). One cried in desperate need and received good measure (Luke 6:38), the other did not grip her gold in greed, but ministered of her substance to the Lord and his servant and proved the promise "He maketh the barren. . .a joyful mother of children." (Psalm 113:9).

Friday, September 7th — 2 Kings 4:18-37

"It shall be well" (v.23).

ACCORDING to the margin, when the distressed woman's husband asked why she was going to see the prophet other than on a holy day, she answered, "Peace". When Gehazi, the servant of Elisha, went to meet the ass running at full speed with two people perched on its back (v.24) and asked her if it was well with her and the family, she answered, "Peace". Elisha knew that her soul was vexed within her. He had that spiritual discernment that caused him to look, not on the outward appearance, but on the heart (1 Samuel 16:7). Sometimes we "tremble on the rock, but the rock never trembles underneath us", as Isaiah revealed (26:3): "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on Thee, because he trusteth in Thee". Her trust was rewarded, even though it meant that the man of God had to prevail in prayer (Matthew 7:7-11).

Saturday, September 8th — 2 Kings 4:38-44

"He cast it into the pot" (v.41).

ELISHA asked Elijah for a "double portion" of his spirit. There are exactly twice as many miracles recorded in Scripture ascribed to Elisha as there are to Elijah. These miracles occured in different circumstances, different strata of society were affected by them and differing persons were permitted the privilege of participating in the process of the miraculous manifestation, all because Elisha had the master's mantle on him. The Spirit of the seeking Saviour was within him (Luke 19:10) and a determination to distribute

by Hugh Sawyer

"Thou shalt guide me with Thy counsel, and afterwards receive me to glory" (Psalm 73 v.24).

THE omniscience of Jesus Christ made the use of ficticious characters unnecessary to illustrate His teaching discourses. Presumably when speaking of Dives the rich man and Lazarus the beggar He was acquainted with the identity of both; what is commonly accepted as a parable could well be factual evidence. Even if it is a parable, a parable is a story true to life and based upon reality.

This dramatic narrative clearly magnifies the amazing grace and absolute justice of almighty God.

In the natural sense the men lived in different worlds. One was very rich and clothed his perfumed body in purple and fine linen. He fared sumptuously; indifferent, selfish and self-satisfied, he moved among the cream of society, indulging in the gaiety of the day.

The other was clad in rags, foul and dirty. He lay in the dust outside the magnificient home of Dives and would be a familiar sight to the haughty resident as he passed to and fro on his daily jaunts. Lazarus piteously sought alms of all who, mostly unconcerned, passed by. The beggar's only visible companions were the scavenging dogs, themselves undomesticated and considered unclean. They licked the festering sores which covered his emaciated body. Jesus says that for food this man depended upon the crumbs which fell from the rich man's table. There were not like the bread crumbs we know today, but were pieces of bread used instead of table napkins upon which the diners wiped their fingers after dipping them into the various dishes of food placed before them. Dives' slaves were wont to slip outside and give these pieces of soiled bread to Lazarus, who in his hunger eagerly devoured them.

Dives lived a life of luxury, Lazarus a life of misery. Nevertheless, as he lay in the swirling dust stirred up by many shuffling feet, Lazarus had much time for meditation, presumable upon spiritual doctrine wherein his thoughts freely roamed the heavenly spheres and contemplated the abiding peace and joy therein. This became evident when that wondrous day of liberation from worldly woes dawned for Lazarus. We are told that his soul was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom.

Abraham's bosom was not another name for Paradise, it signifies being in that hallowed state. The expression quoted refers to the ancient custom when the habit was for each male guest invited to the banquet to recline upon his elbow at the table, thus placing himself in the bosom of his companion at his left. Lazarus is honoured by being seated next to Abraham.

This customary attitude is again recorded in John 13:23 where we read that at the Last Supper, "There was leaning on Jesus' bosom one of His disciples, whom Jesus loved".

This passing of Lazarus into the intermediate state is a beautiful reminder to all Christians that when the Lord calls them home, awaiting angels will carry their redeemed souls aloft to their heavenly abode.

There came that tragic day when the rich man died and was buried. No angelic escort awaited him. His lost soul sank into immediate retributory justice, for we read immediately following the announcement of his demise these awful words, "And in hell he lift up his eyes, being in torments". Afar off, beyond that great uncrossable divide, he was permitted to see Abraham and Lazarus at his side in Paradise. In his agony he cried to Abraham for mercy. "For I am tormented by this flame", he said.

"This flame" creates a vivid impression of an agonised soul enveloped in unquenchable, fiery flames, scorching, searing, but indestructible. There were the frustrating awareness that all hope was gone for ever, repentance and remorse were now of no avail, no momentary relief from torment indescribable was available, there was no way to turn and no one to turn to. This was everlasting damnation indeed!

Though a worldly man, Dives was not considered to be a wicked man. He went to Hell because God had no place or part in his selfish life. His riches did not send him to Hell—their misuse did! Poverty did not get Lazarus into Heaven – his righteousness did!

What happened to Dives is a grim warning to all who live in a similar state today, but there is still hope while life lasts. Jesus is waiting to save you. Accept Him now!

Editorial

A BANK of England messenger has lost his hand, a lady in the British Embassy in Washington, D.C., U.S.A., has suffered the same injury plus damage to her other hand and further injuries, a secretary has sustained ear and eye wounds and other extensive cuts – all the diabolical results of the truly sickening letter bomb activities.

History shows how evil men's minds can be. To think of people actually making these nauseating weapons and then sitting to address envelopes – and it is suggested that the same person, possibly a woman, has written all the envelopes so far discovered – produces revulsion. The shocking words of Romans 1:29 spring to mind: "Full of envy, murder, debate, malignity", as do the trenchant syllables of 2 Timothy 3:1: "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come.".

What possible connection can innocent victims have with political squabbles? What can be gained by mutilating and maiming ordinary folk going about their lawful occasions? In fact, such abominable measures as sending bombs through the post in the guise of letters may well prove to be counter-productive. The bombing of the last war has been shown to have had the effect on both sides of rallying the population against the enemy. They used to talk of the "spirit of the Blitz" in London and comments have been heard that it would do the nation good to revive the camaraderie of that period.

A senior police chief, asked if he thought that the letter bomb menace would continue, gave his opinion that people would increasingly give their political views prominence by violent means. He suggested that it was something with which we would have to learn to live. This is a truly terrible comment on so-called civilisation, but it should not surprise us. If righteous, spiritual leadership is lacking, if politicians are more occupied with the sad in-fighting of party politics, if the nations are more concerned with material gain than spiritual welfare or even the plight of the less fortunte, we should not be at all astonished at the violent results.

We can but re-echo our call to prayerful, persistent evangelism. The midnight cry cannot be far away!

Church Reports

CREWE Pastor: M.C. Epton

AT our recent Sunday school anniversary service we managed to seat seventy pupils on a tiered platform which all but filled the whole of the Church front. The Church was completely filled and the greater number present were parents of our Sunday school children. We had reason for rejoicing for a number of the parents had never attended our Church before.

We had practised hard and prayed fervently for four weeks beforehand, trusting that the Lord would presence Himself in our midst, and He more than answered our need. The Superintendent went to the back of the Church during the last hymn and remarked on how the children's faces shone as they sang of the joy and blessings of the Lord. The theme was, "The Love of God". A number of children wore sashes representing patriarchs and prophets. They recited poems to supplement the singing. It was truly wonderful.

We are thrilled to report that, because of our anniversary, contacts have been made and our numbers are increasing.

J.D. TALBOT

MACCLESFIELD Pastor: D. Beresford

OUR Church has been really put on the map because of the twenty-day Crusade.

Before and during the Crusade, our Pastor and a willing band of helpers distributed 95,000 items of publicity literature. Newspapers in Manchester, Stoke-on-Trent, Cheshire, South Lancashire, and North Derbyshire carried Crusade advertisements which brought in people from over forty miles away. Everything about the Crusade was well prepared. Jesus is worthy of the very best!

Two newspapers featured the Crusade in ten different editions with such headlines as: "Sticks thrown away as Crusade starts" and "Biggest Campaign in living Memory". On many nights 400-500 people were present in the marquee during the first two weeks. The Church was packed to capacity in the third week. More than 1,000 decision cards were signed. Each person who came forward was well counselled. Each decision card was carefully scrutinised and tabulated.

Two buses are bringing the new converts to the Sunday night meetings. Special visiting teams are systematically calling on those who signed decision or healing cards. Ninety per cent of those who made decisions were from the Macclesfield district. Almost threequarters who came forward were for salvation and did not require prayer for healing.

On the last day of the crusade 100 people attended a special follow-up rally and tea. Pastor Melvin Banks (the Evangelist) told them how to go on with the Lord. He urged each one to go on with God and to link up with Elim and attend regularly.

There were some remarkable healings. One man, badly crippled in a car accident, hobbled into the meeting on a steel crutch. He was instantly released and walked home free from pain. A newspaperman who accompanied him reported that the man's neighbours cheered and clapped as he walked up his own street. We saw a young boy healed of a hunched back which left his coat loose and hanging. A woman paralysed in her arm for ten years suddenly found it had come alive and that she could use it again.

The children's meetings drew good numbers - from 200 to 600.

Pastor Banks preached a strong, Scriptural message with little mention of healing. His emphasis each night was on repentance, confession of sin to Christ alone, justification by faith, the imputed righteousness of Christ and the need for transformation of character.

On the day after the Crusade was officially over, the Church was packed for the Sunday night meeting. There were at least sixty people from the crusade present among the 130 attendance. Our Pastor has planned special evangelistic meetings for the next six or seven weeks. We have engaged well-known speakers and singing groups and one night we will be showing a Christian colour feature film. We shall pray for the sick at every meeting.

The Lord has really blessed us at the Crusade. Pastor David Beresford says, "Something new has occurred in my ministry. One night when Mr. Banks was unable to be present, I prayed for the sick and there were some remarkable healings. One woman was healed of asthma and another woman with an arthritic hip said that she felt the pain suddenly go."

The Crusade has been the talk of the Town. We have touched many who are outside the churches. Pastor Banks stated: "It has been one of my most successful campaigns."

Among those who gave valuable assistance during the crusade were Pastor Beresford's father, Pastor and Mrs. Michael Sherwood, and Elim Bible College students Peter Cole, Tony Cheale and Paul Gealle. Peter and Tony stayed on after the Crusade to assist in the visitation work.

Auntie Sunny visits Nelspruit, S. Africa

WHEREVER Auntie Sunny goes the visit is sure to be remembered for a long time. This has been proved again by her Nelspruit visit. It was not just her expressions, her actions and those wonderful flannelgraphs, but the way in which she ministered in the power of the Spirit to children and adults alike.

Most days saw Auntie Sunny Blundell-Connell and Uncle Tommy Connell off with Anne Stephenson to visit the different Indian and Coloured children's meetings for which Anne is responsible. Auntie Sunny also spoke to African children and at a European Bible Study.

How much we enjoyed the visit! Auntie Sunny has not changed at all. She is still as fiery, still proud she is English and from Lancashire, and proud that she is Elim!

Watch out U.K. – she'll be home in 1974.

DAVID G. BUTCHER

WINTON, Bournemouth Pastor: G.N. Backhouse

IT is always with a deep sense of loss and a measure of sadness that any church has to place on record the loss of a loved and loyal member. In the passing of Mr. Sidney Preston, Winton Church has lost not only such a member, but one who was a founder-member of the church, a deacon for many years, a trustee of the church building and, for the past eight years, the church treasurer. It is all the more sad because only about a year ago Mr. Preston retired from local government service after serving for nearly fifty years.

The funeral service was held at the Winton Church on July 25th and the service was attended by a large congregation which included church members and a wide representation of his friends and business colleagues. The church secretary, Mr. D.S. House, mentioned that he had known Mr. Preston since 1926 in which year they both joined the local Assembly and that it was an honour to have known him as a loyal friend over these many years. He spoke of him as the man, as the saint - a sinner saved by grace - and as a church officer. He emphasised such verses as Psalm 116:4; John 17:24. Mr. T.S. House, at the request of the widow, sang with great feeling George Matheson's hymn, "O love that wilt not let me go".

Our Minister gave a brief closing word, referring to Mr. Preston as a distinguished Christian gentleman, as a dedicated follower of his Lord and as a doer of good.

We sorrow, but not as others who have no hope. There was a note of triumph in the service as we realised that our brother was in the presence of his Lord and as we sang together some of his favourite hymns, particularly, "Let me sing for the glory of heaven, like a sunbeam has swept o'er my heart; I would praise Thee for sins all forgiven, for Thy love, which shall never depart".

In Defence of the Faith

10. Contending for the Faith (v.3)

by F. J. Slemming

THE Letter is addressed to the beloved of the Lord. This my final article comes back to this all-important clause in the third verse, "Earnestly contend for the faith".

Jude tells us that, when he began to write his Letter, he intended to write on the subject of our common salvation, but something happened – he changed his mind, or rather he had his mind changed, for there came upon him a compulsion to take up quite a different subject. The Letter became one to the whole Church, a God-breathed and God-inspired word. He would have written to us about the common salvation, the common property of all believers and available to all men everywhere, but the Holy Spirit directed his thoughts and his pen in another direction. In the Greek it is expressed, "I had necessity", the same expression as in Acts 17:3: "Christ must needs have suffered and risen again from the dead". He must needs die for our sins.

The compulsion of the Holy Spirit caused Jude to write as he did. Remember that the warnings and the instructions which we have considered are the words of the living God. He instructs us about those who creep into the Church and seek to propagate their damnable heresies.

What do we do in these circumstances? Here is the answer: "Earnestly contend for the faith which was [once for all] delived to the saints". "Earnestly content" means "agonize upon". Bagster brings out that truth when in the Greek Lexicon, he puts it: "to contend strenuously, in defence of".

"Cease, my son, to hear the instruction that causeth to err from the words of knowledge". (Proverbs 19:27). Put Jude v.20 with v.3: "Earnestly contend for the faith" and "Building up yourselves on your most holy faith" (v.20).

Always be sure that your contention is for the faith, the whole body of Bible doctrine, the whole Bible truth from Genesis to Revelation. This truth, this faith, delivered to the saints is the heritage of all who love God. For this Faith live, pray, serve, and contend all the days of your life.

A Life Changed

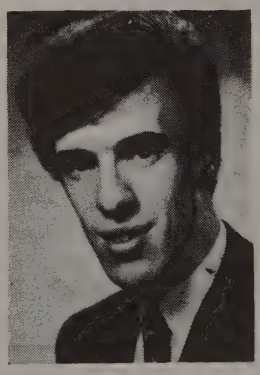
by Sheila Price

THE little old man picked up his broom and made his way down the Jericho road. When he came to the tree he swept up the leaves and rubbish that littered the pavement beneath it. This puzzled the children at the nearby school. "Every day he does the same!" said one. "I wonder why?" asked another. "Let's ask him!"

"Why do you care so much for that old tree?"

"Well," said the old man, "I was once Chief of Customs and a very rich man. It was my job to see that everyone paid his taxes to the Roman Emperor and the people hated me for this. I had no friends and I was very lonely. When I heard that Jesus was passing through I had to see Him. I knew He was not ashamed to make friends with publicans. Indeed, not long before, He had chosen a publican, Matthew, to be His disciple. Well, this street was crowded and, being so small, I was unable to see Jesus."

"What did you do?"



"I climbed this tree," the old man said, "just like one of the boys. I sat up there on that very branch and peered through the leaves."

"Did you see Jesus then?" the children asked.

"Oh, yes! But more important than that – Jesus saw me! He spoke to me. He knew my name. I was so surprised that I nearly fell off the branch! He came to tea with me and we talked and talked until He had to go. When He left me I said, 'Lord, from now on I will give half my goods to the poor and repay fourfold anyone I have ever wronged.' This is what coming to Jesus means, children. Not boastful talk, or religious beliefs, but a whole life changed and dedicated to doing what Jesus loves. I'll never forget that night I spent with Jesus. It seemed as if He had come to Jericho especially to see me. I never saw Him again for I heard just a week later that He had been put to death. Can you wonder why I care so much for this old tree? From its branches I first saw Jesus, and heard Him call my name - Zacchaeus!"

The HAMMOND ORGAN

- Requires the minimum of maintenance and the tone wheel generator cannot go out of tune.
- Remains unaffected by changes in temperature and humidity.
- Provides extreme variety of tones with the simplest method of selection.
- Has a specification to satisfy the accomplished organist.
- Can be transported for trouble-free use on any location.
- Represents a lifetime investment with a negligible depreciation factor.

The Hammond Organ has found an important place in the Pentecostal church with its unique tonal quality. The very nature of the harmonic tone registration allows the instrument to be played in direct keeping with the service without distracting from it.
We are therefore convinced that a Hammond can make an essential contribution which renders it a sound investment in the Lord's work, and to this end Sharon Music welcome your consultation as to the most suitable model for your church.
With experience gained from many church installations throughout the country we feel confident to select an instrument certain to meet your requirements.
Our showroom stock of ORGANS and PIANOS includes the entire range of Hammond Organs, consisting of 18 different models from £265 to £5,500. Special financial arrangements are available to your church and we shall be happy to supply further details relating to any specific model on request.

The Devil hates the Church

by A. S. F. Horne, Pastor of our Ipswich Church

THE Devil is out to destroy the Church and is working overtime to do so.

Does it really matter whether or not we meet together? I believe it does and here are my reasons.

The Type and Antitype

The priests were consecrated in the laver and by the touch of blood on ear, thumb and toe, and were shut in with the high priest for seven days, until, on the eighth day, Aaron came forth to bless the assembled multitudes.

We are God's priests, consecrated in "the washing [laver] of regeneration" (Titus 3:5), the laver attached to regeneration. Having entered service with blood-purged ears for hearing, blood-purged thumbs for working and blood-purged feet for walking, we are now commanded to abide within the Church until the eighth or resurrection day. "Abide. . . day and night seven days, and keep the charge of the Lord" (Leviticus 8:35).

It is sad indeed that some are leaving the Church today, just when more workers are needed. God discovered the forsaking of the Tabernacle, but He did not prevent it: "Abide. . . day and night seven days. . . that ye die not". Notice the solemn antitype in Hebrews 10:25,26: "Let us not stay away from our meetings as some are regularly doing, but let us encourage one another, all the more because you see the day coming near. If we choose to go on sinning after we have learned the truth. . ." (Beck).

Looking back after my years of ministry, I believe that the abandonment of the assembly is the first step in backsliding, the ultimate issues of which no man can foresee. I know of many families who ought to be in the service of Christ and would be had not the parents backslidden.

Someone said that "Snow in the street is bad for meetings, but snow in the heart is worse". I do not believe that devotion will long survive breaking off fellowship.

Fellowship is important

Each year makes fellowship more imperative: "the more, as ye see the day approaching". There are subtle errors, fascinating illusions, powerful world-currents, and to yield to them is to be swept away. We are told that "Many shall stumble". Then we must put our arms lovingly around one another. "The love of many shall wax cold", so we must cling more closely to God. Within the warmth of the fold we foster life. As the wolves draw nearer, so the sheep must draw more closely together.

Many today have set themselves up to be leaders and shepherds of the sheep, but they are only hirelings and do not care for the sheep. Many of these hirelings allege that they have deeper truths to impart and that they know an easy way to blessings. Praise God for Elim, and its doctrines and ways. I have not found a better fellowship.

Wesley said, "If we get nothing but chaff from the pulpit, we get the finest wheat from the reading-desk". Remember the words of Thomas Fuller, "An imperfect Church? The Church was imperfect before your cradle was made and it will be imperfect after your coffin is rotten".

The word "assemble" in Hebrews 10:25 is found in one other place, viz. 2 Thessalonians 2:1: "gathering together". It is the same Greek word, one for gathering together down here, and the other for our assembling above. Our earthly gatherings are but preparations and rehearsals for our roll-call in the skies.

Our Opportunities are great

We must face all our opportunities and remember that they are great. The Church is not meant to be a nursery for infants for ever being cured of measles and whooping-cough. It is a red-hot focus of good works. It should net the world in its beneficent activities. Dr. Pierson said, "Your field is not your church; the field is the world and your church is the working force with which to work the field". Jesus said, "Ye are the light of the world. A city set on a hill. . ." (Matthew 5:14).

In church-life we have the opportunity of "exhorting one another and provoking one another". Muller speaks of the "importance of the children of God

Letters to the Editor

Dear Mr. Walker,

I FELT that I must let you know the truth about "Robbie the Robot".

Since a local press agency here in Nottingham released the story of Robbie to the national papers, my telephone hasn't stopped ringing. The people at the other end might as well not have rung, because they didn't print the facts given to them - they just let their journalistic minds run riot.

As some folk have asked "What is Elim coming to?" I have requested that the facts be printed. Under no circumstances do I want any disrespect brought to the Lord Jesus Christ or to the Elim family.

Nearly eight years ago I saw in the ELIM EVANGEL a report in which a cash register with a head was used to count the children's offering. I thought that I could improve on this, went to my drawing board – and Robbie commenced. Dr. Who's Daleks had nothing to do with it.

Robbie stands five feet high. His eyes and nose light up when he's awake and small lights on his head flash alternately when he thinks about the questions put to him. Meters on his body register when certain functions operate. With the boys and girls Robbie sings solos occasionally, reads the Scriptures, asks the quiz questions, answers questions put to him by the children and generally adds to the programme. He is but a means to encourage the children to come so that gospel truths can be put across in the programme prepared for that evening.

The robot was made expressly to be used in Sunday school, mid-week youth activities and evangelistic outreach among boys and girls. The only times he is used in the church are for special children's nights, e.g. anniversaries, prize-givings or the final nights of children's crusades. He certainly doesn't take over as "teacher and preacher" here in Nottingham or anywhere else!

I trust that these few facts will correct the false impression given by the press and allay any fears that the Scriptural standards have been lowered.

Yours sincerely in Christ,

R.J. MACKENZIE

Dear Mr. Walker,

MAY I through your columns express the thanks of the organisers of the Bridlington Elim Youth Camp for the very generous support given to the holiday for young people from Ulster. Twenty-four young people came over from Northern Ireland for the fortnight's holiday. Readers will be interested to know that some from this party were baptised in the Holy Spirit and others committed their lives to Christ.

Yours sincerely in Christ,

DAVID WOODFIELD

opening their hearts to each other, when getting into a cold state or when tempted of the Devil". You must never do this without having confidence in the other person. We are children of the same family and ought to be helpers of one another.

God loves fellowship

"They that feared the Lord spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened, and heard". D.L. Moody said, "He liked the conversation so much, that He took notes, for a 'book of remembrance was written before Him. . . and they shall be Mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up My jewels'" (Malachi 3:16,17). God will at last set these hidden diamonds out of the dust-heaps of the world as stones in a crown, or stones in a constellation clustering together in glory, for they cling together in rejection.

Let us assemble ourselves continually. Because of our regularity we shall influence others and have a steadying effect on the wavering ranks. We may stay at home with clear consciences when we have no mercies to acknowledge, no sins to confess, no blessings to count, no brethren to love and no souls to save. The best place to find the Shepherd is among the sheep.

Has God finished with the Nation of Israel?

by W. J. Maybin, Pastor of our Southampton Church

Part 1

THE subject enshrined in this question brings us face to face with a nation unique in the world - the Jewish (now Israeli) nation. One of the most important issues in prophecy today relative to this ancient people is whether they have any future as a nation. In the field of world politics there is no more pressing problem than the present tension in the Near East between the Jews and the Arabs. To brush aside this matter as but typical of the universal political unrest so evident today is to reveal ignorance of one of the most important and crucial issues affecting Bible prophecy and eventually world politics.

Israel is a nation of prophecy and one of the most dramatic signs of the end time is the undeniable fact that Israel's dream of the centuries is at last a realisation. She is now a nation in her ancient homeland.

Pristine nations have emerged and vanished, but Israel remains. Scattered to the four winds of heaven, as one writer observes; "there they stand, singularly alone, magnificently different, defiantly unchanged". There are many signs of the near return of Christ, but the most important of all is the Jew. In the commentary on his very recent film, The Return, Hal Lindsey says, "The Jew is the most important sign as to where we are going".

Today the eyes of the world focus on Palestine and the problem of peace in the Near East is becoming more and more acute. God said through the prophet Zechariah centuries ago, with these last days in view, "In that day will I make Jerusalem a burdensome stone for all people: and all that burden themselves with it shall be cut in pieces though the peoples of the earth be gathered together against it" (12:3). Never in history has Israel been such an oppressive stone as today. International statesmen debate the whole Palestinian issue and the problem is not made easier when those who have to deal with it are either ignorant of what is holy and absolute in history, or simply ignore the fact. Professor Walvoord sets the matter in its true light when he states that, while for many Israel is of little consequence, from the divine point of view, "she is instead the key, and through Israel God is to fulfil His purpose whether redemptive, political, or eschatological".

Liberal theologians ignore any reference to Israel as a prophetic nation and within the ranks of conservative evangelicalism there are those who perpetuate the error of the Protestant Reformers, who formulated their findings on the allegorization of Origen and Augustine, findings which fail to distinguish between the spiritual as it relates to Israel and the world. Herein lies the danger of the present upsurge of amillennialism, in that it distorts the original meaning of Scripture under the cloak of seeking to propound a deeper and more immaterial meaning. One writer avers, "This principle opens the door to almost uncontrollable speculation and imagination."

Has God finished with the Jew?

The answer must be in the negative for one very good reason; God cannot break His Word and His Word to Israel guarantees them a future.

It is fundamental that we fully understand what Paul is saying in Romans 11. In his excellent book, Prophecy in the Space Age, Dr. A. Skevington Wood observes, "There is throughout a dual emphasis. Israel is indeed rejected, but Israel will not always be rejected. As the chosen race was once a recipient of blessing and an instrument in God's hand, so it will be again, at the end of the ages". Paul states with clarity that Israel at present is broken off from the olive tree and also predicts a future ingrafting of Israel into "their own olive tree" (Romans 11:24). This will take place when their present blindness is lifted (v.25) and, when this takes place, the restoration of the nation as outlined in vv. 26-32 will take place. The judicial blindness of Romans 11:25 will be lifted when, to quote from the same verse, "the fulness of the Gentiles be come in." This term should not be confused with "the times of the Gentiles" (Luke 21:24), which, according to one writer, is a political term used to cover the period beginning with Babylonian domination over Israel and ending when Jesus returns to subjugate.Gentile authority and reign. The Pauline term, "the fulness of the Gentiles" is a term referring to this parenthesis of grace, i.e., this Church age, when God is visiting the Gentiles to take out of them a people for His name (Acts 15:14). When the Church is completed, composed of believing Jews and Gentiles, Jesus will come to the air and translate the resurrected dead and the changed believers in an unsplittable second. When the Church has been removed from the earth, eventually to form Christ's retinue when He appears on earth at a later stage, God will again turn His attention to His earthly people. Their temporary rejection will be followed by their permanent restoration. God has not finished with the Jew and in order to prove why the writer holds this position, it is necessary to re-examine this miracle nation in light of Scripture. Several aspects of proof must be noted.

Their Origin as a Nation

The history of Israel goes back to the distant past when God called Abraham from the idolatrous Ur of the Chaldees to be the progenitor of a new race. This created a new, dramatic milestone in the affairs of men. The fact that about one-fifth of the book of Genesis is devoted to the history of mankind from Eden to the Tower of Babel and the remaining four-fifths relates to the story of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, itself enforces the importance of this new outgrowth of humanity. Indeed from Genesis 11 through to the close of the New Testament the earthly seed of Israel are to the fore and are never confused with the "faith" seed of Abraham, i.e., the Church. When this confusion takes place, we create theological difficulties.

Now rightly to divide the Word of God (2 Timothy 2:15) and properly understand the divine plan of the ages, we cannot ignore this numerically small yet most important nation in the world. When God called Abraham, three plain but pertinent promises were made to him. The gift of a land – Palestine – was first. That land belongs to Israel as her inalienable possession. The exact boundaries are outlined in Genesis 14:18. Not every Bible student appreciates the geographical extent of the Promised Land. If I can quote again from Dr. Skevington Wood, he writes, "It is larger than any solely European country and it will easily house the entire Jewish nation". The land is to stretch from the river of Egypt to the Euphrates.

Two points must be noted here. This covenant has not been fulfilled in its entirety in Israel's history. Because of the unconditional nature of the Abrahamic covenant, a future and literalistic fulfilment is necessary. Again, any attempt to spiritualise the promises made to Abraham and apply them to the New Testament Church makes nonsense of Scripture.

Then we observe the assurance that Abraham and his seed would become a great nation (Genesis 12:2,7; 13:15; 15:18). The word "seed" as used cannot be confined to Abraham's own generation, but must apply to successive generations.

Thirdly, the Abrahamic call involved not only personal and national blessings, but universal benefits (Genesis 12:3). As the late Dr. Graham Scroggie wrote, "The promise was from the centre 'Abram', to the circumference, the 'world'". There can be no doubt that the Gentile world is envisaged here, out of which is being gathered the Church (a mystery veiled in the Old Testament, per Ephesians 2). Indeed, if we understand the Abrahamic covenant in its fullest implication, the world will yet benefit through its consummation in the earthly manifestation of the Kingdom of Christ..

So the Abrahamic covenant is the cardinal point in the edifice of prophetic truth and the other covenants, the Palestinian, the Davidic and the New Covenants, are each enlargements of it. Professor Dwight Pentecost in his massive Things to Come is of the opinion that "these covenants must be studied diligently as the basis of Biblical eschatology".

When we come to David's accession to the throne, God made a covenant with him in which the house, the throne and his kingdom would be established for ever (2 Samuel 7 and 1 Chronicles 17). The seed, which figures largely in the Abrahamic covenant, is made dominant in the Davidic promise. Again no conditions are imposed, therefore human failure cannot possibly annul such an irrevocable covenant.

This same promise was reaffirmed to Mary by the angel at the annunciation (Luke 1:31-33). How was Mary to interpret such promises, if not literally? To literalise the first part of this Lucan passage, relative to Jesus being called "the Son of the Highest", and proceed to spiritualise the reference to the Davidic throne is "not only poor exegesis but questionable logic".

We know that despite Israel's privileges, she failed God, and by the time the Messiah arrived in human form, she had suffered subjection under the Babylonians, the Medes and Persians, the Greeks and the Romans. Through their ultimate rejection of Christ at Calvary, God turned aside from them and soon they were dispersed to the four corners of the earth, but not without a promise of ultimate restoration.

During the intervening centuries the Jews dreamed of re-establishing themselves in their ancient homeland. That dream has at last become a realisation and, as a second line of proof that God is not through with the Jew, think of THEIR PHYSICAL REBIRTH AS A NATION.

Conformed or Transformed?

A sermon preached recently at the Elim Pentecostal Church, Erdington, Birmingham, by the Minister, Pastor Ken Smith

PHILLIPS'S translation of Romans 12:3 says, "Don't let the world around you squeeze you into its own mould". What advice this is for the day in which we live. How true is the old saying that we are in the world, but not of the world. Which is my life as a Christian, conformed or transformed? We shall see, through this message.

Jesus Christ spoke of the "pressure of the age" in relation to His Second Advent and we are being squeezed, and pressured by a relentless force – a Christ-rejecting world, a vice-like grip that you will never break. It will break you in the end, if it gets hold.

Its Mould is sinful

Genesis Chapter 6 tells of the wickedness and evil of men's hearts in Noah's days and the Lord spoke of the conditions prior to His return as similar to the days of Noah and of Lot. Sin is often sophisticated and socially acceptable in our day, but it is still sin. I want to get home to your heart and mine "the exceeding sinfulness of sin", for Jesus Christ had to go to the cross to deal with it. There is no fear of the Lord nor of coming judgment in the world's reckoning and this is especially true of this generation. Think of two particular ways in which sinfulness shows itself in society and beware of the danger for your life.

Selfishness is more prevalent in these days of prosperity than in the days of poverty. Those who have lived through times of great need will bear this out. "Beware of covetousness" were the Saviour's words, for "Godliness with contentment is great gain", and "The love of money is the root of all evil" seem to fit the age in which we live. An envious eye and a heart that is never satisfied sum it up.

Sensuousness as in Noah's times and in Lot's days is with us on an increasing scale. Are we surprised at immorality when society is geared that way?

Sex sells good for the manufacturers and entertains a bored society. No stratum of the social scene is immune, however sophisticated and decorously it is screened. One is sympathetic towards our young people for the pressure on them is terrific. If they fall, who is to blame – society which winks at sin, parents who turn a blind eye, advertising agencies which promote all manner of legitimate products through immoral means, or all who debase God-given love into sensuous lust for profit?

How does the pressure come and the squeeze tighten? The world says, "Everybody does it", and so the squeeze tightens. You must show that everybody does NOT do it, whatever "it" is. It may be dishonouring the Lord's Day, or gambling, immorality or a thousand other snares, but you must prove that a Christian has conviction, and does not do it. "If you do not stand for something you will fall for anything", displayed one Church poster.

"Living it up" is another expression that strangles spiritual life. You may have much to live down if you try to live it up, for God can forgive and forget sin, but the consequences of sin may be there for ever. I spoke to one lady some time ago who was still paying for "living it up" over forty years ago. David still spoke of the sins of his youth in old age.

"Just this once", says the world, and the vice tightens further. Be sure that it will not stop at once, for Satan will make certain of that. Once indulge and you have lost your purity, your character, or your testimony, perhaps for ever, even though the grace of God can restore you to Him. The world will encourage you to fall and then mock you when you are down, so that you stay there. If there is not a first time, there need never be a last time either. One brief moment of sin can ruin you for time and for eternity, even as a child of God. David found this to be so, and many others, too. "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall", is good Scriptural advice.

"There's no harm in it", says the world, and the snare grips more. I am always suspicious of people who say this, or when I start thinking this way myself. If you are trying to persuade yourself like this it is a sure-fire pointer that there is harm in it, believe me, for I have passed that way! There are many other ways, but here's a final one.

"Living up with the Jones", is what it is called, but you don't have to, you know. If it means overtime at the expense of the meetings or of Christian service, then the squeeze is on. Why must a man be always judged by the size of his car, or the type of house he has, rather than in terms of character? It seems that way to me anyhow.

I would count the snare of television as a prime agent for the squeeze and the pressure, although I have one, and enjoy watching it at times. Having possessions is natural, but when they possess you it's diabolical.

Have you ever realised that both the advertising and the programmes are sources of pressure and subtle influence? Take advertisements for example. Everything in the garden is lovely – the kitchen is spotless, the bedroom is fabulous, the garden is a picture with not a weed in sight, the car is the latest and the best and the fastest, the wife is starry-eyed and romantic, her husband is the perfect gent, he's just come out of the band box and of course the children are like angels – and you know that life is not really like this. There's the rub, for the subtle dangers are immense, and the stranglehold of the world is there. The advertising world knows the magic words to get a grip: "NOW"; "FREE"; "NEW"; they are winners every time." Every prospect pleases", and its easy to forget that "man is vile", Programmes, too, are a danger, for sinfulness is "the done thing"; the kitchen sink is often an unhealthy place, whether literally or metaphorically. One would consider that ninety-five per cent of our population have no real Christian conviction and that television is for that section and produced by members of that percentage. There may be the odd five per cent who are worthwhile. If you differ, then think again, more closely and deeply.

In the parable of the Sower, the Saviour spoke of the thorny ground, with this interpretation. Three sources strangle the growth and fruitfulness of the spiritual life. How true they are of this age and generation of Christians; firstly, "the cares of life, the worries of the time, the anxiety of the age"; then, "the false glamour of wealth", the lure of riches, the deception caused by riches"; and the third force is the opposite of wealth, for it's want, "the cravings for many other things". "Choked with worries and riches" seems a very apt translation and true of so many today.

Are you choked, strangled, squeezed, and pressured, so that there is little spiritual life left? What's the answer? What is within to meet the world around?

"Transformed", says Paul, and it's all in the mind. Here are three steps you need to remember.

Be sincere. We forget His omniscience, for we cannot deceive Him, and long before we openly sin, there is often secret, inward corruption. Backsliding implies a gradual process. Come clean in this sense, for this surely is repentance, not being sorry for being caught, but sincerely sorry. I am sure that God loves the sincere soul and, though one can be sincerely wrong, as Billy Graham often points out, one can be sincerely right too. That, to my mind, is how we start to be freed from the grip.

Be spiritual. No psychological gimmick can replace spiritual experience. Paul, in his Corinthian Epistle, lists sins, but then he adds: "and such were some of you, but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of the Lord Jesus, and by the Spirit of our God". Thank God for the cleansing blood of Jesus Christ. I am glad that it is from "all sin", on confession and quitting of that sin. Do you feel the need of cleansing? It's there for you, as you confess your need!

Be sensible. Paul also wrote: "Cleanse yourselves", and this is also necessary. The drunkard would be foolish to hang around the pub or the gambler round the bingo hall; you can think of other applications of this point. Some people seem to live so near to the edge, when its best to be as far away from temptation as possible. There's enough from the flesh and Devil, without adding the world to our adversaries.

A lady needed a chauffeur. She asked the interviewees how near the edge of the cliff they would drive. One said a yard, another a foot, but the third replied that he did not know, and added that he would not try to drive near the edge of the cliff. He got the job! A little boy kept falling out of bed and concluded that he stayed too near where he got in! Use sense, for even the Spirit of God cannot keep a man out of sin if he persists, for if you play with fire you will get burned.

Make sure that your spiritual life is not in jeopardy, for who wants to be saved by the skin of his teeth.

From T. H. Stevenson

I AM writing from N. Ireland, not about it, though events and circumstances would justify doing so. It is the notice of a Convention that enthralls me. I was given the unexpected opportunity to make a day's visit to Portrush, a popular seaside resort. Irish hospitality compelled my wife and me to stay overnight. This morning I had the opportunity to hear Pastor Willie Mullan of Lurgan, a man whose weekly Bible study is attended by eight hundred people, and a man whose testimony exalts God. By pulpit, tapes, and printed page his ministry enriches many.

I have listened to his life-story twice, the first time being thirty-three years ago in his early ministry, when the cultured preacher of today was otherwise. The second occasion was in the beautiful City Temple, London. His story is before me as I write and I can only quote an early extract of this man whose congregation last year sent £102.50 weekly for overseas evangelism: "I just lifted my coat from the hanger and in a proud moment put it over my arm, and squared my shoulders a little bit and said, 'Alright, you've got your homes – I'll look after myself from this moment forward.' And I walked out into the night. For the next three and a half years I never saw the inside of a house, nor did I ever lie in a bed, nor did I ever have a decent meal. I just tramped our country, all the villages and all the towns. I begged every day I lived, and when I begged I boozed it." Truly he is a miracle of grace. The Convention has special interest for me, not only by a brief acquaintance with Mr. Mullan, but acquaintance with the other speakers and the Minister of the Presbyterian Church where the Convention is held. Rev. Kyle Alexander, M.A., Minister of the Church, had godly parents who lived next door to us when I ministered in Belfast throughout the second world war. It was my privilege to visit Mr. Alexander in his manse, also in Belfast, during a prolonged illness. Of the other speakers, I was happy to meet them together in town on their way to the crowded morning Bible study. Rev. Peter Donald (Glasgow) is Minister of a Baptist Church that withdrew from the Baptist Union because the Baptist Union united with the World Council of Churches. Peter Donald's parents are faithful attenders of my home church in Greenock, and, after I left home as a young man, Peter's parents moved from across the street to become my own parent's neighbours. The only previous personal meeting with Rev. Peter Donald was three years ago, and today he recounted how he then had seen and recognised me after thirty-seven years in a strange town, though he had been only a young schoolboy when I began my ministry. He had recognised my likeness to my brothers!

Concerning Rev. Nick Carr, M.A., (Reigate, Surrey), we had not met until today since I left my Carlisle pastorate many years ago. Then Mr. Carr was a director of Carrs of Carlisle, the famous biscuit manufacturers. Through the ministry of Rev. Willard Cantelon when Carlisle's theatre was filled with 1,000 people, Mr. Carr made his introduction to Elim and our respective families to each others homes. Unlike Willie Mullan, who was lifted from the gutter, Nick Carr gave up a highly important position in industry to become a minister of the gospel. To meet today such grand men of God and completely unexpectedly made me feel not so much how small the world is, but how closely knit is the family of God and its faithful ministers.

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

42 Jacob and Esau part again (Genesis 36:6-8)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

ISAAC died soon after Jacob returned home and it seems that Jacob and Esau then lived together in the land for a time. The growth of their herds and flocks began to create difficulties, however, so Esau finally left Jacob and Canaan and lived instead in Mount Seir, which then became known as Edom. For this we gather that, although Jacob was physically weaker than Esau, yet he became the stronger and prevailed over his brother just as the Word of God had declared he would (Genesis 25:23). The writer significantly declared: "Esau is Edom", as if to connect Esau's decline in power with his spiritual indifference when he sold his birthright to Jacob (Genesis 25:30).

It had been a long time since the Word of God was spoken to Rebekah, but in God's own time that promise was fulfilled to Jacob. In the same way the promise of Christ's supremacy, made to Mary nearly two thousand years ago (Luke 1:31-33), appears to be delayed. It seems that materialism and self-gratification are on the throne and that men have never been more careless and indifferent toward the Lord than they are today. Yet the Bible shows that all this materialism and indifference will be swept away (Isaiah 2:19-21; Revelation 6:15-17) and the promise made to the Lord Jesus will be fulfilled. We must not think that man can defeat the purposes or wreck the promises of God. Wickedness may seem to flourish and triumph for a time, the Word of God may seem to be delayed in its fulfilment, but we can be sure that He will bring His Word to pass at the time that He has purposed.

Reminiscence

I CAME across this soliloquy recently and remembered that it had been given to me nearly forty years ago when I was a young Crusader. I do not know its source, but it was obviously written by someone who had a deep, devotional understanding of the beloved disciple. Do not read it hurriedly, but ponder it reverently. I'm sure that you will be blessed.

John the Aged

"SOME seventy years ago I was a fisher by the Sea of Galilee. It was sunset. How the tranquil tide dreamily bathed the pebbles! How the light crept up the distant hills and in its wake soft purple shadows wrapped the dewy fields! Then HE came and called me. I gazed for the first time on that sweet face. Those eyes, out of which shone divinity, looked on my inmost soul and lighted it for ever. His words broke on the silence of my heart. His love took hold of me and claimed me for its own. There, in the twilight, I followed, holding fast His mantle.

"Oh what holy walks we had through the harvest fields and the desolate, dreary wastes! Oftentimes He leaned upon my arm, wearied and worn; I was young and strong and so upbore Him. Lord, now I am weak and feeble; let me rest on Thee! Put Thine arm around me. Closer still! How strong Thou art!

"The twilight even now draws on apace. Come, let us leave the noisy streets and take the path to Bethany: for Mary's smile awaits us at the gate and Martha's hands have prepared the cheerful evening meal. Come, James, the Master waits and Peter, see, has gone some steps before!

"What say you friends - that Christ has gone to His heavenly home? Aye, 'tis so, 'tis so, I know it all, and yet once more I seemed to stand upon my native hills with the Master as of old. Oh how oft I've seen Him bring back strength to the palsied limbs! I feel that He has to mine. Up! Bear me once more to my flock! Once more let me tell of our Saviour's love; for by the sweetness of the Master's voice just now I think that He must be very near, coming perhaps to break the veil which time has worn so thin that I can almost see beyond.

"How dark it is! I cannot see the faces of my flock. Is that the sea that murmurs so or is it weeping? Hush, my children, God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son: so love ye one another. Love God and man. Amen. Now bear me back. Why call ye me the holy John? Nay, call me rather Jesus Christ's beloved and lover of my children. Lay me down once more upon my couch and open wide the eastern window. See there comes a light like that which broke upon my soul at eve, when in the dreary Isle of Patmos Jesus came and touched me. See it grows dark! Hark how sweet that song the ransomed sing. Glory to the Lamb! How loud it sounds! Methinks my soul can join it now!

"Oh, my Lord, my Lord! How bright Thou art – and yet the very same I loved in Galilee! 'Tis worth the hundred years to feel this bliss! So lift me up, dear Lord unto Thy bosom. There I shall abide".

Gratitude

DEAR Lord, accept my thanks today
For answered prayer,
The night was dark and I was lost
Yet Thou didst care,
And even though the road was rough
I stumbled on Until I saw the light ahead –
'Twas Thy dear Son.

I looked to Him by faith and knew
All would be well.
No longer lost – I had been found –
What joy to tell
That Christ, Thy Son, is in control,
His peace is mine
And He will walk with me until
The end of time

Ruth Wilson.

Many youth programmes fail because they are an insult to the intelligence of today's informed, aggressive teenagers. In the lower age groups, there is a degree of maturity that was not experienced by former generations. Do the youth programmes we prepare allow enough creativity to challenge our young people to use their initiative, artistic ability, talent and brain power or are they merely spectators?

The fourth principle of successful programming is helping young people to be creative.

This leads to the fifth principle, participation. Dr. Roy B. Zuck has summarised the situation well in his book, "How to put your Youth to work".

1. Why use youth?
   - A. To hold their interest in your church.
   - B. To develop their talents and leadership abilities.
   - C. To teach them to take responsibilities.
   - D. To give them a sense of belonging.
   - E. To relate them in specific ways to the local church.
   - F. To channel their desire to serve the Lord.
   - G. To promote their personal spiritual growth.

2. Where use youth?
   - A. In Church
     1. Participate in Sunday school classes, youth meetings and club meetings
        - – Lead singing
        - – Make announcements
        - – Usher
        - – Read Scripture
        - – Lead in prayer
        - – Be on panels, debates, and symposiums
        - – Participation in group discussions, and team work
        - – Plan devotional talks
        - – Give reports
        - – Tidy up the room
        - – Distribute the hymn books.

     2. Serve as officers, planning-group leaders and committee leaders and members.
        - – Missionary
        - – Enlistment
        - – Newspaper
        - – Bulletin board
        - – Social
        - – Catering
        - – Publicity
        - – Yearbook
        - – Welcoming
        - – Music
        - – Library
        - – Equipment

     3. In the Sunday school, have teachers' helps and apprentice teachers.

     4. Do volunteer work around the church
        - – Secretarial work, such as typing etc.
        - – Cleaning the premises
        - – Gardening
        - – Decorating
        - – Repair furniture, equipment, hymnals, etc.
        - – Baby-sitting
        - – Poster making for youth programmes and church events
        - – Distribute handbills, promoting special events.

   - B. Outside the Church
     1. Plan open-air meetings and services in old folks homes.
     2. Visit shut-ins.
     3. Organise Christian unions in schools and places of work.
     4. Distribute Christian magazines in hospitals, surgeries, public places (with permission)
     5. Buy and repair toys for children in hospitals and orphanages.

3. How use youth?
   - A. Decide what work needs to be done
     1. Ask individual young people what projects they think need to be undertaken.
     2. Ask your pastor and church officers where help is needed.
     3. Ask Sunday school superintendent, teachers, parents and others where help is needed.

   - B. Enlist young people to do the work
     1. Select the right person for the right job.
     2. Make him feel wanted. Enlist him enthusiastically. Don't say, "Wouldn't you like to do this? We couldn't get anyone else."
     3. Tell him what this task will do for him, for your church and for the Lord.

   - C. Keep the young person interested
     1. Give them help if needed
     2. Express appreciation.

   - D. Remember these tips
     1. Don't give them "busy" work. Give them "beneficial" work.
     2. Use everyone. Give every person a job.

The Family Altar

Scripture Union Portions — Notes by Ray Hughes

Monday, September 10th — 2 Kings 5:15-27

"Two mules' burden of earth" (v.17).

A CONTENTIOUS child whose words of witness could not be stilled by circumstances, a prophet whose power was not diminishing with the passing of time and whose character could not be compromised for cash considerations (v.16), and a converted captain (v.17) whose momentary resentment at God's plan of salvation was overcome because His past actions had engendered love, loyalty and logic in His servants – these are the principal good characters in this account. How sad that the once faithful Gehazi stooped to secret sin, only to pay a high price for perversion (Numbers 32:23). Why was that earth taken to Syria? Naaman had become a believer and he wanted his worship to be according to divine order. Altars were made of stones untouched by tools, but the stones were mainly functional to prevent the fire from spilling. The real altar was the earth (Exodus 20:23-26), hence Naaman took earth from the promised land to recall proven promises and patterns of worship (Hebrews 8:5).

Tuesday, September 11th — 2 Kings 6:1-23

"The place where we dwell with thee is too strait for us" (v.1).

IT was not only the king of Syria who wanted to know the secret of revelations from God (vv.11-13). Prophets without power (v.5), servants without vision (vv.16,17) and kings without compassion (v.21) readily recognised the mantle of the master, the faith of the father-figure. You cannot have power without being prepared to pay the price. "Tarry" (Luke 24:49; Acts 1:8), "wait" (Isaiah 40:27-31), "fast and pray" (Matthew 17:21), "seek" (2 Chronicles 7:14), are but a few of the Bible's calls to consecration. When we pay our tithes the windows of heaven are opened and blessings are poured out (Malachi 3:10). Moody put it simply: "I must talk to God about men before I talk to men about God". Is this place "too strait" for you? Then do not sit in the "seat of the scornful" (Psalm 1) but rather sit in the seat of the prayerful.

Wednesday, September 12th — 2 Kings 6:34-33; 7:1,2

"See ye how this son of a murderer hath sent to take away mine head?" (v.32).

JEZEBEL, who killed the prophets of the Lord without mercy (1 Kings 18:4), left her genetic impression upon Joram, who, like many a politician, sought for someone to blame. He was going to release his anger on one who had kept the faith (2 Timothy 4:7) and overlook his own waywardness. Someone has said, "Parents wonder why the streams are bitter when they themselves have poisoned the fountain". "Let a man examine himself" (1 Corinthians 11:28). While the sins of the parents are visited "on the children" (Exodus 20:5), "every man shall be put to death for his own sin" (Deuteronomy 24:16) and God is making "new creatures" (2 Corinthians 5:17) every day. Chains of character may be strong, but Christ can set us free (John 8:36).

Thursday, September 13th — 2 Kings 7:3-20

"We do not well: this day is a day of good tidings, and we hold our peace" (v.9).

LEPERS were not liked. Many of them were forced to live in caves or derelict dwellings outside cities. They were brutally treated if they dared to come near to healthy human beings. They were stoned and driven from society in order to keep their virulent uncleanness out of the community. They lived from day to day on begged bread and compassionate charity. Their lives could well be described as poverty-line living.

By a miracle, in an area where bread given away had long since ceased, four starving lepers suddenly found themselves living in the lap of luxury: gold to grab, raiment to exchange for rags, food to fatten and drink to delight. In miraculous but mad merriment, they had time only to taste, to handle and to enjoy. Then they remembered the cry of children dying of hunger, of mothers mourning the loss of families, of those who had been kind to them in the past. They told the good news. We delight in the Lord who daily loads us with benefits (Psalm 68:19). Let us tell of God's deliverance for starving mankind (John 6:58).

Friday, September 14th — 2 Kings 8:1-15

"Why weepeth my lord?" (v.12).

GOD is best pictured as weeping over a world gone wrong, for "God is love" (1 John 4:8). God's servant is best pictured as one weeping over man's rejection of God's love. Hence Christ wept over Jerusalem.

Elisha wept over a merciless murderer, whose bestiality would burst upon Israel with such depravity that one sickens even to think of it. One day Henry Drummond was praying over the countries of the world touching them as he mentioned their names on a globe slowly circling beneath his fingers. Suddenly, overcome with compassion, he picked up the globe in his arms and continued to intercede for the nations. Words ceased as tears spilled from his half-closed eyes. Even unworthy men are worthy of our tears, for Christ came into the world to save sinners. (1 Timothy 1:15).

Saturday, September 15th — 2 Kings 9:1-16

"I have anointed thee king" (v.6).

HOW important it is to be anointed by the Holy

The marred Vessel

MANY years have gone since I first met Ndge (Bird), so called because one of his demon guides appeared in visible form as a black bird. These were early days for my wife, Dorothy, and me in Ukweli land. Christianity was little known. The gospel was still un-labelled as it came later to be, "the religion of the Bulls".

Being persuaded that representatives from every tribe would be among the throng before the Great White Throne, we preached in the markets, witnessed in the villages, spoke to men by the way, and dispensed medicine with a prayer.

It was at his village that "the especially gifted one", as they called him, heard of Jesus. He was surprised to be counselled. His callers came to consult and they came with double fees. Sometimes he was expecting them, as he had been informed of their coming by his familiars spirits. Often he had pre-knowledge of the problems that they wished to consult him about. Anxious women were accurateley informed as to the duration of their pregnancies and the sex of unborn children. He was a man to be feared, especially by his fellow-sorcerers whose secrets he had power to reveal.

Many demons were at home with him and in him. His nights were hideous with fearful nightmares, demons manifesting themselves in various forms as they talked to him. Sometimes he burst from his hut, and the terrified neighbours heard his howls as he fled for miles to escape his demon friends, until, his super-human strength exhausted, he dropped and slept among the nocturnal beasts.

There was the usual evidence of demon worship in his village, but no indication of the special need of the One who was manifested to destroy the works of the Devil. During that first hearing the work of deliverance began. A long process finally delivered him from the demons, who left him one by one. "Profitless" the people call him, but he is profitable to God as he leads the worship in the church he helped to build. "There was no one like him for foretelling of things to come", they say, though he now talks of his glorious future among the redeemed. An evident trophy of Calvary, a brand plucked from the burning, he still carries the imprint of his former demon masters.

As we fellowship with him we become aware that here is a marred personality, a warning to all men, to "seek not to the spirits that cheep and mutter", but to the living God revealed through Jesus Christ.

THE FAMILY ALTAR –from page 19

Ghost, but it is even more important to maintain one's position so that the anointing will never be removed. King Saul lost the anointing. David, like Jehu, was anointed in private before the promise that the anointing embodies was publicly realised. No wonder David prayed for a clean heart and that the Holy Spirit would not be removed from him (Psalm 51)! Paul tells Timothy: "Stir up the gift that is within thee by the laying on of my hands" and tells the Church at large: "Be being filled with the Spirit". Do not be satisfied with second best; seek to be filled with God so that there will be no room for anything else.

Sunday, September 16th 2 Kings 9:17-37

"This is the word of the Lord. . . by Elijah" (v.36).

YOU cannot say, "He being dead yet speaketh" (Hebrews 11:4), for Elijah was translated, but, when a man speaks as prompted by the eternal Spirit of God and is proved by subsequent events to be the messenger of the Master, you can say "This is that" (Acts 2:16) spoken by the prophet. In the confines of this small portion prophecies by Elisha that Jehu would be king, and by Elijah that Naboth would be avenged and that Jezebel would be eaten by dogs, were literally fulfilled. Heaven and earth may pass away, but the Word of the Lord endures until all is fulfilled (Matthew 24:35).

The home call of a spiritual architect and pioneer — E.J. Phillips

The epitaph, "If you seek his monument look around", inscribed in St. Paul's Cathedral in reference to its great architect Sir Christopher Wren may also be applied by all in Elim to E.J. Phillips; his achievement, under God, as the architect of Elim is present for all to see. It was to Pastor E.J. Phillips's vision and to his ability as an administrator that, with his colleagues, we owe the consolidation of the magnificent results of George Jeffreys's great campaigns in the 1920s and 1930s.

We remember E.J., as he was known among us ministers, as a self-effacing leader, administrator and organiser who absolutely committed all that he was and all that he had of ability, time, energy and dedication to the task God gave him to do. Paul's words, "And I will most gladly spend and be spent for you," may be applied unhesitatingly to him.

E.J. Phillips joined the Elim Evangelistic Band in 1919 and quickly took up the role for which his gifts fitted him.

In 1921 he took over the Movement's General Secretarial duties and continued in that office until 1957. From 1922 to 1929 he also edited the Elim Evangel and was also for a period at that time Dean of Elim Bible College. After vacating the office of Secretary General in 1957 he continued for a further seven years in an advisory capacity, though there is no doubt that his spending of himself as he did had already contributed to his failing health in the later years. In 1964 he retired from office.

Older ministers have viewed with sorrow his failing health and his incapacity of his last years. The demands of the ministry, whether pastoral or administrative, with the spiritual pressures involved in the church's engagement with the powers of darkness, take their toll of men's health and strength, though this may not be realised at the time.

Others intimately associated with E.J. Phillips in the early days of Elim and in administration will pay tribute to him in next week's Elim Evangel.

Our brother fought a good fight, he kept the faith and has now entered into the presence of Him whom he loved and served so faithfully.

We express our deepest sympathy to Mrs. E.J. Phillips in her bereavement. Those of us who knew them realise that her care for E.J. in the long years of his illness enabled him to stay at the helm much longer than would otherwise have been the case.

J. T. BRADLEY, Secretary-General.

Church Reports

IPSWICH Pastor: A.S.F. Horne

WE are delighted to report that the Rector of St. Mary at Stoke Church, Stoke Street, Ipswich, has kindly agreed to loan us his Church for two services at 2.45 and 6 on September 30th when we shall be favoured with a visit from the London Crusader Choir (Founder and Director, Douglas B. Gray). Our own Pastor will be the preacher and we specially ask all EVANGEL readers to pray that God will mightily bless this effort.

St. Mary at Stoke Church, Ipswich, where the London Crusader Choir will join with our Ipswich Church for two services on September 30th.

Three new Churches added to Lancashire Presbytery

IT has been my pleasure this year to welcome three new Churches into our Presbytery and into our Elim Fellowship. First I had the joy of opening the new Church at Birkenhead, which resulted from a pioneer Crusade conducted by Pastor A.B. Tee and other Elim ministers. The building is a splendid one, and the work is progressing under the leadership of its first minister, Pastor P.A. Epton. A Sunday school has commenced and numbers are increasing.

The second Church is at Middleton, where Pastor B.C. Vidamour and I held a pioneer campaign. Again a fine building was purchased at a reasonable price and Pastor V. Thomas is working to consolidate the new work. The congregation are decorating the church building and adding new rooms. The Church at the present time is self-supporting. Here, too, a Sunday school and youth work have commenced.

Then recently it was my joy to receive yet a third Church into our Presbytery. Although it is in Colwyn Bay, it comes under our area. The congregation have an excellent building, just off the main road. Pastor D.C. Lewis, one of our senior ministers, has responded to the challenge and is the new pastor there. The little church was crowded for the induction meeting.

Please pray for these additions to Elim and let us seek to keep the momentum of enlargement right throughout our work, by building up our existing churches and opening up new areas for God and for Elim. It would be great if every Presbytery could open two churches a year!

STOWMARKET Pastor: M.A. Drew

"STOWMARKET Carnival Week" was what the posters displayed around the town. It is quite an event in our little part of the world, with many events going on all the time. One of the big attractions is the Trades' Fair Tent, and this year we decided to have a stand for Elim. This proved to be a great success and many came to see what is going on at our Church. We had a bookstall and also gave out 200 of the Evangelistic EVANGELS, along with many "Why?" leaflets, and 500 Elim News. It was a wonderful opportunity to witness and talk about Christ.

On the Saturday there was a Carnival procession of floats through the town. We decided to enter one from Elim. Our children were dressed as flowers, the theme being "The Earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof". Out of the twenty-five entries we won third prize.

The Sunday afternoon was the final day. Our Pastor had been asked to lead an open-air service, which had to be held in the tent due to the doubtful weather conditions. This proved to be a wonderful time and the numbers, according to the press, were the best ever at an event like this, being around 400-500. They also write: "The carnival service took on the exciting and stimulating atmosphere of an old-time revivalist campaign meeting".

We praise God for every chance we have of presenting the gospel of Jesus Christ. As a result of the Carnival Week, we had more people in our Sunday night gospel service. One lady who was at the open-air came along and made a decision for Christ a week later.

Our pictures show Pastor Drew and Mr. W. Edwards, Church Treasurer, giving out copies of Elim News and the children on the float avoiding the rain.

Scottish Presbytery Youth Camp at Lochearnhead

WAITING-rooms, ticket office, porter's lodge, first and second class retiring rooms – one would hardly imagine this to be the description of an Elim Youth Camp, but this year's camp was held at the Scout Station, Lochearnhead, Perthshire, a disused railway station renovated and equipped by the Hertfordshire Scouting Association and made into a very attractive site.

The old waiting-room is now a comfortable dining-room and the ticket office is a very well-equipped kitchen. Other facilities included a sun lounge and a drying-room that became the praying room, where many glorious blessings were received.

Thirty-nine campers joined us for the first week and this increased to fifty-three for the second week. It was great to have fellowship with these young people from the Scottish Area and with visitors from England. One of the things that most impressed me during the fortnight was the tremendous singing; although we had no piano and at times were accompanied by only one guitar, the singing was heavenly. It will be a long time before I forget the camp-fire testimonies and the chorus singing in the atmosphere of God's great creation as we gazed at the surrounding mountains. "O God is good" and "His Banner over me is Love" were firm camp favourites.

Pastor Bill Crawford was the Padre and God anointed the ministry each evening. The evening rally was usually followed by prayer and tarrying in the Lord's presence. During these times fourteen campers were baptised in the Holy Spirit. This brought a great spirit of praise and joy to the campfire which followed after supper each evening.

Another feature of the camp was the Sunday afternoon open-air witness down at the car park by the Loch-side. On each of the sunny Sunday afternoons the park was full of tourists, who listened to God's Word as they sat admiring the beautiful scenery.

Camp had its fun and the sports' day brought its share of laughs, especially in the bonnie baby contest. The hikes also brought laughs (and tears). I must express a word of appreciation to the gallant team of workers, who, I am sure, will feel that all the effort was well worthwhile for Camp this year was touched by God and spiritual lives were deepened. To God be all the glory!

HOVE Pastor: T.W. Thomson

WE have just enjoyed two anniversaries, the Sunday school's and the fifth anniversary of our Pastor.

The Sunday school anniversary proved to be a very full day for the children. After the ordinary Sunday school meeting in the morning, several scholars remained for the morning service, as they are generally encouraged to do. There were special meetings in the afternoon and evening, at which recitations, solos and choir pieces were rendered. The guest speaker was Mr. Bernard Norris, who also presented the prizes in the evening. Several of the three dozen children received prizes for full attendance. The Superintendent, Mr. W. Holdstock, expressed his gratitude for the support of the members. It was encouraging to see several parents attending.

The Pastor's anniversary services were also well attended. The Church presented Pastor Thomson with a monetary gift and his wife with a bouquet. The Principal of Elim Bible College, G. Wesley Gilpin, the guest preacher, reminded us in his two messages of our dependence on the Holy Spirit, as a river of living and healing water, and on the Word of God as our only sure guide and directive through life. These two themes seemed well chosen, as they sum up the main emphasis of Pastor Thomson's ministry during the past five years.

P.D. CHALKLEY

BIRKENHEAD Pastor: P.A. Epton

DURING the week of our children's campaign over 2,000 boys and girls, teenagers and parents came to the new Church at Birkenhead. The special week was led by Uncle Russ, a local minister, and Uncle Magnus, a travelling open-air evangelist. The youth specials were led by Greg Handley and the Agapao singers, including Nico from Holland.

To use the words of the policeman who came each night for traffic duty, "It's the best thing that's happened in Birkenhead". Many parents echoed these words. One mother has been to the Church each Sunday since the campaign.

Our Pastor went to six schools, where leaflets were willingly distributed. The reception that he received from C. of E., R.C. and County Schools was very good; the Headmasters showed great interest.

On the Sunday following the campaign, 150 children attended Sunday school. Our prayer is that God will send in willing workers as there is a shortage of teachers.

Your prayers for this new work are much appreciated. God is blessing us in this very needy town.

P.A. EPTON

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA Pastor: A. Nicolson

AUDIO-VISUAL aids play an important part in our lives today, and we are constantly learning through such interesting media. When Pastor David L. Mills came with slides and tape-recordings of the work in Ghana, we not only learned much, but we found ourselves actually participating in the worship along with those seen on the screen. The joyous expression of love for the Lord is certainly infectious. We rejoice with the Ghanaians in God's mighty moving in their midst. As with the Early Church, they are going everywhere "chattering" or "gossiping" the gospel and the result is obvious. "Every Christian a witness and a soul-winner" seems not only to be their aim, but also a reality. What a challenge this is to us here in Southend. It was enlightening to learn that the Ghanaian churches are not only self-supporting, but are missionary-minded and are sending their own full-time workers to neighbouring countries.

On the following evening we enjoyed ministry from another mission field as three young men from the Faith Mission took our service. They came to Southend for sea-front gospel witness. Their ministry in word and song was clear, direct and blessed.

West Midland's Presbytery

THE West Midland Presbytery held their annual sports' day at Northwood Stadium. We had a wonderful time and enjoyed the fellowship of the various churches. The young folk from Crewe did well by winning several events. In the photographs are Pastor Michael Epton who did so well in helping to organise the day, with some of the young people who took part, and the two trophies and five medals.

We thank God for His leading and we trust that He will guide us to help our young people to run the race that is set before them for an everlasting prize.

Testimony Time

A Testimony of Healing by Mrs. Edith Blevins, of our Portadown Church, N. Ireland.

HAVING had an internal operation I had terrible pain in my back. After three weeks I returned to hospital for examination and x-rays. I was told that the operation was satisfactory, but I expected to get well too soon after such an operation. Instead of improving, the pain in my back got worse. After two more weeks I called in my doctor who brought an orthopaedic surgeon to me that night. Next day he had me back in hospital in traction. I had a prolapsed disc (a displacement in the spine). This had occurred on the table in the course of the operation. I was in traction with 16lb. weights on for twenty-four days, then, after three days without them, I was allowed up.

I was told to report in three weeks' time at the surgical out-patients' department and that I could not live alone or do any work or lift anything except eating utensils. I had to get a special chair to sit on. Before two weeks were up, the pain in my back, arms, neck, shoulder and one leg was intense. I could hardly get in or out of bed. I was in agony at every movement and a knife and fork were too much to use at once. I knew that I was heading for an operation on the spine. This could make me an invalid, yet without an operation I was going to be one anyway. My plans were not to have an operation, but to sell my home and go to a nursing home in England where I would not tie my children and friends to visiting me.

On April 30th, my Minister, Pastor S. Shaw, was with me when he got word that one of our sisters in Christ had passed away. He said that he would have to leave as he wanted to see the family. I asked him to pray for me before he left. The Pastor came back into the room and placed his hands on my back and called upon God to heal me. Just where I was sitting, I felt the power of God go through me. About an hour after the Pastor went out, I started to move about and made tea. I had no pain in my back. On May 2nd I went in the car with my daughter-in-law to see the funeral of the sister just mentioned. My daughter-in-law got out of the car to hear the service at the grave-side. Her little daughter, who is handicapped, started to cry for her mother. I turned around in the front seat and lifted the child on to the back seat so that she could see her mother. I realized that I was completely healed. I had turned around and lifted a child of seven and had felt no pain in my back, arms, shoulders or neck.

On May 5th I went to the town with my daughter. From the time that we left the house until we arrived back was about five hours. In all this time I had walked about in and out of stores, up stairs, etc., and yet had felt no pain.

As appointed, I went to hospital on May 9th and testified to being healed by God in answer to prayer. The surgeon could find nothing wrong, but he told me to come back and prove it. I went back on July 10th and a different surgeon examined me. "Any pain?", he asked. I replied, "No". "You still believe you are healed by prayer?", he enquired. "Yes", was my reply.

I cannot thank and praise God enough for answering my prayer. I am writing my testimony of healing to tell others what God has done for me. I thank Pastor Shaw for the prayer of faith.

Testimony of answered Prayer by Mrs. Margaret Greenfield, of our Sheffield Church.

I WOULD like to testify how God undertook for me during July when I was giving birth to our second baby. Our first baby, Andrew, was born by Ceasarean section but this baby was expected to be born naturally. As our daughter was about to be born the previous scar completely gave way, causing our little treasure to go to be with the Lord and me to haemorrhage severely. My husband was rushed to the hospital by the police during the night, having been told that I was dying, but, praise God, He was in full control and the many prayers of our dear brothers and sisters were answered, for God wonderfully used the skilful hands of the doctors and nursing staff. I was immediately operated on and given seven pints of blood. Never before have I been more conscious of the Lord's presence and now, thank God, I am out of hospital and already feeling very much like my old self again. Losing our "chosen one" has been an earthly loss, but Jesus knows best. Even this in a sense has become spiritual gain, for we now feel even closer to Him who endured so much for our salvation. Our one desire is that we shall serve Him better.

The Big Bully

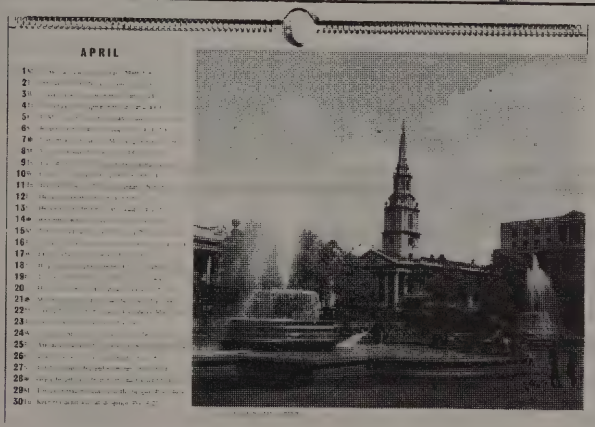
by Sheila Price

THE town bully was always spoiling the children's games or trying to pick a fight. In the past they had been afraid to stand up for themselves, but one day when the bully tried to spoil their fun, they fought back. The bully, realising that he had been beaten, turned and ran.

Jesus was once specially tormented by the Devil. He had gone into the wilderness to be alone and make His great plans, but the Devil wanted to upset His plans and, for forty days, he tempted Jesus to do wrong.

When Jesus was almost fainting with hunger, the Devil taunted Him saying, "Why don't You turn these stones into bread? Surely You have the power to do it – especially since You say that You are the Son of God!"

"Why don't You throw Yourself from this high steeple?" the Devil asked Jesus, "and prove to the people that You trust God to care for You? The crowd would follow You then and believe in You, too!"



"I will win the hearts of men and women by love", Jesus answered, "not by wonders or miracles like that!"

Then the Devil led Jesus to the top of a high mountain and, in a vision, showed Him the kingdoms of the world. "Worship me", he said, "and I'll give You all these kingdoms with all their riches!"

"Go from Me!" Jesus cried. "It is written, 'You shall worship only the Lord your God. Only Him shall you serve'".

The Devil, realising that he was beaten, turned and ran.

Jesus, with all the power in heaven and earth, could have done all that the Devil wanted Him to do, but Jesus never used His powers to make things easier for Himself. He stood up to the Devil just as you and I must do. Jesus knows how the Devil can sometimes tempt us to do wrong and He understands how hard it is for us not to be selfish or disobedient, but, when He lives in our hearts, He helps us stand firmly against temptation.

God's Honour

The experience of the son of one of our Honorary Pastors is recorded at a time when many young people are going up to college or university. Pray for them!

by R. J. Quy

THE wonderful way in which our loving Father answers prayer was brought home to me recently with regards to the degree for which I studied at Keele University. I worked hard for this examination, too hard in fact. After sitting the first five papers I had to go into the University Health Centre suffering from severe examination stress. The University doctor strongly suggested that I should not be allowed to sit the second half of the papers. This meant that my whole degree was in jeopardy. However, for the first time in several weeks, I felt peaceful and relieved since there was absolutely nothing more that I could do.

On the morning of May 6th, just before I went into the Health Centre, I read the first chapter of Colossians, together with a commentary on v.9: "We are asking God that you may see things, as it were, from His point of view" (Colossians 1:9, Phillips). The commentary said, "What a whole new dimension of living we step into when we learn to see life from God's point of view. Problems and difficulties take on a new meaning when looked at from the vantage point of eternity."

It was wonderful for me to realise while I was in our Health Centre that everything was in God's hands and that I could put my complete trust in Him, something which I had failed to do before.

The strength and close presence of God were very real to me (2 Corinthians 12: 9) and I had some wonderful moments lying in bed praising the Lord. God also spoke through these events to several of my Christian friends at Keele and used the situation to draw them more closely to Him.

After coming out of the Health Centre, I had a time of rest and left the matter of the degree in the Lord's hands. I thank God for the many prayers that were offered on my behalf.

These prayers have been answered. I made a speedy recovery and have been awarded a good Honours Degree, praise the Lord.

The whole experience has proved to me just how much we can depend on God. He will never fail us even if His paths are sometimes not what we expect. It also has shown me that my strength must lie in the Lord and not in myself (Ephesians 6:10) since, when I tried to do things my way, all my activity and effort came to nought.

It was a prayer of mine throughout the year that, if I was awarded a good degree, then I wanted God to get the glory for it, not me. God has answered that prayer since all the tribute for my degree must go to Him alone. He has also led me through an experience which I can remember and for which I can praise Him, for the rest of my life.

Krsna Fails his finals

by Stephen Tiley and John Bristow

IN December 1969, as the world sighed relief at leaving a hectic decade, many turned a prophetic eye to the seventies in the hope of seeing a brighter future. As the news media were gazing into their crystal balls, Time magazine joined in to make some fascinatingly detailed predictions: "The most significant trend of the '70s may well be a religious revival. . . there may well be a sweeping revival of fundamentalism, particularly in its fervent Pentecostal variety". The prophecy continued, however: "Many people will reject traditional Western religions, finding inspiration and solace in the mystery cults of the East."

Now that we are well into the 1970s we can see that Time's assement of the trend was reasonably correct. Not only has there been some resurgence of Christian fervour, but, perhaps for the first time in British and United States history, Eastern mystery religions are actively proselytising white men and women. Among the ever-growing lists of religions in our country we can now include the Krsna (pronounced Krishna) Consciousness Movement and the various forms of yogic practices, such as Hatha yoga, Bhakti yoga, Raja yoga, and Sanyassa yoga. Much of these religions can be considered escape from reality to a world of myth and mystery, whereas the religion of Jesus Christ faces reality.

The devotees of Krishna derive their doctrinal authority on the "trinity", that is the Upanishads, the Brahma Sutras and the Bhagavad Gita. "If ever a conflict arises between the statements in the [trinity] and other sacred books [e.g. the Bible], the verdict of the former alone is traditionally accepted as final" (Bhagavad Gita introduction).

Many of the Gurus (teachers) are now twisting verses from the Bible to support their belief that Jesus was a yoga master. They agree that Jesus was a great teacher, that he delivered powerful speeches, but they are very reluctant to accept the Biblical statement that Jesus Christ is the "only begotten of the Father" and that He is the only one who has provided the means of salvation for the world. Yet the Bible emphatically states: "He who has the Son has life; he who has not the Son of God has not life".

All these yogic doctrines and mystic paths are very severe on their disciples. A Sanyassa, a Raja and Hatha yogi, a Buddhist or a mystic has to abstain from eating meat and from marriage. They have to endure very uncomfortable postures, do breathing exercises and chant secret Mantras (words with hidden meaning and power) and incantations. They consider that these processes render them spiritually liberated. His Divine Grace, A.C. Bhaktivedanta Swami Prabhupada (to give him his full title), founder of the International Society for Krishna Consciousness, teaches that one can know the "Supreme Personality of the Godhead" as one's lover: "Not only does God have form, but He has sex life also" (Back to Godhead no. 35).

The Bible warns us against these false doctrines and fables. "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils . . . Forbidding to marry and commanding to abstain from meats which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving. . . But refuse profane and old wives fables, and exercise thyself rather unto godliness. For bodily exercise profiteth little. . ." (1 Timothy 4:1,3, 7,8). "When ye pray, use not vain repetitions, as the heathen do: for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking. Be not ye therefore like unto them" (Matthew 6:7).

A yoga-based organisation that has centres in major cities around the world says at the beginning of all their books and magazines, "The ultimate truth is contained in all the Scriptures of the world", but Jesus said, "I am the way, and the truth and the life: no man comes to the Father, but by Me." To turn from Christ is to miss the Way to God, to reject Christ is to accept a lie, to refuse Christ is to remain dead in trespasses and sins.

The Krishna movement and other Eastern religions offer much in the way of mystical exercises and experiences. They may, as some claim, bring tranquility to the mind and energy to the body, but they do not take away sin.

The Devil offers a multitude of religions to suit all tastes. Many of them bear similarities with Christianity, but on one point they all fail, and that is the sacrifice for sin. Jesus, God's Son, died for sinners on the cross and paid the full price for our sins. There is nothing left for us to do, indeed there is nothing we can do, except to put our faith in Jesus and trust in the merits of His death and resurrection. The Apostle John wrote: "These are written, that you might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing you might have life through His name" (John 20:31).

At that final great need, Krishna fails miserably.

Has God finished with the Nation of Israel?

by W. J. Maybin, Pastor of our Southampton Church

Part 2

THE prophetic Scriptures which predicted the dispersion of this covenant people also foretold their regathering. Why should it surprise us that God who predicted their scattering would bring about their recovery?

Through national rejection of their Messiah there came a severance of national relationship with God. In this parenthesis of grace, the mercy of God still reaches the individual Jew who is prepared to embrace Christ by faith, yet the nation as such has been judicially blinded (Romans 11:25) until the purpose of God for the Gentiles has been fulfilled.

Since A.D.70, when the Roman general Titus ransacked Jerusalem and its sacred temple, the lot of the Jew has been an unhappy one. Jersualem has suffered domination under the Moslems and the Turks until in 1917 General Allenby conquered the ancient land, which victory proved to be a decisive turning point in Jewish history. The Zionist Movement, born in 1897, received its greatest impetus by the implementation of the now famous Balfour Declaration on November 2nd 1917, which stated: "His Majesty's Government views with favour the establishment in Palestine of a national home for Jewish people". Over the next thirty years the problem was studied and debated and and in 1947 Britain referred the whole matter to the United Nations. In May of the following year a Jewish State was proclaimed. For a quarter of a century now the miracle has been a reality, despite two attempts to wipe out the new Israeli State, in 1956 and again in 1967. Three times in some twenty years a divine hand intervened on behalf of this covenant people.

Is God through with the Jew?

The origins of this special nation give us the answer, as does the partial restoration of this people to their ancient home in the middle of this century, but there is another reason why I believe that God has not finished with this divinely-called and divinely-preserved people.

Their ultimate spiritual restoration

The physical restoration of this pristine people to the land vouchsafed to their fathers is possibly without parallel in world history, but this, avers one authority on the subject, "is but a token that God is about to fulful His Word concerning the glorious future of His chosen people". What we see taking shape before our eyes today is but a prelude to a programme of events which will culminate in the return of Christ to the earth to inaugurate His millennial kingdom of righteousness and peace. To use the imagery of the Master, the fig-tree is budding, the Jew is returning to his own land in blindness, but with the assurance that he is there to await the coming of the Messiah.

Before that day dawns this nation will undergo further trouble, indeed the greatest time of trouble she has yet experienced. The creation of the new state of Israel is related to the increasing tension and importance of the Middle East in world affairs. By virtue of her geographical location, Israel is both economically and militarily valuable. Apart from anything that Bible prophecy has to say about the future military conflict in that area, world leaders are not slow to recognise the strategic value of this land. For these very reasons, the emergence of Israel as a nation is significant.

It is quite evident from a correct understanding of prophecy that the return of Jesus Christ could not take place until the Jew was restored to his own land. Now that this is a fact, the stage is set for the unfolding of future events. The Messiah will come to His own earthly people (Zechariah 14), but, as a prelude to that event, there will be a period of unprecedented tribulation. Daniel speaks of this as "a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time" (12:1). Jeremiah designates this as "the time of Jacob's trouble" (30:7). Jesus in His final Olivet address referred to it as "great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time" (Matthew 24:21). This will be the world's midnight hour, an hour that will overshadow every tempestuous epoch of the past. It will be a period when the Devil will contend with God for the control of the world, a period that will bring to an end "the times of the Gentiles" and witness the setting up of the "stone" kingdom of Daniel 2. The reign of the Antichrist will be challenged by the arrival of Christ on the earth to execute divine judgment and establish His theocratic kingdom. This anticipation is indeed the major goal of Bible eschatology. Prophets and psalmists have descanted about this era in the most inspiring terms; Christ taught His followers to pray for its coming; the apostles accepted it, and the Early Church Fathers gave the truth a place in their writings. So Israel's day of tribulation will be succeeded by her day of glory.

Has God finished with the Jew? No! There is a glorious future awaiting the Jew. As Professor J.W. Fairbairn of London University said in a sermon I heard him deliver: "The Roman Empire in the person of the Roman soldier pierced Him and, when we think of this generation in which we live, we see history taking shape, with Europe once more becoming an empire like the Roman Empire. Once more the Jews are back in Jerusalem.

"That wheel of history" he continued, "has gone round and maybe our generation is the last one. It is more similar to the first one than to any other generation and we should be waiting for the coming of the Lord day by day."

In the meantime, we wait for the arrival of the Lord in the clouds to call His waiting people home. This is the distinguishing hope of the Church, the climactic goal for all Christian service.

May God grant that this simple look at the future of this miracle nation may quicken within us a new sense of responsibility to extend His name among Jew and Gentile. His assurance to His earthly people helps to remind us of His pledge to us, "I will come again, and receive you unto Myself" (John 14:3). The exiled John, as he brings to an end his Revelation of Jesus Christ in his sea-girt prison, responded to our Lord's assurance, "Yes, I am coming very quickly!" by saying, "Amen, come, Lord Jesus!" (Revelation 22:20, Phillips).

It seems to me . . .

by J. T. Bradley, Secretary-General

THE other morning I flung back the curtains of our room and looked over our estate. The sun was shining out of an azure sky; there was not a cloud in sight; everything was wonderful. Admittedly I don't need binoculars to see the utmost bounds of our estate, but at least I was driven to the conclusion that, in spite of my best friends' hesitations, I was a first class horticulturist. The massed flowers were a sight to see; scintillating white, speckled with gold, and shot here and there by heliotrope. My secretary, by the way, wanted to know what heliotrope was. I said that it was a shade between purple and mauve. She seemed to know purple but not mauve. It was a dazzling sight. I came to the conclusion that I grow more daisies to the square inch on our lawn than any other person in Cheltenham.

And yet, even as I looked at this blaze of colour, I could not help but think that were these little flowers only to be found on the top of Mont Blanc or on Mount Everest they would be considered to be among the choicest of nature's creations. It's a matter, of course, of relativity. Quite clearly what is common is not necessarily common.

But it struck me as extraordinary that pests and disease don't seem to attack weeds, or what we call weeds; our hedge grows apace, but does not produce anything useful as far as I can see, except work. We thought we had dug out all our hollyhocks last year, but we've got a marvellous little group still, eight to ten feet high and brilliant, without any effort on our part, and pest free.

But when one wishes to grow useful things for the table, or for display, a constant battle has to be waged against disease and pests. Pests attack roses and strawberries, dahlias and cauliflowers, but not apparently my hedge, my hollyhocks and my daisies.

I encourage myself, of course, that it is all fulfilment of scripture – "Cursed is the ground for thy sake; it shall not henceforth yield to thee its strength, but thou shall till it in the sweat of thy brow".

In spite of the curse, it is amazing how productive the ground is; if it were to yield its strength what amazing results would accrue.

"It was cursed" God said, "for our sake;" not for punishment or judgment; it was the "natural" consequence of sin. "Satan finds work for idle hands to do", and society demonstrates in its present experience that even though it tries to avoid work, particularly in the form of physical labour, it simply adds to its problems, because it occupies a disproportionate part of its time in leisure devoted to pleasure, and men have become "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God". Even Nature itself has lessons to teach us if we have but eyes to see and ears to hear.

And yet this simple illustration opens up for the person who believes the Bible a whole world of explanation of Divine intervention in the affairs of mankind for mankind's benefit. The Fundamentalist who at the same time looks at the world through the eyes of a psychologist and social reformer finds himself appalled by the amount of human suffering that could be avoided by the simple practice of Bible wisdom. The denigration of the Bible, more by its salaried advocates than by its overt enemies, has been such that people today have the impression that it, the oldest philosophy in the world, has no message at all for them. Yet such is its wisdom that life, even for fallen humanity in a cursed environment, could be transformed almost overnight by the practice of a half dozen of its simplest precepts.

But that being so the Fundamentalist recognises an irreducible minimum of suffering and frustration imposed upon mankind by God for mankind's welfare. Because he sees this, fore-armed against it, for him, much of its impact is mitigated. And the more a Christian recognises himself to be where he really is, in Christ, the more he finds this to be true. He still experiences the effects of the curse, but his spiritual and mental concepts are now such that their impact upon him is largely nullified.

The apostle Paul, among a multitude of others, was a living example in prison, "filling up that which was behind of the sufferings of Christ for His body's sake which is the Church", enduring there, one might say, all that the curse on humanity might bring to a single soul, he nevertheless is able to write to the Ephesians in the second verse of his letter to them, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ.": in earthly places – imprisonment, hunger, cruelty, poverty, cold, neglect, rejection; in heavenly places – all spiritual blessings.

As a matter of fact the word "blessed" in both these instances is not the usual word for blessed in the New Testament – makarios; it is the word from which we get our word eulogise. The dictionary states that to eulogise means to praise, to commend, to extol.

Eulogised, praised, extolled, magnified, be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath eulogised, praised, extolled, magnified us with all spiritual blessings: we eulogise, praise, extol, magnify God with words; He eulogises, praises, extols, magnifies us with eternal realities now, that is with "all spiritual blessings", and they are enumerated, eight of them, in the remaining verses of the chapter. Have we these? We have everything that matters! Have we them not? nothing this earth can afford supplies their loss.

PRAYER AND PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

"THE sun stood still" – impossible! – "And the moon stayed" – how can these things be? How can a day be lengthened by hours? I do not know, but it is recorded in Joshua chapter 10.

Joshua had taken over as leader of Israel and her forces. He had crossed Jordan in a miraculous way and was going from strength to strength. Then there arrived at his camp a strange, motley group of men, who said that they had come from a far-off land. The purpose of their long journey was to seek an alliance with Israel. Joshua agreed, but he found later that he had been deceived. They had come from the city of Gibeon.

Time passed. New arrivals came from Gibeon. Five kings and their armies had gathered to attack the city. Joshua was told that he had to go to their rescue, which he did. Battle was joined and the enemy was slowly driven back. Looking at the sky, Joshua saw that the sun was moving towards the west. He needed more time if he were to rout the enemy. He fought harder, but time was against him. Then he did the most audacious thing. He first spoke to the Lord, then he commanded the sun and the moon to stand still – and they did, for God heard the cry of Joshua and the miracle happened.

The Bible records many mighty miracles, but without doubt this was the greatest, apart from the resurrection of Jesus.

God can do anything, any time, anywhere. We often feel that we have not enough time in which to complete the work. The vast masses who need the gospel take so much time to reach. Great evangelists come and go, yet the need remains. We need more labourers for the harvest field. We need more who will witness for Christ.

Pray that God will meet these needs. He can!

Letter to the Editor

Dear Mr. Walker,

I HAVE had some communications about a programme entitled "Crown Court" by Granada Television. It included references to the Pentecostals to which my correspondents took extreme objection as being derogatory.

Though I did not see this play, I made representations to the Independant Broadcasting Authority, who are responsible for watching the programmes of the various television companies operating under licence. The IBA Head of Programme Services, Joseph Weltman, went "very fully" into the complaint with the Granada Company.

The result of this investigation is that they do not agree that the content of the play "Crown Court" was in any way detrimental to the whole Pentecostal movement or that it caused feelings to be incensed against the Pentecostals. The Authority noted a number of favourable references to the movement.

If viewers are dissatisfied with this reply, may I point out that it is always more effective for people to write as individuals – especially if a number of letters are sent – rather than through other means. May I, however, add my own thought. We should not be too sensitive to every reference to Pentecostals which happens to show a typically (and inevitably) secular attitude. We are big enough to ignore some of these pin-pricks and any reference (even an unfriendly one) is better than no reference. If we are too touchy about things, all reference could be eliminated. Christ said: "Rejoice when all men speak evil of you. Beware when all men speak well of you".

Yours sincerely,

An Outline

The Question of Questions

"What shall I do then with Jesus?"
(Matthew 27:22)

MATTHEW Henry, the great Bible commentator, gave a series of Thursday evening Lectures on "The Questions of the Bible". Beginning in October 1692 with the question to Adam, "Where art thou?", the series concluded twenty years later in May 1712 with the question, "What city is like unto this great city?" (Revelation 18:18). Of those 1,000 questions none is more important than this.

1. Pontius Pilate tried leaving the decision to others: "Ye have a custom" (John 18:39).

2. He tried passing on responsibility to another – Herod (Luke 23:7).

3. He tried to disclaim personal guilt: "I am innocent"(Matthew 27:24).

There are at least five responses I may make to the question:

1. Have nothing to do with Him at all. Bar every window. Shut every door.

2. "I really can't make up my mind". So often it is not "making up", but "giving up" that is required.

3. "I will accept Jesus Christ by and by!".

4. "I could compromise a little!".

5. "I will yield now to His lordship of my life!".

An Incident

John Harper's last Convert

YEARS after the great ship, The Titanic, foundered in the Atlantic, a young Scotsman arose in a meeting and said, "I am a survivor of that disaster. When I was drifting alone on a spar during that awful night, the tide brought Mr. John Harper of Glasgow near me. 'Man', he said, 'Are you saved?'. 'No', I said. He replied, 'Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved'. The waves carried him away from me, but strange to say they brought him back a little later, and he asked me once again, 'Are you saved now?'. 'No', I answered, 'I can't honestly say I am'. Again he repeated the words, 'Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved.'. Shortly afterwards he went down, and there, alone in the night, with two miles of water beneath me, I believed and was saved. I was Harper's last convert." John Harper witnessed to the very end. With his last breath he pointed a sinking soul to the Saviour.

A Quotation

God does guide us

"I NEVER remember, in all my Christian course a period now of sixty-nine years and four months, that I ever sincerely and patiently sought to know the Will of God by the teaching of the Holy Spirit through the instrumentality of the Word of God, but I have always been directed rightly. But if honesty of heart and righteousness before God were lacking, or if I did not patiently wait upon God for instruction if I preferred the counsel of my fellowmen to the declarations of the Word of the living God, I made great mistakes."

George Muller.

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

43. Joseph (Genesis 37:1-11)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

IT is clear that from the beginning Joseph was marked out to be chief of the children of Jacob. This was declared by God in the dreams of Joseph and was recognised by his father when he gave Joseph the special coat. We understand from the Scriptures that Joseph was an upright, honest boy, but how he told his dreams suggests that he was rather conceited and that this helped to arouse the hatred of his brothers. Here we see the seeds of the troubles which came to Joseph. Undoubtedly the Lord would bring His word to pass, but He would first have to purify Joseph's character, so He used the hostility directed at Joseph to accomplish this purifying work.

Like Joseph, we are the inheritors of the promises made by God, for all His blessings are given to those who love the Lord Jesus. This does not mean that the Lord is blind to our blemishes and defects, that He will allow us to live as we like. The Bible declares that the Lord deals with us as a father deals with his children, so He must sometimes chastise and correct us (Hebrews 12:5). His purpose in thus dealing with us is never destructive, though at times it may seem severe; He desires to purify and enrich His children's characters, to answer the prayer we often sing: "To be like Jesus, all I ask to be like Him!", and to make us better able to serve Him. Do not fret and chafe when His chastening hand is upon us, but look patiently for His perfect work to be accomplished.

The Message of the Stamps

WHEN tidying my bureau one day, I made a determined effort to sort out a great hoard of papers, letters and newspaper cuttings. It was amazing what I discovered. I got slower and slower as I waded through the pile and came finally to a package containing a little board with a type-written poem mounted on it together with a Canadian stamp. I stopped once more and examined the attractive green stamp bearing the head and shoulders of Lieut. John McCrae who died in 1918. The centre of the stamp shows a Flanders' field with poppies and crosses marking the graves of those who fell in the first world war. The first two lines of the poem which we associate with the Royal British Legion and Poppy Day are printed on the stamp and the whole poem is there on the sheet of paper:

In Flanders' fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place; and in the sky
The larks, still bravely singing, fly
Scarce heard amid the guns below.

We are the dead. Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn, saw sunset glow
Loved and were loved and now we lie
In Flanders' fields.

At the bottom of the paper are the words of explanation: "This poem was written in a dug-out on May 3rd, 1915, during the second battle of Ypres". Accompanying this little momento I found neatly-written notes telling me that the hole at the top of the board was to enable me to insert my British Legion poppy and thus complete my home-made souvenir of the fiftieth anniversary of Poppy Day.

My next discovery was another stamp carefully folded in another page of notes. This remarkable stamp beautifully printed and bearing a minute replica of Salvador Dali's famous painting "Christ of St. John of the Cross", was issued in 1968 by Guyana. I quote from the notes: "Cross seen from an unusual angle. The original painting by Salvador Dali is in the Glasgow Art Gallery at Kelvingrove. Purchased way back in the 1950s, it cost £8,200. People flocked to see it and there was much controversy over it." For those not familiar with the picture, let me explain that it shows Christ on the cross as viewed from above, with the world beneath.

Both these stamps were given me on different occasions by Mr. George Pigott, then of our Motherwell Church and now home in glory. He was an octogenarian, a dear old gentleman who lived alone. His absorbing passion was philately. I treasure his little gifts and the friendly notes ending with the phrase: "Hope you like this stamp" and "I remember you like a stamp with a story behind it. Cheerio".

Looking at my momentos, I was struck that both these stamps had a cross on them, one with the Flanders' crosses, the emblems of human sacrifice and death, and the other illustrating the supreme sacrifice of the ages, the Son of God suspended on a Roman cross, dying to atone for the sins of mankind. Ever since that dark day, the cross as a symbol of vicarious suffering has been woven into the fabric of life. The Church chose the cross, too, to indicate its presence. I feel that the empty cross speaks so eloquently of a crucified, risen, victorious Saviour. "The old rugged Cross" is a favourite hymn. A lesser-known hymn was sung recently in our Salisbury Church and I agreed with the sentiments of the last verse.

Let others who will praise the cross of the Christ,
The Christ of the cross is my theme;
For tho' we cherish the old rugged cross,
'Tis only the Christ can redeem.

Scripture Union Portions — Notes by Ray Hughes

Monday, September 17th — 2 Kings 10:1-17

"See my zeal for the Lord" (v.16).

MOSES knew the dealings of God in a most intimate way. His song before the people prior to his death, spoke thus of God: "I kill, and I make alive; I wound and I heal; neither is there any that can deliver out of My hand." God warns, then woos, then wounds, and finally, if man is unrepentant, he commits him to judgment. There is no knowledge of when the final stage is reached, for it is possible to be "cutt off and that without remedy" (2 Chronicles 36:15,16; Proverbs 29:1). As one who is "not under law, but under grace" (Romans 6:14-15), I find the slaughter of seventy sons distasteful and piles of heads at the gate of the city revolting. Nevertheless this is not to be compared with the horrors of eternal Hell. Pray for labourers to pluck men as brands from the burning.

Tuesday, September 18th — 2 Kings 10:18-36

"None of the servants of the Lord" (v.23).

JUDGMENT was falling on "blind leaders of the blind", but every effort was made that no servant of the Lord should be harmed. Like the plagues that befell the Egyptians, it was not to come near the Israelites. My heart recoils at so much bloodshed in the Old Testament way, truly "An eye for an eye" (Exodus 21:24).

As a pastor, I have had to tell people of sin in their lives. I have never been able to do so without a prayer on my lips, realising that it is my duty to speak "the truth in love" (Ephesians 4:15). Scripture tells of the rewards of such action (James 5:20), but one shudders to think of the consequence of refusing to do the Master's bidding (Hebrews 2:1-4).

Wednesday, September 19th — 2 Kings 11:1-21

"Athaliah. . . destroyed all the seed royal" (v.1).

"THE thief cometh not, but for to steal, and to kill, and to destroy" (John 10:10), but Scripture says, "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall be also reap" (Galatians 6:7). If destruction does not come in this life, the ungodly have not got away with it, for after death there is the judgment. This queen, who apparently achieved her ambitions by following the communist maxim, "The end justifies the means", ruled for seven years. During those years of false security she entered the palace by the front door and enjoyed all the trappings of royalty, but in the seventh year, unexpectedly, she went out through the back door and was slain in the stable-yard (v.16). Earthly justice is but a pale forerunner of eternal judgment (Revelation 20:11-15).

Thursday, September 20th — 2 Kings 12:1-16

"Repaired. . . the house of the Lord" (v.14).

DAVID dwelt in a house of cedar (2 Samuel 7:2) and deeply regretted that God's dwelling place was only a tent of curtains. He received permission to prepare to build and collected material from all over the world. Sin stopped him being the man to build the Temple, but God allowed Solomon to build it. Buildings need constant attention and repairs and redecoration should be regular items on the church programme. God's house should be at least up to our home standards, if possible above them. Thank God that Jehoash told the priests what they ought already to have been doing. They did not respond so the deterioration continued for twenty-three years. Gypsy Smith said, "What the Church of God needs is men who will talk less and work more". We do not know what sidetracked Jehoash into failing to see that his words were obeyed, but eventually he returned to insist that the house of God be made beautiful.

Friday, September 21st — 2 Chronicles 24:15-27

"Jehoiada. . . buried. . . among the kings"; "Joash (Jehoash). . . buried. . . not in the sepulchres of the kings" (vv.15,16,25).

JEHOIADA, a priest with faults, was buried among kings because "he had done good in Israel, both toward God, and toward his house", while King Joash, having "forsaken the Lord", was buried in a common place. Our faults are often overlooked by the Omnipotent when we repent and go on with His work, but if we forsake Him his judgment will be our portion (see John 10:27-29; compare Galatians 5:7-9, Revelation 2:4,5).

Saturday, September 22nd — 2 Kings 13:1-25

"He smote thrice and stayed" (v.18).

AGAIN and again Scripture talks about serving the Lord with the whole heart (Colossians 3:17). It was said of Christ, "The zeal of Thy house has eaten me up" (John 2:17) because He cleansed Solomon's Porch. This colonnade on the perimeter of the Temple was the only place which Gentiles were allowed to enter, the place of evangelism in God's design. It had become the place of commercialism in man's schemes. Christ did not lose his temper. He made a small whip and drove animals accustomed to some persuasion when away from their shepherd in a market-place. He overthrew the tables of greedy, grasping men, much to the delight of the children of Jerusalem who scurried after coins for some city treat. Defenceless doves were to be carried out, indicating care and calm rather than tumult and temper. Would God that Joash had such a clear picture of the consequence of his actions, for the arrows would then have been struck until they shattered.

Sunday, September 23rd 2 Chronicles 25:1-13

"There came a man of God" (v.7).

YESTERDAY'S portion revealed the deathbed scene of Elisha. He had gone and his servant had failed and became leprous, but out of the blue there came "a man of God", prepared, like Esther, "for such a time as this". There are many unnamed, unsung saints whose contribution is vital. Further, his words had weight. "God hath power to help, and to cast down" (2 Chron. 5:8). He revealed that God's compensations are greater than our sacrifices. When Sir Wilfred Grenfell was called to the fisher-folk of the frozen wastelands of Labrador he said, "I dislike to speak of self-sacrifice; I cannot recall that I have ever indulged in it." Because of his love for the Lord and the African, Livingstone could write: "People talk of the sacrifice I have made in spending so much of my life in Africa. It is emphatically no sacrifice. Say rather a privilege".

Editorial

TRIBUTES to the work and ministry of Pastor E. J. Phillips appear in this issue. They have been written by three of his close colleagues.

The note of great triumph struck during our beloved brother's funeral services was absolutely right. Elim has had only three Secretary-Generals, Pastor E. J. Phillips being the first. His victorious funeral was conducted by his immediate successor in office, Pastor H. W. Greenway, the present Secretary-General, Pastor J. T. Bradley, and our President, Pastor John Lancaster.

"In heavenly Love abiding" was announced by Mr. Greenway, who called on Pastor R. G. Tweed to open in prayer. Mr. Greenway then paid fitting, eloquent testimony to Mr. Phillips's life and work. Mr. Bradley read the glorious words of 1 Corinthians chapter 15 and then our President spoke from the beautiful verse, "We have this treasure in earthen vessels". His words were apt, well-chosen, shiningly reflecting the conquest of Christ. Colleagues in Elim, fellow-members of the Eastbourne Church, representatives of the Christian press and book publishing and of interdenominational groups, and above all dear Mrs. Molly Phillips and members of the family – we surely all felt that Mr. Lancaster voiced what we would have wanted to say. "Thine be the Glory" was exactly the right hymn for the end of the service and then we were moved to hear the familiar cadences of the voice of our beloved Pastor Samuel Gorman commending us to God in prayer.

At the grave-side, Mr. Greenway commenced the service and called on Mr. Bradley to preach. Again the triumph of Calvary and of the Second Coming rang out. Our President gave the Committal and read the lovely words from the Revelation including the splendid, "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes". Pastor C.J.E. Kingston closed in prayer and then we all sang a part of the hymn which E.J. Phillips loved to play on the piano, "O how I love the Saviour's Name", including the verse beginning, "And there with all the blood-bought Throng". The sun shone over the scene, a setting lovely against the Downs. The song spread over the whole area, a fitting benediction.

I was honoured to be Pastor to Pastor and Mrs. E.J. Phillips during my period of service at Clapham. I discovered that E.J.'s favourite hymn then was, "That Man of Calvary has won my Heart from me". His work, witness and ministry amply revealed that it was abundantly true.

Well done . . . faithful servant

by H. W. Greenway

THE initials "E.J.P." do not carry the same meaning for new candidates entering the Elim Pentecostal Church ministry as they do for members of the Conference who have served in the ranks from the twenties. They do, however, have an important place in the history of the British Pentecostal Movement.

Over fifty years ago I first met this man with whom I was to share responsibilities in the headquarters administration. It was outside the old Methodist Church in Clapham that Miss Adams (who became Mrs. Stoneham) introduced me to the self-effacing young man who had come to London after a term of service in Ireland. He appeared shy and rather loth to speak. Little did I realise that he was to have such an influence on the growing Elim church now reaching out to the great metropolis. I was to learn in succeeding days something of his dedication and determination, characteristics that formed an outstanding feature of his ministry until he was released from his weakened body to serve in the higher ranks above.

Though he appeared to be of a retiring nature, he nevertheless showed great strength as a brilliant administrator, so that many phases of the Elim Movement are attributable to his indefatigable labours: the Bible College; the Publishing Co.; the Constitution; the great demonstrations; the participation with other evangelical bodies in committees and campaigns; the share Elim enjoyed in the British Pentecostal Fellowship. He accepted the burden of responsibility and drove himself unremittingly to the tasks he undertook, which undoubtedly undermined his health.

His quiet manner gave many ministers the impression that he was austere to the point of cold objectivity, yet beneath this manner there was a keen sense of humour which often came to the surface in our Executive Council deliberations. Friends from other denominations were often ready to acclaim his brilliant services to the Christian Church both inside and outside the Pentecostal fraternity, and paid tribute to him.

Among his contemporaries he was known for his attention to details in any task he undertook: i's must be dotted and t's must be crossed; commas must be in the right place; initials of names must be correct. Some brethren thought him to pernickety, but this aspect of his work served him in good stead when he took part in debate, where he proved to be a formidable opponent. He always carried in his pocket a small number of cards or papers on which he would note down the things he wanted to remember and which had to be attended to on any particular day.

A man of sterling character he did not flinch from his duty and on critical occasions he saved the growing Movement from complete disaster. This was demonstrated in the debate on British Israelism which had been made an issue in the work in the thirties and had caused a great deal of tension. Mr. John Leech, Q.C. presented the case in an attempt to introduce the doctrine at the 1934 Conference of ministers. E. J. Phillips gave reasons why he considered this doctrine to be false teaching, marshalling many scriptures in support of his statements. He applied the same attention to detail when he presented a paper on the Ecumenical Movement.

Only those who worked close to E. J. will know how deeply he was hurt by the innuendos which were directed against him during the times when the work was threatened with complete disruption. But he was a man of strong loyalty to God and the cause he had espoused as his life work. Many hours were spent at the office desk, and when Elim first commenced in England and opened headquarters in Clapham, the light in the Secretary-General's office could often be seen burning after midnight: his devotion was complete.

It was my privilege to serve with him in the administration during appointments as Editor of the Elim Evangel, Field Superintendent, and Secretary-General. At all times he proved a helpful and kindly friend, and any criticisms he found it necessary to make were always offered in a spirit of Christian grace. At all times in the various ups and downs of the Movement he endeavoured to exercise justice for all the ministers.

Unwavering in his adherence to the truths of pentecost, he spoke out of his own experiences. In the opening stages of his career, when seeking the mind of the Lord regarding his call to a particular service, he was healed of a throat infection. This he took as a sign that he was to accept the invitation of George Jeffreys to join the Elim work which had been started four years previously in Monaghan, Ireland. His baptism in the Holy Spirit was in the nature of a revolution in his spiritual experience. This baptism, with the evidence of speaking in tongues, was the story of a beginning that was to affect the lives of ministers and lay brethren in many parts of the world. He says: "It seemed to make in my life a more radical change than did conversion. It was in the nature of a revolution, everything seemed to be new."

Tribute must be paid to Molly Smith who became his wife and for many years was his partner during times of sickness and anxiety. It is to her devotion and care that we owe deep gratitude for the years that our brother was spared to us. The comforts and necessities he denied himself in the early days of his ministry were provided by a companion at his side during many years and particularly in the latter days of extreme weakness.

And now he has gone to his reward. The bright lights of the platform he was content to leave to others with different talents from his own. But of his organisational genius men will talk for years to come. And despite his different role in the work of God, many will be found in glory as a result of his labours.

"He never shirked any Duty"

by Joseph Smith

I HAVE known Mr. Phillips for some fifty-three years. We met for the first time at a convention in Belfast in the summer of 1920. He was at that time the Pastor of our Elim Church in Armagh. Because a Cardinal of the R.C. Church lived in Armagh, we used jokingly to call him "The Cardinal". We have conducted meetings together, shared the same room and worked together in the same office, and all through these years I have held Mr. Phillips in the highest esteem. He was a man of sterling character: sincere, faithful, true, and always willing to do more than his share in any capacity in which he served. His whole ambition was to see the work of the Elim movement go forward. He never shirked any duty no matter how he felt. I think that he worked too hard. When coming home at night from taking meetings in distant parts of London I could see the light still burning in his office. He never seemed to spare himself.

Jesus said: "Behold, I come quickly; and My reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." Any one of us might well covet the reward which I am persuaded that the Judge of all the earth will confer on His faithful servant in that great day. As a movement we owe a great debt of gratitude to Mr. Phillips for his many years of faithful service as Secretary-General. One thing I know for certain—Mr. Phillips never worked for money. In the early days of our movement, when ministers worked for a minimum salary and put all the balance of the church offerings into a common fund in order to open other churches throughout the British Isles, I was the Pastor of our Clapham Church in London. My salary was twenty-five shillings a week plus board. I lived at "Elim Woodlands." Not having anyone dependent on me, I told Mr. Phillips that I would like my salary dropped to a pound a week, as I felt that I could get along well enough on this amount. Mr. Phillips then said he would do the same. Of course the value of money was much greater then than it is now.

It has been my privilege not only to know Pastor E. J. Phillips, but also his father and mother as well as his sister and two brothers. I have very happy recollections of the weeks spent in the home of the Phillips' family in Letchworth. Living in that home it was not difficult to know from where E. J. got his sterling character, and not only E. J., but every member of that family. Somehow, in the long run, nothing tells like character. The memory of it remains. It stands out like the giant pillars of some ancient castle whose walls have crumbled away over the years. The Bible says: "Righteousness exalteth a nation." Of course it does—and it also exalts a man.

As time rolls on, the circle over the other shore grows larger. What a great reunion there will be when the trumpet of the Lord sounds and we meet once again those with whom we have laboured and enjoyed such happy fellowship over the years! I know that we all look forward to meeting those under whose ministry we have been much blessed, but it will also be nice to meet those who have been responsible for acquiring the buildings in which we found the Lord and where we enjoyed such happy fellowship with our brethren in Christ.

I know that the sympathies of our entire movement go out to Mrs. E. J. Phillips who shared her life with the one whose loss we mourn. Having known her also these many years I deeply appreciate her contribution to the work of Elim in standing faithfully by our beloved brother all through the years and being a true helpmate in the work of the Lord. We also deeply appreciate the very valuable service rendered to the cause of Christ by the two brothers Frederic B. and Hubert C. Phillips. Both of them have not only served the Lord by way of ministry in preaching the Word of God, but also in sending out the printed page to millions of people in Africa, the British Isles and throughout the world. May the Lord richly bless the seed which they have so faithfully sown over the years.

What a glorious realization it is to be able to look forward with glad expectation to the great harvest day when you will see the results of your own sowing in the lives of thousands of other people, who will bless God for ever having met you or having been blessed through your labours in the work of the Lord. What a great day that will be, when

With our battles fought and our victories won,
Our warfare weapons all laid down,
We'll strike our golden harps and sing,
And crown our Christ as a conquering King.

Pastor J. C. Kennedy presents the Presidential Bible to Pastor E. J. Phillips when the latter became President in 1958. Ill-health prevented Mr. Phillips accepting this office much earlier, as was the wish of his colleagues.

A Prince and a great Man has gone from us, but to live in the hearts of others is not to die.

by Douglas B. Gray

AT five o'clock on Wednesday, September 5th, 1973, Mrs. Molly Phillips was answering a call from the hospital telling her of the home-call of her beloved husband, Pastor Ernest J. Phillips. At this precise time Mrs. Gray and I were ringing the doorbell of their home in Eastbourne. By coincidence (or was it?) we were at the home to give immediate comfort and solace and to share with Mrs. Phillips her sorrow at such a time.

It is almost fifty years since I was first introduced to Pastor E. J. Phillips, during the time of the great Elim revival campaigns in East London. His courteous, tranquil approach and his humility and obvious sincerity at this initial meeting revealed a person of great ability who manifested an abandonment to the service of Christ. Such dedication was sure to make him eminent in international Christian and especially Pentecostal circles.

Ministers and members of Elim's earlier days will recall his outstanding gifts not only as a beloved Pastor, but as an administrator of utmost integrity and purity of purpose. Pastor E. J. Phillips's influence and qualities of spiritual leadership will ever remain in the annals of Elim's history and in the hearts of everyone privileged to serve with him. To know him both in public life and in the home was a joy. Perhaps we shall never know how much we owe to his devoted wife, the lady who has stood by him so courageously during the past few years and during earlier years of his suffering. We express our deepest thanks for such sacrifice. It has meant more to the movement than we can fully realise. Thank you, Molly; our prayers and thoughts remain with you.

My forty-five years as a member of Headquarters' staff brought me into close relationship with Mr. Phillips. For a few years I was seconded from the Youth Department and transferred to the Secretary-General's office to give assistance to Mr. Phillips because of his indifferent health. During these days I discovered the depth of his qualities and dedication. In every situation he displayed that consistent dignity so vital to leadership and wisely directed the course of a great Christian work and witness in days of war and peace. It was a generation when Pentecostals experienced opposition and onslaughts from many areas, a price to be paid for the stand for truth and New Testament Christianity, but with leadership given by Mr. Phillips and others of that day, God's blessing was evident. Under the hand of God Elim's present position in the evangelical world is due to the self-sacrificing driving spirit of such early day pioneers and not least of all to E. J. Phillips.

Thinking of others was an ever-present attribute constantly practised in the home of Pastor and Mrs. Phillips. For weeks on end, my own wife, during her many illnesses, and I, have been cared for in this Christian home. Sharing their social scene, away from

by A. S. F. Horne,
Pastor of our Ipswich Church

I WONDER what the real number is – a thousand murderers, or one hundred thousand murderers in church every Sunday?

"Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer" (1 John 3:15).

There are other murderers in the world besides those who take human life. Note the Amplified Bible version: "Anyone who (abominates, detests) hates his brother (in Christ) is (at heart a murderer) a spiritual murderer". Many of these are found Sunday by Sunday at the Lord's Table.

"I urge and entreat you – that all of you be in perfect harmony and full agreement in what you say and that there be no dissensions or factions or divisions among you" (1 Corinthians 1:10). "I hear that there are cliques (divisions and factions) among you" (1 Corinthians 11:18. Amplified). Tens of thousands are lost to the service of the Church, killed by judging, back-biting and scandalising.

Such murderers do not take human life, but they take or try to take what is just as precious as life, namely character. If they do not succeed in destroying their brother's good name, it is not for want of trying. In some instances, because his good character is proof against their malicious attacks, their hatred is increased, just as the hatred of Cain was kindled and strengthened into a murderous desire at the sight of the acceptance of his brother's offering. The very spirit that dwelt in Cain and that prompted him to take his brother's life dwells in the breasts of those who hate their brother.

The law of the land and the fear of death may prevent their taking the natural life of their brother, but the spirit is the same, and God judges a man by his thoughts, desires and motives, as well as by his words and actions. What is worse, their hatred is not a temporary thing, a mushroom growth, but a deep-rooted, chronic hatred, every day and life-long. They hate when the sun is up and they hate when the sun is down. They carry on their murderous work from the first day of January until the last day of December. Instead of letting the fire of their hate die out, they constantly watch the sayings and doings of their brothers and sisters in the Lord to gather up fresh fuel for the flames of their wrath. They take care to put the worst construction possible on all their words and actions. They twist and distort their best motives, so as to make them appear evil.

The New Testament and all its teachings are thrown aside. As far as forgiving, they wish to be forgiven, but never to forgive. They hate with a perfect hatred and act and talk as if the Bible commanded them to curse their enemies, to smite them on the one cheek and harder on the other.

Unfortunately they are not satisfied with hating their fellow-believers themselves, but they also do all that they can to get others to hate them. Instead of binding up the slight wound that might have been given them and letting it heal, they run about pulling it open and showing it to their acquaintances, that they may enlist sympathy for themselves and hatred for the offending brother. Sometimes they succeed.

A puff of scandal will as easily turn some people as a puff of wind will turn a weathercock. Then they join the others and take up the reproach against their neighbour and become the packman or scandal-mongers for those who hate him, and so the murder or murders are committed.

If only all who hate would remember that the "old Serpent, the Devil, was a murderer from the beginning", and that his children are those who do his work, regardless of their religious profession!

John says, "All murderers shall have their part in the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone".

If only the spiritual murderers and all who carry the Devil's mail-bag would stop and think: "No murderer hath eternal life abiding in him, and he that hateth his brother is a murderer". "We know that we have passed from death into life because we love the brethren". "If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar".

Richard Baxter, after the closest contact with the severest Puritans of the Commonwealth and the most licentious Cavaliers of the Restoration, wrote in his old age: "I see that good men are not so good as I once thought they were, and find that new men are as bad as their enemies imagine!'. It is good to remember that Jesus said "Anyone that is without sin among you should be the first to throw a stone at her" (John 8:7, Beck).

Someone has said, "Be sure of this: men will weigh you in your own scales". A baker living in a village not far from Quebec bought his butter from a neighbouring farmer. He became suspicious that the butter was not the right weight. For several days he weighed the butter and found that the rolls were gradually diminishing in weight. He had the farmer arrested for fraudulent dealing. At the trial the Judge said, "I presume you have scales". "Yes, of course, your honour". "And weights too?". "No, sir". "Then how do you manage to weigh the butter which you sell?". "That's easily explained, your honour", said the farmer. "When the baker commenced buying his butter from me, I thought that I would get my bread from him, and it is his one pound loaves that I've been using as a weight for the butter I sell".

Paul in Galatians said: "I conclude (To sum up): Let us treat all men with kindness. Let no man hereafter harass me by misrepresentation" (Galatians 6:17, Way).

Church Reports

NEATH Pastor: A.O. Johnson

OUR recent tent campaign conducted by our Minister has made a great impact on the people of Neath. We cannot report results in the hundreds, but we believe that those who were dealt with were soundly saved. The following is the testimony of Mr. D. Davies, a young man who is now attending the Church:

"At fourteen years of age, I started smoking, drinking and taking drugs. My life for the next fourteen years was a complete mess. I got into such a bad state that I once nearly killed myself. The most absurd thing was that I thought that I was a Christian throughout this time! On July 25th I went to the "Come back to God" tent campaign at Neath, not knowing that I was to take the biggest step in my life. That night I heard how Jesus had died for me and that He could change my life if I let Him into my heart. I was really impressed and decided to let Him have a go. I can happily say that my life has completely changed. I have no desire for drink and drugs now. My life is filled with the love of Jesus. Before my salvation my life was without purpose. Now it is full and exciting with the love of Jesus."

JERSEY Pastor: B.C. Vidamour

THE Isle of Sunshine lived up to its reputation for our annual Sunday schools outing. Amid great excitement, the children of both the Stopford Road and Grand Vaux Sunday schools together with many parents and friends gathered at the Church, to find several lorries bedecked with streamers, balloons and flowers, and the recently-acquired twenty-two seater bus waiting to take them for a drive around the lovely countryside and then to the beach at St. Ouens for a sand-castle competition. Each class was busy with hands, buckets and spades to try to build better than the others. What fun was had by all!

We left the beach marching along, singing choruses, on to the lorries once more to be taken to a hall where the ladies had prepared a sumptuous tea. Altogether 196 people sat down for tea – an all-time record.

After tea, games and races took place in an adjoining field, the highlight of the evening being the tug of war between the two Sunday Schools, for which a cup was presented by the donor.

The ice-cream van arrived during the evening and each child and adult was given an ice cream. Before leaving for home each child was given a bag of fresh fruit.

It certainly was a day to remember. Everything was so lovely and the fellowship was wonderful. The children thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

I must make mention of the fact that there is always a spirit of joy in giving at our Jersey Church and certainly there was plenty provided by the members for the outing.

We praise the Lord for His goodness!

Letters to the Editor

Dear Mr. Walker,
I'M troubled about J.T. Bradley's logic in the piece you published about the number of atomic particles in the universe (ELIM EVANGEL, August 4th).

He suggests that the multiplication of life cells on earth would give us more life cells than all the atomic particles in the universe, if life did begin two thousand million years ago.

We should remember other factors – such as the enormous wastage of life-cells – but that there is some fault with Mr. Bradley's argument is obvious. There would still be more life cells on earth than atoms in the universe if life began even 6,000 years ago, as some believe, though I certainly do not. There is thus some correcting factor which Mr. Bradley has not taken into his reckoning.

Sincerely,
George Canty

Dear Mr. Walker,
I HOLD no brief for the theory of evolution and it is many years since I tried to read about Sir Arthur Eddingtons theories – I do not know how far these are accepted by others – but I suspect a flaw in your argument.

Living cells are not created out of nothing; they are produced out of existing matter – food. They do not last for ever; they die and return to the general store of matter from which fresh living cells are in due course produced.

The number of protons and neutrons in the universe therefore does not need to be greater than the possible total number of living cells produced.

Yours sincerely in Christ,
Ian E. Tweedie, B.Sc., A.R.C.S.

Dear Editor,
GOD hears and answers prayer!

I am writing to you to encourage people to pray. I often attend the morning service held at Headquarters just before 9.00 am, every morning, when the brethren and staff at Headquarters and our Press meet in the Boardroom for Bible reading and prayer, and when prayer is made for the Movement at home and abroad. Often there is special prayer for ministers, the churches and the sick. During my recent illness and breakdown special prayer was made for me at Headquarters, but it was Tuesday, June 21st, before I became conscious of other people praying for me. The doctor's orders were that I should cancel all my appointments for the time being. This was done by telephone. That same day Pastor W.J. Maybin phoned from Southampton to say: "Tell Leon we shall be praying for him tonight at the prayer meeting". Again the phone rang. Pastor J.W. Newman of Coventry had been told by Pastor David E. Dean of Nuneaton who had ministered at Gloucester on the previous Sunday and had heard of my sickness. Mr. Newman informed my wife that prayer would be made at their prayer meeting for me, so that night at 7.30. pm, I joined with them in prayer. Knowing the Pastors and the people and the church buildings, I felt that I was in one glorious prayer circle and was blessed spiritually and physically. I was reminded of Acts 12; when Peter was in prison, prayer was made in the house of John Mark's mother. God heard and answered prayer even to their amazement. Your requests for prayer are heard by God; He hears and He answers prayer. Be encouraged, friend, no matter who you are or where you are. Thankyou, friends, for prayer for me, and to God be the glory.

Yours gratefully,

the cares of administration, sharing holidays together and travels at home and abroad, have revealed such a personality of human love and care.

One must mention another side of our brother, perhaps not observed by the public in general, namely his great sense of humour which so often eased the tensions of vital administrative committees and contributed a gaiety within the precincts of his home or in the homes of his friends.

Many will recall his kindness and understanding, his ever-open ear and heart in giving wise counsel and words of wisdom to fellow-ministers and to members in every walk and vocation in life.

The abundance of pleasant, moving memories fills our hearts with gratitude to God, for E. J. Phillips sets before us the example of a brother in Christ facing each of us with the challenge we must exemplify.

Still, still with Thee, when purple morning breaketh,
When the bird waketh, and the shadows flee;
Fairer than morning, lovelier than daylight,
Dawns the sweet consciousness, I am with Thee.

As in the dawning, o'er the waveless ocean,
The image of the morning-star doth rest;
So in this stillness Thou beholdest only
Thine image in the waters of my breast.

When sinks the soul, subdued by toil and slumber,
Its closing eye looks up to Thee in prayer;
Sweet the repose beneath Thy wings o'er-shading,
But sweeter still, to wake and find Thee there.

So shall it be at last, in that bright morning
When the soul waketh, and life's shadows flee;
Oh, in that hour, fairer than daylight dawning,
Shall rise the glorious thought– I am with THEE.

Testimony Time—HE IS STILL THE SAME

I WOULD like to testify to the healing power of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Sixteen years ago I started to have pins and needles in my fingers. After a while I could not hold things properly and gradually this got worse. I was sent to a specialist who said that I needed treatment. He did not tell me at first what the trouble was. After some months of treatment there was no improvement and I could not move my neck properly.

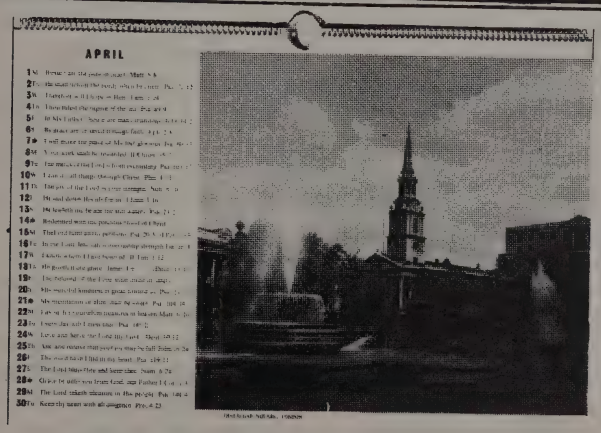
At this time I had a slipped disc and was taken into hospital for treatment. I was told that I had arthritis of the spine and was given a surgical corset and told not to knit, wash, iron,or clean windows. I was in great pain nearly all the time and was given "arms" of plaster for my husband to bind at night to stop my arms going out of shape.My own doctor gave me tablets and also sleeping tablets as sleep seemed a luxury.

During this time I got much worse and had three operations on my hands and was given a collar to wear. Things became so bad that one or two sleeping tablets were of no help to me and to get even a couple of hours sleep I took four tablets.I suffered for thirteen years and was desperately ill in the last few months before God healed me.

One Sunday morning I was unable to go to Communion with my husband. While lying in bed I saw a vision of an old man who represented the old grey man of death, and I knew that I was dying. My husband was terribly distressed when I told him.He said that I was not to say such things. On the Monday evening, however, our Pastor, T.P. Mullen, was told by God to visit me. This he did at about 9.30 p.m. He said that he knew when I told him that I was dying.He prayed with me and committed me to God.

A specialist was brought in by my doctor. He said that I was very ill as my whole system was poisoned through taking so many tablets for thirteen years.He said that I must come off them at once, but that I would suffer withdrawal symptoms and be very ill as a result for at least two weeks.

God in His mercy has His hand upon me, however, and He touched me. I did not suffer any withdrawal symptoms at all. All the pain ceased and from that time I have not needed any tablets of any kind. I do not wear the collar, surgical belt or arms, and my hands have their full use. I can wash, iron, knit, paint, clean windows and cut the lawns, and I have gained three stones in weight.



This wonderful touch from God came to me almost three years ago. The hospital discharged me and do not want to see me again.

Very humbly I thank our Saviour for healing my body and give Him all the praise and glory for He alone is worthy.

"Have faith in God" (Mark 11:22)!

The greedy Bird

Luke 12:24

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

SUSIE Sparrow had been searching for food all morning. "Mrs. Brown is late with the crumbs today," she said to herself. "Perhaps she is busy with the washing. I'll fly over again later." When Susie passed the park on her way home to the nest, she heard a hard, deep croak. She looked down and saw a large, black bird busily pecking away at a brown paper bag in an attempt to get at some sandwiches inside.

"Someone must have left his lunch behind," she thought. "I wonder if that bird will share it with me ? May I have a bit of that sandwich, please?"

"Certainly not!" replied the big bird, harshly.

"Why, you have plenty!" exclaimed Susie, "and I want only a small portion."

"I found it! It's mine! Now go away and allow me to eat in peace!" the bird ordered, and continued to gorge himself.

Susie flew back to her nest in disgust.

"Did you find any food?" Mrs. Sparrow asked her daughter.

"I saw some in the park," said Susie, "but a big, black bird refused to share it with me."

"Oh, it was probably a raven," said Mrs. Sparrow, "and ravens are mean, selfish birds, and greedy, too."

These seemingly unloved birds were once used in the service of God, however, for, during the time of the great famine in Israel, He ordered them to take food to the prophet, Elijah. The greedy, selfish ravens were changed into cheerful,willing helpers and flew to and fro each morning supplying Elijah with bread and meat.

God looks after the ravens, too, and sees that they never go hungry. God cares for these mean,greedy birds with their black,selfish nature. How much more does He care for us, His children! Let us learn from the ravens and show our love for God by using our time and our talents in His service and by being cheerful and willing helpers.

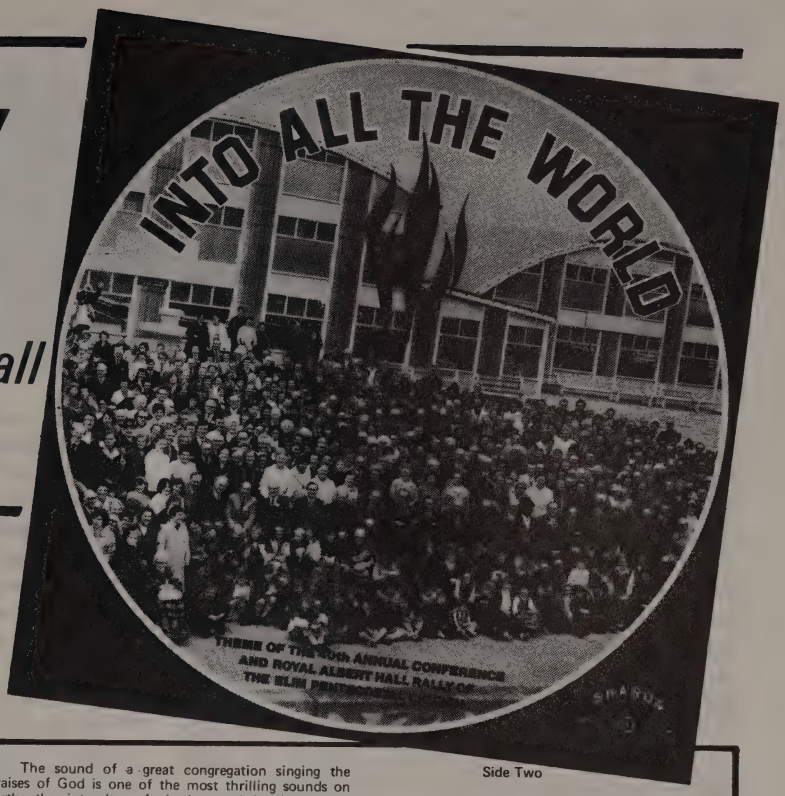
44. Joseph the Slave (Genesis 37:28)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church



CONSIDER Joseph's slavery.

Joseph's circumstances were beyond his control so, despite his initial sorrow, he had to learn to accept it and to trust God against all appearances. The enslaving of Joseph did not take the Lord by surprise. All His plans took this into account before He made His promises. Circumstances could not hinder His plans. The Lord had a far greater purpose than Joseph becoming merely the head of a nomadic tribe. He intended that Joseph should be exalted to lead an empire and to save many people. To do this, He had to send him to hard, inhospitable Egypt.

The message for us is clear. We must never limit God by our own view of circumstances. We should learn to live with them and yet to look beyond them to God. Always remember that our all-wise God knows the end from the beginning and that the events that sometimes seem so unexpected and shattering to us do not take Him by surprise. He is silently, surely moving toward the completing of His plan and He uses those very events to bring His purpose to fruition. His ways are not men's ways nor are His thoughts our thoughts. We can no more comprehend the glory and wonder of the purpose of God than we can measure the distance between earth and heaven, yet, if we will trust Him, we shall come to understand why He allowed things to happen in the way they did. We shall then be filled with amazed wonder at the perfection of His thoughts for us.

The sound of a great congregation singing the praises of God is one of the most thrilling sounds on earth; the interplay of rhythm and harmony like sunshine dancing on the waves, reflects a rich variety of feeling and expresses the many-splendoured glory of God's grace. Only those who are part of such a congregation and who respond to the inward surge of worship as "deep calls unto deep" can fully experience the inspiration of such moments. It is our hope, however, that this record will recapture in some measure the blessing enjoyed by the thousands who attended the Elim meetings in London's Royal Albert Hall on Easter Monday and the Elim Conference in Blackpool, 1973.

The theme of this year's meetings – INTO ALL THE WORLD – expresses our urgent belief that the Good News of Jesus Christ and His power to save men from sin must be proclaimed as widely as possible. It is our prayer that this record will help to spread this marvellous message. May it bring, wherever it is played, not only echoes of past blessing but a fresh encounter with Jesus Christ, who is Lord and Saviour of all who hear His voice and yield themselves to Him.

Another Missionary Teacher in Rhodesia

MARY FISHER hails from Caerphilly, South Wales, and is a Member of our Church there. She attended a local girls' grammar school and in 1962 was successful in nine subjects in her "O" level exams. In 1964 she acquired "A" levels in maths, physics and chemistry and went to Swansea University in 1968 where she obtained a general degree in pure mathematics and physics. Her post-graduate certificate of education was taken at Brunel University in 1969. Mary became a maths. teacher at Longford Comprehensive School, Hounslow, and taught from September 1969 to September 1971, when she entered London Bible College to study successfully for a Diploma of Theology. During her studies in London Bible College she applied to the Elim Missionary Society and was accepted for service in the Emmanuel Secondary School, Rhodesia. Mary Fisher is an accomplished musician and during deputation work often sang gospel songs and accompanied herself on the guitar or piano.

Crowded farewell services were held in Caerphilly and in Kensington Temple, London. She is now busily engaged in the September term on the Field.

The following report comes from John G. Cooper, Pastor of our Caerphilly Church:

At Caerphilly, Miss Mary Fisher said goodbye to the Welsh Presbytery and to our Caerphilly Church, where she was converted some years ago through the Sunday School. The meeting was very moving.

Cheques were presented to the Elim Missionary Society and to Miss Fisher from the Caerphilly Church as tokens of our appreciation of their work on our behalf in other fields.

Missionary Secretary Leslie Wigglesworth was the speaker. Many hearts were touched as Mary Fisher testified of how God had called her to this particular ministry. A tea was held prior to the meeting and people from all over the Welsh Presbytery were able to meet Mary personally and chat with her.

She will be a great loss to the work in the Homeland, but we know that she will be a mighty asset to the work of God under the Elim banner in the Rhodesian field.

The Ministers of the Presbytery together with Mr. Wigglesworth and the Elders and Deacons of our Caerphilly Church laid hands on our sister and committed her to the work of God. The service ended on a great note of triumph and victory.

There is an Answer

writes our Field Superintendent, R.B. Chapman

Watergate! Corruption! Rape! Murder! Assault! Hi-jacks! Hold-ups! Robbery! Arson! Violence! Call-girls! Pollution! Vice! Drugs! Divorce!

We hear about them, read about them, we see them, lament over them. We decry this dreadful world in which we live. We denounce in strongest terms the perpetrators of these repulsive crimes of varying kinds and degrees.

We sometimes draw our skirts and coats around us in a gesture of disgust which almost matches the mock piety of the Pharisees of old.

We tend to denounce the forces of law for not taking things in hand and dealing with the situation more resolutely and we call for new laws to regulate the position and for sterner punishments to act as deterrents, but the only changes seem to be changes for the worse.

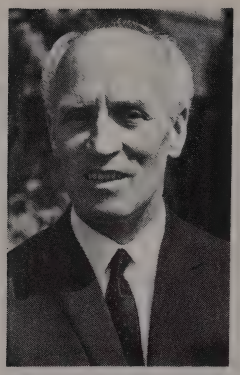
One feels that we are back in the days of Paul, surrounded by conditions such as he described when he wrote to the church at Rome: "God gave them over to a reprobate mind" (Romans 1:28). In the selfsame chapter, however, Paul also wrote: "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth" (v.16). He knew that this was the only power that could transform and WE KNOW IT TOO! The dissemination of this glorious truth holds the solitary solution to the situation in this and in any other generation.

Paul also looked at the Corinthian position with its immorality, idolatry, drunkenness, extortion and covetousness. He then viewed the noble band of Christians who had been won by the pure gospel that he preached and said, "Such were some of you: but ye are washed, but ye are sanctified . . . in the name of the Lord Jesus" (1 Corinthians 6:11).

This revolutionary change, this transforming wonder comes only through the power of the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. This is why we preach it, why we hold campaigns, why we open churches, and why we hold our EVANGELISTIC SUNDAY each year and invite you to share in spreading this delivering message. In the gospel alone lies the dynamic that can remove those ugly crimes of which we hear so often and about which we read so much. Nothing else can so alter men and women and make the world a better place to live in because it can become a better world only as there are more better people living in it.

Please assist us in this work of EVANGELISM by giving liberally to the THANK OFFERING APPEAL on SUNDAY, OCTOBER 14th.

You and I are thankful that we heard this wonderful gospel which has saved us from being like so many others whom we sometimes tend to criticise or condemn so readily because of their way of life.



Help somebody to hear the same wondrous story, that they too may believe and be saved from the degradations of this desolate world.

From T. H. Stevenson

MY five year old grand-daughter returned home from Saturday morning Junior Club in the village to burst out with the question "Will we all be babies when we go to Heaven?"!

She seemed to receive more an examination than an explanation, or at least in that order, since my daughter's first reaction was to ask why Sarah asked this question. The little one's reply was, "Well, we were told that we must be born again to go to Heaven."

A man or woman is just as likely to put a similar question when told this same important truth. Particularly is this so today when the majority do not rush to hear the gospel. My grand-daughter's query emphasises that effective preaching requires an explanation as well as a proclamation of Bible texts. The immediate vindication of this assertion is that He who first spoke of being "born again" was more even than a "Teacher come from God", as Nicodemus exclaimed; He was the Son of God. His one-man audience was a ruling Pharisee and no doubt able to teach. Despite such a combination of teachers, however, there was a great gulf between them. Nicodemus did not understand. Our Lord needed to elucidate much more, with the rider, "If I have told you earthly things and ye believe not, how shall ye believe if I tell you of heavenly things?".

The problem of my little grand-daughter and the learned Pharisee is not peculiar to this one aspect of Bible truth; it is general. Preachers and Sunday school teachers must consider the presentation together with the quotation of Bible texts. Increasingly there is much preaching today without much reference to the words of Scripture, though some almost confine themselves to quoting Scriptures (at least the preferable of the two approaches). None can do better than remember the wonderful Emmaus road discourse when the risen Saviour to the two disciples "expounded unto them in all the scriptures the things concerning Himself". Christ was the subject; the Scriptures were the material source; and systematic interpretation was the method.

I recollect the testimony to a most famous preacher whose custom was to look at the youngest member of his congregation while preaching, confident that, if the child listened and seemed to understand, the remainder of the congregation would also. Nor can I forget my student days when a resident minister told me of his sermon material and asked me if I could think of a suitable text for his sermon! That brief moment together was, for me, as good as a lecture on "How not to preach".

Cross wearing or Cross bearing?

IN my page last week I wrote about crosses and the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ in particular. Glancing through the fashion feature of a daily newspaper I noticed the popularity of jewellery incorporating the cross; it is being worn by people of both sexes. There are charms, pendants, necklaces and girdles with crosses suspended from them. It is possible to purchase at Salisbury Cathedral six different replicas of ancient, sacred crosses fashioned in ceramic. I have noticed, too, that many young people, who, as far as I know or can judge, have no allegiance to Christ or the Church, wear a cross. Whence comes this obsession with the cross? Is it merely to follow the dictates of fashion or is there a superstitious belief that the cross has protective powers? I pondered this question recently when sitting on the beach at a crowded resort where so many of the bathers had a tiny cross on a fine chain hanging around their necks and obviously always worn beneath their undergarments.

Before ever the Lord went to Calvary and died there on the cross, He said that His followers must take up their crosses daily (Luke 9:23) and that "Whosoever doth not bear his cross and come after Me, cannot be My disciple" (Luke 14:27). These stern words were spoken in each instance when our Saviour was warning of His own suffering and death and of the cost of discipleship to all sincere followers. To my mind this is the only true cross-bearing. What a world of difference there is between cross-wearing and cross-bearing. Benjamin P. Browne in his book Let there be Light tells of an incident which illustrates the serious nature and the cost of cross-bearing:

"An American businessman went to Oberammergau to witness the Passion Play. Enthralled by this great drama, which depicts the story of the cross, he went backstage at the conclusion of the play to meet Mr. Anton Lang, who played the part of Christus. Our American friend had equipped himself with an expensive camera which he was eager to use. Abruptly, he snapped the picture of Anton Lang. Then, looking about the stage for something more to photograph, he spotted in the corner the great cross which Mr. Lang carried up the hill of Calvary in the play. Quickly turning to his wife, the tourist said 'Here, dear, take my camera. I'm going over to lift up the cross. When I get it up on my shoulder, you snap my picture carrying the cross. Won't that be a novel and exciting photograph to send home to our friends in America?'. He saw that Mr. Lang was frowning. 'You don't mind, Mr. Lang, do you?' he said. 'This is very unusual', protested Mr. Lang. Before he could say more, however, the visitor had hurried over to the cross. He stooped to lift on to his shoulder, but could not move it one inch off the floor. That cross was made of heavy iron-oak beams. Amazed, he turned to Mr. Lang and said, 'Why, I thought it would be quite light. I fancied it would be hollow. Why do you carry a cross that is so terribly heavy?'. Mr. Lang drew himself up to his full height and replied with dignity, 'Sir, if I did not feel the weight of His cross, I could not play His part'".

"Take up thy cross, the Saviour said,
If thou wouldst My disciple be;
Deny thyself, the world forsake,
And humbly follow after Me.

Take up thy cross; let not its weight
Fill thy weak spirit with alarm;
His strength shall bear thy spirit up
And brace thy heart and nerve thine arm.

Take up thy cross, nor heed the same,
Nor let thy foolish pride rebel;
The Lord for thee the cross endured,
To save thy soul from death and hell.

Take up thy cross and follow Christ,
Nor think till death to lay it down;
For only he who bears the cross
May hope to wear the glorious crown.

THE PRINCIPLES AND PRACTICE OF YOUTH WORK

by Eldin R. Corsie, National Youth Director

LESSON 2 Programme Planning

2. The Range of Programme Planning

OBSERVERS of youth work, from whatever particular angle they approach it, have always to remind themselves that youth activity within the church is a unity, a society in miniature, operating in leisure time, primarily concerned with spiritual education and growth in relationships as well as with mental and physical recreation, in other words, with the all-round development of the boy or girl, both as an individual and as a member of society. The worth of any youth unit must be judged by the emphasis given to each part of the personality. Programme planning for young people must have balance. The programme must at least be four-dimensional—spiritual, educational, social and recreational.

Spiritual

This consideration is primary and fundamental. This is the anchor of any youth work.

Information regarding youth activities can be obtained from the Elim Youth Department. The local Youth Commissioner should be able to advise and help to conduct special efforts for the promotion of these youth departments.

Crusaders has become a rather difficult department to conduct. There are programme ideas that can be obtained from Elim Youth Department. In addition to these there are the Scripture Press Training Hour Programmes dealing with such subjects as Bible study, Christian living, Church leadership, dating and preparation for marriage, devotional life and worship, doctrine, evangelism, family life, history of the Church, missions, personality development, religions and cults, seasonal studies, stewardship and vocations, One of these courses can last for twelve or thirteen weeks. There is a handbook for the leader and there are handbooks for the young people.

Another fruitful youth activity is the Bible Discussion Group. Scripture Union and C.S.S.M. have published a booklet Know how to lead Bible Study and Discussion Groups. This method of Bible study emphasises the importance of preparation.

One cannot over-stress corporate prayer. Prayer groups should be formed as often as possible and young people encouraged to seek the baptism in the Holy Ghost.

The distinctive doctrines of the Pentecostal faith should be presented with regularity and conviction. Literature on these subjects should be displayed at every youth gathering. No effort should be spared to make the youth group as spiritual as the Bible requires it to be.

Educational

These subjects can be as diverse as it is possible to make them. The choice of subject will depend upon the local circumstances. For instance, "Choosing a job" is bound to have interest for all. One can deal in particular with jobs which demand concern for people, e.g. nurse, probation officer, school teacher, welfare officer, youth service and, not least, the Christian ministry and missionary work. Background material can be obtained from Youth Employment Offices and from local libraries. There are films on these subjects which can be hired from the local Youth Organiser.

Then there is the matter of citizenship. It may be possible to get a local government officer to visit the youth group to speak on the subject: "The Role of young People in community Life". There is the policeman (make sure he is in sympathy with young people otherwise you may be adding to his burdens instead of relieving him of them). The fireman, too, can make a practical contribution to the education of young people.

Then there are the vital themes of life such as marriage. "Home-making" can provide the springboard for discussion on all the vital aspects of marriage and building a home. Those who give talks on this subject should be young enough to share imaginatively the outlook of the younger generation and, for reasons which will be obvious, they should be married people.

"Preparing a Talk" or "The Art of public Speaking" are subjects which always attract attention. Some helpful advice could be given on "How NOT to give a Testimony"!

Some of the tough topics will spark off interest and discussion: "Are we afraid of Discipline?"; "Christians and Trade Unions"; "Music—Highbrow or Lowbrow?"; "Modesty in Dress", and so on.

Scripture Union Portions — Notes by Ray Hughes

Monday, September 24th — 2 Chronicles 25:14-28

"Art thou made of the king's counsel? forbear (v.16).

ARROGANT Amaziah (v.19), after one triumph, thought that he would lead Judah to victory over Israel, but, whereas he had listened to the word of the prophet before, now he turned to the Edomites' false gods. These were unable to save them from his hands (v.15). He dismissed the prophet saying in effect, "I have not appointed you my counsellor, nor have I asked your opinion". A prophet is one whom God causes to boil over; he has an appointment from heaven. "Apostle" means "sent one" (Isaiah 6:8; Matthew 9:38; John 20:21). We must work the works of Him who sends us. Latins say on parting, "Vio con Dios", i.e. "Go with God".

Tuesday, September 25th — 2 Chronicles 26:1-23

"Uzziah built" (v.9).

THIS thoughtful monarch, during a fifty-three years' reign, improved his kingdom by a planned progression of acts. He took advantage of other people's cleverness (v.15), dug wells for his expanding cattle herds and weakened his opponents' defences while strengthening his own. No wonder that "his name spread abroad even to the entering in of Egypt"! Doing his own job well, he thought that he had the right to interfere in the tasks of others. No true priest ever took the calling on because he felt like it; it is God who gives such ministries to men (Ephesians 4:11). Going beyond his God-appointed place in life caused Uzziah to be banished from all that he had considered beautiful. As a leper he had to live outside the camp (Leviticus 13:46). What could have been a lifelong enjoyment of God-given prosperity was spoiled because he did not recognise the divine boundaries.

Wednesday, September 26th — 2 Chronicles 27:1-9

"He prepared (established) his ways before the Lord his God" (v.6).

"ESTABLISHED" is the marginal word for "prepared". It is good to prepare to do good, but better when that good is an established fact. John Wesley said, "Do all the good you can, by all the means you can, in all the ways you can, in all the places you can, at all the times you can, to all the people you can, as long as you ever can". Jotham was "before the Lord"; all our doings are known to the Lord (Hebrews 4:13).

Thursday, September 27th — 2 Kings 16:1-20

"Ahaz went to Damascus . . . and saw" (v.10).

I REMEMBER talking to my landlady when I was a single pastor in Yorkshire about changes I would like to see in the church where I had been for only a few months. She was quiet for a while, then she said, "A new broom may sweep clean, but an old one knows where the dirt is." I got her meaning and postponed any changes until I knew the reliable personnel and had considered the requirements of the faithful folk.

Ahaz would have done well to have met my Yorkshire landlady! As the Spirit told John later: "Love not the world, neither the things of the world. . . For all that is in the world. . .the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father" (1 John 2:15,16). Ahaz dabbled in pagan practices forbidden by God (Deuteronomy 18:21). In these days when the occult is receiving revived attention this should be a warning to us. Ahaz fancied fashions (2 Kings 16:10) and forsook the pattern that God had revealed to Moses in the Mount. He indulged in change for change's sake. Let us avoid such pitfalls.

Friday, September 28th — 2 Kings 17:1-23

"Turn ye from your evil ways" (v.13).

PETER'S Pentecostal message was, "Repent". This was no new message, for, throughout the history of God's dealings with men, He has pleaded for a change in heart and action. Man on the whole chooses to reject the prophet and refuse his message, or worse still, he puts off the day of repentance, as someone said, "I laughed beneath the moon, I slept beneath the sun, I lived a life of going to do, and died with nothing done". Israel and Judah (v.13) hardened their necks when they should have softened their hearts. Hard necks are proud and do not bow to the sovereignty of God, but the humble say, "We worship and adore Thee falling down before Thee".

The calamity of this lack of contrition was that they were carried off into bondage.

Saturday, September 29th — 2 Kings 17:24-41

"They feared not the Lord" (v.25)

KINGS performed whoredoms, queens introduced false gods, perverted priests compromised to meet the demands of a secular society, the common man adopted the customs, heathen practices and religions of the pagans together, and now came a massive influx of many nations with differing cultures and religions. No wonder that the fear of the Lord was not among them! This mixed multitude treated Jehovah just like another god. In the Samaritan centre of worship the two golden calves symbolised the Almighty who had brought the nation out of Egypt. The people were confused, for both in teaching and in living they had diluted the Divine until He was small enough to enter their superstitious minds. They had a form of godliness, but denied the power thereof (2 Timothy 3:5), diminished the Word of God (Deuteronomy 4:2, 23, 24), destroyed national (Deuteronomy 7:3,4) and religious purity (Deuteronomy 6:14,15), and appeared to despair of ever getting out of the muddle. These are some of the reasons why the Jews had no

Wm. F.P. Burton, Congo Pioneer, by Harold Womersley. Published by Victory Press, price 60p, postage and packing 8p extra.

ARTIST, poet, engineer, teacher, linguist, writer of missionary books and of learned treatises, geologist, student, Pentecostal statesman - the list stretches on and on - but in his own reckoning, Burton was just a tramp preacher. Author and publisher have done us a great service in providing this moving book. Read it. Give it as a gift. Use it for Sunday school rewards. It is excellent in every way. How could it be otherwise with a man like "Kapamu"? He was nearly eight-five when he died, but he won thirteen people to the Lord in the last ten days of his life. As Congo missionary Elvyn G. Lee is reported in the book as saying in the funeral service: "He did not burn out for God, he went out burning."

This book is worthy of its subject.

Prophet of the Restoration (price 35p, postage and packing 5p extra), Prophet of the Reformation (price 40p, postage and packing 5p extra), Prophet from the Euphrates (price 40p, postage and packing 5p extra), Prophet of Edom's Doom (price 35p, postage and packing 5p extra). All by Dr. F.A. Tatford and published in the Twentieth Century series by Prophetic Witness Publishing House.

WE have run out of superlatives to describe the phenomenal output of the well-known Bible expositor, Dr. F.A. Tatford. It is not only astonishing that he writes so much, but also that his standard is so high.

The four books deal with the prophecies of Haggai, Malachi, Obadiah and Balaam respectively. As an introduction to the Books and to the ministries of the prophets concerned, they are excellent. They will admirably serve for young people as well as for older.

In these days of renewed interest in Scripture, it is good to have these fine handbooks on Old Testament Truth.

Finding the Way, by John Eddison. Published by Scripture Union, price 5p, postage and packing 3p extra.

THIS is yet another book on "How to find Jesus as your own personal Saviour". It is simply written and has a strikingly unusual cover, but it nevertheless duplicates many others. There is considerable written material, illustrated occasionally with vague photographs which may well prove too much for many would-be readers. The lack of any headings is no doubt a very "with-it" idea, but it makes the contents a little confusing. However, at 5p it is very reasonably priced and may well prove to be of some use in personal evangelism, but Journey into Life still takes some beating!

dealings with the Samaritans. "Deuteronomy" means, "the law repeated". How blessed they would have been if they had repeated it and obeyed it more often (Psalm 119)!

Sunday, September 30th 2 Chronicles 29:1-19

"Sanctify the house of the Lord".

HEZEKIAH was instrumental in bringing revival to Judah. His country, like Israel, had not been diligent in maintaining a pure religion that would please God. Realising this mistake and its sad consequences, he set about removing all "filthiness out of the holy place". "Sanctify" means, "Set apart, make holy, dedicate to the service of God, make like a skilled craftsman, set as a jeweller sets a precious stone to bring out its inherent beauty". To dedicate, one has to destroy the idols that have hindered the vision of the people (2 Kings 18:4). The brazen serpent was a means of blessing in the past, but, when the means obscures the message, the Master has departed. Crosses, crucifixes and St. Christopher medallions are now worn or displayed in homes like pagan fetishes to ward off evil spirits, not with any positive knowledge, but with an "airy-fairy" hope that they will bring "luck". How disappointed some folk must have been when the Pope proclaimed that Christopher was no longer a "saint" (compare Acts 19:24-29)! In these muddled modern days, when real religion is a rarity and perverted priests patronise the people, we cry: "Revive Thy work, O LORD". Read Jeremiah 10:19-21; 6:13-16.

THIS concludes the Notes written by Pastor Ray Hughes, to whom we express our grateful thanks. Our contributor for the next quarter is Pastor G.L.W. Ladlow, Minister of our Salisbury Church, whose first comments will appear in our next issue.

GOD does wonderful things!

A brother in one of our churches attended our last Conference. He wanted to be baptised in the Holy Spirit, but night succeeded night and his friends preferred the Late Night Specials so he did not get into one of the waiting meetings. It came to the very last night and he determined to seek the Lord with others in the special time of seeking God at the end of the day. There were very few present when he arrived at the place of meeting. An electrician was busy drilling holes in the wall and generally repairing some electrical equipment. One of our pastors arrived to explain that he was acting as substitute for the friends who normally conduct these meetings. Everything seemed rather disappointing, but our brother was mightily filled with the Spirit. His testimony is that since then God has used him to point others to Christ, including a teacher.

Have you received the Holy Spirit in this way?

A lady who is a member of a Pentecostal Church belonging to another fellowship heard David Hathaway tell of how God undertook for him. She obtained a tape recording and played it to her husband, who was a nominal Christian. He asked his wife to point him to Christ immediately afterwards. Within days he was with the Lord, his death coming unexpectedly. He was ready, however; a chance had been grasped.

Many folk seem to look for God's working in events which border almost on the mystic. I am sure that the Lord works in marvellous ways in the general life of the Church. Many times brethren from Headquarters remark when we compare experiences how we have heard testimonies of people being saved or filled with the Spirit at Conference and at the Royal Albert Hall. Frequently we hear testimonies of God moving to save and to bless in the churches. I met a sister within the last fortnight who told how God had met her and healed her of cancer. There have been no eye-catching headlines, but this lovely answer to prayer took place none the less.

Our churches, too, have many choice saints in them who have not seen an undertaking in a miraculous way so far, but they are believing God and trusting Him and proving Him every day. He sustains them, upholds them and causes them to triumph.

That's a miracle as well!

ELIM'S FOURTH WEEK OF UNITED PRAYER
October 7th to 14th

Dear Friend in Christ,

Greetings in His Name!

The fourth WEEK OF PRAYER called throughout our beloved Movement by the Executive Council draws near. Please join in prayer with us both privately and with your Church for revival to come to us all.

Revival is always God's answer to our needs and problems. When Israel was at its lowest ebb God sent revival through Elijah. When the world was at its lowest ebb God sent revival by the Holy Spirit through the apostles. When Britain was at its lowest ebb in the eighteenth century and it seemed that the powers of darkness were about to take over, God sent revival.

There are many individual matters for prayer that will be mentioned by your minister during the week of prayer, but the greatest, all-embracing need, is for revival.

We believe that God is answering prayer. Let us continue in prayer until the whole of our country experiences the presence of God in convicting and converting power.

Yours sincerely in our Lord's service,

Secretary-General

Church Reports

DRIFFIELD Pastor: D.B. Tinnion

IT is over two years since our last report, which dealt with the induction of our Pastor. We praise the Lord as we look back since that time and see how our Church has been blessed, especially over the last few months. The building has been completely modernised, which included the necessary work of destroying woodworm and treating damp. A kitchen and Church office have been built and an open-plan pulpit. The ladies of the Church laid a mahogany floor and presented the Church with a fitted carpet. A Hammond organ has been purchased. We praise God that in two years the offerings have nearly trebled. We see as many at the prayer meetings as we do on Sunday mornings. Although some of our members have moved away from the district and two have recently gone into full-time service, we have still more attending our services each week. In recent months many young people have been converted, baptised in water and in the Holy Spirit and are attending every meeting. One Member, who has been in the Church for many years and has been very faithful in prayer, said: "God is at work in our midst and has breathed upon us in Holy Ghost power." On Sunday evenings our Church is nearly full, more than half the congregation being in their teens and twenties.

Plans are under way for a crusade next March and we are delighted that most of the members and friends are mobile for the Lord in door-to-door work, house introduction meetings, coffee-evenings for Christ, etc.

A Catholic young man attended the prayer meeting "to see what was happening". People are telling us that we are the talk of Driffield. The young people have formed a gospel folk group and we thank the Lord again for gifts of equipment in recent months to enable the young people to have youth outreaches throughout the area. We praise God for the people who are coming into our Church for the first time. We thank God for a Pastor who has a great zeal for soul-winning.

G. MIDDLEWOOD

RUGBY Pastor: J. Whitehead

HAVING built up the activities of the Elim Pentecostal church in Windsor Street, Rugby, the minister, Rev. David C. Lewis, is leaving to take up a post in Colwyn Bay in his native Wales.

The former Liverpool city policeman who was a missionary in India for twenty-two years has been in Rugby for three years. During this time he has seen the development of a Sunday school and, more recently, the formation of a youth club and musical group for the young.

For the not so young at Abbotsbury, Fawsley House, and Dewar Close, and at St. Luke's Hospital, the visiting and programme of services by the Church have been increased.

Mr. Lewis has taken part in the visitation of homes in Rugby's Asian community and was a member of the steering committee of the Rugby 1973 Mission.

Mr. Lewis, his wife, Lilian, and daughter, Gwyneth, who was born in India, leave for Colwyn Bay after Mr. Lewis conducts his farewell service.

— Rugby Advertiser

The last weekend of Pastor Lewis's ministry in Rugby was triumphant. His labours of love in the Lord and those of Mrs. Lewis and Gwyneth, seemed suddenly to reveal their precious fruit.

On the Sunday night, six people were baptized in water on confession of their faith. At the Monday meeting thirteen were received into fellowship and to crown all, the Pastor had the thrill of leading one precious soul to the Lord at the end of his last meeting in Rugby.

Both nights the Church was packed to capacity. A photographer from the local press took photographs at the baptismal service. The Editor, having asked many questions of the Pastor, is preparing a write up about the Church.

Tributes from a surprising number of sources disclosed the amount of work done in Rugby for their Lord and Master by the Lewis family.

A Church of England Vicar obviously appreciated Pastor as a vital member of the local Council of Churches. The Pastor of an independent mission and the President of the Methodist Circuit praised his great efforts in the successful "Rugby Mission '73". A leader from one of the Baptist churches thanked the Pastor for what he had experienced and observed of his hospital visiting. A Pakistan Christian lady gave a moving tribute to the Pastor who had presided over the newly-formed Anglo-Asian Society especially as he could speak to her and her people about Jesus in their own language.

Outside our Church, many have come to know and love Pastor Lewis through his personal visits in the hospitals and the Old People's Homes and through the services there.

The Church attempted to show their love and appreciation of the Lewis family both in word and in song. Gifts were presented to Pastor and Mrs. Lewis and Gwyneth by the Sunday School, Youth Group, Friendly Hour, the Anglo-Asian Society and the Church, as tokens of love and gratitude.

Best wishes and God's blessing were extended to the family as they left for Colwyn Bay, where again Pastor Lewis, a Welshman, will be able to speak to the people about Jesus in their own language.

DOWN TO THE SEA WITH SONG

SUMMERTIME appointments in the sunny south bring great relief to the London Crusader Choir from their usual Sunday afternoons in many of Britain's grim, gaunt prisons. Recent visits to Eastbourne and Hastings were keenly anticipated by both the Choir and the crowds who gathered. These annual events bring together many holiday visitors from all parts of these Islands from Elim and from other denominations. They are reunion meetings of deep spiritual uplift and musical finesse. Despite the expected depletions during the peak holiday months the London Crusader Choir presented their music with a message in a manner expected from them. The Choir's repertoire includes some delightful, splendidly-arranged pieces in the modern idiom as well as the immortal hymns. Pastor Douglas B. Gray, ably assisted by deputy leader Albert Ardley and associate conductors Alf Winnett and Victor Johnson, directed the meetings throughout. The ministry of the Word and personal testimonies by Choir members relating their Pentecostal experiences were received with great appreciation. We express our warmest thanks to our President, Pastor John Lancaster, and to Pastor Eric Dainton and to the friends and workers of our Eastbourne and Hasting Churches for their great welcome, fellowship and hospitality.

Mrs. E. J. Phillips and the family have been deeply touched by the shoals of letters of sympathy and appreciation of the late E. J. Phillips. The tributes have been so numerous that it would be quite impossible to acknowledge them all personally. Nevertheless the warmth and cordiality shown to them at this time have cheered and comforted their hearts. The floral tributes were also very beautiful and we would like to thank everybody concerned very much indeed.

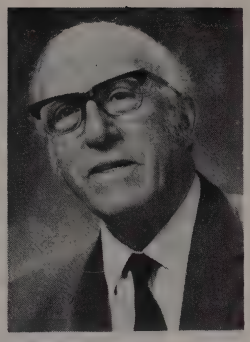
Letter to the Editor

Dear Sir,

MR. BRADLEY considers a cell dividing into two every year. He then argues that after x years there will be Z^x number of cells. This will be true if cells do not die before they divide. For example, if no cells die, then after four years there will be 2^4 i.e. 2x2x2x2 i.e. 16 cells, but if one cell dies in the second year, then after four years there will be only twelve cells.

Suppose the population of earth doubles every forty years, i.e. every generation. Assuming that Noah lived about 3,000 B.C., there should be about 2 to the power (5000/40) people on the earth today, i.e. 2^{125} people, i.e. 4.2×10^{37} people; but the population of the earth is only about 4×10^9. Hence such calculations cannot be made.



If we are going to give evolutionists some questions to answer then let us ask them the following:

1. The laws of probability show that the chances of forming organic molecules from inorganic substances by chance are infinitesmally small – something in the region of 10^{100} against! In view of this, why do Evolutionists still believe in chemical evolution?
2. Why do Evolutionists believe in evolution in view of the fact that it violates the second law of thermodynamics?
3. Can Evolutionists explain the following? –
   Man and dinosaur tracks have been found together;
   Trilobites (supposedly extinct 300 million years ago) have been found embedded in man's heel prints;
   Bones of man have been found in lower strata than so-called "ancient man";
   Human footprints exist in carboniferous rocks (the carboniferous rocks were supposedly laid down about 300 million years ago);
   Cave paintings of brontosaurus (an extinct dinosaur) have been found in Rhodesia.
4. How do Evolutionists explain the fact that there are still spiral galaxies when they should have been eliminated? Similarly, if the universe is as old as evolutionists maintain, all the comets should have disintegrated.

Comments please!

Points for Preachers

by J. Alexander Wright

An Outline

"My need and Thy great Fulness meet"

Redemption Hymnal No. 464; Philippians 4:19

TWO bells upon which the preacher must ever ring the changes are man's need and God's ability to meet it. Gideon Ousley protested to John Wesley: "I cannot preach, Mr. Wesley". He replied, "Gideon, you know the disease, and you know the remedy: preach it!".

1. A great Necessity; 2. A great Helper; 3. A great Supply, 4. Great Resources; 5. A great Channel.

1. The Bank. 2. The Cheque; 3. The Amount; 4. The Capital Reserves; 5. The Head Office; 6. The Signature, to which it but remains for us to add our own!

A Poem

Dad

THERE are little eyes upon you, and they're watching night and day;
There are little ears that quickly take in everything you say;
There are little hands all eager to do everything you do,
And a little boy who's dreaming of the day he'll be like you.

You're the little fellow's idol, you're the wisest of the wise;
In his little mind about you no suspicions ever rise;
He believes in you devoutly, holds that all you say and do
He will say and do in your way, when he's grown up like you.

There's a wide-eyed little fellow who believes you're always right
And his ears are always open and he watches day and night.
You are setting an example every day in all you do,
For the little boy who's waiting to grow up to be like you.

A Quotation

Some Church-member!

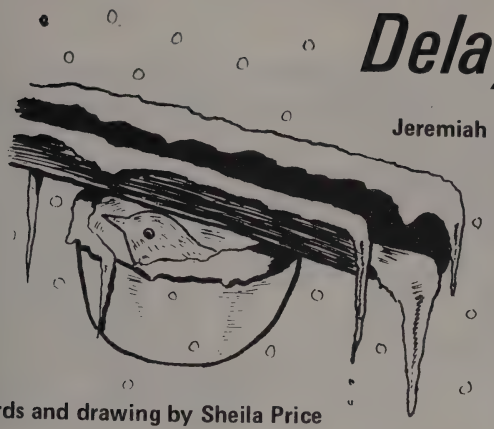
THE great American preacher, Henry Ward Beecher was buying a horse and the owner was describing the animal: "This horse is perfectly sound; he can go any gait-walk, pace, trot, or gallop. He will stand without hitching and work any place you put him – on the off side or the near side – buggy, plough, or wagon. He is perfectly gentle, though full of spirit; goes when you want him to go, and stops when you say, "Whoa." He has no bad habits, will neither bite nor kick, comes when you call him and does not run off when he sees anything strange."

Beecher looked admiringly at the animal and said wistfully, "Ah, I wish that horse were a member of my Church!".

Prayer and Praise

by F. H. Coleman

JESUS slept during that awful storm (Mark 4:39). How amazing that He could sleep! Most of us would be terrified or at least have an uneasy feeling in the pit of the stomach. During the roar of the storm, He did not hear a sound in His sleep, but the moment there was a cry for help from His disciples, he was instantly awake. What a revelation of the heart of Jesus we have here! He is never asleep to His people when they cry to Him. He is never too weary to hear our pleas.



A little further on in the life of Jesus we find Him nailed to the cross at Calvary. His body was racked with pain and the blood oozed from His wounds. His life was slowly ebbing away. There were those who jeered at Him. Oaths and curses rose to His ears. To all this He uttered not a word. Then suddenly a poor penitent cried to Him, "Lord remember me." Jesus heard that cry. In His own agony He gave the answer, "Today, you will be with Me in Paradise!".

Without doubt Jesus answers prayer. Whatever the situation, Jesus will hear our cry and deliver us.

I am reminded of a missionary friend who told of the land where he was working for Christ. It was troubled with robbers who went from village to village plundering, killing and setting fire to every house in the villages. One day they saw the smoke of a village on fire only a couple of miles from them. Soon it would be their fate. They cried to the Lord. They heard the arrival of the band of robbers. Their door was forced open and in stepped the leader. This fine-looking young fellow stopped and asked in excellent English if they were missionaries. They replied that they were. He then gave orders that they were not to be harmed or their house set on fire. Later, when all had gone, their house stood intact amid the smoking ruins of the village, a testimony to the fact that God hears and answers prayer.

Don't Delay

Jeremiah 8:7

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

"I DON'T know what all the fuss is about", Sammy Swallow said to himself, as he watched the other birds rushing to and from their nests.

Some of his friends flew by and called to him, "Hurry up, Sammy. It's time to go".

"Go?" asked Sammy in surprise. "I'm not going anywhere!"

"But you must, Sammy. It's October the first tomorrow".

"So what?" asked Sammy.

"It's time for us to migrate, that's what, Sammy. Winter is just around the corner and we must make our way to Africa".

"Africa!" exclaimed Sammy. "I'm not going to Africa! I'm happy right here".

"So are we, Sammy, but we'd perish if we stayed here during the winter. We'll be back in April when the weather warms up again".

"I'll be all right here", Sammy decided. "My nest is nice and warm. Go without me".

Sammy was too busy looking for food during the following few weeks to notice that the days were getting colder and colder. He awoke one morning in November and found his nest covered with snow, icicles hanging from the roof above him. He curled up into a tight, little ball and tried to get warm, but neither his wings nor his nest gave him protection against the icy winds.

He thought of all his friends enjoying the warm sunshine of Africa and realised how foolish he had been. "If only I had listened to them", he sighed. "It's too late now".

The Bible urges us to respond without delay to the Saviour's call. Throughout the Scriptures the message is clear – to seek the sunshine of God's heavenly love while there is time.

Elim Missionary Society Convention in Cheltenham

Report by Leslie Wigglesworth

LONG before the first meeting, convention fervour reached into the hearts of the Cheltenham Church. The saints were to be hosts to people from all over the British Isles and from countries where Elim Missionaries are representing us as they proclaim the gospel. Accommodation, catering, programmes, literature, photographs, exhibits, cleaning sessions in the church, flowers, copious correspondence, coach tours, and so on, had to be organised. What a great help Pastor A.J. Downes of the Cheltenham Church and his willing helpers were!

Early travellers begin to appear on Wednesday at Headquarters, this edifice providing a new source of interest. "Hello Pastor! We thought we would look you up before the crowds arrive," they say. We are frantically busy tying up all the ends, but we spare a few minutes with each new visitor. Telephone calls about hotels and last minute arrangements have to be handled personally because secretarial help is not available. (Is there no Christian secretary willing to serve God in the missionary office?).

THURSDAY. The Missionary Secretary, supported by the Missionary Council, introduces the overseas team. It is a joy to receive Dr. Cecil and Dr. Maule Brien after an absence of seventeen years in Rhodesia, Joan Caudell, also from Rhodesia, Ian and Valerie MacInnes, home after their first term in Guyana, veterans James and Sophie McKeown with David and Margaret Mills from Ghana. After a short sketch by each missionary and comments from a cosmopolitan audience, tea and biscuits prepared by the Church members give friends an opportunity to mingle and to get to know each other.

In a packed church the theme of the convention is introduced and we learn about "The Missionary Church" under the leadership of Pastor G.L.W. Ladlow, himself a missionary to Ghana. The evening service comes alive. David and Margaret Mills move the listeners with the story of the growth by witnessing of the Church in Ghana. Teams of young people with a vision for souls tackle difficult areas until churches are established. The Witness Movement of Ghana is similar to our Crusader Movement. The excitement and adventure of the Witnesses keeps them ablaze for God without "specials" so often called for in the home country.

Parties of believers from several churches travelled by car and coach to be present and to enjoy the blessing.

FRIDAY. The second day of the missionary gatherings is most encouraging as the blessing of God descends on the morning services. "The Missionary Church" with the particular aspect of "Growth through Sunday

Congregation leaving one of the Kumasi churches in Ghana

Schools" proves absorbing and occupies the convention until noon. Ian and Valerie MacInnes from Guyana introduce the subject with two fine depictions of work among people of varied religions. They are not afraid to show "non-growth", but the exceptions rather highlight the true growth of the Church through establishing Sunday schools in farm yards, under stilt houses, at street corners and packed into houses. Such is the enthusiasm of some Christians that they seize opportunities to commence a Sunday school and inform the Church leaders and missionaries afterwards. Travel and personal expense are involved, but the vision of the people is that the Church will grow – so it does!

A panel of all the missionaries is formed and it seems that they are all involved in Sunday school church-forming activities. There is a shortage of flannelgraph material and handbooks. Time forces us to the closure. Pastor David Ayling convenes the proceedings throughout and winds up the meeting at noon.

During the afternoon a coach load of convention visitors have a most enjoyable trip round some of the Cotswold beauty spots. Missionaries and Council members busy themselves with exhibitions, agendas, interviews, etc., and again we have to watch the time as day visitors percolate into the convention circles.

"Growth through Institutions" is the subject given to our Rhodesia representatives and who better to tackle such a topic than the Doctors Brien and Joan Caudell? We listen to the story of the early struggles. Anamistic beliefs and Catholic opposition took some time to penetrate, but confidence came with resultant conversions and establishment of fellowships. Both hospital and school have grown beyond all recognition and now there are nearly 100 beds in modern buildings with an isolation ward. In the educational field there is a grammar and boarding school with over 300 pupils. Sick and sound are won for Christ and Christian men and women who were trained at the mission are filling important positions of trust throughout Rhodesia. The keen attention of the listeners is emphasised when tea is served and folks surge around the missionaries to continue the questioning. The Missionary Council retires for a business session and are occupied until after 11 p.m.

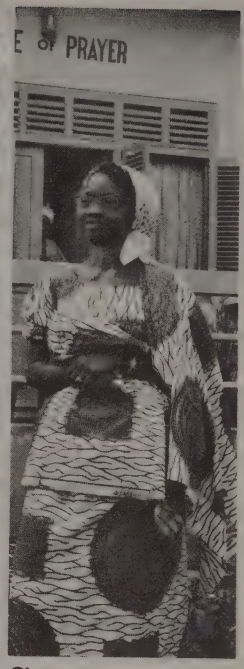
SATURDAY. The Council work through the morning while the visitors have a free period. In the afternoon session we are inspired by accounts of Church growth through national leaders. James and Sophia MacKeown take us back to the days when they stood on street corners or in villages to preach about Jesus. The children and the womenfolk began to believe and to lead their menfolk to Jesus. Witchcraft was a great evil, but Jesus gave them power over the forces of darkness. Progress was gradual until the nationals began to witness and the present leaders of over 1,200 churches have been raised up from the ranks by God. In the question time the panel again answers many interesting queries. These probing sessions are so popular that it is difficult to bring them to a close.



The packed congregation in the evening is under the leadership of Pastor A. Nicolson. Preliminaries over, we move into realms of missionary ministry and are stimulated by accounts of early struggles and eventual victories. Speakers from each field prove that the gospel meets every situation. The role of the missionary is explained and growth in the Church through their varied ministraties is shown to be yet another way in which the Holy Spirit establishes the faith.

SUNDAY. Missionary ministry on the Sunday is a great blessing. The testimony of many is: "What a wonderful time with the Lord we have had!".

One of the highlights of the Convention is the unexpected arrival of Adu Addison from Accra. He attended SPREE in London and, as a Member of the Church of Pentecost well-known to the Ghana missionaries he came for a brief, profitable visit to the Cheltenham Convention.

Pastor and Mrs. N. Ally of Guyana and their son

Ghana prayer-warrior

Pastor and Mrs. J. Hyde and a hand of helpers from Oxford travelled to project the E.W.M.A. work. They met the needs of many short and long-term visitors.

Message to the World Pentecostal Conference, 1973

by P. S. Brewster, Secretary to the Conference

IF the Pentecostal people ever cease to be a Movement they will conduct their own burial service. This generation above all desperately needs the testimony of the Pentecostal Movement and what it stands for.

The Pentecostal Church will never be computerised. The over-regularising of the Gifts of the Holy Spirit, and the strict disciplining of occasional excesses merely leave a shell of empty profession. I am never afraid of a fanatic if Jesus is the centre of his worship, but I am scared to death of cold frigid Christianity.

Most of the beginnings of the World Pentecostal outpourings occured about the turn of the century. Some isolated cases happened even before then. It surely is to be regarded as nothing less than the supernatural power of God that in so many parts of the world simultaneously, the outpouring of God's Holy Spirit took place. At that time history records that there was a deep hunger and thirst after God. Traditional ritual and the deadness of the church services were everywhere. Ordinary people were frustrated and depressed, not knowing where to turn. There was a longing in the hearts of so many people for simplicity, reality, and the peace of God. There was a sincere searching after truth and some evidence of the supernatural power of God.

The moment there was a move of God's Spirit in any part of the world, leaders and individuals migrated to see what was happening. Drawn by some irresistible urge the Welsh Revival and the Californian Revival had the Rev. T.B. Barratt from Norway making a journey. The result of his journey took him back to his own country to pioneer the Pentecostal Message. Later, Sweden and Britain received the truth. It was the interchange of world leaders that spread the flame of Pentecost.

When the Pentecostal truth that Jesus Christ was Saviour, Lord and Baptiser really became known, it was refused and bitterly opposed by some of the well-known traditional ministers and their churches. Not only did they disbelieve and reject the miraculous, but they bitterly fought against it and denounced its teaching and people, and also the churches and Movements. Such severe persecution developed that many books and papers were written against the truth. Thousands of hungry people were afraid to come out of their churches and join Pentecostal Movements, but nevertheless multiplied thousands of sinners were saved and joined the Pentecostal Church.

The idea of isolationism is now going and we are entering into a new era in the Pentecostal Movement. We must obviously tighten the bonds of fellowship with all Pentecostal brethren who are with us in doctrine. If there ever becomes the choice between unity and truth then truth must be chosen; it is not unity at any cost. The cost of sacrificing the doctrines and the lordship of Christ is a price too high to be paid.

The modern trend is for a large proportion of those who are receiving the Gift of the Holy Spirit to stay in their existing organisations irrespective of doctrine. At the turn of the century those who were saved and baptised in the Holy Spirit came out. We must be Pentecostal in doctrine as well as practice. World Pentecostal fellowship must be doctrinally sound and morally pure.

We dare not ignore the challenge of our Lord "that they may be one" (John 17:11). There are two great issues at stake, namely the lordship of Christ, and the truth of the Holy Spirit (1 Corinthians 1:9). There can be no question today of any saved man baptised in the Spirit holding himself aloof.

Regarding the World Council of Churches, the Pentecostal Conference cannot and dare not link up with those who deny some of the great doctrines of Jesus Christ as Lord.

We must always keep fresh in our memories that we are now living in the prophetic hour and the climax of Joel and Acts chapter 2: "IN THE LAST DAYS I WILL POUR OUT OF MY SPIRIT UPON ALL FLESH".

There is today a world-wide similarity among all Pentecostal Movements, although our church services and church government may be different. There are a great passion for the lost, an ever-increasing zeal for overseas missionary work, generous giving without too many money-raising schemes, constant attendance to assembly life, a cross-section of the public in the Pentecostal services, not just one class, and a recognition of the supernatural in all assemblies.

The temptations of the Pentecostal Movements

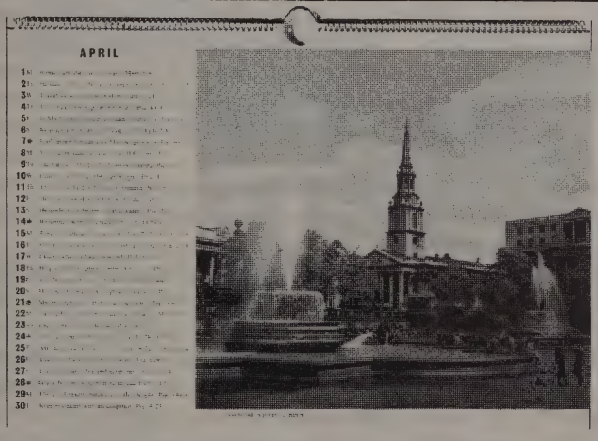
Like every other Revival Movement, in its infancy the Pentecostal fellowship has been exposed to serious temptations. Some of the temptations, if succumbed to, could have been dreadful and destructive. On the part of some there has been a desire for earthly reward and earthly recognition; some have succumbed to these with considerable hurt to all. There has been a decided hazard of seeking to get everything on the cheap without paying the price. There is no short cut in God's work. There is no easy way. A spiritual price must be paid for that which we have. Every Pentecostal believer must have a personal encounter with Jesus Christ and thus have his own dedication. As we are now in the second and third generations of Pentecostal blessing, the sons and the daughters of the early pioneers must be taught to realise that they cannot exist on the dedication and experience of their parents; they must have their own personal consecration, and this many have to a high degree.

One of the obvious temptations that seems to beset our Movement is to conform rather than transform. This Movement was built and established with the evidence of the miraculous, but as the years go by there is a subtle temptation to regularise everything and conform to a pattern. The glory of the Pentecostal Movement was its freedom and spontaneity and exaltation of Jesus as the Son of God and the knowledge that God cared for the human body as well as for the soul.

There is also a subtle temptation to water down holy truth. This comes as a result of trying to seek a quick gain of prestige and power; the price is far too high even to consider this temptation.

The third temptation is to sacrifice the gospel of the cross for a social gospel. The helping of the poor and the elevating of human standards are very necessary, but these are not preaching the Gospel.

Another very subtle temptation is to rely on human strength, organisation and ingenuity rather than on the power of God.



A further temptation is to succumb to the ecumenical surge that is now upon the world without counting the cost of being willing to merge rather than to retain our identity.

To over-emphasise existentialism rather than pray for the guidance of the Holy Spirit is also a danger. In Bible days men were led, controlled, guided, propelled and restrained by the Holy Spirit. God has an overall plan for His Church; no short term gain is sufficient.

The trends facing the Pentecostal Movements

Some of the trends which we are exposed to today are satanic and extremely dangerous. Other trends

Book Reviews

For Such a Time, by Elizabeth Pritchard. Published by Victory Press, price 50p, postage and packing 7p extra.

THE story of the founding of the Regions Beyond Missionary Union by Henry Grattan Guiness 100 years ago and the remarkable history of that society is here told in a most interesting, inspiring way. Faithfully recording the great sacrifice of the early pioneers and the goodness of God in supplying the needs, Miss Pritchard also tells of the years of struggle and consequent retrenchment, but of the final rewarding of the faithfulness of dedicated men and women with a new move of the Spirit of God in reaching the lost in areas never before evangelised. I found the account of the recent conversion of thousands of illiterate and primitive people in West Irian (New Guinea) and the great revival now being experienced to be both thrilling and challenging. The methods adopted to meet the changing conditions in the older mission fields show that overseas missionary work must still be our priority. All missionary enthusiasts will want to read this book and all other Christians should.

GERALD L.W. LADLOW

Into Battle, by Arthur Wallis. Published by Victory Press, price 40p, postage and packing 7p extra.

THE book is described as a "battle manual of the Christian life," to which the chapter headings and the use of some military terminology lend themselves freely. Mr. Wallis writes with those who are young in the faith in mind, but he includes some timely challenges for Christians who are older in the faith. Many chapters deal with basics, like Salvation, repentance, Baptism, Holy Spirit Baptism, Communion, Prayer, and Bible reading. He gives good subject matter on the enemy of our souls, his subtilty and how the Christian can be victorious over him. Scripture references at the end of each chapter plus an appendix are added benefits.

An immediate reaction was "I've read it all before!" but Mr. Wallis's easy style and clear, concise thoughts make for compulsive reading.

JOHN HARRISON

The Ministry Gifts of Christ, by Donald Gee. Published by Assemblies of God, price 50p, postage and packing 6p extra.

THE late Donald Gee needs no introduction to Pentecostal people all over the world. The sterling spiritual qualities of the man are evident in his writings. Whether you are a Pentecostal believer of some years standing or have only recently entered into the Pentecostal blessing, you will find this book of great value.

It is Scriptural, balanced, realistic and practical. Mr. Gee does not evade the problems that beset us, but offers advice and counsel out of a wealth of personal experience. Dealing with the ministry Gifts, I found his differentiation between the various ministires most stimulating and wonder if modern Pentecost needs to re-examine its approach and its appreciation of the various ministries as they fulfil their God-ordained role in the perfecting of the saints for the work of the ministry.

If this book inspires you as it has me to re-assess your present experience of the power of the Spirit, it will have accomplished much.

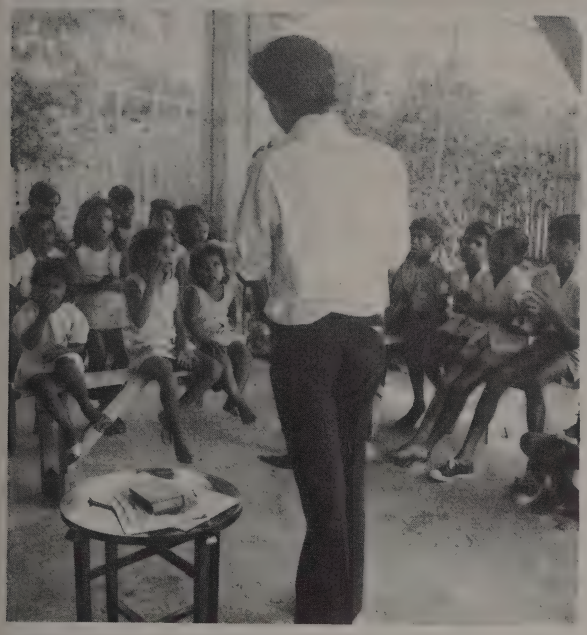
Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

45. Prosperity in Adversity (Genesis 39:1-6)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

WHEN Joseph arrived in Egypt he was bought by Potiphar, an officer in Pharaoh's guard. It soon became evident that Joseph was a very capable young man. This was not simply a matter of his natural ability; it was clear that the blessing of God rested on all that he did. Potiphar quickly realised that he had a treasure in Joseph. He promoted him to take charge of his household and the Lord blessed Potiphar for Joseph's sake. Although Joseph remained a slave, he became more like a son than a bondman and Potiphar trusted him implicitly in everything. The Lord had not forsaken Joseph, but blessed him wonderfully even in adversity. He became a prosperous man in his master's household.



The Lord has never promised that those who follow Him will have a smooth, easy path. He has clearly shown that it will be a narrow path with many trials. One thing that He has promised, however, is that He will never leave us nor forsake us. We can depend on this work at all times. He will certainly be with us in peaceful, sunny days, when our hearts are light and we are aware of His blessing, but He will also be with us in the stormy, dark, hard times when we cannot trace His way and when we seem to be hidden from Him. In the most adverse and trying conditions it is still His delight to bless us. Many of us have found the time of adversity to be a period of spiritual prosperity. We can always rejoice in the Lord and give thanks to Him. He has His way in the whirlwind and in the storm and the clouds are the dust of His feet (Nahum 1:3).

TRIBUTES TO PASTOR E. J. PHILLIPS

"How sincere he was"

IN 1925, E.J. Phillips came to Plymouth and preached from the Song of Solomon, presenting the loveliness of Jesus Christ, and on 1 Corinthians 6, depicting the Body of Christ. That year my wife (then my fiancee) and I went to London with a party from Plymouth. Mr. Phillips arranged our accommodation. We attended the Surrey Tabernacle Convention which he organised, when Stephen Jeffreys, and Pastor Jones and Davies and others ministered the Word of God. What a glorious convention it was!

I entered the ministry in 1927 and came to know him more intimately. He told me to minister at the Clapham Junction Elim Assembly and then sent me to Grimsby at Christmas 1927. So sincere was he, that one went to minister as one taking one's orders from God. Everything was done carefully and prayerfully. I recall many times of fellowship with him, not in fear, but in reverence. I was sent to Watford in 1927, where there were problems. How sincere he was, and grateful, too, as I dealt with the difficulties.

Coming home from Reading each night after the revival, I sat with E.J. at midnight having some bread and cheese. Sometimes it would be past midnight before he left his small office after working all day.

So the years rolled by. Love and loyalty to God and the movement were his life. We loved him and trusted him almost with our lives. God will reward such a man who helped to found and establish the work of God.

Leon C. Quest

A loving Tribute to the Memory of a very dear Friend

IT is with a very grateful heart I write this short reminiscence of our esteemed brother, and Elim's Secretary-General for many years, Pastor E.J. Phillips.

I knew him for forty-eight years and, being an Elim minister for many years, as well as Missionary Secretary for fourteen and a half years, I got to know E.J. as many of us called him, very well. Of a rather retiring disposition, he possessed the qualities of a very reliable, trustworthy friend.

Once I confided in him how God had saved me from making a big blunder which otherwise could have wrecked a valuable project made by the Missionary Council, Mr. Phillips, as chairman, carefully and skillfully, by a few well-chosen remarks covered the whole affair at the next Council Meeting much to my relief. This is how others, in addition to myself, proved his staunch support when needed, and which drew out our admiration and appreciation of the man.

Principal George Jeffreys had the vision with Holy Ghost-anointing of launching forth a mighty wave of revival. It was the great plan of God in the days of the first world war and the years that followed, and Principal Jeffreys admirably carried out that plan of bringing lost souls to the foot of the cross. Those of us who were then privileged to be with Mr. Jeffreys and to share in a small way in his marvellous ministry can never forget the remarkable impact that his preaching accompanied by supernatural healings had upon the vast audiences he addressed.

God used Mr. Phillips also to consolidate behind the scenes this great work of Elim's beginnings by bringing into being plans to meet the fast-growing movement which included churches, Sunday schools and youth work and which extend, to his credit, all over the British Isles today. Both men were called of God and both were obedient to that call. They leave behind a wonderful example of what God can do with those who loyally, sacrificially pledge themselves to carry out what God reveals to them to be done. Let me conclude with a great volume of praise and thanksgiving from all our hearts to Almighty God for both of these His great and good servants.

At this time of her great bereavement and loss, we would like to extend to his dear widow, Molly, as an Elim family our deepest sympathy as we surround her with our loving prayers. We gratefully remember her for she sustained her husband and encouraged him when at times, under great pressure he grew physically weary, by her merry banter and quick wit. I desire to pay tribute also to the wife of a man to whom Elim is for ever deeply indebted.

"Come, ye thankful People, come!"

A FARMER friend remarked to my husband that he couldn't remember a better spell of weather for the hay-making than June of this year. Conditions were ideal and the work was accomplished satisfactorily. Living in a market town set in the rich Wiltshire countryside we are very conscious of rural matters. Our farmer friend lives and farms on the hill-top above the picturesque village of Coombe Bissett. He rejoiced at a good, early-ripened harvest, glad, too, that one-third of the crop was gathered. Then came the rain, the gales, dark skies and cooler weather and I wonder just what the damage would be. I learn that Russia's mighty wheat crop is below expectations, thus world prices of flour will rise and consequently our bread and biscuits will be dearer. With all the vaunted skill and technical know-how we are still at the mercy of the elements and we cannot command the sun, the wind or the rain. Furthermore I feel strongly that the laws given to the nation of Israel in Bible days are still applicable. Leviticus 26:1-5 is very relevant on this matter. In v.26 the threat of bread rationing is clearly mentioned as a result of disobeying God I consider that we in Britain have much to be thankful for; we have enough food and to spare despite so many of our people rejecting God and defying His laws.

Let us not indulge in grumbles about our "restricted diet" or the price of food. The apostle Paul's philosophy is well worth our consideration: "Having food and raiment let us be therewith content" (1 Timothy 6:8).

God of the seasons

God of the wintertime,
Who robes the world in ermine white
And hides its barrenness,
Cover my sordid grime
With purifying grace so bright
Men see Thy holiness.

God of the springtime hour,
Who brings the buried bulbs to bloom
And wakes the sleeping trees,
Quicken in me the power
To burst the trammels of sin's tomb
And live my Christ to please.

God of the summertime,
Who warms the fertile earth and broods
Above the teeming fields,
Nurture a faith sublime
That conquers chilling moods
And harvest yields.

God of our autumn days,
Who loads our orchard branches down
And turns green woods to gold,
Help me to give Thee praise
In fruitful service that will own
Thy rights to all I hold.

—Ralph T. Norlund

The Day of Praise

We walk on starry fields of white, and do not see the daisies;
For blessings common in our sight we rarely offer praises.
We sigh for some supreme delight to crown our lives with splendor,
And quite ignore our daily store of pleasures sweet and tender.

Our cares are bold, and push their way upon our thought and feeling;
Then hang upon us all the day, our time from pleasure stealing.
So many an unobtrusive joy we pass by and forget it;
But worry strives to own our lives, and conquers if we let it.

There's not a day in all the year but holds some hidden pleasure;
And, looking back, joys oft appear to brim the past's wide measure.
But blessings are like friends, I hold, who love and labor near us;
We ought to raise our notes of praise while living hearts can hear us.

Full many a blessing wears the guise of worry or of trouble;
Farseeing is the soul, and wise, who knows the mask is double.
But he who has the faith and strength to thank God for his sorrow
Has found a joy without alloy to gladden every morrow.

We ought to make the moments notes of happy, glad thanksgiving;
The nours and days a silent phrase of music we are living.
And so the theme should swell and grow as weeks and months pass o'er us,
And rise sublime at this good time, a grand Thanksgiving chorus.

LESSON 2 Programme Planning

Social

THIS word is used in the sense of the contribution that young people should make to the community. This subject is to be dealt with in the next lesson so comment here will be limited. So many people need help: immigrants, social misfits, old people, cripples, spastics, the blind, and a host of others. Such societies as Feed the Mind, Christian Aid, Oxfam, Shelter, etc., are worthy of the help of youth groups. It is part of the mission of the youth worker to develop a sense of social responsibility in the minds and hearts of all young persons under his care.

Recreational

Recreational activities are as wide as the world. Hobbies, games, rambles, conferences, house-parties, bus trips, boat trips, air trips, visits to museums and places of historic interest – the list has only begun. Week-end conferences and house-parties provide an excellent opportunity for recreation and spiritual instruction. Write to the Principal of Elim Bible College, Capel, Surrey, for particulars of organising a week-end there. Be sure to get the local minister's permission before going ahead. These have been arranged in recent years at church and presbytery levels. One must not underestimate the value of camps. So much good is done in the hearts of young people on camping sites that it is important that every youth leader should be acquainted with the information relating to Elim camps. This can be obtained from the Elim Youth Department.

It will be seen from the above that young peoples' departments for all age groups should never be wanting for ideas for programmes. Good programmes should be prepared well ahead.

3. The Materials for Programme Planning

UNDER this heading we provide a list of sources from which help and advice can be obtained.

ELIM YOUTH MOVEMENT

National Youth Director, Kensington Temple, Kensington Park Road, Notting Hill Gate, London W.11.: programmes for all youth departments, film-strips, badges, follow-up materials, and special advice and instruction on starting youth groups.

Scripture Union Portions

Notes by Gerald L.W. Ladlow

Monday, October 1st 2 Chronicles 29:20–36

"And when the burnt-offering began, the song of the Lord began also" (v.27).

THE meaning of the burnt-offering was what is the original idea of all sacrifice — the offering by the sacrificer of himself soul and body to God, the submission of his will to the will of the Lord. In this record is signified the entire consecration of the nation to God accompanied by singing and spontaneous praise. It is ever thus. When the Christian makes a full consecration to God, joy unspeakable floods his soul and the song of praise breaks forth spontaneously.

Tuesday, October 2nd 2 Chronicles 30:1-12

"They could not keep it at that time because the priests had not sanctified themselves sufficiently" (v.3)

THE law of Moses laid down certain abstinences and prescribed washings and ceremonies to be carried out by the priests in order to sanctify them for the service of the Lord. Until these were completed they were unfit for God's use. We rejoice in the priesthood of all believers. In that spiritual ministry there are no outward ceremonies to be fulfilled, but we must remember that only the "sanctified" are "fit for the Master's use" (2 Timothy 2:21). The work of God has often been hindered because His servants, being unsanctified, were unusable.

Wednesday, October 3rd 2 Chronicles 30:13-27

"And the whole assembly. . .kept other seven days with gladness" (v.23).

SURELY this is evidence of a true spiritual revival. Hezekiah had called the people to obey the Lord and recommence a long-neglected ordinance and feast. The requirements of the law had been fulfilled and the feast completed. The people were free to return home. Instead, they voluntarily decided to stay for another seven days of worship, revealing that they had kept the feast, not out of a sense of duty, but because they loved the Lord and His house. Attendance at God's house to the one whose heart is right with Him is never a duty but a delight; he worships with gladness and is always happy when the "feast" is prolonged.

Thursday, October 4th 2 Chronicles 31:1-21

"And as soon as the commandment came abroad, the children of Israel brought in abundance. . .the tithe of all things" (v.5).

HERE were people who readily and joyfully brought their tithes and offerings to the Lord. There was no fervent and prolonged appeal from Hezekiah. They did not have to be coerced into giving to God. They responded immediately as those who counted it a privilege and delight to give to Him. There is no wonder that there was enough to meet the need and "plenty left". This will always be the case in a church where Christians joyfully bring their tithes to God.

Friday, October 5th 2 Kings 18:9-16

"Because they obeyed not the voice of the Lord their God" (v.12).

THE Assyrian invasion of Israel and the carrying away of its inhabitants into captivity are attributed to their disobedience to the voice of God. So often the Bible shows the direct connection between the spiritual state of the nation and its material prosperity or otherwise. We cannot as a nation reject God and neglect His laws without reaping sad consequences. Righteousness exalteth a nation.

Saturday, October 6th 2 Kings 18:17-37

"But the people held their peace and answered him not a word" (v.36).

RABSHAKEH sought by mockery and by seemingly logical argument to shake the people's trust in God. They refrained from answering him and he was compelled to quit without the satisfaction of knowing whether he had succeeded in his task. Nothing is gained by wordy controversy. We can best defend our Christianity from the attacks of mockers and sceptics by the eloquence of a godly life. We can "by well-doing put to silence the ignorance of foolish men" (2 Peter 2:15).

Sunday, October 7th 2 Kings 19:1-19

"And spread it before the Lord". (v.14).

THIS was not an action of panic or fear. Hezekiah was accustomed to seek the guidance of God in all the affairs of his life and reign. To him the most natural thing to do before discussing the matter with others was to "spread it before the Lord", believing that it concerned God as much as himself. Confidence in His intervention in the crises of life is found only by learning daily to spread all our affairs before Him.

MESSAGE TO THE WORLD PENTECOSTAL CONFERENCE, 1973

by P. S. Brewster

are worldly and should play no part in a spiritual work. Further trends are the natural evolvement of growth and time. The Lord's people are expected to create the trends according to the revelation of the Word of God.

One of the trends today is to be too sensitive to public opinion. Our early pioneers were almost immunised against criticism. They sought to please God only and to make the Bible the blue-print for living. The high price of being a true Pentecostal is not to conform to public opinion.

The Triumphs of the Pentecostal Movements

Over fifty years ago the Holy Spirit fell in various parts of the world with a wonderful rediscovery of lost truths. There were many signs and miracles which alas resulted in acute persecution from the established churches,much of it with sad ridicule which succeeded in driving the Pentecostal people into voluntary isolationism. In spite of this isolationism they did not sleep, and during the fifty years, multiplied thousands of ministers and missionaries have been established around the world, Bible schools have been opened, thousands of churches planted around the world and many millions of dollars have been expended on fulfilling the great commission of Jesus Christ to go into all the world and preach the gospel. Thousands of young men are now in the ministry who never would have had the opportunity. Today, after fifty years, the Pentecostal Truths are sweeping all continents. There is not a country in the world where there is not a live Pentecostal witness; it could very easily be that there are between twenty and thirty million people who now accept the Pentecostal message.

Undoubtedly God is doing a new thing. Since 1960 multitudes of traditional church members and ministers are receiving the Baptism in the Holy Spirit and are speaking in tongues. This penetration of Pentecost into all churches is none other than a sovereign act of God. It has caught many of the Pentecostal ministers totally unawares. There are phases and new dimensions that leave us breathless, perhaps also a little afraid and over-awed.

Editorial

TOMORROW sees the start of another in our series of Weeks of Prayer. We have been greatly encouraged by the response to the previous efforts this year and would appeal for your practical support on this occasion.

Prayer is essential all the time, of course, but such united efforts are entirely laudable and effective. Pentecostal people hardly need to be reminded of the comments in the Acts of the Apostles concerning the Early Church. "They were all with one accord in one place" at the time of the first outpouring of the Holy Spirit on the Day of Pentecost. This is marvellous and worthy of emulation. To read in Acts 2:46 that "they continuing daily with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread from house to house, did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart," however, is perhaps more glorious still. It is good to begin with such a spirit, but to continue in it is an indication of divine blessing if ever there was one. Human nature is such that our opinions and positions seem to urge us to "seek our own", to demand our place or to dictate to others what they should be and do. At times of prayer, when the Holy Spirit lifts us to new heights, we recognise clearly that our unity is of the essence and completely essential to our spiritual progress.

The list of special items for prayer is long, but our Secretary-General has rightly and wisely stressed that the predominating petition in our Week of Prayer should be for revival. We need the outpouring of the Holy Spirit perhaps as never before. In our homes as well as in our meetings, may the Holy Spirit inspire us to new fresh fields of intercession. May we be enabled to press through in a great spirit of longing, faith and oneness.

Even as I was about to write this Editorial one of our pastors 'phoned and mentioned that four people were baptised in the Holy Spirit in his church within the previous few days.

There definitely seem to be indications of the beginnings of a move of God in Pentecostal blessing. "O for the floods on the thirsty land!" is our cry!

Pentecostal Window-dressing

by John Lancaster

A CORRESPONDENT of one of the religious weeklies recently wrote a report on Call to the North, the widely-supported evangelistic thrust in the north of England, in which he commented that the window-dressers had done their work well, but the salesmen behind the counter were not convinced about the value of the goods they had to offer. In other words, the advertising was good but the carrying out of the mission was far less convincing, because those involved in it lacked the conviction and dedication necessary for an operation of this kind.

Window-dressing is a highly developed art. One only has to saunter along the average high street to see how cleverly the goods are displayed. Subtle colour arrangements, judicious lighting and somewhat exaggerated models - how aristocratic those tall, slim, elegant but lifeless models are made to look - and the clothes in the shop window seem to promise ready-made haute couture for the most ordinary of mortals. More often than not, however, when James Snodgrass tries on the same suit or his wife arrays herself in the irresistible dress, the result is disastrous. The models in the window seem larger than life, as indeed they most probably are, or, just as probably, the stock inside the shop cannot match what the windows offer.

The Church at Sardis, it seems, had good window-dressers, at least the notice-board was a good one, for it seems to have indicated a "live", active church. Yet the risen Lord found it necessary to say to this Church: "Thou hast a name, that thou livest, and art dead". The goods behind the counter did not correspond with the models in the window.

Is there not a great danger that we might fall into the same error? We live in the age of the public relations man, when a good "image" is considered essential to success in business, politics and religion. We are tempted to think that so long as things look good all is well, but bright posters are no substitute for anointed preaching, nor can a modern facade to the building obviate the need for vital faith in the people who occupy the seats inside. What goes on in the hearts and minds of pastor and people is far more important than what goes into the local paper week by week.

This is not to say that advertising and all the modern aids to communication are not important, but it is a needful reminder that window-dressing in the spiritual realm is something we must watch. For one thing, it can be a subtle form of self-deception in which, like people whistling in the dark to master their fears, we pretend to ourselves that things are better than they really are. At worst, it can be a brash kind of spiritual pride in which we unashamedly blow our own trumpets, like the Pharisees of old. At either level we are perilously close to telling lies.

The words of Christ to Sardis (Revelation 3:1-6) seem specially relevant to us as Pentecostals in an age when Pentecost is the in-thing. There is no need for us to be ashamed of our proclamation of the Pentecostal message, indeed, we ought to be unashamedly Pentecostal in all that we stand for, but it is vital that the goods in the shop correspond to the things we put in the windows. What goes on in our personal lives and our assemblies must correspond to what we profess in our advertising.

This is a matter for each of us individually. Pentecostal churches are not created by the design of the building, the wording on the notice-boards or even the format of the meetings. They only come into being when the Pastor and his wife, the deacons and their wives, the church officers and the members are each one filled with the Spirit.

Perhaps some of us ought to do a bit of stock-taking.

CARDIFF

Pastors: P.S. Brewster, R. Hunston and J.H. Dick

WHEN Christians get together for an out-door barbeque there are two essential ingredients: the anointing of the Holy Spirit and good weather. We had both when our Crusaders gathered at a local beauty spot near the sea. The barbeque was not intended to be just an opportunity for everyone to have a good time, but rather that those without Christ should find salvation through the preaching of God's Word. Every Crusader had been instructed to invite a friend from work or school that they might hear the gospel preached by Pastor John G. Cooper. Young people from Cardiff and Caerphilly testified to what Christ had done in their lives. Soloists and gospel groups sang ably of the greatness of God. It was the sort of night when Christians re-dedicate their lives to Christ and when sinners repent. There was a wonderful sense of the presence of the Lord as Pastor Cooper preached and quite a number raised their hands to accept Christ as Saviour.

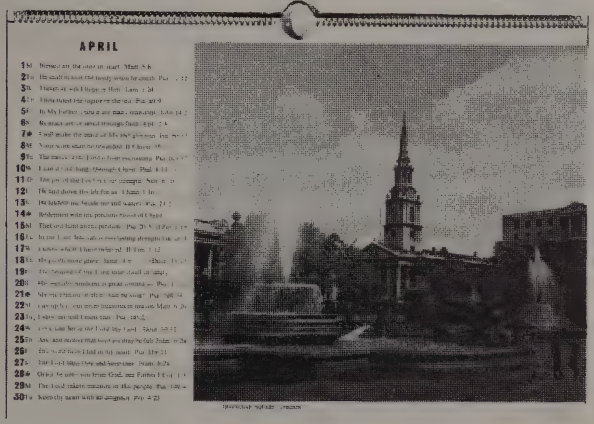
Isaiah 40:28-31

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

ALBERT yawned, stretched his wings and peered over the edge of his nest perched high in the mountains. "What shall I have for breakfast this morning?" he wondered, "perhaps a bird, or a fieldmouse, or a...".

His sharp eyes spotted some rabbits hopping around in the valley far below. "Aha!" said Albert, "I'll have a rabbit!" He stood up, shook his feathers and took off, his great powerful wings carrying him high into the sky.

Down in the valley, Mrs. Rabbit called her young to her. "Come quickly!" she cried. "Hurry into the burrow! Albert is hovering overhead!". Three of the rabbits left their game and ran to the safety of their burrow, but one continued to play in the long grass.



"I'll be quite safe here," he told himself. "Albert hasn't caught me yet! Mother is always fussing!"

At that very moment Albert dropped from the sky, taking the young rabbit completely by surprise. In a flash, Albert snatched the defenceless rabbit in his strong, vicious claws and carried it back to his nest. The rabbit could do nothing to free itself from Albert's powerful grasp.

The Word of God warns us of the dangers of sin, the nature of which is to destroy. We are powerless to save ourselves from sin, but we have in Christ a safe, sure refuge from all danger.

The eagle, a bird of prey, is well known for its powers of flight, being able to fly higher than any other bird. It is wise, too, for it does not dwell in valleys, but makes its nest high in the mountains.

Choose the heavenly life always, so that, through our faith in our risen Lord and Saviour, we shall grow in grace and strength. As we walk and talk with Him, we shall rise to new, greater heights day by day.

PENTECOSTAL WORLD CONFERENCE SEOUL

Anointed to rediscover the power of the Word

An address given by G. Wesley Gilpin

THE CONFERENCE LOCATION

Korea, meaning "high" (ko) and "clear" (ryo), is a land of 32,000,000 people. Its history dates back 4,000 years. It is an amazing blend of ancient culture and modern development.

Seoul has been the Korean capital city for about 600 years. A teeming metropolis of 4,000,000, it is a rapidly growing and modernizing city in an ancient land.

IT is evident that the text behind the series of addresses being given during the World Pentecostal Conference is the one that describes the inaugural address of our Lord Jesus Christ at the commencement of His ministry. It was preached in the synagogue at Nazareth and began: "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me because He hath anointed me to preach" (Luke 4:18). My assigned subject is set in the context of the announcement by Jesus of His call and commission and is implicit in the opening words just quoted. The summarised content of His preaching reveals a great, all-embracive message for all mankind in all conditions. Paul sums it up in his commission to Timothy: "Preach the Word."

I deduce that, in order to do this, one must evaluate that Word correctly. Where there have been influences at work that have blunted its edge or smothered its power, they must be identified for what they are and dealt with so that "the Word of God may have free course and be glorified." A correct analysis of any Scripture is essential to its faithful presentation. God does not mean one thing or another. The main clause in the verse is: "God hath anointed me to preach". Everything follows from that and in correct order. It is surprising how often we reverse the order and somehow see the anointing following the statement "the Spirit of God is upon me". As a result we have all kinds of strange ideas about the meaning of "anointing". In English we talk about "feeling the glow", "being under the power", "getting the touch" or even "hooked on the Spirit", but anointing has a more basic, fundamental meaning with definite historic connotations.

The pouring of oil upon the head of a candidate for the office of prophet, priest or king was a public testimony that that person possessed divine authority in the office that he was about to fulfil and he himself was assured of divine enabling in all that the task required. So true was this that the warning was issued: "Touch not Mine anointed and do My prophets no harm". The New Testament counterpart of this is in the commission of Jesus to His disciples: "All authority is given unto me. . . Go into all the world and preach the Gospel". I equate the word "call" or "commission" with the word "anoint" and affirm that the great preoccupation of the Church today must be to rediscover the power of the Word so that, as with our Lord, the pioneers of the Christian message and indeed every true servant of God, the preaching of the Word may be accompanied with "signs following".

We take the "Word" to refer to that body of truth contained in the Scriptures variously defined as "the Word of the Lord", "My Word", "His Word", "the Word of Truth". The parable of the sower says: "the seed is the Word of God". Furthermore, the Scriptures go to great pains to state that "the letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth life" and that "the Kingdom of of God is not in word but in power". The New Testament is full of references to the success that greeted the faithful preaching of the Word.

The Church has failed in its mission because it has substituted the preaching of the Word by socialising, entertaining and political campaigning. The call is to rediscover the inherent power in the Word of God to heal all the illnesses of mankind. For thousands, the power and authority of the Word has been lost as a result of the subjectivism of liberal thought, the loss of absolutes through existentialism and the replacement of faith in the Word alone by the introduction of tradition. Jesus preached the Word, the apostles "went everywhere preaching the Word, God working with them and confirming the Word by signs following", and "It has pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe". From the days of Ezra, when the reading of the Word in public brought confession and repentance, throughout the history of the Christian Church in its success and expansion, it is the record of the dunamis of the Word. Any claims to success other than those which have resulted from the faithful proclamation of divine truth have burst like a bubble, but the permanence of work resulting from the sending out in faith of the Word of life is there for all to see.

In his ministry, Billy Graham has been humble enough to affirm repeatedly "the Bible says". His critics said, "You cannot do that, you must not get carried away with such literalism", but unless the Bible does say it, "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the ends thereof are the ways of death." When the Bible speaks, "Let God be true and every man a liar." Peter put it nicely when he said, "The Word of God liveth and abideth for ever and this is the Word which is preached unto you by the Gospel".

We have said that the power of the Word is lost to many because of the incidence of liberal thought and its replacement by traditional teaching of the Church. As in the days of Jesus (and He was specially severe on it) "ye have made the Word of God of none effect by your tradition".

TO REDISCOVER is our mission and what a mission! How are we to do it? We must put behind us all temptation to replace that Word either by slick methods or more popular approaches and fulfil absolutely and literally our commission to "preach the Word". "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me BECAUSE He hath anointed me to preach". The corollary is that you will forego the anointing of the Spirit if you fail to preach the Word, but if you do preach it, what possibilities there are! The results will exceed your wildest dreams. He has not anointed you to speak in tongues (and that has its place); or to perform miracles (and what a ministry this is and what need there is for it!). A pertinent, imminent danger is that we should rally to common experiences and subjective states as the grounds for fellowship. Today there is a fair bit of polarisation around emotional experiences. The order is: "They went everywhere preaching the Word, the Lord working with them and confirming the Word with signs following." Pentecostalists stand in danger of falling into the same traps as their Pentecostal forerunners – the Montanists in the second century and the Irvingites in Britain in the early nineteenth century – if you fail to make the Word preached and understood by the inspiration of the Spirit your common rallying-point.

I believe that (as in David's day) the Ark is on its way up the road to the citadel and many are as enthusiastic and determined as David was to see that it gets there. God is on the move: "All over the world the Spirit is moving" and what things are happening! Let us beware, however, lest, by our enthusiasm to hurry things up we come under the curse of God for using "new cart" methods. The Ark can only be carried on the shoulders of godly, dedicated men who adhere to the will and purposes of God as set down in His Word. They are telling words in 1 John 2:19,20, 27. The Ark is on the way: these are great days to be alive and "the end is not yet".

"Anointed to rediscover the power of the Word" – this is the mission and let us take heart from the rewarding results in places like Africa and Korea where a resurgence of interest in the Word has been followed by revival. Our supreme responsibility is to "preach the Word" and that Word will look after itself as it challenges and speaks with authority. At one point during the ministry of Jesus the validity of His message was being called in question: He put the onus for proof over to the Word itself and said: "If any man willeth to do His will he shall know of the doctrine whether it be of God or whether I speak of myself", then, "you shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free" (John 7:17).

THE GIFTS OF THE SPIRIT—1 The Word of Wisdom

(1 Corinthians 12:8)

by Charles J. E. Kingston

THE Gifts of the Holy Spirit, as listed in 1 Corinthians 12, may be divided into three groups of three gifts. They are displays of the wisdom, power and speech of the living God, revealed in a ninefold spectrum of glorious spiritual colour. They are supernatural gifts of God, the continuing life of Jesus through His spiritual Body, the Church. As in a human body, every member has some gift for the efficient working of the whole (1 Corinthians 12:7).

The three groups of the charismatic gifts may be listed as follows:

Gifts of Revelation: the word of wisdom, the word of knowledge, discerning of spirits. These gifts are invaluable for the guidance of the Church and its preservation from error.

Gifts of Power: the gift of faith; the gifts of healings; the working of miracles. These are invaluable for the extension of the Church through evangelism, in which realm they seem principally to operate.

Gifts of Utterance: the gifts of prophecy, divers kinds of tongues and the interpretation of tongues. These are invaluable for the edifying of the local church.

1. The gift of the word of wisdom differs from the word of knowledge.

There is, however, a link between them. Natural wisdom is the ability to apply natural knowledge. For instance, should your car break down the garage mechanic will use his knowledge of the working of the various parts and then apply his wisdom in remedying the fault causing the breakdown.

God has all knowledge (called "omniscience"), but His wisdom is shown by the way in which He applies His knowledge in the working out of His purposes. Thus His election of some to salvation and His predestination of these to eternal glory is based upon His knowledge (called "foreknowledge", 1 Peter 1:2) of how some will respond to the gospel.

2. What is the gift of the word of wisdom?

It is not natural wisdom, which even an ungodly man may have, nor is it spiritual wisdom which all "in Christ" may receive (1 Corinthians 1:30; James 1:5); it is a gift of the Holy Spirit given to whom He wills (1 Corinthians 12:11).

It is the "word" of wisdom, not wisdom en bloc, but a word revealed for a specific need. For example, a solicitor will give his client a word of advice to meet a specific need derived from his knowledge of the law on that matter.

It is supernaturally given. Evidently Paul's preaching was by the word of wisdom since he states that he put aside natural wisdom and spoke the words "which the Holy Spirit teaches" (1 Corinthians 2:1,13).

3. Some Scriptural examples of this gift.

We learn better by seeing how a thing is done than by pages of explanation.

Noah was given instructions how to build the ark by the word of wisdom (Genesis 6:14-16). He could not otherwise have been able to know the size needed. God's leaders need this gift for "governments" (1 Corinthians 12:28).

Moses was assured that he would be given wisdom when confronting Pharaoh (Exodus 4:11,12). The same promise is given to us when we are called to stand before any authority which is antagonistic to God. "The Holy Spirit shall teach you in the same hour what ye ought to say," promised Jesus (Luke 21:15). God wants to guide us in life's decisions. Many Christians err because, like Joshua in the matter of the Jebusites, they do not ask counsel of the Lord.

Samuel received the word in his ear (1 Samuel 9:15). God revealed His plans about Saul to Samuel before he knew that such a person existed. Earlier, Samuel had learned the art of listening for God's voice when he said: "Speak, for Thy servant hears". Having prayed for this gift, let us learn to listen for the word of wisdom. During the trouble in Ireland in the 1920s a Christian woman, who had a bakery, was counting the week's takings in the room behind the shop. God said to her "Put the money away". She looked around but there was no one in the room; she went to the shop door but there was no one in the street. She again began counting and again the voice said: "Put the money away". Recognising the voice of the Lord she pushed the money under a cushion. Immediately, two rough men came in. One took her by the throat, put a gun to her head and said, "Where's your money?". The other man began searching the drawers. She said: "I am a child of God and that pistol will never go off". Then the Spirit of the Lord came on her and she shouted: "In the name of the Lord Jesus I command you to leave this house", and without a further word they went.

God is pleased when we pray for the gift of wisdom (as He was with Solomon when he asked for this gift), but, having prayed, let us cultivate the hearing ear. The word of wisdom comes as "a still small voice" (1 Kings 19:12) and when we hear it, like Elijah, we cover our face in deep humility.

Book Reviews

Smith Wigglesworth, Apostle of Faith, by S.H. Frodsham. Published by Assemblies of God, price 35p, postage and packing 3p extra.

THIS book contains the remarkable life story of one of the outstanding Pentecostal pioneers of the twentieth century. The title suggests that his spiritual speciality was faith. This is amply proved. From a poor lad born on the outskirts of Bradford, Yorkshire, he became a world-famous evangelist. He was an individualist and no Pentecostal society could monopolize him. Unspoilt by success, he was unique, never a slave to money, but generous to his last penny. "Greatheart" is the favourite title which the author uses to describe him. Throughout the world, vast crowds were attracted to his meetings. Thousands were converted and miraculously healed.

The author admits that he gleaned most of his material from James Salter, the evangelist's son-in-law. He has compiled it in such a descriptive manner that one is able to vividly recapture what we often call "the early days of Pentecost". It is a stimulating book, a fascinating biography of a man who, through faith, did exploits. I heartily recommend it, for it cannot fail to inspire and increase your faith.

EDWARD J. JARVIS

Moses, Servant of God, by F.B. Mayer. Published by Lakeland, price 45p, postage and packing 6p extra.

HOW do you think of Moses – as a mighty man of God, a great prophet, or God's superman of the Old Testament? This book gives a very reassuring look at Moses the human being. As we follow the development of his character through failure, disappointment and victory, we realize that only his faith accomplished his mighty deeds. We see that only when "he came to an end of himself", did he become a channel through which God's purpose was fulfilled. Each page searches and challenges us to identify with him, to compare our lives with his and to learn from the lessons taught by his life and character. This is a most challenging book for Christians of all ages.

Church Report

SOUTHPORT Pastor: A.B. Tee

CONSIDERABLE improvements have been made to the grounds of our Church as a result of a government grant. Our photograph shows our Pastor outside the Church. A car park for fifteen cars has been included in the improvements.

The following is a letter which appeared in The Southport Visitor:

Impressions of Tent Crusade

SIGNS, posters, leaflets and notices of various kinds have appeared over our town during the past few weeks concerning the Tent Crusade. This crusade was led by Rev. Alexander Tee of the Evangel Temple, Manchester Road.

I had neither met this evangelist nor visited this particular church before attending this crusade. I am now convinced that many Southport people have missed a wonderful opportunity to face up to facts which can so easily be overlooked and which concern us all.

Mr. Tee did not pass on his own ideas. He did not use emotional or persuasive jargon, neither did he claim any special mystical powers. All that he said, in my hearing, can be confirmed by the Word of God. Every offer and advice given seemed both reasonable and logical. However, lives were changed, sick ones were healed and it was obvious that reason and logic alone could not bring about such success. Behind it all was the God of the impossible; a loving, righteous Father, conveying His love and power through the Lord Jesus and then through a willing and obedient servant. The Church of God needs such evangelists today who will take God at His Word and receive the power He has promised

Mr. Tee continues his ministry at the Evangel Temple with no less zeal. I do not belong to his particular denomination but share his faith.

I join with many who are praying for his ministry and for our town of Southport, that hundreds more may realise God's great love, ready to save, to heal and to bless.

Pioneer Crusade at Exmouth, Devon

Miracles, salvation and baptisms in the Spirit

IN July I had only heard about Exmouth and had no idea that by September I would have made many friends there. Omitting the details, the campaign "happened", and I found myself without my having really decided preaching in the 100-foot long marquee a few yards from the sea, one Monday night in September.

Pastor John Sainsbury (not for the first time) simply saw the whole project through, making sure that it did happen, and there I was. He had previously set up meetings in the town, attended by half a dozen locals, and (in season) holiday-makers.

Breaking off from his holiday in Switzerland, John Barton (an E.B.C. student) became the pianist, Mark Drew drew away from his Suffolk Church at Stowmarket, and singers from the Gloucester Church gave up their holidays to reach the hearts of Devonians. Mark Drew became not only the campaign manager and song leader, but also the tent watchman. He lived there!

One week before the Crusade I received a remarkable new anointing in our church prayer meeting; it was exactly like receiving the Baptism in the Spirit all over again. In the big tent I felt that I was "taken over". I was almost in a new world. That unexpected sense of the supernatural was something that I could not escape the entire thirteen nights of the Crusade. It became the underlying theme as I preached repentance and faith in Christ. Too many almost uncanny things took place to record in this brief account.

The attendances – what would they be in a small seaside town at the back end of the season, cut off from the general area (Exmouth is rather "out on a limb")? They were encouraging for the first day or two - and then they grew, night after night.

We advertised only a 6.30 p.m. (church time) service on Sundays, thus severing ourselves from church support. Attendance dropped that night to eighty, but nearly as many stayed when I decided to hold a charismatic service, when I gave a talk and invited questions on the Baptism in the Spirit.

On the second (and last) Sunday, we held the same two meetings and some received the Spirit with signs following as soon as hands were laid upon them.

The local vicar made several encouraging attendances and we were thrilled though quite nonplussed by the open, eager and very appreciative attendance, every night, of nuns from the local Roman Catholic convent, some of whom signed decision cards. Their thanks were warm and real.

Many were healed, and many received Christ. The future of the Exmouth Church looks to me sure. Everything has simply gone along in such a divinely ordered way that obviously (if ever I saw it) God was in this thing. I count it a privilege to have been involved and to have been used by the condescension of the Spirit, as the gifts of healings, miracles, revelation and word of knowledge were granted according to the New Testament pattern.

I painted pictures, but, frankly, hard work as this feature is, the real attraction was the power of God openly at work. The local press even omitted our final and important advertisement and quite ignored our presence in the town, but all our accommodation filled up despite this, as excited people told of the visitation of God on the Imperial Recreation grounds. "All over the world, the Spirit is moving".

One young man received a farewell gift from the new Church. - He went into Elim Bible College this term. A new Elim student from a pioneer campaign is a kind of record, I suppose.

THE TENTH PENTECOSTAL WORLD CONFERENCE, SEOUL, KOREA

PENTECOSTAL WORLD CONFERENCE SEOUL

P. S. Brewster's Address to the 1973 World Pentecostal Conference

ANOTHER trend is to accept the heritage and the sacrifice of the past without a corresponding personal dedication. It would be a crying shame for this generation to accept all the sacrifices and daring dedication of the early pioneers and try to carry on with the work today without a burning consecration. The Pentecostal Movement is essentially a faith Movement born of prayer. It is so easy today to cast off all the past and have no appreciation for the legacy of Pentecostal truth. Some of the old paths are still the better paths.

Some charlatans have endeavoured to build up own personal reputation and to make money out of the Pentecostal people. This is not new. It happened in Philip's revival in Samaria. Are we not commanded to "try the spirits"? The Pentecostal Movements have been born from a background of holiness and no matter what the modern trends may be the doctrine of holiness is Bible-based.

In this third generation of Pentecost far too much time, money and priority are given to administration rather than evangelism. To conserve what we have and to live on our resources rather than expand is spiritual suicide. The warning message given to the Early Church in the Revelation was to effect that "Thou art rich, but poor".

Yet another trend is the urge to build larger and more costly church buildings, not always to house the incoming of a great rush of new converts. Some of these large costly buildings are used only for one or two hours a week. Multiplied thousands of cities and towns around the world have not even one Pentecostal church. It could be we will have to create the trend of sharing our resources to reach the world in our generation.

There is today a lack of balance on priorities resulting in the endless round of committees majoring on minors. To know what is important is the height of spiritual wisdom: To know the mind of God and to be aware of the urgency of Christ's Great Commission. There is nothing more important in the whole world than to win a soul for Jesus Christ and to lead that convert to be filled with the Spirit and then merge him into the Church.

In some parts of the world there is an unhealthy move towards the segregation of people. The youth gather, the older brethren gather, the teenagers gather, and the old people gather. This trend is becoming so vast that, in some sections ninety per cent of church life is expended on youth. This is not Bible-based. It should be halted and rectified. The older, matured people need the zeal and the energy of the young and the young need the wisdom, balance and maturity of the older people. There is no competition between the old and the young. In the Bible we are taught that old men dream dreams and inspire the youth, while the young men see visions of the need of their own generation. Age groups are not put into water-tight compartments, but they complement each other.

The great cry for democracy has gone around the world as though it has the glow of divine inspiration about it. The people's vote is becoming stronger than the voice of God. It is Christ who is the Head of His Church, the Foundation of the Church, the chief Cornerstone uniting the Church. The voice of democracy could be wrong and has been known to have been so many times. By no means am I against voting except to say that congregations, administrations, Conferences and Councils should be observant to see where the hand of God is resting on certain people in their generation and to thrust these people out into the harvest field. God will take care of the future and all finance and help man and movements to meet all eventualities. As trustees of the gospel we must create the trends and not merely conform to secular trends.

In some sections of the world there is an unhealthy over-emphasis on demon power. Some dreadful extremes have been encountered. This trend must be halted by the teaching of the Word of God, which is final. There is no court of appeal against the teaching of Scripture. We accept the fact that there is a devil and that he is trying to bring down the work of God and the individual. He is endeavouring to seduce, to divide, and to confuse the Church, but we must already recognise that he is a defeated foe. Our Master said, "SATAN HAS NOTHING IN ME".

Another subtle trend is the shifting of emphasis to meet changing opinion and weaknesses of men. This results in uneven growth and development. Some groups of Pentecostal people have never really matured. There is an urgent need in some areas for charismatic leadership. One of the most serious of all trends is the toleration and the condoning of SIN and the attempt to excuse it and provide for it – drink, drugs, the abuse of sex life, lies, theft and corruption both moral and spiritual.

Another very dangerous trend is to substitute education for the call of God and the power of the Holy Spirit, the use of psychology in the place of prayer and the anointing of the Holy Spirit.

Still another trend is to claim that the church is finished and now we can meet in houses. Any house meeting is but a substitution for church life, an emergency rather than a practice.

The Truths of the Pentecostal Movement

God is pouring out His Holy Spirit around the world on all denominations, including Roman Catholics, Episcopalians, Methodists, Baptists and others. There is no shadow of a doubt this has caught many by surprise. Fifty years ago as the Holy Spirit fell upon the individual. He left his church and merged into the Pentecostal Movement. Today many of our brethren are not coming out, but remaining in their existing churches. This causing confusion, perplexity and sometimes heartache, but we must recognise that God is not baptising in the Holy Spirit the institutions or the churches of the denominations, but He is baptising individuals. Jesus is the only Saviour and no one can receive the gift of the Holy Spirit without first receiving Jesus as Saviour and Lord. Pentecost and its manifestation must come into the whole activity of church life and not be relegated to special occasions, such as renewal services or vestry or house meetings.

Conclusion

Where do we go from here?

We will continue to evangelise at home and overseas until we usher in the Second Coming of Jesus Christ. We will recognise the principle of being debtors to all who recognise the lordship of Jesus Christ and are seeking to be filled with God's Holy Spirit. We will contend for the faith without being contentious. We will offer our fifty years of experience to all our brethren of all denominations who desire it.

From T. H. Stevenson

ON a recent Sunday afternoon I had the privilege of having afternoon tea with Dr. Ian Paisley, following an open-air gospel rally. Our refreshments were enjoyed at the home of my niece and her husband, in one of whose fields the rally was held. Though I write of afternoon tea, for Dr. Paisley it was nothing more than a glass of water and almost complete abstention from food. The preacher and politician is on a diet, which seems to be most effective, he having reduced from almost eighteen stones to little more than fifteen stones. He would appear to be decreasing in stature, but only physically. Politically he may have had his moments of set-back, but these seem small and temporary in N. Ireland compared with the fortunes of almost any other politician one could name. My nieces' husband shared prison with Dr. Ian Paisley and now shares with him as an elected member of the Assembly of N. Ireland, upon which I question whether they place much hope. Dr. Paisley has not decreased as a political figure, but even more important one would be biased who suggested that his spiritual stature lessens. Many must wonder how he can carry out efficiently such a full life in pulpit and politics. There is, of course, the dictum that, if you want a job doing ask a busy man. On the Sunday morning, as every Sunday morning, Ian Paisley preached to 200 prisoners in Crumlin jail. This was followed by his morning service at his own Church, then a forty miles journey for the gospel rally attended by considerably more than 1,000 people several miles from the nearest towns, followed by his evening service in Belfast. A fine, direct gospel address was interrupted several times by an elderly Christian who, whatever he may have lacked in intelligence, had made sure that he was nearer to Dr. Paisley than anyone else in the field. With a powerful voice and aid of a microphone Ian Paisley could have ignored the man without many if any being aware of it, but the man often presented as intolerant and aggressive was too tolerant to his questioner by allowing himself to be stopped at least three times. Despite the interference, God blessed. After the service Dr. Paisley by the platform-lorry personally counselled a Roman Catholic woman in leading her to Christ. The rally was arranged by a young people's group and I could only be but very pleased that one of our local young Elim men convened the service and another young Elim man testified to his quite recent conversion, while the remaining testimony was given by a young man who told how late at night he went to the home of another young Elim man who led him to Christ.

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

46. Suffering for doing right (Genesis 39:20)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

WHEN Joseph was overseer of one of Egypt's greatest homes, the blessing of God was clearly upon him. He may have felt that the promises of God were coming to pass. Suddenly and harshly, however, all was changed for him when Potiphar had him thrown into prison because of the lies of his evil wife. Have you wondered why Potiphar imprisoned Joseph rather than having him put to death? Do you think he half-doubted his wife's story in view of Joseph's upright character? Perhaps it appeared that the Lord was mocking Joseph, but he continued to trust Him and to believe His Word and, in spite of trouble, he expected God to fulfil His promise. The Lord protected Joseph in prison and gave him favour with the jailer, keeping Joseph safe until the hour of deliverance which He had planned.

Sometimes, just when it seems that we are on the verge of wonderful blessing, things go wrong. The tide recedes and we become discouraged. Perhaps we do what we know is right and yet we suffer for it. It may even be that, like Joseph, we are accused of doing the very thing which we have rejected as being wrong and unworthy. Such an experience is bewildering and hard to bear and can bring heartache and sleepless nights. Yet, as honourable Christians, we know that in similar circumstances we would have to make the same decision even if it did lead to trouble. At such a time it is more necessary than ever to trust the Lord and to believe that all will finally work for good. The same Lord who has closed one door against us will certainly open the right door before us and no-one can then shut it (Revelation 3:8).

Ladybirds and the Like

"LADYBIRDS combat famine problems!": what an intriguing headline! It was in The Christian Record. The item reported that the World Council of Churches has announced that it is to support a project to supply and use a special type of ladybird to destroy bugs which are killing date palm trees in the drought-stricken areas of West Africa. The nomadic people in the sub-Sahara region have already lost their cattle in the drought and they are now dependent on the date palms for sustenance. The ladybird is a predator on the bug which attacks the palms and can eat as many as 400 bugs a day!

There is often amazing potential in tiny things. One can hardly conceive of a more fragile little insect than the ladybird, yet it has a vital part to play in keeping the balance of nature by devouring pests, as all gardeners will readily concede. In the Almighty's scheme of things He delights to use the weak things of the world to do His work.

"In 1873, in the Anna Valley Mission Hall near Andover, a special meeting was held to give support to the work of the British and Foreign Bible Society. A small boy, eight years old, volunteered to become a collector for the Society and took home with him from that meeting a collecting box shaped like a Bible. His name was Robert Henry Dear. Ever since, that box has been in use in the Dear family. When Robert died in 1940 his daughter Lily took the box over. In February this year the Anna Valley Mission celebrated a century of Bible Society meetings. Miss Dear was there with the box specially polished for the occasion. Herself over 80, Miss Dear is one of those indomitable workers who keep churches and Bible societies alive".

This story is in Word in Action, the newspaper of the B.F.B.S., along with another example of a small item being effectively used by God: "The Bible is banned in mainland China. This means that one-fifth of the world's population lives almost completely beyond the reach of God's written Word. The Bible Societies' answer is to put Bible readings on tape and beam them into China by radio".

Thank God for one small boy who was willing to serve God in his own little way and for a small tape which is mighty in invading enemy territory and driving back the forces of darkness and destruction.

This tape ministry reminds me of our own E.W.M.A. project: "Transmitting the Truth". It rejoiced my heart recently to learn of several hundred cassettes, each one capable of recording an hour's bible teaching, being sent to Ghana. These cassettes will be prepared in tribal tongues and used in teaching people in remote villages where it would be impossible to maintain trained pastors and workers. I thought of all those dear sisters, many of them elderly, who by the use of such simple things as knitting needles, sewing needles, baking tins and pots of glue, have raised the cash needed to purchase this equipment. I thanked God for every one of them.

Little Things

The heart that loves the little things
Is full of deep content:
The life that serves in little things
Is often nobly spent:

For when God made the mountains
He shaped the flowers as well:
And when He spread the ocean
He formed the cockle shell:

So do not be despising
The day of little things,
For bees as well as angels
Can boast a pair of wings.

The Family Altar

Scripture Union Portions — Notes by Gerald L.W. Ladlow

Monday, October 8th — 2 Kings 19:20-37

"The remnant that escaped of the house of Judah shall yet again take root downward, and bear fruit upward." (v.30).

VERY often after a storm a tree that has been shaken takes firmer root than ever. God declares that the remnant that escaped destruction by the Assyrians will become stronger and will prosper more than ever, but God emphasises that this shall only be accomplished "by the zeal of the Lord of Hosts". It is comforting to realise that God is always able to turn our adversity to good account. By the application of His grace He strengthens our roots and increases our fruits.

Tuesday, October 9th — 2 Kings 20:1-21

"What have they seen in thine house?" (v.15).

AFTER the miraculous deliverance of Hezekiah from his sickness in answer to prayer, he gave a wonderful psalm of praise in which he exquisitely expressed his gratitude to God for His care over him (Isaiah 38), yet following that great experience he gave way to the flattery of Merodach Baladan and made a vain display before his ambassadors. This stirred up the jealousy of these envoys and inspired the subsequent aggression by Babylon. It displeased the Lord, for it failed to assert His glory. We should ever be on our guard to see that everything in our lives brings glory to Him and that there is nothing of which the enemy can take advantage to spoil our testimony.

Wednesday, October 10th — 2 Chronicles 33:1-13

"When he was in affliction, he besought the Lord" (v.12).

MANASSEH was thirty-four years of age when he was carried captive to Babylon. His reign had been characterised by vile heathen practices and bloody cruelty (see 2 Kings 21). Personal affliction brought him to his knees in prayer. In love, God forgave him and subsequently restored him to his own land. For thirty-three years he showed his faith by his works and sought to remedy the evils of the past. The love of God often allows men to be brought into painful experiences in order that they might learn their need of Him.

Thursday, October 11th — 2 Chronicles 33:14-25

"He humbled not himself before the Lord, as Manasseh his father humbled himself" (v.23).

AMON was born after the conversion of his father. His life was surrounded by godly influences. He must have heard of the terrible past and the tremendous change that God made in answer to his father's prayer, yet he chose the path of evil and turned from the holy example that he had been given. He paid the price for his folly and lost his life. Our Lord reminds us that the greater the light that is given, the greater the condemnation if it is rejected (Matthew 11:20-24).

Friday, October 12th — 2 Chronicles 34:1-18

"While he was yet young, he began to seek after the God of David his father" (v.3).

WHAT contrasts there are in this narrative! A godly father, Manasseh, was followed by his wicked son, Amon, then, as Joseph Parker said, "Amon, the greatest sinner of his day, was progenitor of one of the finest saints who ever prayed." Only a lad of eight years when he came to the throne, while still of tender years Josiah sought the Lord. Having known the benefits of his grandfather's godliness and the sad result of his father's sinfulness, Josiah made his decision to follow the Lord. Never let us think that children are too young to understand spiritual truth or to make true decisions for Christ.

Saturday, October 13th — 2 Chronicles 34:19-33

"Because thine heart was tender" (v.27).

TENDER–HEARTEDNESS is a mark of a true Christian (Ephesians 4:32). The tender heart is always ready to respond to the Word of the Lord and to submit to its judgments as well as to rejoice in its gospel, to shed the penitential tear and to pray the prayer of compassion for those who come under its condemnation. The tender heart will find the blessing of forgiveness and the continued lovingkindness of the Lord.

Sunday, October 14th — 2 Chronicles 35:1-19

"He encouraged them to the service of the house of the Lord (v.2).

THE re-commencement of the services and the carrying out of all the requirements and ceremonies of the law of Moses after a long period of neglect was a considerable task, but the priests did it because of the encouragement received from Josiah. No wonder the result was such an unqualified success (v.18). Where folk are ready to give the word of encouragement to God's servants the blessing of the Lord always abounds.

Have you encouraged your minister today?

A Personal Letter from the Field Superintendent

Dear Friends,

We would like to place on record our deep appreciation for the splendid manner in which you responded to the Evangelistic Appeal last year. Your efforts resulted in the highest contribution for many years and exceeded the previous year by about 50%.

The crusades in recent years have resulted in the founding of several new churches and these take some years to establish. So, in addition to bearing the initial cost of the campaign, it is necessary also to bear some financial responsibility until the new church gets properly on its feet. We know it would be your wish for this to be done because it is no good launching an effort and then leaving it to flounder for the sake of a little help. From this you will appreciate how dependent we are upon generous giving to maintain these ever increasing commitments, in addition to the cost of further pioneer crusades. Your excellent giving to the last appeal has enabled us to share the load to some degree.

Please contribute liberally again on the occasion of our ANNUAL THANK-OFFERING for EVANGELISM because the commitments are rising each year. Special envelopes can be obtained from your minister or, if you prefer, send your gift direct to Headquarters and designate it to the THANK-OFFERING. Our national week of prayer takes place from 7th to 14th October, so this is ideal to make EVANGELISM a main topic. Also please PRAY every day throughout the year for those who go into the world with the glorious gospel message.

Thank you and God bless you.

Yours through Grace,

R. B. CHAPMAN

Editorial

AT a recent conference at which I had the privilege of speaking, a late night feature was entitled, "Pentecostal Pioneers". It was intensely moving, occasionally amusing, always challenging, to hear some of their contemporaries describe Stephen Jeffreys, Fred Watson of Blackburn, Smith Wigglesworth, William F.P. Burton and "Dad" Mercy of Cross Keys. Such different men they were, but what a mark they left on their own and on succeeding generations.

As I listened I wondered, if the Lord tarry, whether future conferences will be able to say such things about the leaders of today. Undoubtedly there are men of God in our midst and history will record — or ignore — their contributions, depending upon many factors.

I cannot but say, however, that the driving force behind the brethren named was a desire to be abandoned to God. Love for souls, confidence in divine power, supreme dependence on God's inspired Word, prayer that moved mountains—the biographies revealed them all, but still this indefinable something was there. I suppose "charismatic" has come to mean all sorts of things nowadays, but truly charismatic they certainly were. The prophetic office seemed to have been granted to them. Some of them were fit companions of rugged Amos. Background and even training were often unhelpful or non-existent, but they knew God. Prowess mattered little or nothing. Prominence was far from their thoughts. They knew God. They wanted to be all out for Him. They were determined to yield entirely and yet to wield total Holy Ghost power.

Times have changed. Many a time has the story been told, for example, how Stephen Jeffreys regularly preached in Wales to afternoon — weekday afternoon — congregations of scores, all men and all out of work.

Yes, times have changed, and not always for the better, for materialism is well nigh engulfing us.

God is just the same, however. In these last of the last days, we must be willing in the day of His power.

at the City Temple, Cardiff. The Minister, Pastor P.S. Brewster, who officiated at their wedding, dedicated Christopher and Angela as babies. He also was the officiating minister at the weddings of Joyce and Tom Alexander, Angela's parents, and of Keith and Grace Wood, Christopher's parents, at the City Temple, Cardiff. We wish them many happy years together serving the Master.

PRAYER AND PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

I AM writing this in an aeroplane flying at an altitude of 33,000 feet and travelling at 500 miles per hour on the way to Tokyo and the World Pentecostal Conference in Korea.

There is revival in Korea. Billy Graham was there recently and there were over 1,000,000 people at the final meeting of the Crusade. A military parade ground was used with the Koreans sitting on the ground. It is estimated that the Hyo Chang football stadium seats 100,000 with room for thousands more on the pitch. It was used for services.

Why do these great crowds attend. Why is there revival in this land? Why is it that one finds scores of churches in Seoul, the Capital of South Korea, in comparison with the very few churches in Japan? To me the answer is prayer and the faithful sowing of God's Word. Had one been in Korea some fifteen years ago, where Seoul lay in ruins from the terrible war with communist North Korea, when snow was on the ground, you would have found widows gathering for prayer in bombed shells of churches, for them there were no beautiful, heated, comfortable church buildings. Sheltered from the biting East wind as best possible they lifted up their hearts to God for revival. I look forward to meeting thousands of Korean Pentecostals who pray all together, as well as who sing so wonderfully. God has answered their prayers and sent them a Pentecostal revival. God does answer prayer and will answer your prayers if you cry to Him for a blessed revival in our own Land.

The Captain of our plane has just told us that we are over Persia. My mind went back to those Old Testament books which tell us about mighty Babylon. She is no more and Persia is a very different land from when Nebuchadnezzar reigned. Judgment came upon Babylon. Revival and Judgment – if Revival does not come to Britain, it could be judgment. Pray that Revival may come!

WITH RON JONES in Guyana

IT is with mixed feelings that I board the jumbo jet that is to take Len Magee and me on part of our journey to Guyana. I remember the tremendous heat and terrible humidity that sapped my energy during my last visit some three years ago. A quick glance at my ankles serves to remind me of the army of mosquitoes who took a very special interest in me. As far as they were concerned I had come among them as a new English dish. I am not looking forward with the least enthusiasm to any of these things, nor do I relish the thought of being away from my loved-ones for yet another month.

On the other hand, I remember some of the wonderful people whom I met three years ago, like Sister Tempow, Brother Isaacs, Brother and Sister Ramdeen, Brother Ramau and a whole host of others like them, not forgetting the great crowd of young people and the many converts. I DO WANT TO SEE THEM AGAIN. Their enthusiasm does me the world of good. Then, of course, there are those great Elim warriors John and Gladys MacInnes, so dedicated that they have been in Guyana for almost twenty-five years and yet so human that someone has whispered to me that John would give almost anything for a Mars Bar, if he could get one! He'll be glad to see me, anyway, if only because I have half a dozen of them safely packed away in my bag for him!

We have to travel via New York and it will be a twenty-six hours' journey before we arrive in Georgetown.

It is 3 a.m. We are showing our passports. "RON JONES, THIS WAY". . . there is no mistaking that good Scottish MacInnes' voice. Into the waiting Hillman we climb. Even Gladys has made the quite long journey to the airport at this unearthly hour to meet us in. So to bed, but not for long for our first campaign commence this very same night.

Middle Road, La Penitence

It really is a thrill to be back in this very remarkable church with its Pastor, a converted Moslem, Sister Tempow, a lady of outstanding character. The place is absolutely packed and there are as many in the yard outside as there are inside. The youth choir of fourteen voices, in their smart yellow and green uniforms, sing a song of welcome. I cannot help but praise the Lord as I listen, for Glenys and I had commenced this youth singing group on my last visit.

Time is no object here, although the temperature today has been over ninety degrees IN THE SHADE. Two hours come and go and my clothes are ringing wet, but there are ten adult decisions for the Master.

Len Magee has been to Agricola, about five miles away. They were packed out there too.

Mahicha and the Lepers.

This is the event for which I have eagerly waited. It is a twenty-five miles' journey from Georgetown. Last time I was here, Sister Dorcas sang for me, but she has now joined the heavenly choir. She will have a lot of stars in her crown, too, for she has led many souls to the Saviour. Her first leprous spot appeared when she was just eight years of age. She was over eighty years old when the Lord took her home. I am looking forward to meeting Cameron again, whose singing of "He touched me" so blessed and inspired me. When I saw him last he had no hands and no eyes and his face was badly distorted. I don't know whether he will manage to come to the service today for since then he has also lost a leg!

Leprosy is terrible, but thank God that through our missionaries and their helpers, through ELIM, the Mission with a Message, many of these folk have found Jesus as their Saviour and there is an Elim "Church" and an Elim Sunday school right here in this leper colony with its 300 sufferers.

Len Magee and I go around the wards with some of the workers. What can we say to these badly maimed, deformed and suffering folk? There is no need for us to bother, for they say, "Hello, Brother Jones, I would like to give you a verse." They recite for us and they sing for us and it's all about the goodness of the Lord. I feel rather ashamed of myself for I am not grateful enough for all the good things I enjoy in life and I pray right now that God will make both you and me more thankful. They certainly enjoy Len Magee's singing. . . and so do I. The lepers present their own musical programme, especially prepared for our visit. There is some excellent talent. At the close of the service four people make decisions for Jesus. Please pray for them by name: CYRINA, ELEANOR, LYNDON and JUNE. They are in this picture with John MacInnes and myself.

THE GIFTS OF THE SPIRIT—2

The Word of Knowledge

by Charles J. E. Kingston

(1 Corinthians 12:8)

GOD is omniscient; He has all knowledge. Nothing can come as news to Him; He keeps in mind all the facts of heaven and earth.

By this gift of the word of knowledge, the Holy Spirit imparts, when needed, a little of God's omniscience. For example, He knows the number of the elect and whether or not a certain person is included. If God gave a revelation to one praying for this person's conversion that his prayers have been answered and that he will shortly see his friend saved, this would be an instance of the word of knowledge.

1. The gift is "a" word of knowledge. The definite article is not in the Greek. It is not the gift of knowledge to save us the toil of learning, but "a word" given at a time of need.

2. The gift is not knowledge of the Bible, nor is it the illumination by the Spirit of divine truth. Jesus promised that the Holy Spirit would guide into all truth. Thus all Christians may have this, whereas the word of knowledge is given only to those to whom the Spirit divides it (1 Corinthians 12:11).

3. This gift is not necessarily a vocal one. Being a gift of revelation, it may be intended for the recipient only. For instance, God revealed to Samuel what He intended to do to Eli's house, but Samuel did not reveal it to Eli until he was urged to do so. Paul heard unspeakable words when caught up to Paradise and received "abundance of revelations", but he was not permitted to utter them.

4. Some Scriptural examples of this gift.

Moses wrote of the creation of the world by this gift. He was thus preserved from the foolish explanations current in his day. The Egyptians, from whom Moses received his education, taught that the sky was supported on four pillars and that men were formed out of the tears which fell from the eyes of Ra, the Sun-god!

Samuel was gifted with a word of knowledge. God told Samuel "in his ear" a day before Saul came to ask about the lost asses: "To-morrow about this time I will send a man . . . and thou shalt anoint him". Later Samuel was able to tell Saul that his father's asses were found. We may note that the word of knowledge will come to the mind as a telephone message is received in the ear and conveyed to the mind.

Elijah was encouraged through this gift when in despair. Standing at the entrance to Horeb's cave, he heard "a sound of gentle stillness" (1 Kings 19:12, margin) and was told the exact number of those who were faithful to God.

Elisha, too, evidenced this gift. Gehazi had run after Naaman's chariot to get some gift from him. Out of breath (and out of grace, too!) he returned to his master. "My heart went with thee," said Elisha by the word of knowledge, "the leprosy of Naaman shall cleave to thee!" – and it did. Comments Paul: "They that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare."

Peter had this gift. The early disciples were so filled with love for one another that they shared everything in common, until Ananias and Sapphira decided to seem more consecrated than they really were and sinned against the Holy Spirit. The real state of affairs was revealed to Peter and the hypocrites died, God showing His hatred of all pretence in religion.

Another, and a better, Ananias was given the facts of Saul's recent conversion and even told by the word of knowledge the house and street where he was lodging (Acts 9:11).

5. Some modern examples of the gift.

Given to aid effectual prayer. The late W.F.P. Burton, while in Congo (now Zaire), lay dying. Suddenly, for no reason, he recovered and rose, healed. Months later, when on furlough, a comparison of diaries proved that, on the very day when Mr. Burton was given up for dead, the Holy Spirit revealed the whole scene to a Christian woman in Preston, who immediately prayed earnestly in an unknown tongue until in a vision she saw the missionary restored.

Given to guard believers from danger. John Welsh, son-in-law of John Knox, during his ministry in Ayr was asked by the town magistrates whether or not they should allow two packmen to sell their goods in town. The plague was prevalent at the time. Welsh waited in prayer and then told them that the plague was in the packs. The packmen went to the next town and sold their goods which kindled such an infection that the living were scarce enough to bury the dead.

Many are the stories of supernatural guidance in a time of need. God does speak. The alternative is to say that God is dumb, which is the very condemnation He makes of those "dumb idols" that men worship.

An Outline

"Gone, gone, gone, gone . . . "

Jeremiah 15:20

1. "WHERE, Micah?": "Thou wilt cast all their sins into the depths of the sea". (7:19).
2. "Where, David?": "As far as the east is from the west" (Psalm 103:12).
3. "Where, Isaiah?": "Thou hast cast all my sins behind Thy back" (38:17).
4. "Where, Peter?": "Carried up in His body to the tree" (1 Peter 2:24, RV).
6. "Where, Paul?": "Nailed to the cross" (Colossions 2:14).

I will cast in the depths of the fathomless sea
All thy sins and transgressions, whatever they be,
Though they mount up to heaven, though they sink down to hell,
They shall sink in the depths, and above them shall swell
All My waves of forgiveness so mighty and free;
I will cast all thy sins in the depths of the sea.

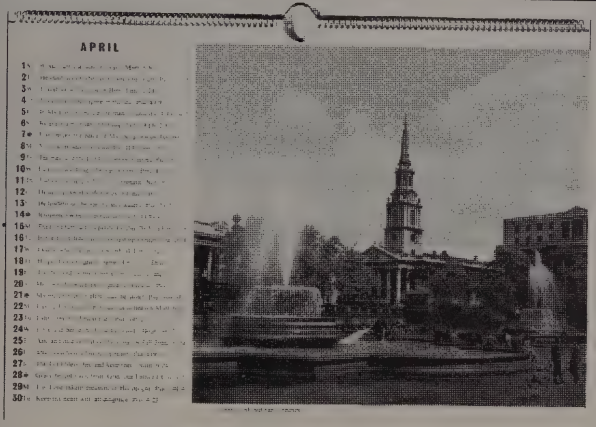
An Incident



"I'm on my way to Gloryland"

PHILIP Henry, father of the great Bible Commentator, and playmate of King Charles II and King James II, decided to enter the Christian Ministry. His first pastorate was at Worthenbury, in Wales, where he fell in love with Katherine Matthews, of a family of wealth and high social status. Her father was not too pleased about the match. "My dear child", he argues, "this Mr. Henry may be a perfect gentleman, a brilliant scholar and an excellent preacher, but we know so little about him! Why, we don't even know where he came from!". "Perhaps not," replied Katherine, but I know where he's going, and I'm going with him!".

A Quotation

"Counterblast to Tobacco"

THE habit of smoking began in this country about 1586 A.D. when Sir Walter Raleigh is said to have introduced it on his return from Virginia. King James I of England did not like it and issued his famous denunciation of it under this title: "A custom loathsome to the eye, hateful to the nose, harmful to the brain, dangerous to the lungs, and the black stinking fume thereof nearest resembling the horrible Stygian smoke from the bottomless pit.". Elizabethan English didn't mince its words!

"TO GOD BE THE GLORY GREAT THINGS HE HATH DONE!"

GOD'S blessing has been here this past year, saving souls, healing and baptising with His Holy Spirit and we look forward to meeting many more of God's people in the coming year that they, too, might enjoy His presence here.

What are you doing for Christmas this year? Make your plans now. Don't be lonely! Book with us to join our house party: good fellowship, good food, log fires and central heating.

Come next year to this glorious part of Devon. Nearby Dartmoor can be lovely, Spring, Summer, and Autumn. The sea is within easy reach by car at both North and South Devon coasts.

We have special terms for group bookings of between twelve and forty-five people, with minibuses available if required. Individuals and groups, we are sure, will find our rates reasonable.

Please send for brochure and further details to John and Doris Wright, Pressland House, Hatherleigh, Okehampton, Devon. Tel. Hatherleigh 381.

Our Portsmouth Church

1960 onwards

WE praise the Lord for the summer of 1927 when George Jeffreys came to Portsmouth and conducted a great campaign in a marquee on Southsea Common. The message of the Foursquare Gospel was viewed with suspicion by some, but was gladly received by several hundred people who accepted Jesus as their Saviour, Healer, Baptizer and Coming King. The weather turned really bad for tentwork and a week of floods forced the Campaign to be continued in the Guildhall and the Albert Hall. The Lord moved in revival blessing, however, and in one of the meetings Miss C. Jardine, who was confined to a bath chair, was healed and even in 1973 she is still walking around as a testimony to the power of God to heal. For a while after the campaign, meetings were held in the Albert Hall on weekdays and in the Trafalgar Cinema on Sundays. Then a hall was acquired. It had been a Roman Catholic social club. It was in a bad state, but willing hands made it presentable. It was far too small, but it was a spiritual home. On Sunday evenings the problem of seating the people was solved by the young people giving up their seats and sitting on planks in the garden attached to the hall.

In 1934 the present Church in Arundel Street was purchased. It had been a cinema called "The Grand". Once again, willing hands worked hard to make it into a place of worship. It was purchased at much sacrifice by the people. Some pledged to give a certain sum in a given time. Others sold their jewellery, even their heirlooms so that it could be their spiritual home. In the same year there was much rejoicing when George Jeffreys opened the place and from that day to this the Foursquare message has been proclaimed.

Then came the war and with it came many problems. In 1941 the congregation was reduced to a mere handful, but this did not deter the people. A canteen for the Forces was started on Sunday nights after the gospel service. Many were reached and about 400 found the Lord during those days of air raids and disruption. With the coming of peace the Assembly took up the challenge of the post-war years.

The first Minister was Miss A. Kennedy and up to 1941 there was a succession of Irish Ministry – Miss Streight, and Pastors R. Mercer, J.C. Kennedy, W. Field, S. Gorman and J. Smith. There was also some English Ministry from Miss G. Edwards (now Mrs. Gorton), Miss Thompson and Pastor J. Robinson. Then came G.L.W. Ladlow, G. Davies, J. McBurney, J. McAvoy and from 1959 to the present A.A. Biddle.

In 1960 the frontage of the main building was completely altered. The old cinema entrance was demolished and in its place came a porch and general facilities on either side. This gave the building a much better appearance. In 1962 the manse was purchased. The site on the side of the Church was also purchased and a two storey block was built, mainly by the local members. Two stories about that side will encourage all prayer warriors. In the early days of the work, the Church was surrounded by public houses, some fourteen of them, all within a hundred yards of the place. A sister used to pray that the Lord would remove them. From 1968 to the present they have all been demolished except one and that is to come down in the near future. What is more, part of the site which we now own and on which is built our new premises, was part of the site of one of those public houses. The front part of that site belonged to a Billposting Company and we were informed that they would never sell it, but much prayer was made and that year the then President, R.B. Chapman, who, visiting us on one of his tours, was asked to pray over a letter seeking purchase from the Company. Within a week the Company had agreed to sell at a figure which was much less than its value.

Then in January, 1972, we purchased the premises on the other side of the Church. The plans for the

IT was a time of great inspiration to see so many young people thronging the Central Hall, Westminster, London and praising the Lord Jesus Christ at the two meetings.

The afternoon session was led by Pastor Archie Biddle who was "fired up" in his familiar style. Of the two testimonies given, one was from John Richards (Lane End) who was saved just a year ago. He is area manager of a chain of newsagents and told us how prayer had changed the attitude of an Earls Court newsagent from exhibiting suggestive notices on an advertising board to being willing to publicise the gospel. Brian Hanley, an ex-drug addict staying with Life for the World Trust, testified to the power of the gospel in bringing about his complete conversion and deliverance from drug addiction.

Portsmouth Group 2 gave a very polished presentation of the Gospel in bright, modern form.

The preacher was Paul Newberry of the Assemblies of God Youth Council. His animated style suited the occasion and was appreciated by the young people. He dealt with matters of life which, he said, were "not negotiable". Setting the standard high, the congregation was brought to a decisive position.

Following the afternoon meeting came the procession of witness, led by a gospel float from Evesham. It followed a route from the Central Hall through Parliament Square, down Whitehall, along The Embankment, then on to the Central Hall. The young people sang, chanted and shouted the praises of their Lord and left no one in doubt as to where their loyalties were in a world of shifting opinions and doubtful doctrines.

The evening rally was led by the National Youth Director, Pastor Eldin R. Corsie. Prayer was offered by the President, Pastor John Lancaster. A missionary contribution came from Pastor David Mills who spoke of the rapidly increasing work in Ghana. He emphasized that the young people of that country play a very great part in the expansion and his testimony was a challenge to the young people of our churches in this country.

Musical items were again given by the Portsmouth Group 2 and also by the Buckley Four who presented gospel items in their own impeccable style. As the offering was received, Pastor Corsie led the singing of the chorus "Lord, we praise Thee". As this was repeated we felt the moving of the Spirit in no uncertain way as hands and voices were raised.

The closing message was given by Paul Newberry, who stirred the hearts of many young people to stand for Christ. His message was preceded by the singing of the hymn, "My Jesus, I love Thee" by Lois Buckley. The closing prayer was offered by the Secretary-General, J.T. Bradley.

Truly this was a day to remember

Radio Results

THE radio programme of Londrina, Brazil, has been maintained during 1972 and 1973 by the Elim Pentecostal Churches and especially by E.W.M.A. Soon after its inauguration letters were received telling of the conversion to Christ of men and women and also of God's manifestation in healing.

Through one of these healings a congregation was formed in a suburb called Jardim Santa Rita and, a few months afterwards, another in Jardim Santo Amaro. They had no financial resources and so worshipped in a rough tent made of canvas (see photograph). A third group has just finished building their own small tabernacle in front of the lady's house. She is seen handing up a tile in the photograph. This person had listened to Elim's programme and was told by the Lord to move to Jardim Santo Amaro. She told the Lord that there was no church or congregation there for fellowship, but the Spirit continued to tell her to move. Sitting one day at the door of her wooden house, she saw the Elim Pastor at Londrina pass by. She had seen him once in the city. Her husband was told to call him and, in subsequent conversation, Elim was offered the garden for meetings. The group worshipped under a plastic covering for several months and then a more permanent building was constructed and the inauguration service was held at the beginning of August. Pastor Carlito de Oliveira, the local Pastor at Londrina and now responsible for Radio Londrina programme, is standing on the left of the framework, still rejoicing in good health after being miraculously healed two years ago and receiving two new lungs.

Thanks are sent to all Elim members and friends who have prayed and given in order to maintain Elim on the air in Brazil.

A Letter from Agustine Jebakmur who is working with the Dehri-on-Sone sisters

PRAISE the Lord! As a national worker of the Elim Missionary Society in India, I glorify my God for what He has done for our land through the Society. I would like to send the greetings of Indian strangers (1 Peter 1:1) to you all in the name of our God who can do impossible things.

The missionaries at Dehri-on-Sone, India, started praying two years ago for a young national worker. Our prayer-answering God immediately put a burden for Bihar into the heart of a young man who was praying for North India in general. He not only put the burden, but asked him to go. Since he was working for the English Electric Co., India, and had heavy family responsibilities, he denied the call, for which he gave so many reasons. However, the Spirit of God didn't allow it to go. Again and again, through the servants of God, through prophecies and through His Word, He reminded him of the call.

What was his background? Born in a Christian family, brought up in a religious way he came to Jesus only at the age of 21. A staunch member of the Church of South India, he was a man opposed to the Pentecostal truth. Slowly God revealed to him the way to receive the fulness of the Christian life and this led him to a Pentecostal group. He was baptised in the Holy Spirit and then obeyed the command of immersion baptism. He grew in grace day by day and received training in many fields. At that time the call came. At last, through a vision, God gave a definite date on which he had to resign his job. At this time he surrendered his life to the Lord completely, and, through His guidance, came to Bihar, to the exact spot of Dehri-on-Sone. He was enabled by His grace to learn the language quickly; he was not even familiar with the alphabet when he arrived. Now he is moving here and there with the Good News among the untold millions in this dark land.

This is my simple autobiography, brothers and sisters. I am glad that I am in the centre of His will and that He has put me in a very needy part of my Motherland. There are millions of people yet to know the saving power of the Son of God. There are tribal people, uneducated, uncultured, old and young. Their hearts are hard, but we know that nothing is too hard for our Lord and so we are going forward.

Finally, brethren, pray for us, that the Word of God may have free course and be glorified even as it is with you (2 Thessalonians 3:1). We covet your extraordinary prayers for the outpouring of the latter rain (Zecheriah 10:1) and for many workers (Matthew 9:38) so that my people, my land, may see the real Light of Life.

MARANATHA!
Yours in His service,
D. Augustine Jebakumar

future of this site are not definite, but we are thinking in terms of a home for the aged or a youth hostel.

The present condition of the Assembly is that its outreach programme goes on all the time and it is good to see the Church packed almost every Sunday night, with a large number of young people present. Souls are being saved and many have come into the Pentecostal fulness.

CHILDREN'S CORNER

The best Way

Acts 26:14

by Sheila Price

MR. BEN was having difficulty getting his mule to go into the field. No matter how much he coaxed and pleaded, the mule just refused to move. "It's always the same," Mr. Ben said to himself, "whenever I want to take it into the field it just turns and goes its own way. The stubborn animal does not listen to me at all!".

Mr. Ben fetched a long, spiked stick from the shed and began to drive the mule with it. The mule went a few yards and then stopped, refusing to go any further. "Go on, go on!" Mr. Ben urged, but the mule remained where it was. It kicked out at its master, but its flying hooves hit against the sharp spikes and the mule cried in pain. "That will teach you!" said Mr. Ben. "Now perhaps you will listen to me". The mule, not wishing to injure itself further, made its way into the field.

"What a stubborn animal!" exclaimed Mr. Ben.

Saul of Tarsus behaved just like Mr. Ben's mule. For a long time, Saul had ill-treated the Christians and had refused to acknowledge Jesus as Saviour. One day, while making his way to Damascus, Jesus spoke to him from heaven. "Saul, why do you mock Me?" He asked. "It is hard for you to kick against the pricks." Hearing these words, Saul realised how wrong he had been. He had kicked against the will of God just as stubbornly as the mule had kicked against the spikes. But there, on the Damascus road, under the searching light of heaven, Saul yielded his life to Jesus and submitted himself to the will of his Lord and Saviour.

Jesus loves us and wants to lead us in His way. We can try to go our own way and stubbornly kick against the will of our Master, or, like Saul, we can acknowledge Jesus as Saviour and submit to His will.

We must choose Saul's way if we are to be saved from sin.

It has done both Len and me a power of good to be here today. Like someone of old we have "seen the grace of God and are glad".

Ithica and the Mosquitoes.

Ithica is a mainly African village about seventy miles from Georgetown. When I was here last, this was just a new Elim outpost; now it is an established Elim Church thanks to Brother Mac and the wonderful helpers who go up there each weekend. Three years ago the mosquitoes swarmed in right at the end of the service to say a "fond farewell" to Glenys and me. I am well prepared for them tonight, for I have almost soaked myself with insect repellent. I've warned Len, but I don't think that he really believes me - yet!

The service is barely half an hour old and here they come – hundreds of them – and we are singing, "This is the day that the Lord hath made, we will rejoice and be glad in it".

Now Len sings, but it is difficult. These little demons are really attacking him. He will have to come back to sing the second verse of "Carried on the shoulder of the Shepherd", for he just cannot continue. Everyone in the congregation is slapping their body in an effort to kill the invaders.

I preach for just six minutes. I do hope that this does not give ideas to the folk in Bristol! Wonder of wonders, six people decide for Jesus. This makes a total of sixty adult decisions during the first six days of our visit.

There are handshakes and "God bless yous" all round and we beat a hasty retreat, but one young man, Donald, stays behind. He is going to sleep on the spot tonight so that he can conduct Sunday's services in the Elim Church, Ithica. God bless you, Donald!

Ploughs and Yokes

MUSEUMS hold an irresistible fascination for me and on holiday in Guernsey I thoroughly enjoyed my visit to the Folk Museum of that lovely island. The replica of an old Guernsey kitchen was most attractive to the tourists and certainly very quaint and colourful, but I found the display of agricultural implements and dairy equipment just as interesting. I was surprised to see both post cards and photographs of ploughs drawn by oxen as recent as the early years of this century and ancient ploughs on display as well as harness and oxen shoes, something I had never set eyes on before.

Reading the explanatory notes and studying the photos I realised more fully than ever how wise and practical are the instructions given in the Bible about the disadvantages of unequal yoking. Two sturdy beasts of equal weight and height make a splendid team. Each take the strain, perfectly matched, making steady progress and surely an obvious illustration of New Testament teaching in 2 Corinthians 6:14: "Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers". The most spectacular photo and exhibit I saw were of the great plough drawn by three horses and two yoke of oxen, still in use in 1907 in the Castel parish and the pride and joy of their owner and his smock-clad farm hands.

The fine horses and well-fed oxen must have been a handsome sight and a powerful team, horses, oxen and men straining, plodding and guiding, all to plough the good earth. Could not this bear out the thought given in Philippians 1:27: "Only be sure as citizens so to conduct yourselves that your manner of life will be worthy of the good news (the Gospel) of Christ, so that whether I come and see you or am absent, I may hear this of you: that you are standing firm in united spirit and purpose, striving side by side and contending with a single mind for the faith of the glad tidings (the Gospel)." (Amplified Bible). This is an excellent conception of New Testament unity, standing, striving, contending, together, pulling the Gospel plough, breaking up the hard and fallow ground.

My last memory of the exhibits was of the cleverly woven collars, fashioned of straw, light and pliable, worn by the animals and of the yokes carefully made by hand. There were yokes, too, for wearing when the cowmen and dairymaids had to carry the wooden pails of creamy milk. I imagine that yokes have been in use in most civilisations ever since beasts and men have had to pull loads and bear burdens. How apt and easily understood was the gracious plea of the Lord Jesus in Matthew 11:29,30. "Take My yoke upon you, and learn of Me; for I am gentle and humble in heart, and you will find rest – relief, ease and refreshment and recreation and blessed quiet – for your souls. For My yoke is wholesome – not harsh, hard, sharp or pressing, but comfortable, gracious, and pleasant; and My burden is light and easy to be borne". (Amplified Bible).

When I read this chapter and particularly the condemnation of the cities that rejected Christ I marvel at Christ's sternness and His tenderness and realise afresh that He does rebuke and will punish the unrepentant. It is sensible and safe to accept His lordship of our lives, be controlled by Him and humbly bear His yoke. I guess that I am old enough to pass on a Scripture to young Christians in a day when discipline is a "dirty" word. The prophet Jeremiah made this observation: "It is good for a man that he bear the yoke (of divine disciplinary dealings) in his youth" (Lamentations 3:27, Amplified Bible). I agree with him.

"I well remember an old man who carried pails with a yoke and, as he was infirm and tender about the shoulders, his yoke was padded and covered with white flannel where it touched him. But what a lining is 'love'! A cross of iron lined with love would never gall the neck, much less the wooden cross of Christ. Lined with Christ's love to us! Covered with our love to Him! Truly the yoke is easy and the burden is light."

Vacation Venture '73 - Jersey

Children's Rally

Vacation Venture 1973

Marching in chorus—fine march of witness before Sunday night meeting. Venturers visited thousands of homes, and also ran great series of coffee bars for Christ.

Vacation Venture children's rally—the church was crowded with boys and girls for Saturday morning rally. Photo shows some young men from Vacation Venture doing a quiz.

Vacation Venture open airs—open airs were conducted, including several children's open airs. This is open air in Regent Square, St. Helier.

Before the saints go marching in—Vacation Venturers outside the beautiful Jersey Church. The Pastor, and church gave us a fantastic welcome and support, providing superb meals, arranging barbecues and lovely outings each afternoon.
Pastor Vidamour we thank you especially.

Fine group of Elim young people who spent their holiday Crusading for Christ in Jersey—great blessing resulted, 60 decisions, and twenty baptised in Spirit. Pastors Laurie Lambert and Brian Vidamour who led Vacation Venture are on either side of photo.

Scripture Union Portions — Notes by Gerald L.W. Ladlow

Monday, October 15th 2 Chronicle 35:20–27

"Forbear thee from meddling with God" (v.21).

WISE counsel came from an unexpected source. The King of Egypt had no quarrel with Josiah. He was on his way to carry on his war against Assyria and was convinced that God was directing him (v.21). Unfortunately Josiah did not seek the mind of God, but chose to disregard wise counsel and lost his life. Alas even good men cut short their usefulness in the service of God by going beyond His commandment.

Tuesday, October 16th 2 Kings 23:31–37; 24:1–17

"Jehoiakim gave the silver and gold to Pharaoh" (v.35).

HAVING accepted the throne from Pharaoh at the expense of his brother's deportation, the king had no alternative but to submit to the demands of his master and thus impoverish himself and his people. The acceptance of favours from worldly men at the expense of righteous principles will always result in spiritual poverty. It is better to stay poor in material things and rich in the currency of heaven.

Wednesday, October 17th 2 Kings 24:18–20; 25:1–12

IN yesterday's reading we are told that all the calamities that befell Judah were at the commandment of the Lord (24:3). The invasion of Judah, the carrying of the people captive into Babylon and the destruction of Jerusalem were the punishment of God on a rebellious people. Habakkuk was baffled by the fact that God should use the ungodly Chaldeans for the carrying out of His judgments (Habakkak 1:12,13). God often allows pain, suffering and misfortune to bring His wayward ones to realise their need of Him. Dr. Stuart Holden remarks: "By many a harsh-sounding bell His vagrant children are summoned to worship".

Thursday, October 18th 2 Kings 25:13–30

"A continual allowance given him of the king, a daily rate for every day" (v.30).

JEHOIACHIN did nothing to merit the kindness of the king of Babylon, yet he was brought from captivity to freedom, from prison cell to king's table, from prison garments to palace apparel. Best of all he was granted daily provision for the rest of his days. So God treats the repentant sinner. Saved by His grace, we are set free from the slavery of sin, brought into fellowship with Jesus, clothed in the garments of His righteousness and satisfied with His spiritual provision all our days. Hallelujah!

Friday, October 19th Lamentations 1:1–14

"Behold and see if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow" (v.12).

WHILE most commentators agree that Jerusalem is here personified and her destruction at the hands of the Chaldeans revealed, others interpret the verse as referring to the suffering of Jeremiah. All agree that these verses typify the deep sorrows of our Lord. Note the words "the Lord hath afflicted me in the day of His fierce anger". Though Christ was crucified by wicked men," yet it pleased the Lord to bruise Him" (Isaiah 53:10). As Charles Wesley expresses it:

The Father hath stricken His dear Son.
The Lord in the day of His anger did lay
Your sins on the Lamb and He bore them away.

Saturday, October 20th Lamentations 2:1–9. 20–22.

"Her prophets also find no vision from the Lord" (v.9).

PROPHETS without a vision are useless in the prophetic office. To call a man a prophet in such circumstances is a misnomer, for he has lost the power to understand or to interpret the mind of God. "Where there is no vision the people perish". The decline in church membership and the loss of power in so many denominations can be traced to this sad lack of vision. The vision was lost by Israel's prophets because of sin. It is good to remember that the pure in heart see God.

Sunday, October 21st Lamentations 3:1–33

"The Lord is my portion, saith my soul: therefore will I hope in Him." (v.24).

IN the midst of his lamentations at his appalling misfortunes,Jeremiah was able to say with assurance that such was not the "lot" of his soul, but the Lord was the "portion" or "lot" of his soul. He was, therefore, assured that in mercy God would preserve him and in compassion would daily supply his need. Such assurance rests on the eternal faithfulness of the Lord and so the rays of hope brighten the dark ways of life. Happy is the one who can sing: "Mine is a wealth no moth nor rust destroys, He is my portion for ever."

Medicine Man

I STIRRED on my camp bed. An unusual noise had awakened me. It was not the rustle of lizards in the thatch! Was it rats perhaps? The blackness inside the mud hut was absolute. The tin door was tightly shut. The two trap openings were firmly closed. I heard a prolonged slithering noise, like a large body going over a log. "A snake," I decided, "and it must be a large one!". I tucked in the mosquito net to settle down again. A rattle from the black whereabouts of my travelling bag started me back from sleep. I sat up with pounding heart, all my senses demanding, "Who, what, is there?". The slithering noise came once more, then quietness. "It was a snake," was my last thought as I fell asleep.

My clothes were under the pillow and my shoes were on the earth under the bed. Everything else was gone! In the dawn light I toured my two-roomed domain. The sun rose and a shaft of sunlight appeared through a hole in the wall. The local chief was very sympathetic. "You see, Bwana," he said. "These two upright posts are nearly a foot apart. The robbers took water and poured it on the mud wall until the earth crumbled. They then cut the holding laths and the slimmest robber slipped through the gap, his passage made easy by oiling his naked body. Yesterday's rain gave them the water. But they were not my people," he assured me.

The news of my loss travelled through the bush. The gathered people were discussing the details. "The robbers had obtained dawa (poisonous powder) from a witchdoctor. They had blown it into my hut. Thus you did not hear anything, being unconscious," they explained. "I was wide awake," I protested. "Why, of course," they politely agreed. To one another they said, "Satan's dawa is powerful to do wrong."

A few weeks before, the same chief had come to my hut. He had asked me if I had any dawa. His grandson was an epileptic. "No, I have no dawa," I answered him. "But I will pray for the child in the name of Jesus." The boy was healed from that hour. The people had then said, "Bula has dawa, his dawa is a name Yesu (Jesus), a medicine to do good."

Many years have passed since that incident. The chief's grandson has his own boys now. Some of those people have found that there is an even more wonderful dawa in the name of Yesu – cleansing for sin. Two of them are daily dispensing that medicine, indeed are medicine men themselves now. We call them Elim Pastors.

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

47 The Interpreter of Dreams (Genesis 40:8)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

GOD first spoke to Joseph by means of dreams, which made him aware of his future exaltation! It appears that Joseph was given the ability to interpret dreams. As the time drew near for the fulfulling of the promise of God, two new prisoners were brought to the prison and committed to Joseph's care, men who had important positions in Pharaoh's household, his chief butler and baker. The Lord used Joseph to interpret the dreams of the two prisoners and his words were accurately fulfilled. At that time the head butler seemed to forget Joseph, yet a seed had been sown which was to mature two years later.

The future is clearly known to the Lord our God, so it is good to commit our lives to Him because He knows the way and will guide us aright. He is able to reveal future happenings to us and has done this very thing by the word of prophecy (2 Peter 1:19). The lives of all people, great and small, are in His hand. When he determines, each one must pass into eternity to meet Him and render an account. The purposes of God do not always come to pass at the time or in the way which we would like, but they are certain and will mature when God wills. Joseph may have been disappointed when the butler forgot him, but the Lord had a greater purpose to fulfil. In similar strange ways He will prepare for the accomplishing of His word in our lives.

Editorial

EVENTS move so speedily in the Middle East that it is hard to forecast what may have eventuated there between the writing of this Editorial and its appearance in print. Two features are worthy of comment in any case, however.

Is it possible that the Western Powers were overtaken by surprise, that they did not know of the impending Arab attack on Israeli-occupied areas? It seems hardly likely that this could be the case, having regard to the apparent excellence of Israel's intelligence services. If the Western Powers knew, why did they keep quiet, at least in public? There is no way of knowing, but is it possible that we were so pre-occupied with Phase II and Phase III and all the rest that other matters were not of so much important? Who knows?

The other point is that oil and Suez yet again impress themselves on the world scene. The Arabs are undoubtedly using both as pieces in the terrifying game of international political chess. When you recall that before 1917 the whole Middle East was what might be called subjugated territory with small populations and that oil then had nowhere near assumed the vital signifance which it now has, it is truly astonishing to observe the tremendous changes since. It is no exaggeration to say that oil and Suez focus the world's eyes on the area. It is said that U.S.A. is now keen to see the Suez Canal reopened and that this can be done only if Egypt occupies both banks of the Canal. Whether this is so or not, the portents are that the new U.S. Secretary of State, the peripatetic Dr. Henry Kissinger, is seeking a shift of position vis-a-vis the Jews and the Arabs because of the threatened shortage of oil in America, complicated by the warning that some Arab nations might curtail or cut off oil supplies in deference to the Arab cause.

What shall we say to these things? To many Christians we have yet another reminder of the signs of the times. "Our redemption draweth nigh" must be the text continually upon our lips and in our hearts. The situation is fraught with awful possibilities, but we believe that our Saviour is coming back soon.

On the other hand, should not our prayer lives, our witness, our evangelism, indeed all our ministries for Christ be pursued with renewed vigour and determination?

That the time is short has been brought home to us yet again.

A Day to be Remembered

THE weather was not exactly ideal – showers mostly, some quite heavy – but still the young people came. Coach loads, car loads, some by British Rail. Denim jeans and pullovers plastered with stickers, that's how some were dressed; others were attired more formally. All wore smiles. From all over the North of England they came, from cities, towns, high-rise flats, semi-detacheds. Different backgrounds they had, but all came with one purpose – to meet with God! They were not to be disappointed.

The City was Bradford, the occasion was the Northern National Youth Rally, the date was September 29th. . . a day to be remembered!

The chorus "He is Lord" was sung as an act of worship by the crowd who had gathered. It brought a moment of heart-searching and a rich anointing which continued throughout the afternoon meeting. A surprise song item ("He abides") brought all the ministers to the platform in a spontaneous choral item. . . not exactly close harmony, rather a joyful noise! The finale to the afternoon came with force and conviction through the address given by Derek J. Green, the local Minister. "Hiding from God" was his theme. He encouraged all to "leave their personal hideouts" and come out into the open. I feel sure that many hearts responded.

Sandwiches, tea, cakes, a chance to chat with friends came before the planned march of Witness. Thunder, lightning and a torrential downpour threatened the march, but the storm passed over just before we were due to set off. So, with banners, cheers and hearty singing, that zealous group made their presence known in that City centre, taking the homeward bound public completely by surprise.

The evening programme in St. George's Hall was bright and relaxed. "Light up the Fire" was among the songs brought to us by the all-girl quartet from Bradford. Hazel from Blackpool and Richard from Newcastle were put in the witness box and interviewed by Pastor L.E. Lambert. An eye-opener on the need for daily personal devotions came through "Pirates", acted by some Bradford boys. Gwen Murray sang a number of pieces, all very pleasing to the ear and adding to the high note of praise within that great Hall. Pastor and Mrs. E.R. Corsie, together with those who came from London, quickened that warm feeling in our hearts toward the Lord Jesus when singing the truly inspiring song, "Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty". Our National Youth Director took up the theme of the day, "Meet with God", directing our thoughts to Amos 3:3. Hearts echoed their personal answer to the challenge given. A great day drew to a close.

With handshakes and goodbyes, friends separated, perhaps until next year. It was good to meet them all. It was great to meet with God and to have Him meet with us. Best of all though – Jesus is with us always!

KIRKINTILLOCH Pastor: T.S. Miles

"THE Lord thy God in the midst of thee is mighty". How well we have been able to prove this portion of God's Word during the past five months. The Lord has richly blessed us due no doubt to the faithful prayers of four or five dedicated sisters in Christ. With attendances as low as eight or ten breaking bread and very few more at the gospel Service, the few faithful ones were determined to pray through until victory came. Prayer changes things and God brought in the folks. We now are having thirty to thirty-five breaking bread and thirty-five to forty at the gospel service.

Our recent youth crusade was conducted by Pastor M.B. Smith of the A.o.G. Church, Fleetwood and thirty-five of their young people invaded Kirkintilloch, did doorbell evangelism during the days and took services on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights. Attendances were eighty-six, seventy and one hundred and six and we praise the Lord for seven souls saved.

We give the Lord all the praise for His goodness and look forward to greater things in Christ as we start our new Crusader meeting and plan for a winter ten-day crusade.

NEWQUAY Pastor: D.A. Lambelle

PERSONAL contact was rated as one of the main benefits of our Missionary Week and Bank Holiday Convention. For over a week we had Miss J. Caudell, Pastor and Mrs. A.I. MacInnes, and Pastor and Mrs. D.L. Mills and family, with Pastor Wigglesworth for both weekends. This meant that we heard much about the work of our missionaries. This personal contact was helped by the Missionary Exhibition arranged in the Minor Hall, when for three mornings our Missionaries met and talked with the people who came. It proved to be most profitable, in challenge, in informing people of the work, in being able to ask questions not normally answered from the pulpit and in personal witness to the unsaved.

As the Green Shield Stamp Mini-bus was with us also, we arranged a "Cadet Special" for our youngsters who had helped in collecting stamps. On the first Monday morning, forty-one turned up, which in itself was very encouraging.

The special services were also blessed as our Missionaries informed us of their work or ministered the Word. Numbers throughout were good. One man came for help and prayer after the ministry of God's Word. Several were particularly challenged. Many were encouraged from the ministry to a more vital interest in and concern for the work. The missionary offerings on the Bank Holiday Monday night reached over £42, bringing the total for the week to just under £133.

This was the first such special week, but God's blessing was apparent to those who ministered and to those who were ministered unto.

BROADSTAIRS Pastor: B. Grist

SIX candidates were baptised in water here during the holiday season. To mark our first baptismal service, it was held in the sea at Viking Bay, by kind permission of the local Council. The tide and weather proved to be very advantageous and ensured a large crowd. The service, at which each candidate testified, was conducted by Pastors B.C. Richardson and B. Grist. It was a joy to find so many Christians from varying Churches and places present at the event, including Pastor D.E. Edmonds of our Leigh-on-Sea Church (who kindly led in a dedicatory prayer), members of our Rochester Church, of Maidstone A.o.G. Church and of many local assemblies.

This marvellous event was followed by a tea, provided for a large party from Barking by the zealous ladies of our Assembly. A crowded gathering enjoyed the ministry of Pastor B.C. Richardson later that evening, along with the service and items provided by the Barking Church, a fitting culmination to the events of the day, another milestone of God's Gracious blessing upon us.

THE GIFTS OF THE SPIRIT—3

The Gift of Faith

(1 Corinthians 12:9)

by Charles J. E. Kingston

FAITH, the gift, is the first of the gifts of power because it is the basis of both the others; they cannot operate without faith. It is a gift to covet, indeed.

1. The gift of faith: not saving faith.

Faith in God and in Jesus, His Son, is essential to salvation, for "by grace are ye saved through faith", but saving faith goes before salvation whereas the gift of faith is not received until we are saved and baptised in the Holy Spirit.

2. The gift of faith: not faith, the fruit of the spirit (Galatians 5:22).

The same Greek word is used for faith in both lists of fruit and gifts, suggesting that the difference lies not in the quality of faith but in its quantity, so to speak. Faith, the fruit of the Spirit, rather faithfulness, is the outworking of the Holy Spirit in the believer's character. He will be faithful to God (not chameleon-like, changing his colour to suit his company) and faithful to others in keeping his word and undertaking his true obligations. Paul commends the Thessalonian Christians for their "work of faith". True faith will show by its works.

3. The gift of faith: for power in the spiritual realm

Theologians call it "the faith of miracles"; Weymouth translates it "special faith". It is a supernatural enduement whereby the recipient trusts God in such a way that God honours His Word.

Jesus once described the operation of this gift when Peter remarked on the dried-up fig-tree. God manifested creative faith when He spoke the word and it was done. "Have the faith of God", He said, and then explained that this faith was two-fold; faith in the heart linked to faith in the mouth. "Whosoever shall say unto this mountain. . . and shall not doubt in his heart. . . he shall have whatsoever he saith." (Mark 11:22,23).

4. Some Scriptural examples of the gift.

Abraham exercised the gift of faith for a son.

He was 100 years old and Sarah was ninety when Isaac was born to them. The Bible says that Abraham was "not weak in faith. . . he staggered not at the promise of God through unbelief; but was strong in faith, giving glory to God". God grant us the gift of faith so to believe God that human impossibilities become divine realities.

Elijah revealed this gift when he prayed down the fire.

Facing overwhelming odds, he remained calmly confident in God. He even gloried in making the thing he asked God to do naturally impossible by soaking the sacrifice and the wood with water. The quiet confidence of his prayer is very moving. What a contrast later. . . the gift of faith withdrawn, he fled for his life from Jezebel. Then, indeed, he was "a man of like passions as we".

Daniel exercised faith when in the den of lions.

When the king came in the morning to ask: "Is thy God able?", Daniel answered: "My God hath sent His angel and hath shut the lions' mouths. . .". Compare the divine comment: "who through faith stopped the mouths of lions" (Hebrews 11:33).

Peter healed through the gift of faith.

When the lame beggar was healed, Peter stated that the name of Jesus "through faith in His name" did it (Acts 3:16). The Holy Spirit always honours the Lord so that He delights to give faith to any who will exalt and glorify Him. Can it be that nowadays we do not have "faith in His name", or confidence that He is the same today as yesterday, so the Holy Spirit cannot dispense this gift of faith?

"The prayer of faith shall save the sick" (James 5:15).

In this promise God shows His will to give the gift of faith for the healing of the sick members of His Church. Why, may we ask, are not all healed? The answer is that we do not always pray the prayer of faith. Often we pray again and again. Then suddenly God gives the assurance that the prayer of faith has been prayed; the answer is on the way. Many, when praying with the sick, have been conscious at times of a special gift of faith; at other times they pray without that inner assurance that prayer has been heard.

The disciples' prayer should be ours, too: "Lord, increase our faith" (Luke 17:5). The gift of faith is not received by struggling nor by some magic formula for success. It is the supernatural manifestation of divine power by the Holy Spirit. Not always active in a person, it will spring up from the indwelling Spirit of God as He sees fit to use it and us.

The sharp Edge

Hebrews 4:12

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

"WHAT do you want that piece of wood for, Brian?"

"I am going to make something."

"Make something! Whatever can you make out of that?" Carol asked.

"A rocket!" said Brian. "I shall make a rocket!"

"How will you do that?"

"With my penknife, of course. I shall carve the wood into the shape of a rocket, then I shall paint it."

"Can I help you, Brian?"

"No, I want to do it myself. You can watch me, though."

Brian spread a sheet of newspaper on the kitchen table, opened his penknife and began chipping away at the block of wood, while his sister sat nearby watching him. After he had worked on his model for some time, Brian held it out for his sister to see.

"Does it look like a rocket?" he asked.

"Well," said Carol, "I would make the top more pointed if I were you."

"I think I will," said Brian, and he took up his knife once more to chip away a little more wood. At that moment the knife slipped off the edge of the wood and caught the top of Brian's finger. "Ouch!" he cried.

Mr. Brown hurried into the kitchen and examined his son's finger. "It's just a little cut," he said. "Let me bathe it and put a plaster on for you. In future, remember to be very careful when using your knife. The blade is very sharp."

As soldiers of Christ it is essential that we arm ourselves with the Sword of the Spirit, the Word of God, which is sharper than a sword and is our weapon against sin.

Sin separates us from God, so we need to be always on our guard against the bad things around us. Look to Jesus who died on the cross at Calvary, for, by His death, He set us free.

Our Bounteous God

by James McAvoy

CHRIST'S command, "Love your enemies", was reinforced by the fact that God makes His sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and He sends rain on the just and the unjust. The overflowing wealth of His loving-kindness and gentle forbearance is intended to lead men to repentance. His patience and his provision for sinful humanity were prophesied by David: "Thou hast ascended on high, Thou hast led captivity captive: Thou hast received gifts for men; yea, for the rebellious also" (Psalm 68:18). Those precious gifts for rebellious, backslidden revolters, the stubborn sons of darkness are superlative news from our sin-pardoning, reconciling Redeemer. Paul, one of the greatest trophies of grace of all time, comments that this was fulfilled when our Lord ascended in human form, exalted to the Father's right hand. The glorified, triumphant Conqueror over sin, death and Satan, received gifts for unlikely men (Ephesians 4:8).

The hesitant, astonished Ananias was commanded by the exalted Lord to visit this once murderous, blasphemous Saul that he might receive his sight and be filled with the Holy Ghost, for he was a chosen vessel "to bear My name before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel". "Though I formerly blasphemed and persecuted and was shamefully and outrageously and aggressively insulting (to HIM), nevertheless I obtained mercy. . . The grace of our Lord flowed out superabundantly and beyond measure for me" was Paul's testimony; "I obtained mercy for the reason that in me, as the foremost (of sinners), Jesus Christ might show forth and display all His perfect long-suffering and patience for an example to (encourage) those who would thereafter believe on Him"(1 Timothy 1:13-16, Amplified Bible). The strong man's house was raided and the chief of sinners was transformed into the chief of apostles. In Saul our Lord showed forth his perfect long-suffering and demonstrated His amazing grace for an example to us. Victorious monarchs, when they rode triumphantly in their chariots were attended by the most illustrious of their captives who were in chains, and the monarchs scattered their bounties among the soldiers and the spectators of their triumphs. So Christ Jesus, the celebrating Victor, led captivity captive and gave gifts to His wilful creatures.

A.T. Pierson in one of his hymns reminds us that: "He maketh the rebel a priest and a king; He hath bought us and taught us this new song to sing".

The variety of gifts are specified: "He gave some apostles,and some prophets, and some evangelists, and some pastors and teachers". These gifted men are derived from our bountiful King and are designed for mutual help in Christ's Church and for crusades among erring humanity. These special ministry gifts, "He HIMSELF appointed and gave men to us" (Amp.) from His heavenly throne with the intention of perfecting and fully equipping the saints for the work of the ministry. Paul wrote to the Thessalonians: "Esteem them very highly in love for their works' sake". "They are your spiritual leaders to keep you on the right path" (J.B. Phillips). "Recognize them for what they are, acknowledge and appreciate and respect them all, your leaders; hold them in very high and most affectionate esteem" (1 Thessalonians 1:12,13, Amp.).

These heaven-sent ambassadors should be more acknowledged for what they are and do and for what they teach, "being ensamples to the flock". Furthermore, they themselves should gratefully recognise each other's specific endowments. The wrong attitudes that prevailed in the Church of Corinth over personalities should be discouraged. The envious spirit that poisoned Cain must be avoided like the plague. "What hast thou that thou didst not receive?" asked the gifted apostle. "Be clothed with humility" Peter enjoins. The clothing with the garment of humility dispels any sense of superiority and pre-emminence. John the aged in the same chapter refers to two diverse characters, "Demetrius hath a good report of all men" and "Diotrephes, who loveth to have the pre-eminence among them". The Amplified Version vividly renders it: "Who loves to take the lead. . . put himself first. . . does not acknowledge my authority or refuses to accept my suggestions." Both these persons have their successors down through the ages. The remedy for such an arrogant, over-bearing manner was suggested by Paul: "Esteeming others better than themselves".

How often our self-pleasing mars the gracious work of God and hinders the progress of the message. In a hymn by Th. Monod we see the spiritual progress of God-pleasing saints. The last line of each verse ends "All of self and none of Thee"; "Some of self and some of Thee"; "Less of self and more of Thee"; "None of self and all of Thee".

John Wesley and George Whitfield of the Oxford Holy Club could have been of more mutual help had the sweet fellowship of their earlier days continued throughout their life-times. George became Chaplain to Selina Hastings, Countess of Huntingdon, but John and she did not work in harmony. There appeared to be a clash of personalities which did not help the spread of the Gospel in the eighteenth century.

When Saul, the greatest monument of grace, came to Jerusalem, the disciples were afraid of him. He spoke boldly in the name of Jesus and disputed against the Grecians, but they went about to slay him. When the brethren knew, they brought him down to Caesarea and sent him forth to Tarsus, his home-town. Luke does not tell us why he was sent away. We can use our own imagination! The inspired recorder continues: "Then departed Barnabas to Tarsus, for to seek Saul, and when he had found him, he brought him to Antioch." He and Saul taught much people there for a whole year. The disciples were first called Christians then. Barnabas was a "good man, full of the Holy Ghost and faith" adds Luke. What a tragic loss to the Early Church if Paul's graces and gifts had not been allowed to function. Apparently there could have been closer friendship and companionship even among some of the apostolic party than there was.

It is sad reading of the contention which arose over John Mark which finally separated Barnabas and Paul. From then on Barnabas, the son of consolation, fades from the sacred record. Years pass and Paul writes in his last Epistle: "Take Mark, and bring him with thee: for he is profitable to me for the ministry". Did Paul regret in his old age the deep cleavage with his former co-worker over Mark?

"Take us little foxes, the little foxes, that spoil the vines", warns Solomon in his Canticle. The flesh even in the best of men can have an unsavoury and costly resurrection.

"It takes more grace than I can tell to play the second fiddle well."

The dove-like spirit among Christ-appointed leaders enables them better to make His name glorious and gives Him all the pre-eminence. Between the varied gifts in 1 Corinthians 12 and 14 comes the choice epic in chapter 13.

The divine togetherness is a recurring theme in the Gospels and Epistles: "Ye also are builded together for a habitation of God through the Spirit" (Ephesians 2:22). In that fruitful atmosphere revival is fostered and maintained. A Pentecostal Bible expositor remarked: "If a gifted evangelist was in my Sunday evening service I would invite him to exercise his God-given skill". He recognised that distinctive varieties of talents were bestowed upon men by the bountiful, triune God for the spreading of the peerless message.

O may Thy members, mighty Christ,
Most earnestly desire,
Most covetously thirst once more,
Most fervently aspire
'Til each arises furnished new
With ministries of fire.

Take away the stony heart

by Sheila M. Smeeton

Born in Nottinghamshire, I was converted at a Methodist Youth Camp in August 1950. The following year I received a definite call to serve the Lord and began to preach on the Methodist Plan at the age of sixteen.

My husband was converted through the ministry of a Salvation Army open-air meeting and God eventually led us to train as Salvation Army Officers. We were commissioned as Officers in May 1957. We served in various centres, the final appointment being at Louth in Lincolnshire.

We were both filled with the Holy Spirit while we were at Louth and resigned our Officership rather than compromise on Bible truth. God wonderfully opened up the way into the Pastorate of the Spilsby Assembly of God. Since December 1970 we have been at Uttoxeter where we are very happy serving the Lord with our three children, Nigel (15), Kathryn (13), and Richard (9).

I have been writing the Women's Feature in Redemption Tidings since July 1972.

Sheila M. Smeeton

HOW can we view the state of the Church today and be unmoved?

I am often amazed at the hardness of my own heart and the hearts of my fellow-believers as we go through our religious rituals – yes, even Pentecostal rituals – with hardly a flicker of real spiritual vitality. Prayer meetings are in decay or defunct and by our very attitude to prayer we tell God that He is out of business or that we can manage very well on our own. The supernatural slumbers while faith lies sleeping or dead. Empty altars declare our lack of zeal for evangelism. With spiritual barrenness on every hand, our stony hearts cannot wring out one sob and our dry eyes refuse to weep. "Truth without enthusiasm, morality without emotion, ritual without soul, are things Christ unsparingly condemned. Destitute of fire, they are nothing more than a godless philosophy, an ethical system, and a superstition", wrote Samuel Chadwick. How much we need a renewal of divine life within us!

In Ezekiel's day God gave a wonderful promise of restoration and renewal to His people who were in captivity because of their backsliding and idolatry: "A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you: and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh. And I will put My spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my judgments, and do them" (Ezekiel 36:26,27). Though they had sinned, God was eager to restore them that His name might once again be honoured and revered. God would accomplish this renewal by a divine heart transplant – taking away the stony heart and giving them a heart of flesh. Hard hearts are unresponsive. The stony heart is completely unmoved in the presence of God and unblushing in the presence of sin, but not so the heart of flesh.

The heart of flesh is very sensitive to sin.

When Ezra discovered the lack of separation between God's people and the surrounding nations, he blushed to face God because of their sin (Ezra 9:6). Nehemiah wept because of the sins of his people, recognising and confessing that this was the cause of their distress. Do we ever weep over the tide of iniquity that is flooding our nation today and tremble at the terrible defiance of the Word of God? It is possible to become so hardened that the obscenities presented before us day by day no longer cause us to feel ashamed. If the unbeliever is to come under real conviction of sin, there must be a greater fear of God among His own. "Bend the Church, and save the people" was the motto of the Welsh revival. Ananias and Sapphira thought that they could act a lie, but God saw past all their pretence. If only we would call sin by its right name instead of excusing ourselves! The world would like to give the name of illness to such sins as homosexuality and like abominations, but do we not likewise try to cover up sins of the spirit? Our tempers may be excused as righteous indignation, our pride as simply a matter of superior taste, our stubbornness as strong convictions and so we could go on.

In The Price they paid, Norman Grubb includes this testimony of a missionary in India who, with others, was seeking revival: "While living alone I got desparate. God showed me first that my life was practically prayerless except for my anaemic morning and evening 'devotions'. I saw the need for intense and persistent intercession, so I gave myself to prayer. Then followed deep conviction of personal sin and backsliding. One thing after another had to come out, and my heart was completely broken as time after time I saw His wounds and heard His royal pardon."

The heart of flesh is quick to grieve over sin and seek the cleansing of the Blood.

I want a principle within
Of jealous, godly fear,
A sensibility of sin,
A pain to feel it near.

O may the least omission pain
My well-instructed soul
And drive me to the Blood again
Which makes the wounded whole.

This was Charles Wesley's plea for a heart of flesh. May it be ours!

The heart of flesh is also completely yielded to God's will.

C.H. Spurgeon wrote, "The natural will is cold, hard iron, which is not to be hammered into form, but the renewed will, like molten metal, is soon moulded by the hand of grace." Proverbs 21:1 tells us, "The king's heart is in the hand of the Lord, as the rivers of water: He turneth it whithersoever He will." The heart of flesh is sensitive to every breeze of God's Spirit and under the perfect control of the Lord. Is this a picture of your heart? Many Christians are in constant controversy with the Lord, instead of meekly submitting to His Word and finding the fulness of His blessing.

It was said of David Brainerd, "God could flow unhindered through him. The omnipotence of grace was neither arrested nor straightened by the conditions of his heart: the whole channel was broadened and cleaned out for God's fullest and most powerful passage, so that God with all His mighty forces could come down on the hopeless, savage wilderness and transform it into His blooming, fruitful garden."

Jesus, fill now with Thy Spirit,
Hearts that full surrender know;
That the streams of living water
From our inner man may flow.

The heart of flesh is a tender, compassionate heart.

William Booth had a deep compassion for the souls of man. Of his first close contact with the slums of London he wrote: "I saw multitudes of my fellow creatures not only without God and hope, but sunk in the most desperate forms of wickedness and misery that can be conceived. I went out and looked out on the wretched sons and daughters of debauchery and vice and crime who were all about me. . . I not only saw but compassionated the people sunk in the sin and wretchedness that I beheld and the everlasting woe that I knew must follow." Much later he said that he would like to finalise the training of all his officers with twenty-four hours hanging over Hell, to see its eternal torment.

We need a vision of their lost eternity in order lovingly to point souls to the Christ of Calvary. All the great soul-winners have been men and women of compassionate hearts. John Welch soaked his pillows in soul-travail. Praying Hyde pleaded with dry, choking sobs for the salvation of souls. Dr. J.H. Jowett said, "the gospel of a broken heart demands the ministry of bleeding hearts. Tearless hearts can never be the heralds of the Passion.".

Except I am moved with compassion,
How dwelleth Thy Spirit in me?
In word and in deed
Burning love is my need;
I know I can find this in Thee.

Is it not high time that we awoke out of our Laodician complacency? So often the words of Revelation 3:20, "Behold I stand at the door and knock", are taken out of their context and used as a gospel message when they really present the sad picture of Jesus knocking at the door of the self-satisfied Laodicean Church – a true picture of the Church in our day – seeking to stir it to an admission of its cold, hard, empty, poverty-stricken state. Many say that we must not expect revival in these last days before Christ's return for it is predicted that there will be a falling away and that the love of many shall grow cold. I do not believe that God has forewarned us in order that we may apathetically await its fulfilment, but that we might indeed be zealous and repent. Jesus is not coming to call a lukewarm, ragged remnant to Himself. If the Laodicean Church did not heed the call to repent and seek Christ in a new dedication, they faced the Lord's judgment and rejection. Jesus is looking for a Bride who has made herself ready, not a dormant Church, but a militant Church, terrible as an army with banners. He is ready to take away the stony heart and give us a new spirit if only we will come to Him. Let us make the following prayer our own:

Melt the hardness and the coldness,
Mould the life I yield to Thee,
Mark for pureness and for boldness,
Make Thy presence felt in me.

MEETING THE COUNCIL

JOHN MacInnes has gathered around him a fine group of Christian workers, some African some Indian, but all really zealous for the Master. They form the Council of the Elim Pentecostal Churches in Guyana. They meet once every two months for prayer and discussion. Len Magee and I are meeting them today. I would like you to meet some of them too. Please pray for them.

Picture of some members of the Council.

Elim's first Broadcast in Guyana

"This is the Day that the Lord hath made". Saturday, September 15th, from 9.15 a.m. to 9.45 a.m. is the scheduled time. We sit around the radio awaiting this exciting, historic event. Praise God, Elim is on the air in Guyana.

We have put a lot of prayer and planning into this effort. It might well be that in the economy of God our visit to Guyana has been delayed by about six weeks just so that Len and I could be here to help when this tremendous opportunity came. It might well be that God caused me to have a fair bit of broadcasting experience back home so that I could be on hand in Guyana "for such a time as this".

We spent some hours earlier in the week recording the service at the Guyana Broadcasting Service Studio. Now we wait. Has it been worth the effort and expense? "The time is 9-15", says the announcer, "This is your G.B.S. Station". A few strummed guitar notes and then over thirty youth voices burst into song, "Marching in chorus, Jesus before us, Elim Gospel workers are we. . .Jesus the Saviour. . .the Healer. . . Baptiser. . .Coming King". Surely, this is our message.

John MacInnes and Ron Jones making the first ever radio broadcast in Guyana.

Brother Mac introduces the programme and us. Len Magee sings and testifies. The Bristol City Temple congregation and New Creation singers take part with excerpts from their latest long-playing record and I have the terrific opportunity and responsibility of preaching the message. Let me just say that the Lord has helped us all. We'll be on the air again for the next three Saturdays and then Brother John MacInnes continues for forty-eight more Saturdays!

It will mean much hard work and planning for him. PLEASE PRAY! It will also take a lot of hard cash, for each broadcast costs £13 – but what an opportunity. Perhaps you would like to help. If so send your missionary gift to Leslie Wigglesworth (who is also the chairman of our Elim Radio Committee) and mark it "FOR THE GUYANA BROADCASTS" – send to Elim Missionary Secretary, P.O. Box 38, Cheltenham.

John and Gladys MacInnes, Len Magee and Sister Matmil listen to Elim's first broadcast.

A personal Note of Praise

We had almost completed the fifty miles journey to the leper colony at Mahicah when it happened. John MacInnes was driving, but not one of us realised what it was. After tea we came to start the car for the journey to our evening service. There was no problem, until we tried to get it to move. John Mac called in a mechanic whose immediate comment was: "IT'S A MIRACLE THAT YOU ARE ALIVE; THE TIE BAR HAS BROKEN!". If this had happened almost anywhere else on the journey we would probably have been involved in a most serious accident.

John, Len and I thank God for His good hand upon us.

Please continue to pray for John and Gladys MacInnes and the trhilling Elim work in Guyana. Soon Ian and Valerie MacInnes will be returning to the field and I am sure that they will greatly appreciate your prayers, too.

This terribly leprous lady recited for us—she has no fingers, is almost blind and has one leg off.

From T. H. Stevenson

I HAVE heard a Congregational minister, who has a Pentecostal experience, a large congregation, and a daily, early morning prayer meeting, declare that there are more born again believers per square foot in N. Ireland than in any other place in the world. Some appearances, as I may illustrate, would tend to make it seem so, but, when one considers, for example, that Birmingham alone has a bigger population than N. Ireland and that Yorkshire is larger than N. Ireland, possessing also several millions of people, I hesitate at Mr. Workman's statement. Nor can one overlook that more than one-third of N. Ireland's people are Roman Catholics. Statistics can deceive even the very elect!

With more certainty one might presume that there are more preachers in the Province of N. Ireland in proportion to the population than elsewhere. A member of the Christian Brethren complained to me that their Fellowship is over-run with full-time evangelists, which reminds me that several years ago another Brethren member informed me there were some ninety evangelists among them in Ireland. Most conclusive of all, it appears that Belfast, with a declining population, now of just over 400,000, of which a large portion are R.Cs, must have more churches than any comparable city. In bygone years I have portrayed details of Church Notices taken from The Belfast Telegraph and, in the current issue before me, the list is formidable (despite the fact that neither the powerful R.C. Church nor the Church of Ireland use the press media). I counted sixty-six Presbyterian, thirty-three Methodist, twenty-three Baptist, twenty-three Brethren, seventeen Pentecostal, elevan Congregational, together with Evangelical Presbyterian, Reformed Presbyterian, Free Methodist, Salvation Army, City Missions, mission halls, etc, making a total beyond 200.

We have recently witnessed the Presbyterian Church, the Church of Ireland, and the Methodists, the three largest groups, meeting in Eire for discussions with the R.C. Heirarchy. I wrote but a few months ago that, in The Famine and After, the writer declared that the ecumenical trend was the first cause of the present unrest and voilence. Dr. Ian Paisley led 200 protesters from N. Ireland to Eire to make a protest, which took place without incident, a protest against the said Protestant groups, whose tenets pronounce against the R.C. Church (particularly the Presbyterian and the Church of Ireland). Dr. Paisley and his ministers shout from the house-tops. All other evangelicals sincerely keep quiet. Observing the scene, and remembering the Reformers and the Convenanters compulsory involvement in a similar situation gradually formulating, I tend to think that the "quiet ones" must say something, sometime. There may be times when a united voice on particular issues may even save Dr. Paisley from speaking so loudly, and enable all to be heard more effectively. Whatever reservations I may hold, I must witness to the rapid growth of the Free Presbyterian Church, and the many new, lovely churches being erected, perhaps outgrowing all others altogether.

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

48 The Call for a Man of God (Genesis 41:14)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

TWO years after the release from prison of his butler, Pharaoh had a bad night, for he had two dreams which greatly distrubed him. He was aware that the dreams had a deep, ominous meaning, yet he could obtain no light and his wise men were unable to interpret the dreams. Pharaoh became very troubled. He realised that the dreams must have been a warning from God and that therefore only a man of God could help, yet it seemed that in all his kingdom there was no-one to declare the meaning. Then the butler remembered Joseph and told Pharaoh how the Hebrew prisoner had interpreted his dream and how the interpretation was exactly fulfilled.

We can see great distress and perplexity in the world around us; international, national, social, moral and personal problems of baffling complexity. The world is crying out for its wise men to interpret the problems and to find the answer, but politicians, scientists and psychologists do not know the remedy. The wise men of the world can observe the symptoms, but they cannot discern the real cause of the trouble. Behind the outward distresses of mankind lies a deep spiritual disease, sin. The conflict and unrest in the world are the outward manifestations of the spiritual war within men's hearts. Spiritual matters cannot be interpreted by the clever men of the world who are unable to take away sin and restore men to God. The things of God can be interpreted only by those in touch with God, those who are taught by the Holy Spirit. The world needs spiritual Christians who can show its need of Jesus Christ.

Willing to live honestly

Hebrews 13:18

FOUR hundred years ago Shakespeare wrote: "To be honest as this world goes is to be one man picked out of ten thousand". If honesty was such a rare quality in his day, how would our national bard react to today's low standards of honesty and integrity? We have only to read of the Poulson affair and of the questions now being asked concerning Spiro Agnew's integrity to feel saddened by the evidence as to the corruption in civic and political circles. Furthermore, the startling number of thefts by tourists in the West End of London this summer and the losses through stealing on the railways, in the docks, at the airports and throughout industry make us wonder if the people no longer believe that "honesty is the best policy".

There is a choice example of honesty and trustworthiness in the Bible: "Moreover they did not require an accounting of the men into whose hand they delivered the money to be paid to the workmen, for they dealt faithfully"(2 Kings 12:15, Amplified Bible). Godly King Joash supervised the repair of the great Temple of Solomon. It is fascinating reading to learn how the High Priest prepared a great chest and a collection was made. The money was handed to the supervisors of the work who paid the wages to the carpenters and masons. How delightful to discover such trust and integrity! Those in authority did not even demand a statement of account what a saving of time and paper!

If only such honesty were in vogue today, how much simpler and how much more satisfactory business transactions would be. Absolute honesty encourages mutual trust, but today these are sadly lacking and thus folk are suspicious and uneasy. In the early American settlements theft was almost unknown, for the pioneers brought with them the same rigid principles of honesty that they had previously maintained. A man in Mancoupin County left his waggon, loaded with corn, stuck in the prairie mud for two weeks near a frequented road. When he returned he found that some of his corn was gone, but there was money enough tied in the sacks to pay for what had been taken!

To some folk today such absolute honesty is ridiculous. Certainly the smart boys and spivs consider it to be weak. The general lowering of standards makes it easy to accept that dishonesty is the permitted norm. Let us all be on our guard against being conditioned to accept any doubtful practices in business or any temptation to indulge in personal dishonesty great or small. My heart warms to the sturdy statement by Paul in 2 Corinthians in the chapter dealing with financial matters. Referring to the funds gathered for the needy believers in Jerusalem, he wrote: "We are on our guard, intending that no one should find anything for which to blame us in regard to our administration of this large contribution. For we take thought beforehand and aim to be honest and absolutely above suspicion not only in the sight of the Lord but also in the sight of men" (2 Corinthians 8:20,21, Amplified).

It is obvious from these verses that Paul had high standards of honesty and was anxious that both in church affairs with fellow Christians and with outsiders, all money transactions should be scrupulously correct. We must do no less and, remembering the story of the unnamed men who were so upright when paying the Temple workmen, realise that, just as God marked their faithfulness and permitted it to be recorded for all time, so He will bless us as we "provide things honest in the sight of all men" (Romans 12:17).

Vacation Venture '73

VACATION VENTURE '73 was located in Jersey, Channel Islands. A group of thirty-five to forty young people from all parts of Great Britain came together under the supervision of Pastors L.E. Lambert and B. C. Vidamour. The Venturers came from as far away as Motherwell, Cardiff, and Macclesfield, and also from nearby places such as our sister Island of Guernsey. A fantastic time of blessing and refreshing was had by everyone, including the pastors.

We all stayed at "Bethel", a Girls' Brigade hostel in St. Clement, a few miles from St. Helier, the main town, and both the food, which was cooked by ladies of our Jersey Church, and the accommodation were excellent.

God's blessing was upon the entire holiday in a wonderful way, and was particularly evident in the morning prayer meetings from 8.30 to 9 a.m. In the first of these a Venturer was baptized in the Spirit. Praise the Lord! During the following week more than twenty others received the baptism at tarrying meetings, including some who were converted during the crusade.

Quite a number of both young and old came to the Lord in the nightly gospel rallies at which Pastor Lambert's inspired preaching of the gospel was supported by the singing of the Vacation Venture choir and various groups. "Spotlight on Vacation Venture" was a regular feature of these meetings giving each of us an opportunity to testify to the way in which God was blessing our lives. Singing was by two Jersey groups, "The Challengers" and "God's Ambassadors", and "The King's Messengers" and the Macclesfield group. In the second week soloist Kelvin Thomas was a great blessing to everyone.

The fellowship and unity between all the Venturers were really wonderful. We were friends before the first day was over. This fellowship was strengthened by the recreation times we spent together and also by the morning devotional sessions where we received instruction on such topics as door-to-door work, the gifts of the Spirit and children's evangelism. We also saw two excellent and faith-building films. These sessions were followed each day by practical experience in door knocking and children's work, which everyone agreed were a great source of enjoyment and strength, despite our knocking knees at the start. Many of those whom we personally invited to attend the gospel rallies did so.

Regular coffee bar evangelism was carried on also throughout the two weeks in the Cellar Bar, Hope Street, beginning at 9.45 p.m. This presented a real challenge, as it involved both going out on the streets to ask young people in and also personal witness to them in the coffee bar. It proved to be perhaps the greatest source of blessing, particularly when several of the young people contacted there gave their lives to the Lord. A nightly gospel spot involving witness box testimonies, lively music and a short, simple gospel message, were included in the coffee bar programme.

The Venturers and members of the Jersey Church took part in two marches of witness through the streets of St. Helier from Royal Square to the Elim Pentecostal Church, Stopford Road, prior to the Sunday evening services. These were wonderful opportunities to make a stand for the Lord Jesus and were the means of attracting much attention to the crusade.

Not only was Vacation Venture a chance to work

Scripture Union Portions — Notes by Gerald L.W. Ladlow

Monday, October 22nd — Lamentations 3:34-66

"Let us lift up our heart with our hands unto God in the heavens". (v.41).

IN Bible times the traditional attitude of prayer was to stand with hands outstretched with the palms turned upwards. Physical posture may seem to indicate that a person is engaged in prayer, but, unless the heart is lifted up to God, it is only a vain, empty exercise. Paul reminds us that we should "pray everywhere", but, as we do so, the hands uplifted must be holy hands free from "wrath and doubting" (1 Timothy 2:8), that is, "with no anger in the heart and no doubt in the mind" (Barclay).

I often say my prayers,
But do I ever pray?
And do the wishes of my heart,
Go with the words I say?

Tuesday, October 23rd — Lamentations 5:1-22

"Thou, O Lord, remainest for ever; Thy throne from generation to generation". (v.19).

IT is always good, when shocked at the passing of our great earthly rulers and leaders, or the collapse of kingdoms, the overthrow of governments and the reversal of policies, to look up and see the eternal God. All may change, but He remains ever the same. "I am the Lord, I change not" (Malachi 3:6). His throne is above all thrones and His governance is over all His creatures (Psalm 103:19). How satisfying it is to the believer to realise that, despite the seeming triumph of evil at the present time, "God is still on the throne".

Wednesday, October 24th — Psalm 74:1-23

"The foolish man reproacheth Thee daily" (v.22).

NOTE the progression in the attitude of the psalmist in his approach to God. In vv.1-11 he plies God with questions – why is evil allowed to triumph, why has God seemingly forsaken His people, why is deliverance withheld, etc.? In vv.12-17 he considers the greatness of God and His sovereign rule. In vv.18-23 he prays with mounting faith. The consideration of the character of God has turned a perplexed, doubting soul into a confident believer who realises that God is able to vindicate His own cause and that it is foolish of men to reproach God with seeming indifference (v.22).

Thursday, October 25th — Colossians 1:1-8

"The gospel. . .which bringeth forth fruit" (vv. 5,6).

ONLY a living plant can produce fruit and the quality and quantity of the fruit produced is the evidence of the strength of the life that is in the plant. The inherent power within the gospel produces the greatest fruit of all, for 1 Corinthians 13:13 declares that of all Christian graces the three that will abide are faith, hope and love, and Paul states here that these were the fruits produced by the gospel in the lives of the Colossians. Faith in Christ and love to the saints (v.4), the hope laid up in heaven (v.5) are always the results of the acceptance of the word of the truth of the gospel.

Friday, October 26th — Colossians 1:9-14

"We do not cease to pray for you. . .giving thanks unto the Father" (vv.9-12).

THERE is a vital connection between prayer and thanksgiving in all true worship in the New Testament. In v.3 notice that Paul commences with thanksgiving and then continues in prayer for these saints. Gratitude always intensifies the soul's dependence on God and prompts the cry for needed help. In vv.9-12 the order is reversed. Paul commences with fervent prayer for the saints and concludes by giving thanks to the Father. Earnest prayer will always glide into fervent thanksgiving. There can be no true prayer without thankfulness.

Saturday, October 27th — Colossians 1:15-20

"That in all things He might have the pre-eminence" (v.18).

IN the worship and work of the Church and in the life and witness of every believer this should be the ideal. When Jesus is given His rightful place as Lord, only what adds to His glory is permissible. As someone remarked: "Prior to the day of Pentecost, we are told that the Holy Ghost was not yet given because Jesus was not yet glorified and we can only know the full blessing of the gift of the Holy Spirit when Jesus is glorified". As we give Him the pre-eminent position in the Church we can experience true revival. As we allow Him to be Lord in our individual lives we will know true peace and happiness.

Sunday, October 28th — Colossians 1:21-29

"Christ in you, the hope of glory" (v.27).

THE term "mystery" is borrowed from the ancient religions in which certain rites and doctrines were communicated to the initiated. The Greek mysteries implied secrecy. The esoteric doctrines were muttered in the ear and the rites were carried out in deep obscurity. The Christian mystery is an open secret, namely, that, through the death of Christ, the sinner may be reconciled to God (vv.20,21) and the risen Christ may dwell within him. The certainty of our sharing in the glory of His heavenly kingdom is assured by the reality of His presence in us now.

The Gospel in a Nutshell

by A. S. F. Horne, Pastor of our Ipswich Church

A MONOGRAM is a character composed of two or more letters interwoven. Many who enter church buildings fail to see the gospel in the smallest possible compass, namely, in just three letters – I.H.S. Too many crosses are often on display; no wonder people believe in a dead Christ and fail to realise that He is alive, with all power to save the whosoever!

Here is our message – I.H.S., Jesus Hominum Salvator, Jesus Saviour of men. It takes a living Christ to be that! Between the faith that only receives Christ as a Teacher and that which acknowledges Him as Saviour, there is a gulf as wide as between Nicodemus who came by night for instruction and the thief upon the cross who cried out for pardon and received the gift of eternal life.

The gospel of Christ is not merely a higher, purer law. It does not come as God came to Moses with tables of stone to say, "Thou shalt and thou shalt not". Calvary is the consummation of Christ's work.

A physician wrote a treatise entitled, How not to be sick. It is a useful book for those who are not already sick, but he who is struggling with death needs cure, not prevention.

Moses told men how to avoid sin; Christ brought healing to those who were already sin-stricken. Moses told how not to wander from God; Jesus came to awaken in the heart reminiscences of home that might call the prodigal, famine-stricken and in a far country back home. Moses built the wall of the sheepfold; Jesus came to call to Himself those who had wandered beyond these walls, who were lost and dying in the wilderness. Moses warns of the fiery serpent; Jesus is the brazen serpent lifted up, that, whosoever is bitten and nigh to death, if they look on Him, they need not perish, but will have everlasting life.

Many offer a qualified homage to Christ as the Interpreter of the mystic language of nature and of life. The Delphic oracle must have its priests to interpret its blind sayings. Nature is an oracle whose revelations only the true poet comprehends. Belshazzar, startled by the mystic characters traced by a living hand upon the wall, demanded someone who could read the enigma to him. Nature is written all over with heiroglyphic language. Jesus gives to the unknown words their true significance. There never was such an interpreter as He. He is more than a Daniel to reiterate the warning which life and nature are perpetually intruding on our festal hours. He delivers Babylon from the doom that threatens it, erases with His blood the sentence, "Thou art weighed in the balance, and found wanting", and writes in lieu thereof, "There is therefore now no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus".

The gospel of Jesus Christ is more than a second law, more than a prophetic interpretation of the religion of nature. The cross of Christ is the hand of almighty God outstretched in answer to the despairing cry of man, already sinking beneath the tempestuous wave, "Lord save, or I perish".

To accept Christ as an interpretation only is not to accept Him at all. Only he received Jesus Christ who receives Him as his personal and only Saviour. In contrast with that ritualism which proffers man a priest and a ceremonial for his Saviour, and that rationalism which declares that every man must save himself, we are Foursquare Christians and have a Foursquare Gospel and put at our head I.H.S. – Jesus Hominum Salvator – Jesus Saviour of men.

He is also Healer, Baptiser and Coming King.

for Jesus, it was also a great holiday. In the afternoons and on our free days we went together to the beach taking advantage of the sunshine and heat to delight in swimming, sunbathing and rounders. There were opportunities for shopping and organized tours around the island in two buses owned by the Jersey Church, which gave marvellous service and echoed continually to the strains of "Hallelujah" throughout the holiday. Other delights included two great barbecues and a late night party, not to mention a host of other, less-publicized activities.

Vacation Venture was action-packed and exhausting, but it was also a wonderful time of spiritual strengthening and recreation, from which we all made many new friends in the Lord. The thanks of all the Venturers go to everyone who contributed to make it such a memorable fortnight, but particularly to Pastor Lambert and Pastor Vidamour for their endless sympathy, patience and sense of humour. It only remains to say with great feeling, "ROLL ON NEXT YEAR!".

Editorial

A COMMENTATOR on the Arab-Israeli conflict let drop a remark which can hardly be surpassed for cynicism. He said that the British Army must greatly regret the cancellation by the then Labour government of a delivery of a certain British tank and that the present government must share this regret. His reason was that a great opportunity had now been missed to test the effectiveness of this weapon in actual battle conditions.

It smacks of the Spanish Civil War of the 'thirties when Germany and Russia aided the opposing sides and tried out many of the techniques and weapons which were loosed upon the world in 1939. "Guernica" used to be an evocative name. This was the unfortunate Spanish town which suffered Nazi-type dive bombing and aerial blitzkrieg. The scale was minute compared with what all the combatant groups did to cities in the second world war, but the event was like a shock wave round the world at the time.

The questions and problems connected with war have divided Christians for years. On the one hand we have out-and-out pacificsts and at the other extreme charades like the so-called "blessing" of colours. The whole position is vastly complicated now, however. When countries become embroiled, everybody is in the front line. The last world war proved beyond doubt that large-scale pattern bombing of cities was regarded as a legitimate weapon. It has been said, for instance, that more people were killed in the air raids on Dresden than succumbed to the horror of the atomic bomb on Hiroshima. Once a nation is involved, women, children, and old people stand at risk. It is no longer just sending out "the boys" to a distant front; danger lurks all too menacingly above our very centres of population, often many miles from the scene of actual conflict.

It is alltooterribly complicated now by the possession by an increasing number of nations of atomic-type weapons and those ultimates in sheer, diabolical horror, inter-continental ballistic missiles, and the like.

Against such a desperate background it seems beyond description that strategists should be deploring the fact that their weapons cannot be tested because of a political decision which prevented their sale.

Do they not realise that the whole world is like a keg of gun powder living in fear of some mad fool dropping a spark?

"Pray for the peace of Jerusalem".

"Surely I come quickly. Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus".

Church Reports

WELLS Pastor: T. McGuicken

A GOOD number were gathered at our Wells Church for the induction service of the new Minister, Pastor T. McGuicken, his wife and family. Friends from Weston-super-Mare and Bristol joined with the people of Wells to welcome the new minister. Pastor T.J. Broomhall gave the charge to both Minister and Church. A word of welcome was given to the new Minister on behalf of the West of England Presbytery by Pastor R.J. Teague. There was a great sense of the presence of the Lord as Pastor and Mrs. McGuicken knelt and Pastors Broomhall, Teague, Ritchie, and Upton, with the brethren of the Wells Church, laid hands on them and committed them to the Lord in prayer.

We look forward to a rich time of blessing in the Lord with our new Minister, trusting and praying that souls will be won for Him.

R. THORNE

HEREFORD Pastor: R. Griffiths

WE praise God for the many blessings that attended our convention services. The Saturday evening was a foretaste of further blessing as Pastor J.T. Bradley so ably expounded to the Word of God. Singing items were rendered by our Crusaders and Male Voice Choir. On the Sunday we had a feast of good things, mainly from the Psalms and the Epistle of Romans.

What a day we had on August Monday! The Lord moved among us as backsliders were restored and others re-dedicated themselves to the Lord. Pastor J.B.D. Ritchie ministered with Pastor Bradley and his ministry was also very much appreciated. Singing items brought much blessing to all. Recitations were given by two sisters. A full tea was provided. We are grateful to all who helped.

WESTCLIFF–ON–SEA Pastor: J.J.B. Hounsome

THE Church was filled to capacity at the commencement of our Bank Holiday Convention. The Chelmsford Choir thrilled us with their singing. Our Pastor convened the meeting and Pastor George N. Backhouse, who is no stranger to Westcliff, exhorted us to follow definite prayer with definite action. We were again blessed on the Sunday when Pastor Backhouse ministered both morning and evening. There were musical items from four young members of the Sunday school and our soloist was Elaine Burley.

Monday evening came all too soon. Pastor W.R. West opened the meeting with prayer, Pastor A. Nicholson read the Scriptures and Pastor D.E.Edmonds told us something of the moving of God at the recent Youth Camp in Maldon where thirty young people between the ages of ten and fourteen gave their hearts to the Lord Jesus Christ and many were baptised in the Holy Spirit. Mrs. Wilson sang and then Pastor Backhouse gave his closing address. He spoke of how God is continually speaking to us by one means or another.

The services were a source of real blessing and we thank all who took part and helped to make this convention memorable and precious.

RYDE Pastor: I.R. Hall, B.D.

THE Field Superintendent, R.B. Chapman, was the preacher at the recent Pastor's Fourth Anniversary at Ryde. His forthright, inspiring ministry brought much blessing to the large congregations throughout the weekend. Mrs. Chapman ministered in song with her usual excellence. Other singing items were contributed by the Church quintet and quartet.

At the opening service Mr. H.G.W. Feasey, the Church Secretary, paid tribute to the four years of blessing under Pastor I.R. Hall's ministry and to Mrs. Hall's gracious support and, as a token of appreciation, presented them with an electric toaster on behalf of the Church. Pastor Hall in reply emphasised that all that had been accomplished was the Lord's doing in response to the congregation's prayerful support.

H.G.W. FEASEY

PONTYPRIDD Pastor: R. Hughes

THE Convention is always a highlight of our Church year and is always approached with prayer and careful preparation. This year, as the event drew near, God was pleased to pour out His Spirit on the Assembly and week after week it was our joy to see sinners saved, backsliders restored and a spirit of consecration growing in all the departments of the Church. Complete families have come to God and a good number of believers have been filled with the Spirit. When that Pentecostal veteran and founder member of the Assemblies of God, John Carter, was joined by Elim's President, John Lancaster, scholarly, Spirit-directed ministry delivered under a rich anointing built up the saints and increased the blessing. We not only saw our Church filled and a near capacity crowd in the Town's main public hall, but we also saw sinners saved and one young lady filled with the Spirit at the end of one of the meetings. Musicians and members added their talents to make this an occasion to remember, but most of all we thank the Master who answered our prayers with his blessing (Luke 6:38).

ROMSEY Pastor: P.G. Parsons

OUR convention weekend started with a team of workers at the church early on the Saturday morning trimming hedges, cutting grass, and cleaning the grounds of the church.

The anointing of the Holy Spirit was upon the services from the commencement on the Saturday evening. All the items blended beautifully. One of Mrs. Joyce Colbourne's solos, "Amazing Grace", was followed by a stirring testimony by Pastor J. Osman. He told how one rather reserved Christian had won many for Christ recently, some of these new converts themselves becoming successful soul-winners.

Our convention speaker, Pastor F.A. Hodge, powerfully presented God's Word. The high standard of ministry in word and song (by various singers) continued over the weekend.

The Romsey Advertiser records: "On Bank Holiday Monday the convention moved to the Baptist Church which was kindly loaned, the Elim Church being too small for the large congregation. In the afternoon the balcony had to be used to accommodate the overflow from the main church, and in the evening almost every seat in the entire church was occupied. The enthusiastic singing from the crowded church could be heard far up the street. In the final meeting a lady from Canada gave a glowing report of a miraculous healing from congestion of the lungs, also a marvellous answer to prayer regarding a financial need. Pastor Hodge's closing address was on Peter."

RUGBY Pastor: J. Whitehead

MANY visitors helped to fill the church when Christians from local Elim Churches and from other denominations came to welcome Pastor John Whitehead and his wife as they took up their duties as Pastor. Greetings were read from Pastor D.C. Lewis, now in Colwyn Bay, Pastor Greenaway of the local Hillmorton Mission, and Pastor I.R. Moore, until recently of our Clapham Church where Pastor Whitehead was Assistant Minister.

The charge to the Church was given by Pastor D.E. Dean and to the new Pastor by Pastor R. Morrell. Rugby Senior Timbrel group rendered musical selections and two young men from Coventry sang duets. Pastor J.M. Cuthbert and R. Pearson joined their colleagues in laying hands on our Pastor – a moving scene.

After a few well-chosen remarks from their new Pastor, the Rugby members looked forward to Sunday with expectant hearts. They were not disappointed.

On his first Sunday, admittedly one of the most difficult in a minister's life, Pastor Whitehead lead his people through a busy, joyful day of praise, prayer and service, with the Lord obviously in charge. One lady responded to the appeal for which we praise God.

NEWS FROM NEW ZEALAND

CHRISTCHURCH Pastor: G.T.S. Dunk

AT another baptismal service we rejoiced to witness this act of dedication by two of our young people, Carol Guerin and Louise Duncan. We have been greatly encouraged by the attendances at our Tuesday night Bible Studies, especially since our Pastor commenced his series on "The Tabernacle", with scale model and diagrams. The upwards of fifty present each night have rejoiced in the wonderful truths and types.

We are planning extensions to the Church, primarily to cater for our ever-expanding Sunday school and youth activities. Since it was opened seven years ago the one hall has served for all activities and this is becoming inadequate. Pray with us that the building permit application and the ways and means will be supplied.

WELLINGTON Pastor: M.J. Frith

WE are rejoicing in the work done in several lives and in the great awareness of God's presence in our services. Pastor Dal Walker shared details of his work in Indonesia. Dr. Bruce Thomson and his wife brought the needs and blessings in Ghana before us. We thoroughly enjoyed a visit from Mr. and Mrs. Harry Harris. Mr. Harris, a former Deacon, ministered very acceptably in the Communion service. It was a thrill to have a team from the Nurses' Christian Fellowship to take a service. These nurses, full of blessing of God, were a great inspiration and blessing to us all. The latest Fact and Faith film, "The ultimate Adventure" was very good.

The response during the month to the needs in Japan was a real thrill. A record $126 was given for missionary support and an equally record $74 for the furlough fund.

BLENHEIM Pastor: I.W. Bilby

ATTENDANCE at our Sunday evening services has been between forty-five and fifty and much blessing has been reported. News of remarkable healings continues to filter back to us. Others have found a new joy in their Christian experience. Bible Teaching Seminars have started with a series on the Gifts of the Holy Spirit and will continue with studies of the Fruit of the Spirit and then topics such as guidance, finding your ministry, prayer and faith. The two seminars held so far have seen about thrity people in attendance.

It was a joy to have Pastor and Mrs. Dunk at our Sunday services recently. Mrs. Dunk's ministry in poetry and Pastor Dunk's rich unfolding of the Word brought us much blessing.

NELSON Pastor: L. Covic

THE emphasis has been on youth. The Friday night outreach has been blessed of the Lord with growing numbers and decisions for Christ. Some sixty or more teen-agers between eleven and eighteen years old have been coming each week to the "Crossroads". The varied activities have proved very popular with the young people and at times our hands have been full trying to handle the numbers present. Two special evenings were also held in our hall. The first night, the film "The Son Worshippers" was screened. The second night, the new Salvation Army rhythm band and singing group ministered. The challenging testimonies presented on both occasions touched many hearts and two young lads gave their hearts to the Lord. This is the first fruits after four months of witnessing.

We rejoice in the spiritual growth evident in many lives among the young people attending the Youth Club each week, when the main emphasis is Bible study.

Jim Hurn, Dean of Faith Bible College, Tauranga, led a seminar on Evangelism recently, and he was the guest preacher at our morning service where he brought a very timely challenge on the need for a teachable spirit. Later Mr. Hurn spoke to some sixty young people from the Assembly of God, Waimea Fellowship and Elim at a buffet tea in our Hall. In the evening the film "His Land" was screened to a very appreciative congregation of eighty. A combined missionary service was held at the Apostlic Church to see the film "Zaire River" from the Zaire Evangelistic Mission.

News from Japan

FRANK and Noeline Bickerton from our New Zealand churches report:

Pastor Usuda of Tomoika, where a crusade was recently conducted, has advised that, following the crusade, seven new adults are attending regularly and there are now over ninety children in the Sunday School. Praise the Lord!

At Itsukaichi there have been encouraging attendances lately. The people are studying prophecy and water baptism and there is a good spirit in the meetings. Pray that those who have not been baptised will soon be led to take this step.

At the Joy Bible Camp, where Frank ministered for two weeks in July, a good number surrendered their lives to Christ. By the time each camp finished there had been some tremendous changes and there was a complete new attitude.

IF you are emigrating to New Zealand or visiting that country your fellowship will be greatly appreciated by our Churches there. Enquiries will be welcomed by the Superintendent Minister, Pastor G.T.S. Dunk, 146 Grahams Road, Bryndwr, Christchurch 5, New Zealand. If you are going to other areas you may be helped by writing to one of the following:

Pastor M.J. Frith, 51 Hataitai Road, Hataitai, Wellington 3, New Zealand;

Pastor I. Bilby, 6 Gascoigne Street, Blenheim, New Zealand;

Pastor L. Covic, 3 Lemair Avenue, Stoke, Nelson, New Zealand.

THE GIFTS OF THE SPIRIT—4

The Gifts of Healing

(1 Corinthians 12:9)

by Charles J. E. Kingston

GOD heals our bodies on three levels:

By natural healing. It has pleased God to place in our bodies the powers of self-healing; a cut will begin to heal itself. Doctors work in this realm. A doctor can say: "I dressed the wound. God healed it."

By spiritual healing. Healing on this level is governed by spiritual laws of which faith in God and confession of sin are both requisites. Healing in this realm is especially for members of a church fellowship, who are commanded to call for the elders to pray with them (James 5:14, 15).

By supernatural healing. The "gifts of healing" operate on this level. These are given in the sovereignty of God, the Holy Spirit, who divides as He wills (1 Corinthians 12:11), and are specially for the preaching of the gospel. Jesus sent His disciples out to preach and heal and the Early Church found that healings attracted people to hear the gospel. The late W.F.P. Burton stated that progressive work among the tribes in Africa was brought about by miracles of healing in the majority of cases.

1. The Gift explained

Scripture calls it the "gifts of healing", the only one of the nine gifts which is, in itself, a plurality of gifts. The one to whom this gift is given is able to bestow the gift of health. Thus Peter said to the lame man: "Such as I have, give I thee: In the name of Jesus. . .rise up and walk" (Acts 3:6). It seems that at times the Holy Spirit moves especially in the healing of one particular disease. Some years ago a blind man in Grimsby, called George Evison, was healed of blindness and received the gift of new eyes. Through his testimony fifty-seven other cases of blindness were healed.

2. The Gift is not for the healing of All

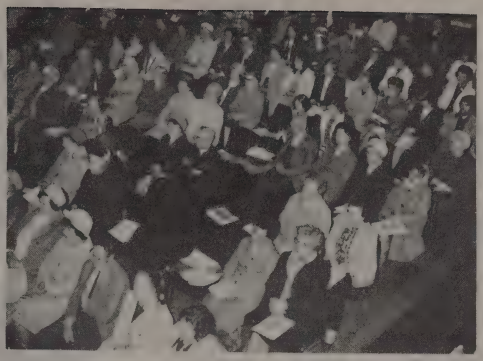
The possessor of this gift will not necessarily be able to heal all, indiscrimately. The late Fred Squire, much used of God in healing, said that he had prayed for hundreds of sick people. Sometimes there was no healing; at other times the power of God came down and many were healed. Even Jesus did not heal all. Though there were many blind, halt and withered at Bethesda, only one was healed. In Elisha's day there were many lepers in Israel, but only one, and he a foreigner, was healed. In the Corinthian Church, though this gift was in evidence, there were many "weak and sickly" among them. Then, as now, some were healed and some were not. If the conditions for healing are not fulfilled, then the Holy Spirit cannot work.

3. Conditions for this Gift to be manifested

The prime condition is faith in Christ's power and willingness to heal. His first question to those who came to Him for healing was: "Believe ye that I am able to do this?". His power to heal was limited by unbelief (Matthew 13:58). Lack of faith is a barrier which even Jesus did not break through.

Unconfessed sin is a spiritual hindrance. If sickness is caused by our failure to judge ourselves (1 Corinthians 11:29-31), then, before healing can come, there must be self-examination and the confession of any sin the Holy Spirit reveals (see James 5:15, 16). Many Christains cannot find healing, because they cannot find it in their hearts to forgive themselves or to forgive another who has wronged them.

The sovereignty of God. God is and must be sovereign in His gifts. Not every illness is brought on by sin, nor is unconfessed sin always the reason for non-healing. Jesus made this clear in the case of the man born blind (John 9:1-3). God's will, God's works, must be made manifest in us and our healing may be delayed that His purposes may be fulfilled. Catherine Marshall tells how she sought healing from tuberculosis, was rebellious at God for allowing her to be ill, and could not recover until she surrendered and told the Lord she was willing to die if that were His will. Then healing came.



4. The Purpose of this Gift

To deliver from Satanic oppression. All sickness, like all sin, came originally from Satan and the gifts of healing are to deliver from Satan's power those who have been attacked in their bodies. Jesus healed the woman who had been bound by Satan for eighteen years. Peter sums up Jesus's healing ministry as healing "all that were oppressed of the devil". Though there are evil forces abroad today, "greater is He that is in you than he that is in the world".

To prove that Jesus is alive. There is nothing like a miraculous healing to prove that God is not dead, that Christ is alive. Modern materialism disbelieves the reality of the supernatural, but, when a lame man walks and leaps and praises God, they can "say nothing against it" (Acts 3:8;4:14).

To bring glory to God. When Jesus forgave his sins and healed the palsied man, the people "glorified God, saying: We never saw it on this fashion" (Mark 2:12). When God heals, it is that we may glorify Him, not the human channel by whom the gift came.

Crusade at Alloa, Scotland

Part of the audience at the Festival of Praise at Alloa.

Platform party at the Alloa Crusade. Peter Smith is leading the singing. Front row (seated): Mrs. Carol Horner, Pastors R. Lighton and T. J. Stevens, Mrs. Pat Mills and Ken Legg.

THE Town Hall, Alloa, was the venue for the revival and Divine healing crusade conducted by Richard Lighton and party.

Prior to the Crusade, almost 5,000 handbills were given out by the team helped by young folk from local churches. Newspaper coverage was excellent and articles referring to the Crusade were given some prominence.

It is always the hope in such a venture that the hall will be filled and that God will work in mighty power. In Alloa, God demonstrated His own sovereignty. Numbers varied from 30 to 140, but each night, the Lord graciously saved souls. Most of the forty-seven who decided for Christ were local people and our prayer is that God will establish them in the faith that the Fellowship in that area will be strengthened.

On the opening night we were joined by the Kilsyth Church of God Youth Choir under their conductor, Mr. John Mitchell. Their singing was a great blessing. A Festival of Praise was arranged for the following Saturday and good numbers attended to hear Mrs. Pat Mills sing and testify. Two singing groups from our Greenock Church took part and a feature of the evening was the playing of the bagpipes by Gordon Allan. Needless to say, "Amazing Grace" was on the programme! The final Saturday of the Crusade saw the Pioneer Choir from Stirling Baptist Church singing the gospel very acceptably.

Many came for prayer for healing and the Lord touched them.

The musical side of the team was Colin Smith at the piano and Walter Clark on the Wurlitzer. Their ministry in music was commented on several times.

Throughout the Crusade, Ken Legg was able to be present and he is now staying in Alloa to pastor the flock. Our prayers are with him that God will richly bless his follow-up work and enable him to strengthen the Church.

We thank God for His faithfulness in honouring His Word and in saving precious souls.

PETER SMITH.

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

49. Joseph interprets Pharaoh's Dreams (Genesis 41:25)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

THE fact that Joseph was a prisoner did not deter Pharaoh. He summoned him to appear before him at once and told him of his remarkable dreams. They had been an insoluble riddle to Pharaoh and his wise men, but the solution was immediately made clear to Joseph by God, who gave the dreams. Joseph described to Pharaoh the years of plenty and the years of famine which were to come. Joseph was not only an interpreter of dreams, however; unlike visionaries and fatalists, he was a practical man with his feet on the ground. He gave sound advice to Pharaoh as to how he should prepare for and meet the coming crisis in Egypt.

In the days of Pharaoh only a handful of men were concerned to understand the truth. The majority of people in Egypt and Canaan went about their everyday affairs unconcerned. and ignorant concerning the coming disaster. The majority of people today are likewise unconcerned and ignorant. There are some, however, who are deeply troubled and perplexed as they see human solutions come to nothing. They feel that events in the world around them are of ominous, threatening significance. They face the future with deep foreboding. To such people the Christian can declare the meaning of what is happening, showing the sinister power of evil which is driving mankind toward disaster and the judgment of God that will come upon a lawless age, but also declaring how through Christ they can prepare to meet God and how by divine mercy they can be saved from the judgment to come.

Saying and Doing

Matthew 7:21

by F. Lavender

THE apostle Paul made a very clear statement in Romans 14:9 concerning the lordship of Jesus Christ. He showed that the divine purpose in the death, resurrection and risen life of the Lord Jesus was to make Him Lord of all. Nowhere does Scripture suggest any possibility of salvation by a person using the right words. The condemnation of Israel was that they honoured the Lord with their lips, but that they were far away in their hearts. If the Lord is to accept a person, their heart and will must be behind their words. The Bible shows that there are three steps of obedience required of anyone who would enter the kingdom of God. Apart from them you can never become a true Christian.

First, God's Word says that you must repent of your sin. The very first command of the Lord Jesus to men was: "Repent and believe the gospel" (Mark 1:15). You must recognise the fact of your sin and of your inability to save yourself or to please God by your own efforts. It is strange how folk resent the thought that they cannot save themselves from sin. If a man was sick with a serious disease and his doctor said that he was sending him for treatment by an eminent specialist, the man would not resent it and say: "Why can't I treat it myself? I will perform my own operation!". Yet when a faithful messenger of God says that a person is ill with the deadly disease called sin and that Jesus Christ is the only Specialist capable of treating the disease, they are angry and say: "I will treat it myself, I will make myself better!".

You must also be ready to forsake your sin, just as you would want to be rid of a cancer from your body, so the second step that you must take is to receive the Lord Jesus as the Saviour anointed by God to take away your sin (Matthew 1:21).

Some folk are very conscious of their sin, but they will not receive Jesus as their Saviour. In the Old Testament we read of a leper named Naaman; he certainly knew that he was sick. He wanted to be healed, but he was upset when he was told to dip himself seven times in what he thought was the muddy river Jordan. He thought of the rivers of his native Syria, Abana and Pharpar, and considered that they were much cleaner than Jordan,but he remained a leper until he obeyed God and washed in the despised river. Even so, people want to find their own way of salvation – good works, church attendance, charity, etc., but God says that Jesus is the only way by which men can come to Him (John 14:6) and that there is no-one else able to save them (Acts 4:12). He died for your sins and rose to deliver you from guilt (Romans 4:25). The old hymn says truly:

> There is a fountain filled with blood,
> Drawn from Immanuel's veins;
> And sinners plunged beneath that flood,
> Lose all their guilty stains.

Unless you are cleansed in that fountain you will remain a sinner. To reject the Lord Jesus is to condemn your own soul to eternal ruin.

The third step to salvation is to crown Jesus Lord of your life. When Saul was converted on the road to Damascus he asked at once: "Lord, what do You want me to do?". He gave himself immediately to the lordship of Jesus Christ. The Bible says that, when we become Christians we are no longer our own, we are bought with a price – not silver nor gold, but the precious blood of the Lord Jesus. Because you have been bought at such cost, you are now to find true, lasting pleasure in doing the will of the Lord. The Scripture says: "If you confess with your mouth Jesus as Lord, and believe in your heart that God has raised Him from the dead, you will be saved" (Romans 10:9).

Do you recognise your sin and your inability to save yourself? Are you willing to receive Jesus Christ as your Saviour? Will you give your life to the lordship of Jesus Christ and live for the glory of God? When you humbly and gladly say: "Yes!" to all three questions, then you will be a true Christian, a child of God with your name written in His book of life.

Will you now say "Yes!" to Jesus?

CHILDREN'S CORNER

My nice soft Pillow

Matthew 11:28

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

"THANK you for letting us stay up to finish the jigsaw, mummy."

"You have made a nice picture, children. Now you must drink your milk and get ready for bed. It is way past your bedtime."

"I feel a bit sleepy now," said Carol.

"So do I," said Brian, as he stifled a yawn.

The children put on their pyjamas, got into bed and began to say their prayers: "Lord Jesus, thank You for our happy day. Please bless mummy and daddy and help us to be always loving and kind. Thank You for our work and our play and. . .".

". . . And thank You, Lord Jesus, for my pillow. Amen," added Brian.

"Pillow?" exclaimed his sister.

"Yes," said Brian. "We always thank the Lord Jesus for our work and our play, but we never think to thank Him for our rest, do we? Well, a pillow is for rest, so I am thanking the Lord Jesus for my pillow. Don't you remember the story our Sunday school teacher told us? Miss Jones told us how Jacob had cheated his brother of his inheritance. Esau was furious when he learned what his brother had done and he planned to kill him."

"I remember," said Carol. "Jacob fled for his life and eventually, tired and weary, he lay down to rest. He spread some leaves on the ground and used a stone for a pillow, but it was uncomfortable beneath his head and his guilty conscience kept him awake."

"That's right," said Brian. "Miss Jones said that, because of his sin, Jacob could find no rest. Miss Jones said that it is important for our souls to find rest, too, and she spoke of the perfect rest that is enjoyed by all who love and follow the Lord Jesus. When we confess our need of Him, our burden of sin is lifted and we receive a perfect and lasting rest. I remember the text we learned in Sunday school, too!: 'Come unto Me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest'.

"I remember where the text is found, too," said Carol. "It is in Matthew 11:28".

"Goodnight, Carol!"

"Goodnight," said his sister. "Thank you for my pillow too, Lord Jesus. Amen."

Tenth Pentecostal World Conference, Se
Ko

PENTECOSTAL WORLD CONFERENCE SEOUL

2,300 men and women surrendered to Jesus Christ during the World Pentecostal Conference in Seoul. 65,000 people attended the final Rally. 8,000 shared communion in the Full Gospel Church. Tremendous Gospel sermon televised to the whole of Korea, both North and South. The whole of the Conference was on radio daily. G. Wesley Gilpin delivered a powerful and masterly message on the anointed Word. P. S. Brewster preached before the Supreme Judge and Judges of Korea and spoke to the businessmen of Korea. P. S. Brewster invited to stay on and preach throughout Korea. The tenth World Pentecostal Conference was an historic one, with representatives and delegates from thirty-seven countries.

As I saw it . . . by G. Wesley Gilpin

OVER 2,000 delegates from thirty-seven countries gathered in Seoul, S. Korea, during the third week in September for the tenth World Pentecostal Conference. Travel from the various countries was a combination of individual planning and group organisation. The party from Great Britain, led by Fred H. Coleman, left London Airport on Wednesday, September 12th, and flew via Zurich, Athens, Bombay, Bangkok, Manila and Tokyo. After a three-day stop in Japan, the party rendez-voused with the assembling groups in Seoul and were housed in central hotels in the City. The Conference was hosted by the Korean Pentecostal Church led by the talented Dr. Yonggi Cho, whose leadership over the brief period of twelve years has played no small part in the formation of many Full Gospel Assemblies throughout the country and in the erection of an auditorium seating in all 10,000 people. Transport from the City conveyed delegates each morning to this New Full Gospel Church at Yoido (a suburb of Seoul) and each morning from 9.30 to 1.30 saw 7-8,000 meet for worship and ministry in this delightful modern building, with every facility for housing and catering for large crowds. In the evening, masses of people from all over the area totalling up to 30,000 met in the Hyochang Stadium. Night by night, it was a scene never to be forgotten when, as the overseas delegates took their places on the covered platform and adjacent area, the local people crowded to the concrete terraces and sat in orderly fashion on the ground, row by row inside clearly defined areas (with aisles and adequate spacing). Each evening began with spontaneous singing taken up and led by competent leaders. Favourite songs were: "The Comforter has come", "Showers of Blessing" and "Heavenly Sunshine" and how these Koreans can sing! It has to be heard to be believed. The alacrity with which these vast crowds rounded into worship with hands uplifted to heaven when the opportunity was given (and this is a feature of Korean services for which the people eagerly wait) can only be compared to the "fly past" of a squadron of jet planes. Biblical description would be in the language of Revelation: "as the sound of many waters and the voice of mighty thunderings". They are equally obedient to the bell that signals "enough" and all settle down for ministry, punctuated when called for by thunderous "Amens" and "Hallelujahs".

The theme of the Conference was, "Anointed to preach". This was ably and forcefully presented at the opening service by the Chairman of the Conference. Rev. Tom Zimmerman. The scope of ministry on this theme is to be found either directly or by implication in Luke 4:18. Morning and evening the invited speakers developed their assigned subjects, preaching in English, interpreted by various professional people, who surround the leader in abundance. The emphasis in the stadium services was evangelistic. There were long sermons and short ones, but each night the credit must go to Dr. Cho, who, when he rose to his feet to emphasise the keynote of the message just given, pulled in the net in a masterly fashion until night by night 300-500 stood and then moved (many running, some with little ones on their backs) to the area in front of the platform. The way of salvation, and in some instances encouragement to seek the baptism in the Spirit, were briefly explained. Women played an important part in the organisation. Along with the men they were strategically placed as counsellors and ushers throughout the great concourse of people. The offering was a feature in itself: collecting bags like butterfly nets on the end of rods were used and it was unique and impressive to see the streams of collectors return to "base" with the gifts of the people. Prayer is important in Korean gatherings – at the beginning of the service, before the offering, after the offering, before the sermon, after the sermon and at any other point when something "should happen": these are not brief invocations, but sermon-like harangues.

Personal Impressions

by Ramon Hunston

THE immediate impression on arrival in Seoul, Korea, is how totally foreign everything is, from the indecipherable signs (to a European) on the shops, to the strange intonations of an oriental language.

We were taken to the Central Church, Yoido, Seoul for registration. This impressive, circular building outside the City, recently opened, was built to accommodate the many thousands of Pentecostal believers who are members of this church, of which Pastor Yonggi Cho is the Minister.

As we stepped into this great Church, all the strangeness disappeared; smiling oriental faces greeted us, hands reached forward to grasp ours and the only way we could communicate was by one word, "Hallelujah", as we went through to the registration hall. This universal greeting was heard everywhere; crowds shouted "hallelujah" as the delegates' buses passed the great throngs of people on their way through the typically narrow streets to the evening services in the Hyochang stadium. The great warmth of fellowship shown to us by the Korean people is something I will treasure for ever. We knew and felt that we were one in Christ.

My impressions of the Conference are a kaleidoscope of precious fellowship, sacred moments and awe-inspiring worship and the power of the Holy Spirit of God moving in the saving of souls, healing of the sick and the outpouring of the Spirit on believers. There was a wondrous sense of worship. I will never forget the great Communion service on Sunday morning in the Church, when delegates from thirty-seven countries joined with thousands of Korean brothers and sisters in worship. The beautiful singing of the choir filled the great auditorium with melody and praise; we did not understand the words, the music was unknown to us, but the presence of the Lord was so real as to transcend the barriers of language and culture and unite us in worship. Our Korean friends sang a hymn over and over again with such fervour and devotion as we shared Communion.

The evening services at the Hyochang Stadium were just as impressive, but in a different vein. There is such a great hunger for Christ that following the preaching of the Word to audiences of over 30,000 many stepped forward to receive Christ. I made personal enquiries and discovered that people were being saved and baptised in the Spirit as, at times, as many as 500 came forward. There were folk who were sick and as they stepped forward for salvation they were miraculously healed by the power of God.

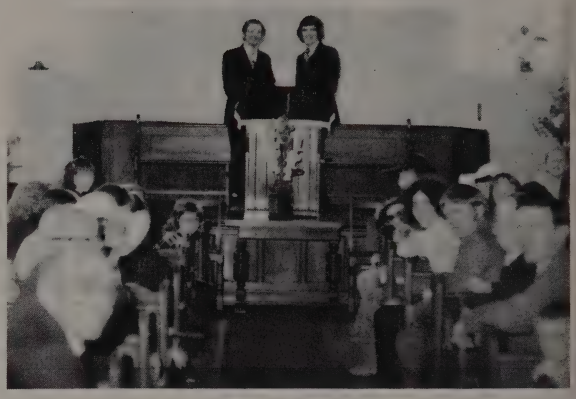
Our Bridgend Church



THE work in Bridgend began in 1955 with a pioneer campaign conducted by Pastor P.S. Brewster with the support of local Elim Pentecostal Churches. The campaign was a very lively one with a large number of converts. The Pentecostal message was received with great joy by many unconverted and by a number of Christians also. The first pastor was I. Wynne Lewis, who was a great tower of strength, and who worked with great zeal and enthusiasm.

In the early years great difficulties were experienced in obtaining suitable premises in which to worship. Among various halls used were the Town Hall, Palais de Dance, O.A.P. Hall, Civic Restaurant, Drill Hall, and finally the Unitarian Church. We have been extremely fortunate in being able to rent the latter at a reasonable price. We have the full use of the building except for half a day per month. Although the building is fairly small, it is in a central position in the town, and very conveniently situated for people who attend from surrounding districts.

The work at Bridgend has fluctuated over the years, with periods of great blessing and times of difficulty. In the last two years a gradual impetus has been experienced in all activities. At the last Annual Church Business Meeting, as reports from all departments were given, it became evident that we had entered a period of great blessing. Financially, there has been an unprecedented rise in offerings, more than to match increased expenditure. Attendances at all meetings have shown significant increases and in some cases have doubled. Youth outreach work is booming. Craft classes have commenced. Most encouraging reports were also heard from the Sunday School, Sunshine Corner, Junior Crusaders, and Youth Outreach. A film scheme using equipment donated by the Home Film Fellowship is progressing very well. The business meeting was suffused with an atmosphere of progress and expectancy. Several of those present had found the Lord as their personal Saviour during the preceding year.

Our Pastor is now Robert A. Holdstock and we look to the Lord for further blessing as we plan to continue and extend our evangelistic activities.

Book Reviews

Satan is alive and well on Planet Earth, by Hal Lindsay. Published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott, price 50p, postage and packing 8p extra.

IN fourteen chapters Hal Lindsay takes the reader through the whole range of areas in which Satan operates, with the object of verifying the statement made in the title. A quote from the introduction reads: "This book is an attempt to define a personal enemy who rules our world system." The author does just this. It is a book that needed to be written and brings the reader face to face with forces active in the world both in the more obvious situations and in the unobtrusive and subtle.

He takes us through the drug scene, witchcraft and sorcery, and identifies the world systems, anti-Christian philosophies and mind-manipulation with Satanic dominion in the universe. In the less obvious fields he warns of deception from the devil in the exercise of the Gifts of the Spirit and miraculous ministry. Pentecostalists will recognise a bias against the teaching of the Baptism in the Spirit as an experience subsequent to conversion, with an erroneous (albeit well-meant) section on speaking in tongues. An appendix to the chapter on signs and wonders contains "old hat" arguments about the "Transitional Nature of the Book of Acts".

The book finishes on a positive note of guidance to victory by spiritual weapons and the power of the indwelling Christ. I commend the book as informative and important in an age when "Satan has come down unto you, knowing that he hath but a short time".

G. Wesley Gilpin

New man - new World, by Leighton Ford. Published by Word Books, price 40p, postage and packing 7p extra.

EACH chapter of this paperback is a sermon preached by the author over the radio on the "Hour of Decision", which is carried over 800 radio stations. They are typically American in their presentation - one can imagine their being preached in racy style - but they have excellent quality of content and are not just a string of stories. Well-seasoned with much Scripture, they keep to the point and bring home gospel truth in a practical manner.

Though not by any means a study book, it is inspiring and could well be left around in your home for the unconverted to read. Anyone thus reading it would certainly do so to their profit.

by
J. Alexander Wright

An Outline

"Come and behold Him"

ALEXANDER Cruden quaintly defines "Behold" as: To look at a thing with our eyes and to think over a thing in our minds.

In these four "Beholds" we have the gradual, growing apprehension of Jesus Christ.

1. "Behold the Man" (John 19:5): Fascinated by His Manliness: "Is not this the Carpenter?". "Jesus of Nazareth, a Man. . .", the ideal Man, the incomparable One.

2. "Behold the Lamb" (John 1:29): Moved by His Sacrifice: A lamb for an individual (Genesis 4:4); a lamb for a household (Exodus 12:3); a lamb for a nation (Isaiah 53:7); a Lamb for the world John 1:29). George Tyrell said to Baron Von Hugel: "If only one could conscienciously wash one's hands of the whole concern, but then that strange Man upon His cross drives one back again and again."

3. "Behold your King" (John 19:14): Yielding to His Sovereignty: the world's undoubted true Monarch.

4. "Behold your God" (Isaiah 40:9): Confessing His Deity: Thomas said, "My Lord and my God." John 20:28.

A Quotation

"Wilt Thou be made whole?"

IN Facing Life and Death, Rev. L. Tizard tells how, when he was dying of cancer, his wife came into his room and said, "Paul has been talking about the will to live. He is sure you can win, but you'll have to fight. He has so much faith in you; you just can't let him down." Tizard says, "Perhaps my response was what she expected, for suddenly she shot a question at me: 'Do you really want to live?'. It hit me right between the eyes. For a moment I was shocked. It was an outrageous question. Suddenly it flashed into my mind that Jesus once asked that kind of question: 'Wilt thou be made whole?'. Of course! Why else was he waiting all the years? But Jesus didn't ask silly or purposeless questions. Had he lost the will to live? Settled down with his disability? Living on charity, no doubt. But he had no responsibilities, and no demands from life. Was it possible he was being resigned? It was the beginning of a fight which ended victoriously."

Peril in the Playground

MANY mothers welcome the return of their offspring to school with a considerable degree of relief. Certainly children become restless and bored towards the end of the long summer holiday, but unhappily the school and the playground are not always as satisfactory or as safe as parents would wish them to be. I learned recently of a very disturbing incident, witnessed by the young daughter of a friend of mine in a primary school playground. Watched by a crowd of children, an eight year old girl hypnotised another little girl and caused her to bark like a dog and bite a companion. The affected child appeared to be in a deep trance and the mother of the hypnotist had to be summoned to the school by the teacher to bring her back to normality. Two days later I read the following report in The Daily Mail and in view of what I had heard I felt it was a timely warning:

"Children are meddling with so many black magic games they are in danger of becoming hooked on evil spirits. A retired clergyman claimed yesterday that the games included ouija boards, palm reading and going into trances to contact spirits.

"The Rev. Charles de Cerjat, former vicar of Egg Buckland church, Plymouth, for sixteen years, said that worried parents and schoolmasters have told him that children were dabbling in the evil arts. He could not reveal the schools because he had been approached in confidence.

"He added: 'The children are just experimenting mischievously, although there is very real danger of their becoming seriously affected. It is shocking to me to hear that these youngsters could play around like this'.

"Mr. Cerjat, 78, felt that more people were beginning to dabble with black magic 'in this permissive age'. He knew of some who had been committed to mental institutions because they had become so badly affected. He said, 'Anyone who knows of this sort of thing going on in their district should contact a church minister because it is our job to fight evil'."

We agree wholeheartedly that the Church militant's job is to fight evil in all forms, thus it is necessary to recognise satanic power and activity. So subtle is the arch-enemy to-day that his seducing spritis are extremely busy. They are not only deceiving the non-Christian, but are also trying to mislead and hoodwink the believer.

I have talked with sincere Christians who are very sceptical about any reference to demon power and pooh-pooh the whole idea of witchcraft in these "enlightened days". Other lesser excursions into the occult are looked upon as harmless fun. There is no realization that these practices are just another way of playing with fire. There is no excuse for this attitude, for the Bible gives us ample warning and such verses as 2 Thessalonians 2:9-11; 1 Timothy 4:1 need no explanation, but are plain for all to understand. We must be aware of the dangers, if only to safeguard our children and young people, who are so vulnerable.

I believe, too, that Christian parents, by using the authority of Christ's name, can protect their little ones. Some years ago we had a visit from a Dutch couple who were engaged in evangelistic work which took them behind the Iron Curtain and thus made them targets for satanic power. They told us how the Lord had shown them that they could be protected from evil forces. In Matthew 18:18 our Lord gave his followers on earth, power to "bind in heaven", and they explained how the Greek word translated "heaven" is "ouranos" which also means "the air or sky". According to Scripture this is the domain of the Devil (the prince of the power of the air, Ephesians 2:2) and his legions of evil spirits (Ephesians 6:12). Daily, as they set out on their missions, they spent time in believing prayer in which they "bound" the spirits that would attack them. May we not in the same way protect our children each morning as they go to school?

THE PRINCIPLES AND PRACTICE OF YOUTH WORK

by Eldin R. Corsie, National Youth Director

LESSON 3 Community Evangelism

YOUTH workers must explore ways and means by which young people can make their contribution, not only to the local church, but also to evangelism in the community – not only by normal evangelism, but also by social evangelism.

Britain has enjoyed affluence and comfort for many years, yet it is estimated that in this country there are 400,000 children in want and 675,000 old folk shut in their homes, many of them lonely and depressed. In addition to these, thousands of people have become social outcasts for one reason or another.

In the Salvation Army report "Tragedies of Affluence" the following summary is presented:

Children

"It is estimated that there are about 885,000 children in fatherless families, of whom about 400,000 are probably suffering from some kind of deprivation. The law governing the legal rights of a mother and her children to be supported is out of date. A man can leave his wife and family and not be located by any authority. The Salvation Army has been tracing fathers and believes that the unofficial approach yields better results. The Army has thirteen maternity homes, two hospitals and three hostels for mothers and babies; more are required.

The Teenager

"Experts state that young people reach adulthood much earlier and have better health; they are impressed by their vitality and idealism. 'A moral vacuum has been created and until it is filled the present trends are likely to continue'.

The Homeless

"The number of homeless men (which is on the increase) is estimated at about 35,000, consisting of men looking for work, ex-prisoners, vagrants, physically or mentally handicapped, men from broken homes and old-age pensioners. There are also many homeless women.

The Elderly

"The elderly (over-sixties) form an increasing proportion of the population, having risen from 2.4 million to 5.9 million in forty years. It is estimated that ninety-six per cent live in their own homes, of whom ten per cent – or 674,464 – are housebound because of illness or infirmity. This may well be the biggest welfare problem of the future.

The Outcasts

"Alcoholism. There are over 400,000 alcoholics and the number is increasing, costing Britain between £30 million and £40 million annually. This is now recognised as a disease requiring expert treatment.

"Prostitution. This appears to be on the increase and is a problem needing constant attention.

"Ex-prisoners. More needs to be done to help these individuals to make good.

"Suicides. The numbers are increasing and anti-suicide work must be expanded."

In addition to those listed by the Salvation Army there are special services to be rendered from time to time. There are emergencies caused by fire, floods, national disasters, etc.

The sense of social responsibility was briefly referred to in Lesson 2 under the heading "The Range of Programme Planning". The subject is now elaborated with practical details to help young people of all age-groups to work for the Church and the glory of God.

Our first responsibility is to place whatever plans we have before God in prayer. It is no good attempting anything of a spiritual nature without first seeking the approval and blessing of God, but, while we saturate everything we do with prayer, we must not stop there. "Faith without works is dead"; we require both. Dr. Stanley Jones tells of being driven over a dangerous winding road in the Himalayas. The driver of the bus was not accustomed to these mountainous passes and on his first trip the previous day he had almost gone over one of the many terrifying cliffs. So, before starting back, he stood in front of the engine and folded his hands, saying a prayer for safety. Then he started off, but he had not gone far when the engine began to overheat. There was no water in the radiator! This was remedied and the journey was resumed, but, when still many miles from his destination, the machine stopped while going uphill. There was no petrol in the tank and there the bus was marooned. The driver's prayers had not been joined to the works!

It is of very little value merely to pray for the needy and destitute. Something must be done to help them.

The following list will provide ideas for reaching and helping those who are requiring special assistance.

Scripture Union Portions — Notes by Gerald L.W. Ladlow

Monday, October 29th — Colossians 2:1-7

"In whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge" (v.3).

HIDDEN TREASURE! – what exciting pictures are conjured up by these words! What a thrill there is to be had in discovering such riches. How thrilling and exciting life can be for those who are willing to search for the treasures that are in Christ Jesus. Superficial Christians never discover them; they can only be found by the diligent seeker. Wisdom is the practical application of knowledge, the attainment of the highest moral results by the best means. That such treasure can be ours is a certainty, for Christ "is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification and redemption" (1 Corinthians 1:30).

Tuesday, October 30th — Colossians 2:8-15

"Beware lest any man spoil you" (v.8); "having spoiled principalities and powers" (v.15).

THE Greek word translated "spoil" in these verses is a military word meaning to spoil in the sense of plunder or rob, as when plunder is taken by an invading army. The Colossians were warned against the philosophies of Grecian rationalism and the traditions of Jewish ritualism, for both would strip them of their faith and hope as surely as aggressive armies rob a country of all that is valuable. We have seen the havoc wrought by modernist theologians and ritualists in the Church today. The only safeguard is to rest in the victorious work of Christ who has "plundered" the kingdom of Satan and secured our salvation so that we are complete in Him (v.10).

Wednesday, October 31st — Colossians 2:16-23; 3:1-4

"If ye then be risen with Christ" (v.1).

THE resurrection of Christ is both a truth which we believe and an experience in which we share. The acceptance of His salvation not only makes us "dead to sin" but also "alive unto God", so that we now live in this world by the power of eternal life imparted to us. The results are that we have: a new aim, aspiring to heavenly things (v.1); a new heart, so that the things of Christ's kingdom have first place in our affections (v.2); a new life, so that we are completely hidden in Christ (v.3); and a new hope, our appearance with Christ in glory at His second advent (v.4).

Thursday, November 1st — Colossians 3:5-17

"Let the peace of God rule in your hearts" (v.15).

THE N.E.B. translates this: "Let the peace of God be the arbiter in your hearts". The Amplified Bible has: "Let the peace of God act as umpire in your hearts continually". The figure is that of the judge at the games looking down on the arena, watching the contestants, seeing that they obey the rules and adjudicating for the prizes. The question as to the will of God in one's life or as to the right course of action to take, often worries Christians. Here is the answer. When contending impulses and reasons distract and seem to pull in opposite directions, the inward peace of Christ should decide which is to prevail.

Friday, November 2nd — Colossians 3:18-25; 4:1

"Whatsoever you do, do it heartily, as to the Lord" (v.23).

THE exhoration was primarily addressed to slaves, who no doubt found their position both degrading and irksome, but the application of this principle immediately transformed it. This far-reaching principle should apply to everyone of us. Personal relationships and duties of the home, as set out here, and all our work in the world and in the Church can become holy when they are regarded as service for Him. Nothing truly done for Him is ever done grudgingly, but "heartily" and in consequence receives a reward from His hand (v.24).

Saturday, November 3rd — Colossians 4:2-9

"Redeeming the time" (v.5).

THE same expression is used in Ephesians 5:16. In both instances the expression means "to buy up or seize the opportunity". Instead of waiting for opportunities to serve the Lord and help our neighbour, wise men seek to turn every moment to good account and make more opportunities than they find. Time must be redeemed because it cannot be recalled; once it is gone, it is gone for ever. No amount of feverish working to "make up for lost time" can ever bring back opportunities that the time lost brought with it.

Sunday, November 4th — Colossians 4:10-18

"Always labouring fervently for you in prayers" (v.12).

BISHOP Hamilton, one-time Bishop of Salisbury, used to say: "No man is likely to do much good in prayer who does not begin by looking upon it in the light of work, to be prepared for and persevered in with all the earnestness which we bring to bear on subjects which are the most interesting and necessary". The expression used here denotes the energy with which wrestlers bend and writhe and stretch every joint of their bodies. Such prayer was offered by Jesus in Gethsemane (Luke 22:44).

PENTECOSTAL WORLD CONFERENCE SEOUL

The daily sessions of the Conference gave a new insight into the magnitude of the Pentecostal outpouring as delegates greeted each other, renewed old friendships that spanned the globe and listened to the exposition of the Conference theme, "Anointed to Preach" by speakers from all parts of the world.

The responsive attitude of the Korean Christians to the Word of God is self-evident, not only in their faith, but in the expressions of joy as preachers touched some chord of experience. How thrilling to see and share in the uninhibited worship as thousands of men and women raised their hands to heaven and audibly magnified the Lord. There were some hymns that we could share. "The Comforter has come" was sung so often in the Hyochang stadium and in so many different languages that it seemed at times the theme song of the Conference.

When a man becomes a Christian in that part of the world his decision must be clear cut and this is expressed in the great desire to witness fearlessly for Christ. On one occasion, with Pastor F.H. Coleman and an American friend, we decided to return to our hotel on a normal service bus, instead of by the delegates' special coach, to meet the ordinary man in the street. It was quite an experience, terrifying at times, as the bus weaved through the traffic at a great speed. There seemed to be no rules as to how many could get one! If you got aboard it was all right, although you paid more if you managed to get a seat. We were packed tight like sardines and while travelling through the city a man started to shout. We had no idea what was happening, until our guide said that he was preaching the Gospel. It seemed no surprise to anyone to have a preacher on the bus!

I reflected on the background to the blessing. In Pentecostal churches there is a prayer meeting every day at 4 a.m. and many thousands gather to wait on the Lord. The faith of our brethren there is simple and uncomplicated. They just believe God. So often we become complex in our thinking and belief and questioning in our attitudes.

I could not help being deeply moved as I discovered the price some, if not most, Christians pay. When a man or woman becomes a Christian it can mean the total deprivation of family. Food is offered first to an image or to the spirits of ancestors and then is eaten by the family. A Christian cannot eat this food offered to idols and the family refuse to serve any other, so the Christian goes hungry. I spoke to a fine young lady, who had nothing to eat for twenty-three days after becoming a Christian until her mother relented and put some food aside for her before making the offering. For some, it is harder still; they are disowned and hated by the family and turned out of their homes, yet these were the men and women who greeted us with such joy as we arrived. What price are we willing to pay in Britain for revival?

Following the Conference, it was a privilege to visit Hong Kong and to minister for two nights in the Wai Tsun Church, where our Sister Vera McGillivary has laboured so faithfully. What a joy to see a fine crowd of young people there and the older folk who have served the Lord so faithfullly. The same atmosphere and joyous welcome was in the Church as I arrived and joined in fellowship with Chinese Christians there, as members of our Elim family on the other side of the world, and I was asked to bring the Christian greetings of love from Pastor Chung and the members of the fellowship to the Elim churches in Great Britain.

WATERGATE — will the truth ever be known? The sad events in that great country, the U.S.A., make melancholy reading and listening. The resignation of their Vice-President and all the queries and comments regarding Richard M. Nixon, their President, have come at a most difficult time in world history. If ever a firm, publicly-supported regime were needed in Washington, D.C., the time is now. Despite all the British government's fanfares regarding the Common Market, the European powers seem to have done precious little — though, to be fair, one never knows what goes on behind the scenes — France seeming to support the Arabs and the remainder of the Common Market saying little or nothing and Britain trying to remain neutral insisting the while that Israel's boundaries are inviolable. It is ironic that the U.S.A. and the U.S.S.R. appear to have been the front runners in making for peace, though who can tell?

In a day when public men say so much to such small effect, mouthing their platitudes and prognostications into any available microphone at any and every major airport at any and every hour of the day or night, strong, righteous, firm, wise pronouncements are vital. If the U.S.A. is the leader of the so-called Western world — and her might seems to demand it, if nothing else — her influence is absolutely fundamental. It is tragic that the leadership crisis has overtaken her at such a time as this. One cannot escape the feeling that the news media must take much blame for their relentless pursuit of the subject and of the characters involved in it, but their right to retail truth is allegedly one of democracy's safeguards, or so they claim.

Christians are often in a difficult position, however. Party politics being what they are — and perhaps what they always have been — how does a born again believer make his voice heard? The party system has bedevilled the whole scene. If Christians conscientiously opt out, though, how can they complain if their views are disregarded? On the other hand, should the true Church not be doing much more, especially in writing, to get Bible truth across to the world at large?

We can take comfort in the effectiveness of prayer, but we need to look again at our divine role of being the salt of the earth and the light of the world.

How do you read silence? You can take it both ways — or either way, for that matter!

If ever we needed to pray for those in authority over us that time is today. The pressures must be unbearable.

Birmingham Presbytery House Party

A PARTY, consisting mainly of young people from our Churches in the Birmingham Presbytery, spent a wonderful holiday at Pressland House, Hatherleigh. We shared fellowship with new-found friends from the London, Colchester and Exeter areas and within hours of meeting we were completely at home. We were received with open hearts. The food and accommodation were excellent.

We shared fun and fellowship, but the most tremendous thing was the deepening of our spiritual experiences. Pastors T.W. Jacobs and D.D. Phillips ministered the Word of God each evening in the power of the Holy Spirit and signs followed the preaching of the Word. Young people were saved, healed and baptised in the Holy Spirit. Those whose experience had become a little dry and barren found liberty and joy in the Holy Spirit. There was a rising tide of blessing as young people sang and told of what the Lord had done for them.

We express our thanks for the hospitality given to us at Pressland House and at our Exmouth and Plymouth Churches. I am sure I express the thoughts of all who participated with these words: "Praise God, from Whom all blessings flow".

MARGARET HILL (Miss)

BEXHILL–ON–SEA

THE new Bexhill Church celebrated their opening day on Sunday, October 7th. A Crusade is planned for next April. The building, a former Methodist Church, built in 1901, stands at the junction of Belle Hill and Barrack Road on the main A259 through Bexhill. The morning service was conducted by L.S. Jackson of Bexhill and the evening service, which was attended by about thirty local people and friends from Hastings, was conducted by H.A. Court from Brighton.

SOWERBY BRIDGE Pastor: M. Sherwood

A VALEDICTORY service was recently held for Miss Ruth Pearson, who is a past two-year student of Elim Bible College. On September 23rd, Miss Pearson flew to Singapore and then on to Bangkok prior to working as a missionary nurse in central Thailand.

The service was conducted by Pastor G.H. Wallace. The Church Secretary, Mr. N.M. Butterworth, spoke on behalf of the Church. Miss Pearson was received into membership of The Overseas Missionary Fellowship by Rev. N.D. Carr, Home Director of the Society, who also gave the address.

The soloist was Mrs. Gilling and the pianist was Mrs. N. Butterworth.

GOVAN, Glasgow Pastor: G. Girvan

A WONDERFUL event in our Church was the night of the Introductory Service for our new Pastor, namely Pastor George Girvan. Mr. T. Stewart, our Deacon, who has worked tirelessly in the past, opened the service with praise and extended a warm welcome to Pastors F.W. Jones and T.S. Miles and to the new Pastor.

In making reference to Pastor Girvan's untiring work over many years and his devotion to the Lord's work, Pastor Jones finished his address on Unity in the Church. Pastor Miles also paid tribute to Pastor Girvan's hard work and faithfulness and remarked on the challenge that lies ahead for both Pastor and congregation.

We are delighted to have Pastor Girvan with us and will give him every help. We thank God for this wonderful blessing and for prayers answered.

Our Church is due to be demolished in the near future as the area comes under Glasgow's redevelopment plan. We will be grateful for your prayers. We need a new place in which to worship and we are sure that God will provide again.

COLWYN BAY Pastor: D.C. Lewis

THE Elim Pentecostal Church, Erw Wen Road, Colwyn Bay was filled to capacity for the induction service of Rev. David C. Lewis as minister.

The meeting was convened by Rev. John Seaman of the Elim Church, Wigan, supported by Rev. George Evans of Holyhead, who introduced Mr. Lewis as a former minister and missionary to India for twenty-two years. He had also held pastorates at Wimbledon, Hanely, Staffs., and recently at Rugby.

Pastor Daniel Garratt, former pastor of the Church at Colwyn Bay, welcomed Mr. Lewis on behalf of the fellowship of the church and the charge to the congregation was given by Rev. Laurie Lambert, district superintendent of the Elim North West Presbytery.

Ministers and members of local churches were also present to welcome Mr. and Mrs. Lewis and their daughter Gwyneth.

On Sunday, there were large congregations at the morning and evening services, the first to be conducted by Mr. Lewis.

Among those present was the Superintendent of the Pentecostal Mission of Hong Kong, who was on holiday in the area.

WEST BROMWICH Pastor: R.M. Kingsbury

SUMMER Bank Holiday 1973 was yet another milestone in the history of our Church. On the Sunday Pastor A.R. Williams conducted his final services, bringing to a close a ministry of over five years. Over eighty gathered for his farewell service in the evening. At the end of the service presentations were made to Pastor and Mrs. Williams and to Helen Claire.

On the following Thursday, Pastor R.J. Morrison (the Birmingham Presbytery D.S.) conducted the induction service of our new minister, Pastor R.M. Kingsbury. The Church Treasurer, Mr. E. Wilson, welcomed Pastor and Mrs. Kingsbury and Lois on behalf of the Church members. Solos were rendered by Mr. C. Evans and Mrs. F. Halliday. The preacher was Pastor R.T. McDonald, a friend of Pastor Kingsbury. He spoke of the responsibilities of both minister and church members. Pastor and Mrs. Kingsbury both said how happy they were to come to West Bromwich, Pastor Kingsbury quoting the text "The Lord working with them", and Mrs. Kingsbury expressing a desire to work together to lead many to Christ.

PHILIP JOHNS

ALEXANDRA PARK, Belfast Pastor: E.McComb

AT a recent service, Pastor McComb and friends of the Church paid farewell tributes to Mr. Thomas McGuicken and his wife, Eileen, who have been faithful to God's call to full-time service. Both were saved during Pastor Streeter's Ministry here. They have three children – Julia, Keith and Mark. A cheque from the Church was given to Mr. McGuicken as was an anonymous gift. The Ladies' Fellowship gave Mrs. McGuicken a cash gift.

Our loss here will be gain to Wells. Both were involved in Crusaders and in Sunday school work. Our prayers go with them, knowing that God will honour the sacrifice and trials of two years of living by faith while Mr. McGuicken was training in Elim Bible College.

R. ROBINSON

Pastor E. McComb shaking hands with Pastor T. McGuicken whose wife shares the happy occasion.

BIRKENHEAD Pastor: P.A. Epton

HOW exciting it is to be part of something new, and Elim in Birkenhead is new! Almost everything we do is done for the first time and a recent Saturday was no exception. Our first Sunday school outing saw seventy crowding into coach and cars. Prestatyn was chosen as the venue and a glorious day was had by all. Parents were amazed when they were told that the outing and tea were free for the children and on the Saturday and Sunday following the outing we saw four parents attend our Church for the first time.

On the following Saturday members of our Aberdare Church were with us for the afternoon and evening. Thirty-five people travelled up with a song in their hearts which was soon being sung by Birkonians. The evening service was convened by Mr. Peter Brake B.A., and the speaker was Mr. Mansel Jones. Truly the blessing of God came down and the service, timed for one and a half hours, lasted two and a half hours! Thank you, Aberdare, for coming. Thank you, people of Elim, for praying. We believe that these blessings are just the beginning of great things in Birkenhead.

HUDDERSFIELD Pastor: B.L.T. Wall

IT was a sad occasion for the Huddersfield Church as Pastor and Mrs. John Fry and their family bade farewell after six years of happy ministry in the Church. We thank God for a faithful shepherd who constantly sought to lift up the name of Jesus and build up the work here.

After paying tribute to the unstinted service given by Pastor Fry, the Church Secretary called on representatives of the various departments of the Church to present their tokens of appreciation. The Church Treasurer, on behalf of the Church, presented a cheque to Pastor and Mrs. Fry. Mrs. Fry received a clock from the E.W.M.A. and gifts to the children included Bibles from the Sunday School and books from the Girls' Club and Sunshine Corner.

Four weeks later came the induction of our new Minister, Pastor B.L.T. Wall. The Church was full as Pastor G. Harpin led the congregation in singing the hymn, "I stand amazed in the presence of Jesus the Nazarene". A sense of the presence of the Lord was very evident throughout the meeting. We were blessed by the anointed ministry in song by Lella and Reka Molnar from Bradford.

Pastor Harpin welcomed Pastor and Mrs. Wall and their family into the Presbytery and a word of greeting on behalf of the Church was given by the Church Secretary. Pastor John M. Cuthbert gave the charge to the Minister and the congregation.

The Annual Convention which followed proved to be a time of rich blessing as Pastor Cuthbert preached the Word of God with clarity and power.

We believe that God has great things in store for us. We look to the days ahead under the ministry of Pastor and Mrs. Wall with prayer and confidence knowing that our God is able (Ephesians 3:20).

THE GIFTS OF THE SPIRIT— 5

The Working of Miracles

(1 Corinthians 12:10)

by Charles J. E. Kingston

THE Bible has a word for it. They were "powers", "explosions of Almightiness", which dwelt in the messenger; "wonders", spectacles which attracted the onlookers; "signs", which showed what God could do (Acts 2:22). Christians often ask, like Gideon, "Where be all His miracles?" and receive the same reply: "Go in this thy might. . . surely I will be with thee". God with us is the origin of a miracle.

1. What constitutes a miracle?

Any act of the Holy Spirit which overrules or sets aside natural or providential laws creates a miracle. For instance, Saul the persecutor was converted by a miracle. The deliverance of a drug addict or alcoholic or any other sinner today is a miracle. Because all "by nature" are dead, all need the miracle of God's grace to live.

2. What law operates a miracle?

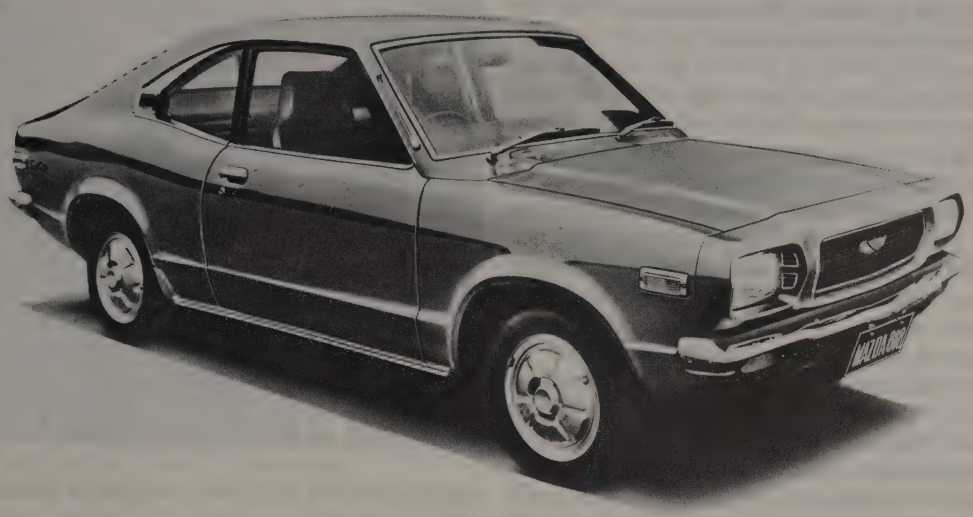
Can natural laws be altered? To change water into wine (as Jesus did) is no more wonderful than for the God of nature to change rain and sunshine into grapes; or, for that matter, to change whisky into tables and chairs as He did for one alcoholic, converted by the grace of God. Laws of nature are constantly being superseded by the imposition of a stronger law. By your will you raise your arm and temporarily defeat the law of gravity. An aircraft does the same when it lifts many tons off the runway.

Jesus and Paul tell us of the spiritual law of faith (Mark 11:22-24; Galatians 3:5). When faith operates, waters have to divide, lame men get healed, cancers melt, human impossibilities become divine realities. "Miracles of earth are the laws of heaven". As the Bible puts it: "The law of the Spirit of life. . . hath made me free from the law of sin and death".

3. The use of miracles

God works miracles to attest the authority of His gospel. Pharaoh said: "Show me a miracle". Trench remarks: "It was right for him to require this. Moses came saying he had a message from God for him and it was his duty to put him to the proof". Can it be that the Church has lost the power of proof? In the baptism in the Spirit we enter a new dimension in God and should evidence something of God-likeness. The off-spring of a bird looks like a bird, acts like a bird, sings like a bird; the off-spring of God should reveal God-like characteristics.

4. Some Scriptural illustrations of this gift.



The gifts of miracles and healings differ. The latter are for deliverance from various diseases; the former operates in other ways.

Miracles in the human body. The healing of the man born lame was called a miracle; so also were the special miracles wrought by God when Paul's handkerchieves brought freedom from sickness and evil spirits; the casting out of demons, Jesus said, was a miracle (Mark 9:38,39).

Miracles in inanimate objects. Moses' rod turned serpent; water was transformed into wine; Elisha made the iron swim; these are all miracles. Concerning the latter, Sir Ambrose Fleming stated that, when by electro-magnetic action they could cause a metal ring to float in air, they could not say the story of Elisha making the iron axehead to swim was impossible because they did not understand it.

Miracles of provision. The thirsty multitude were supplied with water from the rock and with manna sent down from the skies; the widow's meal and oil lasted for the duration of the famine; the multiplication of the loaves and fishes by Jesus; these were miracles of God's provision. Muller experienced miracles constantly in the feeding of the orphans. Dennis Bennett tells how he brought sixteen people home to lunch without warning his wife. She had only a meat casserole for six people prepared and had no time to buy more. "I stood in the kitchen", she said afterwards, "and said, 'Lord, you know I don't have enough food for so many. I'm going to put the food on the table and trust you to do the rest'. I watched that food go round and round. They kept digging in and digging in and everyone seemed to get enough to satisfy him. And there was enough over to feed two more who arrived later!". The God of miracles dwells with-

Our Pontardulais Church

Researcher: Philip G. Parsons

AN article appeared recently in the West Glamorgan Chronicle concerning our Pontardulais Church. The article made this statement: "The Beulah Elim Church stands today in the residential area of Twyniago Road, its history and its place in Pontardulais is one of the modern miracles of modern times."

In 1916, Mr. Llewellyn Bell was gloriously saved. Finding that no chapel in the village could 'feed him on the finest of the wheat', he and a few others joined together in his home in Goppa Road. Soon a few more were attracted by the freedom of worship and a building was prayed for to accommodate this new church. The answer came in the shape of a small shed, twenty-four feet by twelve feet, and in this humble way, a baby was born, a baby that would grow quickly into the strong healthy body of today.

The passing of time brought better conditions. In 1926 the Church moved to its present position, having acquired new premises. Now the church stood as a young child. Willing hands erected a permanent building which proudly received the name "Beulah Chapel". Rapid growth, a good number of healings, and God's guidance brought great blessing upon this wholesome venture.

1935 saw a giant stride forward when Beulah was joined to the Elim Pentecostal Movement. With the arrival of Elim pastors, the work took on a greater stability, and the witness widened. Pastor P.S. Brewster conducted a campaign in the Tivoli Cinema and this enhanced Beulah's testimony. Many Elim ministers have given of their best; all have helped to establish the saints of God in their faith.

The members of Beulah cherish the fact that Stephen Jeffreys preached his last sermon from their pulpit. Pastor F.H. Coleman was the Pastor at the time and convened the service. The text of the message was, "The Glory of God", a theme that has continued to this present day. Many other spiritual giants have given of their ministry to this corner of God's vineyard.

These early meetings were characterised by typical Welsh fervour. This, united with Pentecostal fire, brought blessing which not all could understand. This led to resentment and criticism, but the saints persevered, and are to be admired, for Beulah is alive and well today.

One of the outstanding testimonies is that of John Clement, a village drunkard and reveller, who, coming into touch with the ministry of Beulah, was soundly saved and called to the mission fields of Japan. Several others have left the church to take up full-time ministry in various places.

Membership since the war has fluctuated. 1950 saw an increase as Beulah welcomed some Salvation Army soldiers into fellowship when the Army ceased its work in Pontardulais. The last few years have seen marked improvement in membership, youth work and outreach. An outstanding feature this year was a gigantic silver cross which enabled the message of the gospel to reach approximately 7,000 people in the local carnival.

A good number have been saved recently and testimonies to healing have helped to promote an atmosphere of faith in the meetings. Many chapels around ask, "What is the secret of success?". Pastor G.J. Feasey, the resident Minister, replies, "Total dependence on the moving of the Holy Spirit, freedom to allow God to move in any way, at any time, at least three prayer meetings every week, and the retention of old-fashioned ways. There are no gimicks at Beulah, just the powerful presentation of the message of the gospel, and the God of blessing does the rest".

Pentecostal worship with its freedom is one of the most holy things on earth. We must at all cost contend for this - the loss of it would endanger every assembly.

A book could be written on all the work of Beulah, and the closing chapter would have to be, "To God be the glory, great things He heath done".

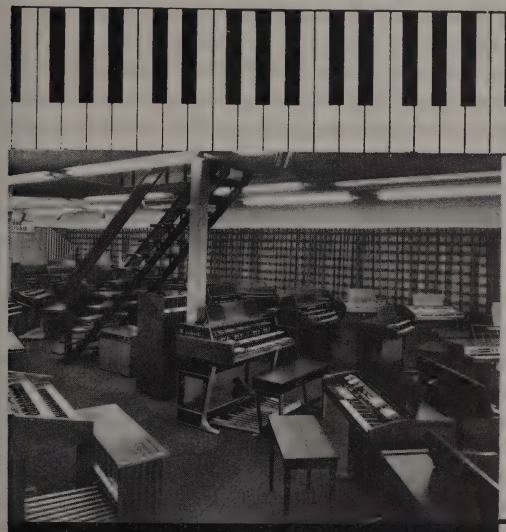
CHILDREN'S CORNER

A Pair of Shoes

Exodus 12:11

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

THE Prodigal Son, dressed in his finest clothes, put on his best pair of shoes, took his share of money and left home to seek a new life for himself. For a time he was happy in his new surroundings with his new-found friends, but soon all was changed. His money had gone and so had his friends. They did not want to know him now that he no longer had any riches to share with them. He was alone and hungry and longed for the comforts of his father's house. "What a fool I've been!" he cried. "I will swallow my pride and return home to ask my father's forgiveness."



He looked a different man from the one who had started out. He was no longer smart. His fine clothes had been reduced to rags and, as for his shoes, well, he did not have any! They had worn out a long time ago and he had been forced to throw them away. Now he looked and walked like a tramp. As he turned the corner, his father came running to welcome him. "My son has returned!" he cried happily. "Prepare a party! Bring the best robe! Put a new pair of shoes on his feet!".

The shoes were the final proof of his father's forgiveness. Once more he was free to walk in his father's house.

Like the Prodigal Son, the Children of Israel once walked barefooted. King Pharaoh was afraid of the great number of Hebrews, so he made them his slaves, divided them into groups and put them to work in different parts of the country. All through the long, hot days the Hebrews toiled - digging the fields, making bricks out of the Nile mud, building castles, forts and walls. They worked in bare feet for, as slaves, they were not allowed to wear shoes.

When at last Pharaoh allowed them to leave Egypt, God directed them to wear shoes and to go forth as a free people.

When Jesus comes into our hearts He forgives us and sets us free from all our sins. He welcomes us into His family and we walk through life side by side with Him.

A Letter from th

My dear friends,

Greetings in the Name of the Lord Jesus to our ministers, missionaries and members throughout the world!

I am writing this during a short spell back at Eastbourne in between itineraries. As you can imagine, it is good to be at home with my family for a little while and also to be in my own Church again. I am so grateful to the members of my Church for the way they stand by me in prayer and also loyally support the work of the Assembly during my absences. What encouragement a praying Church gives to its pastor!

So far I have visited seven Presbyteries and have been glad to see many of our churches making great efforts to spread the gospel. It has been a joy to renew fellowship with many of our ministers whom I have known for a long time and also to stay in the homes of quite a few of our younger ministers, from whom I have received a welcome that has been heartwarming. May God give them much encouragement in their labours.

It is inevitable, I suppose, that in the course of a Presidential itinerary certain points of emphasis begin to emerge. I have found this during the last few months. Increasingly my thoughts have been turning to the importance of the local church and the vital role of the individual member within his own assembly. Another theme that has been forcing itself on me is our need to guard against the menace of materialism and it is this that I would like to highlight in this letter.

You will have noticed, as much as I have, the way in which our modern society is obsessed with material possessions. We live not only in the "permissive society" but also in the "possessive society". I am not sure that the latter is any the less destructive of spiritual life than the former. Like the galloping consumption that brought disease and death to thousands of homes years ago, this mad obsession with consumer goods is bringing all kinds of spiritual and moral ills in its wake.

I have before me a colour supplement packed with glowing adverts that assure me that I cannot possibly live without spending a mint of money on all kinds of products and "special offers". A central heating firm assure me that they will protect my pocket and my peace of mind, while the French Government Tourist Office are actually offering to rent me Paradise for £18 a day (which sounds cheap, only I have discovered, like the dying thief, how to get there free)! Cars, freezers, unit trusts, colour TV, stereo record players, cutlery, tobacco, whisky, clothes, shoes, caravan holidays, furniture, insurance, even the transformation of my figure are offered to me in page after page of arm-twisting persuasiveness. These same people like me so much they shout at me from the hoardings and smile at me from the TV commercials. I didn't know that I was so popular!

Now the disturbing thing about all this is that many people, including, I'm afraid, quite a proportion of Christians, have begun to believe that you cannot have the good life without possessing many of these things. Please don't get me wrongly. These things are not wrong in themselves, indeed many of them make life easier and more enjoyable. The trouble lies in that we are tempted to think that material possessions are essential to successful living and personal happiness. From there it is only a step to seeking them above everything else - and this leads to the sin of idolatry.

I remind you of some words of the Lord Jesus. "Take heed," He said, "and beware of covetousness: for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth" (Luke 12:15). These words were spoken to a man who asked Him to take his part in a squabble over a will and they were followed by that parable about the rich fool who stored up an abundance of goods, but who lost his own soul in the process.

This, it seems to me, highlights the dangers of our possessive society. It is so easy to become so involved in buying and possessing things that the really important, spiritual issues of life get forgotten. Some people are far more concerned with the family budget than they are with the family Bible; some Christians are more interested in gadgets than in God. Talk to them about mortgage rates, mail order catalogues, bargains at the cash-and-carry centre, miles per gallon, gardens, children or holidays and they're positively fluent - but start talking about spiritual things and it's like playing a piano that's affected by damp: hardly a sound, and what there is is woefully out of key.

In the parable of the sower, the Lord pointed out that the Word of God can be choked by "the cares of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, and the lusts of other things entering in" (Mark 4:19). Likewise, Paul warned Timothy that "they that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many foolish and hurtful lusts" and he went on to point out that many have been seduced from the faith and pierced themselves through with many sorrows because of an inordinate love of material things (1 Timothy 6:6-10). Thus the New Testament continually warns us about the danger of getting so wrapped up in this world and its advantages that we lose sight of the things of God.

esident

This temptation can come to us all. It can come to you, my brethren in the ministry. In a world which judges a man by the cut of his suit, the size of his car and the quality of the carpeting in his home, you can be tempted to feel that the status symbols of success are necessary to your image. But to our own Master we stand or fall and His judgment is based on the state of the heart and the integrity of the spirit, not on the outward appearances of material comfort.

It can come to you, young people. Living, as you must, in the restless atmosphere of a world which regards success in education or business as man's chief end and the attainment of all the luxuries of life as his supreme reward, you may be tempted to feel a social outcast unless you own your own home, drive your own car and surround yourself with all the so-called essentials of modern living. But again, we must humbly learn from the lips of our Lord and Saviour that men cannot live by bread, that is, by the satisfaction of his physical and material desires alone.

It can come to you, older Christian. You may congratulate yourself in that you have escaped from the restless immaturity of youth and have settled into a more reasonable pace of life and yet even for you the lure of material things - the additions to the house, the possibilities of travel and the involvements that business and social advance demand - can become a snare.

As I see it, the danger does not lie in the ambition to succeed or the possession of the material benefits of life in themselves. It is not wrong to be successful nor is it wrong to possess beautiful things. The Bible places no special value on poverty, indeed it assures us that God has given us richly all things to enjoy (1 Timothy 6:17). Paul reminds us in Philippians 4:12 that he has "learned how to be content in any circumstances. I know how to live with less than enough, and I know how to live with more than enough. I have learned the secret of how to live in any situation and in all circumstances" (Wm. Barclay's Translation.) The danger lies in allowing our sense of values to become more important to us than the eternal, spiritual things. As a pastor I have watched with sorrow some who have laid aside their active involvement in the assembly, disrupted their home life, and in some cases, threatened the security of their marriage because they have been unable to resist the lure of material possessions. "Better a little with reverence for the Eternal, than large wealth with worry. Better a dish of vegetables with love, than the best beef served with hatred" (Proverbs 15:17, Moffatt).

As we pick our way through the advertising jungle, let us remember that we are but strangers and pilgrims here. Let us keep our spiritual perspective. We are called to "seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness". This is our first priority. Millions of our fellow-men are puffing and blowing in the rat race of earthly success; they worry, live on sedatives, suffer heart attacks, sometimes die prematurely, mostly because they are anxious to get on in the world at all cost. The foolish, tragic thing is that the houses they have struggled to purchase will not be theirs in, say, fifty years' time, the cars that they have so much prized will be crushed and made into gadgets for the possession of which a future generation will drive itself crazy, and most of the other things for which they have sold their souls will lie useless and forgotten in the junk yards of tomorrow's world. Let us take heed lest we find ourselves caught up in the same futile materialism.

I was reading a book the other day in which the author said that God had made us a little lower than the angels, but most of us were interested only in being a little above the Joneses. Again, let me stress that a responsible attitude to material well-being is very important, and things like good investment, home ownership and the possession of the things that make life a little more comfortable are not to be considered as wrong for the Christian. The trouble lies in that so often these things become more important to us than our spiritual privileges and responsibilities. The historian, S.T. Bindoff, in his book Tudor England, points out that the Church in Tudor times had lost its spiritual authority, and comments: "The faith which had once moved mountains had been corrupted by the life of the plains.". This is the thing that concerns me about our times. I feel that individually and as a Movement we need to pray much that we may be kept from the corrupting influence of materialism and that we may be enabled, by seeking first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, to keep in the place where God can use us to meet the very real and distressing needs of our generation.

"If . . . then"

2 Chronicles 7:14

A sermon preached recently at the Elim Pentecostal Church, Erdington, Birmingham, by the Minister, Ken Smith.

THERE is evident concern for our nation among both young people and older friends, for I am sure that we all realize how relative the word "peace" really is.

There is much strife in our land today – industrial strife, social strife, and that ever-present spectre of political strife in Northern Ireland. Never forget that Belfast is as much part of the United Kingdom as Birmingham; our City is as prone to bombs as Belfast has been shown recently, for even Erdington had its bomb scare! At the risk of being called a Jeremiah, a prophet of gloom and doom, one needs to remind God's people of the situation.

Take the political scene, for our nation is very much disillusioned and bored with both major parties as every opinion poll proves. This is the breeding ground for anarchy and dictatorship. There seems to be no political leader who emerges as a statesman on the national scene. To me, everyman's politics is his pocket, or am I too cynical?

Consider the industrial scene, for this is even worse, if this is possible, for anarchy is evident. Some unions and workers show little sense of responsibility, let alone the socialism they profess. Rather, pure selfishness inspires their antics. Capitalist society is no better and both sides seem bent on killing the goose that lays the golden egg of prosperity. The seeds of industrial unrest are part of a deliberate campaign of satanic disruption in our country.

What about the economic scene? Mortgages! – have you had your note from the building society about the increased charges? This is not even to mention inflation and the cost of living!

As a nation, among a decadent Western civilisation, we are reaping our godlessness, for "Righteousness exalteth a nation: but sin is a reproach to any people" is still in Holy Writ (Proverbs 14:34).

What is the answer? Of course "Christ is the Answer" we sing, and this is true, but we must be more specific. "If My people, which are called by My name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek My face, and turn from their wicked ways, then will I hear. . . forgive. . . and. . . heal their land" (2 Chronicles 7:14) was a message primarily for the nation of Israel, but the principle is the same for us, as God's people. The Spirit of God has often used this verse to bring about revival among His people. The little word "If" in the previous verse presupposes the possibility of divine judgment and we cannot opt out of the danger of it because we are British. In v.14, the possibility of human repentance is seen.

"My people. . . called by My name", says the Word, and in this sense the key to the situation is in our hands, and the responsibility, too. It is not in Heath's or Wilson's hands, nor anyone else's, for the people of God are the saving factor in any nation. Only a spiritual answer can meet a spiritual problem, for the political, industrial, and social unrest are but the consequences of our spiritual condition as a nation.

What should we do? Lobby M.P.s, shout slogans, wave banners, have demos to Westminster? This verse gives the fundamental answer. God has spoken in His Word, so let us take heed to it.

Humility, prayer, and seeking the face of God are the direction we must take, for Isaiah 55:6,7, so often used for the sinner, has a message for God's people: "Seek ye the Lord. . . call upon Him". Turn it up and read it for yourself. Real prayer seems scarce these days, if one can judge by the conditions around us, for we confer, organise, protest, complain - anything but pray! Do you notice how real prayer humbles us?

In prayer we acknowledge our sinfulness and His holiness, our impotence, and His omnipotence, our failure and His faithfulness. The need of the Holy Spirit is absolutely fundamental in this and in every other aspect of the Christian life.

We need to turn from our sin and repent and we must do so, for repentance is not just a word for the sinner. Four times in the Book of the Revelation, the Lord Jesus Christ commands the Churches to repent. The Church at Ephesus needed to repent of its lovelessness, Pergamos of its permissiveness, Sardis of its carelessness, and Laodicea of its worldliness. Lovelessness, permissiveness, carelessness, and worldliness – what an idictment these are against the people of God in any age. If we do not repent of all known sin, then all our praying is hypocrisy, and we are playing, not praying! Quitting sin is the best evidence of sorrow for our sin. IF – the conditions are clear; THEN – the consequences are equally clear. Look at them, for He will "hear. . . forgive. . . heal". The order is right, for God has a deaf ear and a blind eye if we pray, conscious of sin, but with no repentance of heart. Not that He is blind to that sin, but He is deaf to our prayer. If the conditions are fulfilled, however, then He will hear and forgive. The Reformers rescued Europe from the Dark Ages and the Wesleys saved England from a terrible revolution, with their message of repentance and forgiveness. If we turn from our sin, blessing will descend upon our nation, but, if we continue, as a people, to turn from the Saviour, our nation will be cursed, as every other people who turn their back on God, including Israel, of old.

Have you prayed for revival today?

Have you prayed for our nation today?

Have you forsaken any sin that God's Spirit shows you hinders Him from working in your life?

"IF. . . THEN"! Prove it!

PRAYER AND PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

"IS your hotel room air conditioned?". "Does your window open?". "Can you hear the traffic on the streets?". These were questions asked by Koreans Christians in Seoul. My room was air conditioned and how glad I was, because of the heat! I could not hear the traffic in the twenty-third floor room I occupied, nor did the windows open. "What a pity!" I was told. I asked why. I was told that I would not hear the church bells ringing at 4.30 a.m. every morning, seven days a week, the time when Korean Christians of every denomination go to early morning prayer meetings to pray for revival.

These early morning prayer meetings have been going on for some twenty years. Thousands in Korea are praying every morning for revival. That revival has come and what a thrill it was to see hundreds responding to the appeal each night in the Pentecostal World Conference rally in the Hyochang Stadium, which has a seating capacity of 100,000.

Just over twenty years ago the communists came from the north to take over this little Nation. They destroyed 2,000 churches and killed 500 pastors. The widows of those pastors started early morning prayer meetings for revival. Soon others joined them, until today thousands gather each morning before going to work to pray for revival. God is surely answering prayer, for the Christian churches are filled to capacity. What a blessing it was to be in the Sunday morning Communion service in the Central Full Gospel Church, which seats 10,000 people. Not only was the auditorium full, but three chapels besides, seating another 1,100 people, were full, where friends enjoyed the service over closed circuit television.

I am sure that we could have revival in Britain if we are prepared to pay the price and pray!

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

50. The Exaltation of Joseph (Genesis 41:40)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

THIS is surely one of the most remarkable scenes recorded in the Bible! Joseph, still smelling of the prison, stood before Pharaoh and with divine wisdom counselled the king and elders of Egypt. They all recognised and approved him as the servant of God. We are not told whether the Council knew why he had been imprisoned, but they were determined that he should not return there. Instead Pharaoh appointed Joseph to be his chief minister, second in authority only to Pharaoh himself. The Lord brought him out of prison and set him over princes. In this wonderful way He brought to pass the promise that He had made to Joseph (Psalm 105:17-22).

When the Lord Jesus was crucified it seemed that the Word of God had failed, but we know that the Father overruled and shattered the powers of darkness. As His Word foretold, He has exalted the Lord Jesus to supreme authority (Philippians 2:9-11). He will bring to pass the promise which He has made to us for, despite the apparent impossibility, "God is able". At the moment, Christians are despised like Joseph, but soon all Creation will recognise the sons of God (Romans 8:19). This exaltation will take place with dramatic suddenness, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye (1 Corinthians 15:52). Those who have suffered with Christ will reign with Him (2 Timothy 2:12)!

From T. H. Stevenson

AT the Conservative Conference our local M.P. for Worcester, Mr. Peter Walker, Secretary for Trade and Industry, received a standing ovation for a speech he made. A particular section of that speech interested me, though with scarce a thought for the political aspect.

Mr. Walker said: "Of all the economic systems known to man, capitalism is the system which most encourages the individual to develop his talents and apply them and his energies to the full. It creates the maximum of freedom for the individual citizen. Capitalism also has disadvantages, however. Modern capitalism's essential weakness is that it fails to generate ideological commitment. The strength of socialism has perhaps been its idealistic appeal."

My comments are not concerned with politics, if only that we now seem to have numerous Conservative-Socialists and Socialist-Conservatives. The achievements of Communist China and Russia and of small Sweden with Socialism are examples that perhaps all economic systems in their own ways equally encourage the individual to develop his talents and his energies to the full. Mr. Walker continued to remark that, with all the massive reforms of the past, "we have so far failed to achieve genuine equality of opportunity. We must be ruthless in securing a greater equality of opportunity."

Thinking of the Christian Church and particularly of Elim, some of Mr. Peter Walker's claims for his Party and criticisms of it, and his concessions to socialism's appeal to idealism, we might profitably consider salient points which need to be pronounced. We, as in the New Testament, must "encourage the individual to develop his talents and apply them and his energies to the full." We must not fear to "create the maximum of freedom for the individual" even in Pentecostal churches. My observation in general is that the potential of excesses is minimal. We too must sincerely ("ruthlessly" was used by Peter Walker) seek to give greater equality of opportunity. Mr. Walker's statement that capitalism's essential weakness was that "it had failed to generate ideological commitment." This is not isolated to one system. In the Church of our Lord we are aware that there are too many professed believers who come far short of "absolute surrender" to Christ and His service. To be short of this standard is to come short of God's will for us and our work for Him.

Festival of Flowers

ENTER this door
As if the floor
Within were gold,
And every wall
Of jewels all
Of wealth untold;
As if a choir
In robes of fire
Were singing here.
Nor shout, nor rush,
But hush . . .
For God is here.

I recently went to the Cathedral in my native City of Sheffield. It was the occasion of the Flower Festival and was, I discovered, a veritable feast of beauty. Grey stone provides a perfect backcloth to the rich hues of autumn flowers and foliage. My eyes delighted in the crimsons, golds, purples and rosy pinks of dahlias, chrysanthemums, michaelmas daisies and carnations. The floral arrangements were superb and were the work of 100 pairs of dedicated and skilful hands. Every display was created to blend with the part of the Cathedral where it was displayed or with the character of the area. Thus the organ had lovely flowers entwining harps, framing violins, recorders and trumpets. There were even cleverly curled wheat stalks, quite realistic replicas of crotchets and quavers!

A milk can spilled over with white chrysanthemums; lilies and carnations and fat cheeses completed the picture. One glorious arrangement incorporated black grapes, red peppers, sweet corn, garlic and ears of wheat. Another single display in front of the silver Communion plate held a collection of leaves, ferns, poppy-heads and seed pods all shining with aluminium paint and most effective to the eye.

After gazing at all the splendour, I fully endorsed the words written at the top of the open book of anthems in front of the musical instruments: "All thy works shall praise Thee, O Lord, and Thy saints shall bless Thee" (Psalm 145:10). In a world full of cruelty, violence and sudden death, where man creates ugliness and pollution, it was a joy to linger where beauty dwells and where prayer is wont to be made.

On the B.B.C. 9 p.m. news the same day I saw a ship on fire in Plymouth Sound, a mighty tanker on the M5 overturned and belching poisonous fumes, and a gigantic fire in a Slough oil depot. I heard, too, the story of the diabolical cruelty perpetrated when a young woman was forced to pour petrol over herself and thus perished when her attackers set her alight. All this evil made me so thankful for the loveliness of God's handiwork which veritably breathes peace, cleansing and sanity in a world gone mad. May we ever "consider the lilies of the field" and rejoice in all that God has created for His children to enjoy and with which our lives may be enriched.

A personal Prayer

"Grant, O Lord, that everyone who has to do with me this day may be happier for it. May it be given me moment by moment what I should say and may I have the wisdom of a loving heart to say the right thing rightly. Help me to enter into the mind of everyone who talks with me and keep me alive to the feelings of others. Give me a quick eye for little kindnesses, that I may be ready in doing them and gracious in receiving them. Give me quick perception of the needs of others and may I be eager-hearted in helping them, for Christ my Saviour's sake. Amen".

THE WORKING OF MIRACLES—from page 6

in us by the Holy Spirit; then let us expect miracles!

Warning against Satanic miracles. Satan spawns "miracles"; Jannes and Jambres duplicated Moses' signs; Antichrist, in his bid for world worship, will perform "miracles".

The teaching it upholds tells the origin of the miracle. Whereas the miracle of the Holy Spirit's baptism makes us love God and Jesus more, the false "miracles" of spiritism, Christian Science and Satanism, done to uphold doctrines contrary to God's Word, beget belief in a lie and final damnation (2 Thessalonians 2:9,11, 12).

Lying wonders are immoral, idle or useless. The so-called revelations of spiritist mediums are infantile. The "wonders" of Indian fakirs buried alive, walking across hot coals, sleeping on nails, show no lasting result, save to add to the prestige of the perpetrator. On the contrary, the miracles of Moses led to the birth of a nation dedicated to the worship of the one true God. The miracles of Jesus and the early Christians resulted in the birth of the Christian Church. God-given miracles today prepare for the moral victories of the Christian gospel.

Let us all, ministers and people, remember that spiritual things must come first in our lives. Let us refuse to be sucked into the mad vortex of possessiveness that swirls so perilously close. Let us insist that nothing shall be allowed to interrupt our fellowship with God, nothing shall rob the local assembly of what we can and ought to give to it in terms of time, abilities, energy and money, and nothing shall prevent us from reaching out in compassion to the Christless men and women whose pathetic, materialistic lives are flickering out all around us.

God keep Elim from ever deserving the condemnation of Laodicea: "Thou sayest, I am rich, and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked" (Revelation 3:17).

My prayer is that God will help us all to get our priorities right and to keep ourselves open and responsive to what the Holy Spirit is seeking to do in our day and age.

Yours sincerely in Christ's dear name,

JOHN LANCASTER

THE PRINCIPLES AND PRACTICE OF YOUTH WORK
by Eldin R. Corsie, National Youth Director

LESSON 3 Community Evangelism

1. Making Contact with the Home

Door to Door Evangelism

EVERY door in the community is a door of opportunity.

Young people of every age-group must be impressed with the importance and urgency of influencing their community for God. Door-to-door evangelism is the answer. This type of programme is nothing new; it was practised by the Early Church. About 120 began the first church (Acts 1:20). About 3,000 souls were added to it (Acts 2:41). Then 5,000 souls were added (Acts 4:4). In Acts 4:32 it had grown to a multitude. In Acts 5:14 it had increased to multitudes. In Acts 6:1 it was multiplied. In Acts 6:7 it greatly multiplied. It has been said that the first church in Jerusalem reached a possible membership of more than 65,000 in less than six months. One authority estimates it at 250,000.

W.T.H. Richards has produced a special booklet, Door-bell Evangelism, which gives details of how this method of evangelism can be implemented. It is obtained from Ambassador Productions, Gospel Tabernacle, Pitts Road, Slough, Bucks.

Literature Evangelism

Christian literature is one of the most powerful weapons in the armoury of heaven. Selling literature from door-to-door is one of the methods of sects like Jehovah's Witnesses, Seventh Day Adventists, etc. It is possible to find responsible young people who can do this work with great effect. It is helpful to use Elim Publications for free distribution, like THE ELIM EVANGEL and Elim News. A word spoken at a door can reach one person; a piece of literature may reach a whole family. Many of the political organisations are selling their newspapers in the streets. Why not set up an Elim newspaper stand?

Family Contact Evangelism

The following ideas will help to focus the importance of using every young person's home as a base for evangelism. If the young people are Christians their homes can provide many evangelistic opportunities in conjunction with the pastor.

Special prayer meetings for specific young people can be held. Use prayer cards to list the requests.

Write letters to other young people enclosing tracts and invitations to the meetings.

Use the telephone to 'phone young people and talk to them about Christ.

Conduct a child evangelism class in the home. It is sometimes possible to do this in the homes of Sunday school scholars whose parents are unsaved.

Conduct Bible discussion groups. Scripture Press and Scripture Union have handbooks of special subjects with instruction on how to conduct such a meeting. As well as Bible discussions, evangelistic recordings and tape-recordings, flannelgraphs, gospelgraphs and pictographs can teach evangelistic truths.

Entertain unsaved people to tea and tactfully speak to them about spiritual matters or invite them to the meetings. Utilise opportunities to introduce unsaved people to the minister or some experienced fellow-Christian.

Show evangelistic and missionary films in the home.

2. Calling at social Meeting-places.

There are many places where people are crowded and congregated together. These centres are ideal for evangelism.

Public Houses

Very young people will not be able to take part in this work. It is better if singing parties visit public houses. A selection of well-known favourites such as, "Rock of Ages", "Abide with Me", "The old Rugged Cross", "The Lord's my Shepherd", and "What a Friend we have in Jesus", will provide a popular introduction to personal contact.

Before the young folk enter the pub the leader should contact the manager or owner and gain his permission. It is important to state who you are, what you want to do and the length of time you require. A few guitars or an accordion provide excellent accompaniment. Three or four songs interspersed with short snappy testimonies are all that is necessary. Be careful not to condemn beer or cigarettes otherwise the opportunity will be curtailed. You can deal with these evils in private conversation.

Scripture Union Portions — Notes by Gerald L.W. Ladlow

Monday, November 5th — Philemon 1:1-14

"I thank my God, making mention of thee always in my prayers" (v.4).

OTHER translations render this: "I never mention you in my prayers without thanking God for you". When others pray for us, do they have cause to "make their requests known with thanksgiving"? Is it always a source of pleasure to them to remember us at the Throne of Grace? When we pray for fellow-believers do we do so out of a sense of duty or even sometimes with an aggrieved spirit? Let us so live that, not only will others give thanks to God for us, but also that we may see the best in others and give thanks to God for them.

Tuesday, November 6th — Philemon 1:15-25

"Put that on mine account" (v.18).

PAUL became surety for Onesimus, taking upon himself the responsibility of his past wrongdoing and his future obedience, guaranteeing to Philemon that he would not be at loss in receiving again one who merited nothing but punishment from him. Paul was following the example of our Lord who died for us. Our every indebtedness has been put to His account in the records of eternity. Such a display of love should surely awaken within us a deep love for Him and inspire loyal, untiring service in gratitude.

Wednesday, November 7th — Habakkuk 1:1-17

"For lo, I raise up the Chaldeans" (v.6).

IN vv. 1-4, the prophet asks a series of questions because of the seeming indifference of God to the sinfulness and backsliding of the nation. In reply the Lord reveals that His sovereignty can overrule the affairs of mankind and that even the invasion of the land by the heathen Chaldeans can become an instrument of His judgment upon the nation. We cannot always see the direct intervention of God in our situations in answer to our earnest prayers, but this is no evidence that our prayers are not being answered. God has His own way of working out His designs. Through what may appear to be natural events He accomplishes His purposes.

God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform;
He plants His footsteps on the sea
And rides upon the storm.

Thursday, November 8th — Habakkuk 2:1-20

"Though it tarry, wait for it; because it will surely come" (v.3).

HOW impatient we so often are! We want to see the immediate working out of God's plans. When nothing seems to be happening, we are tempted to think that there is some mistake, either in the message or in the interpretation of it. Just as the prophet learned that he must wait patiently for the Lord to speak and reveal His plans, he is now instructed to wait patiently and unquestioningly for their fulfilment. One thing is made certain: no matter how long it may tarry, the fulfilment of God's Word will come to pass. The acceptance of this can give us peace and inspiration when all things appear to be contrary to the declared plan of God.

Friday, November 9th — Habakkuk 3:1-19

"Although. . . yet I will rejoice in the Lord" (vv. 17,18).

THE prophet has learned that behind the inexplicable things of loss and failure there moves the perfect love of God fulfilling itself in perfect wisdom and that therefore he can sing his song of rejoicing no matter how difficult the circumstances of life may be. Like the Palestinian hind which reaches rocky heights because of the perfect correlation between its front and rear feet, so, when the belief of the mind and the faith of the soul are in perfect agreement, we can stand on "our high places" and sing our praise to God (v.19).

Saturday, November 10th — Ezekiel 1:1-14

"The hand of the Lord was there upon him" (v.3).

THROUGHOUT the whole of this book we constantly read of the hand of the Lord being upon the prophet. Though he was a captive in a strange land surrounded by distasteful circumstances, nearer to him than these was the presence of the Lord. So near did he feel God to be that he can only describe it as the feeling of His hand laid upon him. The result was that he was restrained from sinking to despair, constrained to give forth His message, emboldened, inspired and comforted. To live with the consciousness of His hand upon us is surely the ideal for every believer; then we know that we are in the centre of His will and can sing:

Oh, the touch of His hand on mine!
There is grace and power
For the trying hour
By the touch of His hand on mine.

Sunday, November 11th — Ezekiel 1:15-28

"Upon the. . . throne was the likeness as the appearance of a man" (v.26).

THIS strange vision of the cherubims and the wheels contains much that is difficult to understand but, when we come to the description of the throne and the One who sat upon it, there is no such difficulty. He has the appearance of a man. How good to know that He who rules the universe is one who lived among men and "was found in fashion as a man" and therefore fully understands human frailty. "Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need." (Hebrews 4:16).

Are Ministers necessary?

Does the Church need a Ministry?

by A. S. F. Horne,
Pastor of our Ipswich Church

I BELIEVE that a healthy, devoted ministry will produce a healthy, vigorous, joyful church.

It is not the age of the minister, but his God-given gifts of ministry that are important.

The Jewish Priesthood stood between God and the people. Through them the blessings came and through them Israel approached God. I believe that the same principles exist now. This does not invalidate the fact that true believers are a spiritual priesthood, each having the privilege of free access to the throne of grace, as certainly as the Jewish High Priest had exclusive right to approach the mercy seat on the great day of atonement. This privilege implies that the power is conferred upon believers by grace of bringing down upon themselves a glory excelling the glory of the Shekinah. It remains a fact, however, and one of vast importance, that a holy ministry is essential to Church prosperity. That we may have a right perception of this subject, it will be needful to understand the following things.

God has ever had His people in a Community

Under the old dispensation, God's people were the children of Abraham, distinguished by the right of circumcision, the seal of the covenant which God made with their father. Though most of them lived very disobediently, He yet recognised them as His, and spoke of and acted towards them as He did not to the rest of mankind. In this dispensation, God has a people, represented in their corporate capacity by a vine, a building, a temple, a body and a kingdom, a people marked off from the rest of mankind by baptism, the seal of the new, better covenant.

This Body is edified through divinely-appointed Ordinances

These are: the preaching of the Word of Life; those who preach it; the exercise of worship: the continuing steadfastness in the Apostles' Doctrine, Breaking of Bread, Prayer, Baptism and Fellowship.

No-one who is truly saved can use these and other means and fail to be built up in the faith, while those who despise these ordinances, or any of them, must lose spirituality. Praise God that they can be restored to the faith by true repentance!

Each of these Ordinances has its own Place and Power

The efficacy of any one is not affected by the loss of power in any of the others. For example: should the ordinance of a living ministry become weak or corrupt, that does not lessen or destroy the power of the gospel.

This is a great blessing, for in all ages the ministry has varied and often a whole nation has been affected by an inconsistent or an inefficient ministry. God has none the less honoured His Word, even when it has been preached by those who do not know its power in their own hearts. Had this been otherwise, what a terrible evil it would have been to the Church – the people would have perished. Still there has been lurking in such cases the good which a devoted spiritual ministry imparts.

A revived and holy Ministry leads to a joyous Church

The welfare of the Church is involved in the ministry. If we take the similitude of a vine, the ministry is the roots; or that of a body, the ministry is the joints and bands, which, Paul says, not only keep and knit all together, but they minister likewise nourishment and strength. Now if the roots of a vine do not get water, how can the vine have its sap replenished? If the joints and bands of the body be dislocated or diseased, the body is weak and disordered.

When Jesus had ascended up on high, He gave certain ministers to the Church, that through them the Church might be edified and taken up to the stature of a perfect man in Christ Jesus. Hence the need for revival when the ministry becomes weak and diseased. The Psalmist prayed: "Revive us again". Like other men, ministers are weak. Infallibility is not theirs, for they are subject to the infirmities of the flesh, the deadening actions of the world and the deluding temptations of the devil. Should they be smitten by any of these evil agents, the Church under them will soon languish.

The prosperity of the Church depends instrumentally on the healthy piety of the ministry, for, though God will still bless His own Word, even though it is preached by unclean servants, much of its power and blessing is lost.

A minister can only give what he possesses, hence, if he is worldly or sensual, if he lacks personal spirituality, his perceptions are dim, his experience is barren, his acts are careless and the church to which he ministers will sink down to his level.

In our next article we will consider the effects of a revived ministry.

A B.B.C. news commentator said on the radio that, if you kept £100 for ten years from now, and if the present rate of inflation continued for that period, the comparative value of the £100 at the end of ten years would be 91p – yes, ninety-one PENCE!

Apart from the fact that every housewife could have told him so. . . there is a fundamental thought here.

A man had his house burgled only two weeks ago. He and his wife were robbed of their life-savings of £7,000. He said, "I always intended to put it into the bank, but I never got round to it.".

The Christian Church is seen at its worst when it gets bogged down with minor doctrinal aspects, matters of government, methods of procedure. How many groups there are who have the same doctrinal emphases, but who zealously and jealously guard their independence on the ground of some governmental emphasis probably based, if they did but realise it, not any real Scriptural foundation, but arising from their (if they will pardon the word!) evolution. Many protracted discussions on constitutional niceties are almost totally unproductive. They serve to confirm the parties in their original conceptions and do little or nothing towards letting in fresh air and new light.

Yes, the Church is at its worst when it is intent on saving its life. The capital soon becomes run down in value. We do not have what we appear to have, only memories of what was, nostalgia concerning its hoped-for return, and a preoccupation with conserving.

It is said (though this would need to be proved) that the Christian Brethren generally feel that an assembly of fifty demands that another group be started in the vicinity. It certainly seems from Church history that God has moved in power from time to time at least to stir up the nest and to send out some of the young to start nests of their own!

"I have declared unto them Thy name, and will declare it" said the Lord (John 17:26). Our task is to declare to the world salvation in and through the Lord Jesus Christ, indeed to proclaim HIM, Himself. The more we do this and the more we open new centres of witness, the greater the tendency that what we have will grow. The outward vision, indeed the world-wide outward vision, leads to inward growth.

The saddest man in Scripture must have been the man who carefully preserved the one talent and handed it back intact, but unused. He lost everything. He had what he had to use.

If we merely keep what we have and do not grow - and do not expand our witness - we shall find £100 worth of experience degenerating into ninety-one pence worth of value.

Ordination Service 1973

Our Reporter: J. Osman

A CAPACITY congregation crowded our Clapham Church, London, for the Ordination Service, which surely ranks as one of the most important services in Elim's national calendar. The interest and importance of the occasion had been heightened by a letter from the Secretary-General informing us that members of our late beloved brother Pastor E.J. Phillip's family and the Executive Council had decided to incorporate a memorial section into the Service.

Expectation ran high as the church started to fill long before the announced time of commencement. Families of the ordinands, friends and members of their congregations came from far to support and to pray for them on this vital day. Ushers busily shepherded folk to their seats. Older ministers recalled the time of their ordination. Douglas Fincher arranged and re-arranged the Elim Bible College Choir. Every space was filled as extra chairs were squeezed in here and there. From the vantage point of the platform one could see the seating flowing out into the vestibule. Upstairs and downstairs were choc-a-bloc. At last we were ready to begin.

From one corner of the gallery Douglas Fincher expertly conducted the Choir in singing: "What a wonderful Day" and "I've got Peace like a River". This splendid ministry was followed closely by the appearance of the twelve ordinands who occupied their reserved seats on the front row, and the Executive Council accompanied by the preacher, Pastor J.A. Wright. The President, Pastor John Lancaster, welcomed the tightly-packed congregation and led the singing of the opening hymn, "Praise, my soul, the King of Heaven". We responded heartily to Pastor T.W. Walker's fluent prayer as he led us fervently to seek that God would make us conscious of His presence, give unction to the speaker and cause that everyone present might receive something from His liberal hand. We lustily sang, "Unto Him who hath loved us and washed us from sin" and settled back to enjoy the Choir rendering "Our great Saviour". What a splendid sight they made, filling three rows from wall to wall! One could not help rejoicing in the thought that many of them are divinity students. It augurs well for the future manpower of Elim.

Eleven of the ordinands

Pastor J.T. Bradley deputised at short notice for Pastor D.B. Gray who had been taken ill and unfortunately was unable to fulfil the commitment of paying tribute to our former Secretary-General, Pastor E.J. Phillips. Pastor Bradley tendered apologies on his behalf, then made affectionate reference to our dear brother "E.J.", who is now triumphant in Glory and rejoicing in the presence of God. We were reminded that we are made partakers of God's eternity, trinity, sovereignty and creativity. "E.J." would not have wanted tributes. He considered the greatest work to be winning souls for Jesus Christ and to this work he gave unreserved enthusiasm, working efficiently and zealously behind the scenes from 1919 to the time of his retirement. He occupied several posts in Elim, but it was as Secretary-General that he did his greatest work, giving himself assiduously to the task, often labouring night and day. Tribute was also paid to his widow, Mrs. Molly Phillips, who had been such a faithful helpmeet, and we echoed "Amen!" to the expressed wish that God would bless, strengthen and comfort her in the Holy Ghost. Miss Mabel Dalton had travelled up from Bournemouth, where she is now spending her retirement, and she was fittingly commended for her faithful and efficient work as E.J's secretary for so many years. E.J's humour (not always recognised) was referred to by Pastor Bradley who related a personal anecdote concerning a letter he received from E.J. telling him that he would have a year-long honeymoon, having been appointed to Springbourne, Bournemouth instead of to Barnsley. Said Mr. Bradley, "We look forward to reunion when we rise". A telegram "of thankful memory and prayerful sympathy" was received from the Scottish Presbytery. The congregation stood and shared Pastor Lancaster's prayer of thanksgiving and dedication.

Four students sang in close harmony that touching piece, "On a rugged hill".

Stirring singing of the hymn "Come Jesus Lord with holy Fire" created a reverent atmosphere as Pastor J.A. Wright stood to preach. In his introductory remarks he indulged in some reminiscence (which of us would not have done the same?) This veteran minister was ordained forty years ago in Kensington Temple. His text was Romans 1:1, where the punctuation marks indicate the four dimensions of a preacher's life, viz: Selfward; Godward; Othersward and Bibleward. The message will appear in a later EVANGEL.

Appropriately we sang two verses of Pastor E.C.W. Boulton's choice hymn, "Called to Separation".

At this stage in the service, Pastor R.B. Chapman, the Field Superintendent, introduced each ordinand with a brief summary of their Elim service to date. Concisely and sincerely in alphabetical order they took their turn to testify, before individually responding to the three questions posed by the President, which are a necessary prelude to ordination:

1. As a Minister of Christ to you pledge your loyalty to God and to His Holy Word?

2. Do you promise by the help of God to honour Christ and His Gospel by your life and ministry?

3. Do you affirm loyalty to His Church and in particular to that branch of His Church in which you are called, namely the Elim Pentecostal Church, accepting unreservedly its fundamentals, its constitution and discipline?

Space forbids more than a passing reference to the testimonies, but perhaps the following phrases were keynotes among the expressions of gratitude for parents, wives, pastors, churches, etc.: J. Bristow – God's choice; R.L. Currie – God's guidance; P.A. Epton – God's continual moving; G.J. Feasey – God's grace in answering prayer; J.J. Glass – God's challenge and call always in his soul; J.J. Henderson – God's evident leading; F.J. Livings – God's wonderful providence and provision; T.P. Mullen – God's call and enablings to minister; G.H. Neale – God's marvellous change wrought in his life; P.T. Niblett – God's glory his desire; P.G. Parsons – gratitude to God; P.J. Thompsett – God's gracious gifts. The President reminded us that our ordination was but a recognition of HIS ORDINATION. The brethren kneeled whilst senior ministers laid hands upon them and, in the most moving moment Pastor Ron Jones passionately prayed. Some sentences are easily recalled: "In these sophisticated days we are nothing apart from the Spirit". "We are moving in the orbit of His Omnipotence". The service concluded fittingly with the last two verses of "Called to Separation". The chorus sings on in our souls:

Step by step with Jesus
All along life's way.
Now the cross and conflict,
Then the perfect day.

It was all over. We dispersed in good time, to share additional fellowship over the refreshments so kindly provided by Pastor J. Fry and the Clapham members, happy in the knowledge that we belong to God and to the Elim family which He has created.

W. Midlands Presbytery Quiz

LONGTON and Silverdale teams fought out the final of the inter-church quiz organised by the W. Midlands Presbytery. Here is another view of the successful Silverdale team, with the runners-up, the Longton team:

The final round of the quiz was on the Book of Esther and the score was: Silverdale 41, Longton 31. The questions were set by Pastor M.J. Baker.

EALING, London Pastor: F.F.L. Frost

EARLY in September we celebrated the forty-third anniversary. of the Church and Pastor and Mrs. F. Frost's first anniversary with us. We were delighted to have Pastor and Mrs. J. McBurney back with us for the weekend, bringing back happy memories to many present of their ministry at Ealing from 1954 to 1959. On the Saturday the sisters prepared a splendid tea of which over 100 participated.

Mr. McBurney's ministry was of the highest standard imparting uplift and challenge. Mr. L.W. Groves, the Church Secretary, welcomed the guests. Bouquets were presented to Mrs. McBurney and to Mrs. Frost; and a monetary gift to our Pastor.

We are grateful to God for Mr. and Mrs. Frost's faithful fruitful ministry throughout the past year and we look forward to a real move forward under their continued ministry.

God is still blessing the youth work here. Four coach-loads of children, parents and teachers, comprising the Sunday School at Ealing and the branch at Hanwell, went on their outing to Walton-on-Naze. Our outstanding event was the annual Open Evening for the Primary, Junior and Intermediate Crusaders when parents and members had an opportunity to see what happens every Wednesday evening of the year, when the children (ages ranging from three to fourteen) learn of the wonder of God's love.

During our Pastor's holiday, Pastor J.J. Way, who is now retired and who is no stranger to Ealing, took over the pastorate. It was a great joy and blessing to sit under his ministry.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ursell's farewell service on their returning as missionaries to Spain for their third term of service was conducted by Mr. Way. Mrs. Ursell was a Member of our Church, while Mr. Ursell came from the Leeds Church. They are working under the auspices of Assemblies of God.

We also said goodbye to Mr. V. Anderson (Crusader Secretary), who entered Elim Bible College the next day. Pastor Frost and the Deacons committed him and his family to the Lord. In the evening we were thrilled with a welcome return visit from Pastor D.B. Gray and the London Crusader Choir. By their high standard, they make a bigger impact and give a greater uplift on each successive visit.

BROADSTAIRS Pastor: B. Grist

A CHILDREN'S campaign was held here recently. It proved to be a blessed and profitable venture. It lasted for five nights and had a very varied programme. Attendances were excellent and consistent, ensuring an influx of children into both our Sunday school and our midweek meeting. We rejoice in having children to teach and willing, capable helpers. The campaign was run by the Minister and Members of the Church.

Another blessing was the visit of Mr. C.W. Smith of our Swindon Church who came with video-tapes and films of Elim's 1973 major gatherings and events. It was good to recapture some of the events at which one had been present. The tapes were very enlightening and educational to those who had never attended such gatherings. They were a great blessing to our assembly. The scope of this equipment in regard to teaching and evangelistic possibilities is immense.

THE GIFTS OF THE SPIRIT– 6

The Gift of Prophecy

(1 Corinthians 12:10)

by Charles J. E. Kingston

THE gift of prophecy takes precedence over the other gifts of utterance. The Bible emphasizes it: "Desire spiritual gifts, but rather that ye may prophesy".

1. The words used by the Holy Spirit express some thing of its glory.

The Hebrew word means "to cause to bubble up", and so to pour forth words abundantly as is done by those who speak with divine inspiration. Water seeking an outlet bubbles up. We will have nothing to "bubble up" about unless we have an overplus seeking an outlet. It is difficult to witness of Christ without a real overflow of the Spirit. Then it becomes delightfully easy. The Old Testament prophets were "moved by the Holy Ghost" and so they move us.

The New Testament Greek word implies speaking under divine influence, whether as foretelling future events (as Agabus did) or exhorting as the interpreter of God's will. The prophet was God's spokesman. In the absence of the written Word of God available to the ordinary person, the Old Testament prophets gave exhortation and guidance as to the will of God. Since Pentecost, individual believers have the promise of guidance by the Holy Spirit (John 16:13).

2. The Decay of the Prophets.

We need prophets who will not be afraid to speak God-given words; whose healing, rectifying words will turn pale the cheeks of sin and cause hell to vomit its chosen victims! Where are our prophets? Why is there this decay of prophesyings in the power of the Holy Spirit? What means this craven cowardice which closes the mouths of our prophets? The gift of prophecy should follow the baptism in the Holy Spirit. At Pentecost, dispersed Jews heard the disciples speaking their native languages. To them it was prophecy; to the speakers it was unknown tongues. Women, as well as men, prayed and prophesied: Evangelist Philip had four daughters who prophesied in the Church at Caesarea, which we may suppose had been opened through the evangelistic efforts of their father (1 Corinthians 11:5, Acts 21:9,10).

3. The Use of the Gift.

The Church must preserve prophecy; barren times in the history of the Church have always been marked by the decline of its prophets. Three specific uses are given in 1 Corinthians 14:3:

a. To edify the Church. The word literally means "to build a temple". The prophet is a bricklayer; so get your hod and trowel, prophets, and get busy! The inspired written Word preached and the inspired spoken word of prophecy complement each other. Significantly, often those who decry the gifts of the Spirit soon discard the written Word; doubters are not usually found among those who accept the supernatural gifts of the Holy Spirit.

b. To exhort the Church. The word means "to call near". A cognate word describes the Holy Spirit's office of Comforter or Advocate, thus reflecting the healing work of the Spirit Himself.

c. To comfort the Church. Ellicott renders the passage: "Building up; stirring up; cheering up" – a blessed gift, indeed!

d. To convict unbelievers (1 Corinthians 14:31). Principally for believers, it convicts unbelievers made conscious of the presence of God. They will report "that God is in you of a truth".

4. Some Observations on this Gift.

When God took of the Spirit that was upon Moses and gave it to the seventy elders, they prophesied. Two were not present at the climactic moment, however, yet did not miss the blessing, but prophesied in the camp. When one asked Moses to rebuke them, he replied: "Would God that all the Lord's people were prophets!". At Pentecost, Moses' prayer was answered.

a. The gift of prophecy does not supersede the written Word. Prophecies will fail, but the Word of God abides for ever. The last Book of God's completed revelation forbids adding thereto. This puts out of court the so-called "Book of Mormon" and any superstitious tendency to put prophesyings on a par with Scripture.

b. The prophets should speak in turn. Evidently, the Holy Spirit provides for the ministry of more than

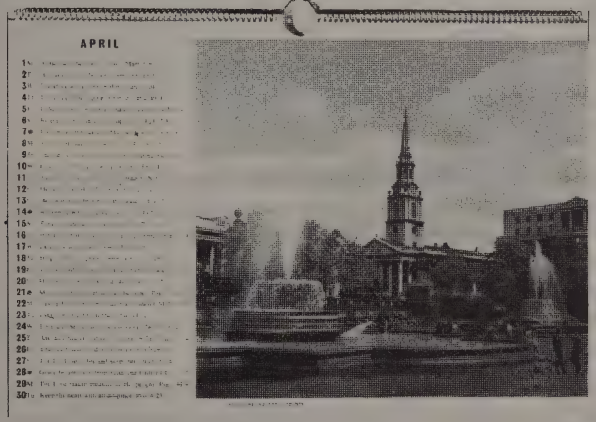
Children's Safety Corner

by Uncle Archie

DO you watch the adverts on television? The other day I saw one about Road Safety.

It was the story of a boy who was led by his parents into very dangerous situations because they did not observe the rules of the Safety Code. They crossed the road at the wrong time and places. They even stepped out into the road from between two cars and were nearly knocked down by an oncoming car driven by –guess who? Those parents were a menace to the boy and all concerned. It looked so real, although, ,of course, it was made as a story to warn us, as well as to encourage us all to keep to the rules of the road.



I would not like any of you to be injured or to land up in hospital, so I have made up a story about Jack and Jill. All you have to do is to fill in the blank spaces. Each line is a letter.

Jack and Jill decided to play in the park which was not far from their home. They raced down the garden path and would have – – – into the – – – –, but they pulled up at the – – – – just as a big lorry raced past them. Standing perfectly still they remembered their – – – – drill. Eyes – – – – –, eyes – – – –, eyes – – – – – again, if all – – – – – walk across. They did this and reached the other side safely, but then they began to – – – – with a – – – and narrowly escaped injury when running into the – – – – after it. Eventually they arrived safely at the park and had a great time together. And so they – – – – – happily ever after. See that you do the same by keeping the Safety Code on the road.

There are rules in the Bible which we need to keep in order to live a good, happy, long lives. In Psalm 23 we are told that, if Jesus is our Shepherd, He will lead us in the paths that are right. Is Jesus your Shepherd?

In Psalm 17 we are told that, if we pray, the Lord will see to it that our footsteps will not slip into wrong doing. Do you pray?

In John 10 we are told that, if we follow the Lord, He will call us by our names and we will be led into the way of abundant life. Are you following the Lord?

The George Canty Viewpoint

. . . On seeing Ourselves

IN America, everything that goes, goes, as far as television is concerned, if you pay the required tol s. With enough cash, churches are able to show their entire neighbourhood how pointless it would be to go there. After listening to a Bible broadcast on the Number of the Beast, my American host proudly suggested that we couldn't get that kind of thing across on British radio. I indicated that we had mercifully been preserved from such foolish people in Britain and that we needn't worry about the British public being further alienated by such nonsense than they already are.

I wish some American broadcasters could see themselves as the British see them. However, it is as hard to get on British television – unless you are a freak or a Tariq Ali – as into Buckingham Palace. All unsuspecting, therefore, I made a little nervous approach and found myself landed with an alarming contract to appear thirty times on the television screens from Wales to Anglia, from the Derbyshire peaks to the Cotswolds.

Well, without instruction or previous experience, I was in the studio, surrounded by three cameras, and all the unbelievably numerous people that are required – producer, floor manager, design man, lighting, sound, make up, props, controllers. There could be no rehearsal, no editing (as with radio), no second chance; just go ahead, paint a picture and preach a sermon in four and a half minutes, not one second more. My brain, a whirl of cameras, voices, brushes, dim memories of a long-ago written script, time signals (upraised finger only, which I never saw), was also saying, "George Canty you're expecting too much of one brain; I'm giving up. Nobody but you would be irresponsible enough to expect me to do fifty things at once.".

But one thing I must not forget – smile!

Now we all have some physical limitations. Some people have that set of arm which couldn't throw and hit the Royal Albert Hall from three yards away. Smiling for me is an achievement which ranks in effort with Edward Whymper's feat in climbing the Matterhorn. I wasn't made that shape. I grin (I think) and people ask me what's worrying me. I'm convulsed with merriment inside and outside I register as if my death sentence had been confirmed. The whole audience roar, and I think I'm joining in, but somebody asks me if I heard the joke. A friend of mine glows, his beaming eyes and creasing smile turning his round face into a sun-bathed landscape. But – he is a manic-depressive.

When others see us! I'm usually happy, filled with a sense of God's wonderful goodness to me. But my soul looks out of a body that is singularly uncooperative in registering what I experience. I love people and they wonder what I've got against them. "We are all lonely islands, and we shout to one another across seas of misunderstanding".

So, today, I watch myself at home. That mouth-drooping, unsmiling man, daubing Prussian blue on a canvas and talking about repentance – me. . .? That superhuman effort to smile – and it produced that look...! True, painting and preaching was something not even Paul would have attempted, but – he'd have smiled even in that circumstance, I'm sure.

Let us draw a veil over my mortification, and hope the rapture will take place before I am forced by the sheer horror of it to watch myself talking to me from that remorseless truth-telling screen again. Truth-telling? It lies. I felt gloriously thankful I'd finished in time!

It was Robert Burns who said "Oh would some power the giftie gie us, to see ourselves as others see us". He got it back to front. I wish the giftie would give other people the power to see us as we see ourselves: when our best intentions to please only make folk bristle; when our would-be good is taken ill; when motives are misinterpreted, and self-sacrifice is looked upon as exhibitionism. I take heart from the promise that "We shall know even as we are known" – known that is, by the Lord. Our present reputation is based upon outward, superficial appearance. Our back-slapping and bonhomie – it could be a facade for self-promotion – or genuine. Who knows? Our sadness-seeming could be merely our concern for others.

Let me admit, however, that there are times when even I become radiant, with all my facial limitations for registering any feeling whatever. Sometimes when the Spirit of God rises in me like a gusher and the Word of God grips me like the hand of the Almighty, even I break forth into laughter. "God has made me to laugh" said Sarah. That's God all right.

George Canty is seen on ATV Network, Midlands, every Tuesday at 12 noon and 12.15 midnight, under the feature entitled "George Canty", painting and talking.

The BBC feature, planned to be broadcast on October 7th, which was to include our President-Elect and the Sparkbrook Church, was postponed until December as the BBC wished to give immediate coverage to a programme which had won an international prize. It is expected to be heard in December. An announcement will be made later.

Book Reviews

Your Guide to the Christian Life, by John Lancaster. Published by Grenehurst Press, price 5p, postage and packing 3p extra.

THE new convert will benefit greatly from the concisely presented subjects of repentance, faith, acceptance of Christ as Lord, prayer, Bible reading and witnessing. Additional subjects are: baptism, breaking of bread, church fellowship, giving, the baptism in the Spirit, living a separated life, and dealing with temptation. The back page is usefully printed as a decision card.

This Pentecostal booklet will prove even more valuable than the evangelical materials already available, due to its broader contents and its definite teaching on the baptism in the Spirit. At 5p a copy this is just the tool for which our Christian counsellors have been waiting.

A.K. Chamberlain

The Acts of the Apostles, by William Neil. Published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott, price £3.50, postage and packing 12p extra.

THIS latest volume in the New Century Bible series is written with that lucidity and succinctness characteristic of the erudite neo-orthodox scholar Mr. William Neil. His Introduction in particular, drawn from his earlier The Truth about the Early Church (1970), provides a valuable survey of recent scholarship and eludidates the concepts underlying his commentary.

Dr. Neil considers that Luke has arranged his history to provide "a re-enactment of the Gospel story and of the great themes of Old Testament redemptive history", and in the text he gives some interesting cross-references.

The early Christians' power was the Holy Spirit, he acknowledges, but the enduement "is thought of as accompanying baptism on admission into the new community (2:38)." The Scriptural instances indicating its distinction from Water-baptism and the evidence of glossolalia are seen as exceptions to the norm. He accepts the miraculous with reservations: "No doubt some of the stories that came to Luke, like some of the miracle stories in his Gospel, had lost nothing in the telling, and pious regard for the Apostles had added its quota of imaginative embellishments."

While this work can give the well-informed reader healthy mental exercise, it lacks the weight to be a reference volume.

Record Review

Let's Celebrate, Sharon L.P. Record, price £1.32, postage and packing 13p extra.

THIS is a happy, refreshing record. The Bristol City Temple celebrates twenty-one years of its history this year and there are great plans in hand for a new church building and other developments. This disc has been made as part of the celebrations.

The items are almost entirely by young people. Many of the pieces will be new to most people. There is a lilt about them all and I can recommend this Christian record. It will particularly attract young people.

Opportunity Knocks

by W. Ronald Jones

MAKE no mistake about it, Guyana is a land of tremendous opportunity for God. Len Magee and I took part in over sixty services of one sort or another before we had been there for four weeks. It is not so much the number of services, but the variety of opportunities that delight me. Let me take you on a short conducted tour of "OPPORTUNITY LAND".

This is the Radio Demerara Studio. It is 8.30 a.m. Any minute now we are to commence recording two half-hour services that will be broadcast in a few weeks' time on Saturday mornings. These will reach thousands. Elim Broadcasts have already brought great blessing to many people. Next Saturday's will be only the fourth Elim Half-Hour, but there will be at least another forty-eight, because John MacInnes, man of vision and faith that he is, has signed the contract that will make this possible. To seize this opportunity is costly, but to miss it would be criminal! Please pray and give.

"Meet with Patricia" is broadcast live every morning and now we are in her studio. Pat is reputed to be a hard character, but she is a first-class interviewer. For twenty-five minutes we tell of Elim and its message and talk of the world and its need. We even get to play a band from Len Magee's latest long-playing record and one from the recently-released "Let's Celebrate" Album, featuring the Bristol New Creation Singers. While listening to this, Guyana's top radio disc jockey, Bertie Chancellor, invites us to be special guests next Saturday morning on his two-hour "Teensville" Show. Here is yet another heaven-sent opportunity.

Just about everywhere we go we hear the same kind of greeting, "Hello, Brother Mac"; "Good morning, Brother Mac"; "How are you today, Brother Mac?". Is there no-one in Georgetown who doesn't know this now-fattening Scotsman? God has graciously given to these Elim missionaries much success, and that's the next stop on our conducted tour.

Success is a large village of a couple of thousand inhabitants, just six miles from the capital City, Georgetown. When I was here three years ago, this work was very much in its infancy, for Ian MacInnes had just gathered together about half a dozen Indian young men who were keen to know about the Bible. The other evening I preached to a congregation of about fifty. That's good progress in three years, and that's not the end, not by a long way. They also have five Sunday Schools in various parts of the village and already a large piece of ground has been purchased. Our workers are just waiting for cash that will enable them to build a new Elim Church in Success. Yes, opportunity certainly knocks in Success!

John and Gladys MacInnes show Len Magee the plot of land that we have purchased in Success.

Now, how about a visit to Georgetown Prison. It is certainly a foreboding kind of place even at 9 o' clock on a sunny Sunday morning. One of the warders opens the chapel. There is no compulsion on the prisoners, but they are coming in, seventy four of them in all. Len Magee sings. I bring a very "straight down the line" gospel message and make an appeal for those who will commit their lives to Jesus to stand, while all the other prisoners look on. Forty stand! I find it difficult to believe, and ask them to sit down while I explain it once more, but the same forty stand again. One prisoner, who must be at least twenty-two stones, is very moved and tells us of a dream that he had the previous evening. He saw himself on a screen. He was sinking, and sinking fast. It was so vivid that, when he awoke, he had to get a Bible and pray. I am old-fashioned enough to believe that God did a work of grace in some, at least, of these men. Brother Mac has this open door of opportunity at least four times a year.

Well, let's continue our tour. This rather old-looking wooden building is the Cambridge Academy. It's three o'clock on Wednesday afternoon when we arrive for a get-together with the 100-plus students. The Headmaster is a fine Christian and a goodly number of the students are, too. There are a few more now, for today five young folk have committed their lives to the Lord Jesus Christ. Here is something wonderful. Brother Mac has an open door into eight such schools. If ever a mission field cries out for more workers, Guyana does.

It's Sunday afternoon. A young fellow named Ron opens his car door for me. You jump in, too, and come along with me. We are off to a large trading estate the name of which is Ruimveld. Here's a familiar sign: "ELIM – THE MISSION WITH A MESSAGE". We are visiting a new Sunday School, no more than six months old. Osrene is in charge of this. She is one of the most dedicated young Christians I have ever met. Osrene is a nurse and works nights regularly so that she can be free to get to all the services. She has a class on Sunday mornings at 10 a.m. in the main Sunday School at Albert Street and then comes out to this Estate in the afternoon to run this Sunday School. Today there are fifty children present, the biggest number since the effort commenced. The children look lovely in their brightly coloured dresses and shirts and how well they listen. When I was in Guyana three years ago, there were nineteen Sunday Schools, now there are twenty seven, with an average weekly attendance of around 1,300 scholars. There is ample opportunity to open more Sunday Schools if only there were more workers.

I am not quite sure whether you would wish to join us on the next part of our tour. We are going to the leper colony. There are some dreadful cases here, but our Elim missionaries are there every Sunday and every other Friday. It's only twenty-five miles from Georgetown, so it won't take us too long. When John MacInnes first found the door of opportunity open to him, it took him much longer for he had to do the journey on a bicycle! Today we hold a service in the chapel and there is a decision for Christ. Before we leave, however, I want you to meet Cameron. He can't get along to the service, so we will have to go to his ward. There he is. You've already noticed how badly distorted are his mouth and lips and how very badly pitted is his black-skinned face. You've probably noticed, too, that he has no fingers or toes. Perhaps you haven't noticed yet that he has no eyes, only empty sockets! That's how he was when I first met him three years ago, but he's worse now: His right leg has gone, but, as he sits in his wheelchair, there is something radiant about him. "Would you sing for us, Cameron?" we ask, and away he goes, "He touched me, He touched me, and oh the joy that fills my soul". What a testimony, what a convert, and all because many years ago an open door of opportunity was accepted. We mustn't miss them today, either!

How would you like to finish up at a Guyanese wedding? Come on, then! We must not be late. The ceremony commences at 4 o'clock. Many guests are already there. So are the Minister, Marriage Officer, John MacInnes, the preacher, named Ron Jones, and the soloist, Len Magee. Four o'clock comes and goes. So does 4.30. It's 4.45 p.m. and "Here comes the bride". She looks a picture, dressed in her long, flowing wedding gown, but in all my experience I have never known a bride so late. She sets off on a further five-minutes taxi ride, simply because THE BRIDEGROOM HASN'T TURNED UP YET! Back she comes, but still no bridegroom. Off goes the bride on another little excursion around the block. Five o'clock has struck and here at last comes the bridegroom, all spic and span. All's well that ends well. In addition to the couple being safely and satisfactorily joined together, there are thirteen who make decisions for Christ. Even being a Marriage Officer seems to open up doors of opportunity for Brother Mac!

So they come, opportunities galore, opportunities among children, teenagers, prisoners, lepers, on the radio, in our churches and in day schools. More men and more money will be needed if we are going to make full use of these God-given opportunities. We must pray that the Lord of the harvest will thrust out labourers into His harvest field AND WE MUST BE WILLING TO PLAY OUR PART, TOO.

It has been a pleasure to be your guide. Thank you for coming. I trust that you enjoyed it. By the way, just send the guide's tip to the Elim Missionary Society, Elim Headquarters, P.O. Box 38, Cheltenham and mark it "FOR OPEN DOORS IN GUYANA".

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor,

I would like to pass on a few thoughts from having attended various meetings on Saturday evenings outside my own Church. Sad to say, I have sat in the various Churches before and after meetings and, apart from the Pastor, not a person has spoken to me; for all they know I could be an unsaved person. Not very much encouragement, is it?

I have often heard people condemn the Church of England for this attitude and yet we do it ourselves. I must honestly say that in our Church our Pastor has always taught us to speak to any strangers. A couple of years ago we had an agape campaign and we have often had people say that they could feel the warmth of love in our Church when they have come as strangers.

Only recently I sat in a Church hall with a cup of tea and a piece of cake at an anniversary service for twenty minutes, and not a soul spoke to me except the Pastor. The service itself was beautiful, but I came away sad at heart, and wondered how we can say that we love Jesus when apparently we cannot even love one another.

Yours sincerely,
(Mrs.) Doris Nicolson

THE GIFT OF PROPHECY—from page 6

one, but, in any one meeting of the Church, there should not be more than three prophecies and these should be judged.

c. The gifts are futile without grace. "Though I have the gift of prophecy. . . and have not love, I am nothing", wrote Paul. Some years ago two women suddenly started attending a church which I was pastoring. Professing the gift of prophecy, they ministered the "gift" at every Communion service, but it was in a harsh, criticizing, fault-finding manner which brought deadness instead of life. It became necessary to act - but how? 1 Corinthians 14:3 was expounded, showed that prophesying was for edification, exhortation and comfort, that not one word was said about rebuke, but that the spirit of prophecy was essentially peaceable, constructive, not destructive, that some might use this gift as a whip to lash any who did not see eye to eye with themselves, and that a harsh spirit betrayed the spirit behind the utterance. The two "prophetesses" shot out of the church door and we never saw them again. They were convicted by the Word.

d. The testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy (Revelation 19:10). The content of the message in prophecy will exalt the Lord Jesus. "We do hear them speak in our tongues the wonderful works of God", said the first to hear Pentecostal prophecy. In the Antiochan Church there were "certain prophets and teachers" who "ministered to the Lord". Watchman Nee remarks: "There is a difference in ministering to the Lord and ministering to His house".

May our prophets do both!

TWINS TWINS

Dorothy Bull

Wakweli twins

I STRAIGHTENED up from examining the patient. "You have twins coming Mama," I said. A horrified look crossed her face – two demons! Knowing their custom of killing twins at birth, I called the husband, pleading for the lives of the unborn babies, even suggesting (it would be their only hope of life) that I deliver them secretly so that they could take one home and get the other adopted. However, some months later I heard that they had been born "dead"?

Relatives coming for medicine listened, silently incredulous but polite, as I told them how God looks upon the killing of twins. "The doctor is right!" – all eyes turned in surprise to the tall uncle of the dead babies. Rajabu had (whenever I invited him) attended Msolwa Church and God had touched his conscience. Later, his sincerity was obvious, for the dread word "Wapacha" echoed from his own hut. Normally, the fate of his twins would have rested on their (deceased) grandfather's decision, but Rajabu was now head of the family, and he protected his tiny daughters.

Visitors left the village hurriedly, spreading the astonishing news: "Twins allowed to live, trouble will come upon the clan!".

"I will not feed these demons!": the mother's voice rose in terrified hysteria. What could Rajabu do? He asked advice and was told: "The Government has strength to help". After a journey of many miles by bicycle, he stood before the area official, who sent a vehicle to fetch the mother and her father (who was behind her decision).

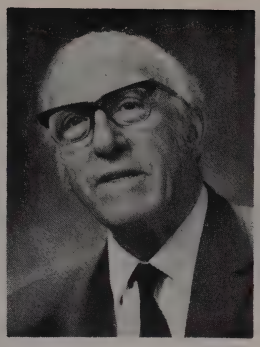
"If these babies die because of your neglect, you will be charged!". The official looked stern. Afraid, the woman unwillingly fed the babies, but her milk was insufficient. Rajabu brought pathetically thin Ruthi and Grasi to me again. Food supplied by Mrs. Johnston (Belfast) kept the babies alive.

Returning after two week's absence from the Mission, we heard that Rajabu was dead and so was his elderly mother! Fear spread through the clan. The twins had brought death twice; surely they should be killed! By this time their mother had become fond of the infants, but she was mentally incapable of feeding them properly. Again their skeleton-like forms were brought to me. Their mother had put one teaspoonful of powdered milk into each dirty bottle of equally filthy unboiled water! I asked her nephew (one of our Sunday school boys) to make a full day's feeds before he went to school. Improvement in the babies incensed the clan and they moved the boy. Alone in the village, the woman pleaded: "Get them adopted. I want to go home to my mother, but she fears twins".

The orphanage was full. We tried persuading the male relatives to build a house on the Mission so that the family could be near help. Plenty of promises resulted in no action. We prayed; God answered. The grandmother agreed to take the family in!

It is a tremendous astonishment to the unconverted that parents of Elim twins show lack of fear as they break centuries-old harmful customs. Instead, the happy Christians praise God for salvation that releases them from superstitious fear and sin, and promises life in the hereafter.

Dorothy E. Bull.



P.S. Several other twins (spared because their parents became Christians) are alive today because Joy Garrard (now with the Lord) had compassion, but this week I heard that one of those little ones has joined her in the presence of the Master.

An Outline

The astonishing Christ
Isaiah 52:13-15

THE Lord Jesus Christ is an Object of astonishment and wonder. "His name shall be called, Wonderful". Think of the wonder of His birth, His life, His death and His resurrection.

1. His astonishing Sufferings: visage and form marred MORE than any man's.

Recall the details of His manifold sufferings.

2. His astonishing Glory: "Exalted, extolled, very high". "Higher than the kings of the earth" (Psalm 89:27); "High and lifted up" (Isaiah 6:1); "God hath highly exalted Him"; "Extolled" by angels and men (Revelation 5).

3. The astonishing Outcome: "So shall He startle many nations" (ARSV).

Earth's rulers will be speechless with wonder – and guilt.

A Quotation

The Christian Ministry

THE Christian minister, by the very nature of his sacred office, is involved in certain imperative obligations. He must, for example, be able to create and communicate a spirit of worship; he must be able to expound the Scriptures; and he must be able to evangelise those who are alienated from the kingdom of God. As a rule, these three imperatives, harmonizing naturally, will melt imperceptibly into each other. The minister who dwells in the secret place of the most High, and who abides under the shadow of the Almighty will, by every movement, glance and gesture, make the people feel that they are in the immediate presence of the most High. Such a man, unconsciously radiating so solemn and reverential an atmosphere, will instinctively magnify the Scriptures and infect his hearers with a love for the inspired page, and such a man, permeated with a consciousness of the divine presence and exulting in the wealth of the divine Word, will, as a matter of course, be both passionate and persuasive in his appeals to those who are out of the way. The three imperatives co-ordinate.

An Incident

Plain George Smith

THE Moravians commissioned George Smith to serve in Africa. He was there for only a short time when he was driven out of the country. He had won only a single convert – a destitute, uninfluential woman. He died a few months afterward, considered by many to have been a failure. Years later, other missionaries accidently discovered the place where he had witnessed. They found a copy of the Scriptures that he had left behind. When they met the one whom he had led to Christ, they learned that a church had been started. His mission board finally estimated that more than 13,000 converts sprang from George Smith's initial sowing of the Word of God.

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

51. Zaphnath-Paaneah (Genesis 41:45)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

ON exalting Joseph to be his Chief Minister, Pharaoh gave him a new name, "Zaphnath-Paaneah", a name of great significance having several shades of meaning: "Revealer of secrets", because he had interpreted the dreams of Pharaoh; "Saviour of the land", for the nation of Egypt owed its survival to Joseph; "Sustainer of life", showing that the Egyptians lived because of the divine wisdom bestowed on Joseph; "a wise man fleeing from pollution", which suggests that Potiphar's wife had confessed to the wrong that she had done to Joseph.

All that was indicated by Joseph's new name is brought to pass in the Lord Jesus Christ. He is the "Revealer of secrets", for by the gospel the Lord Jesus has revealed secrets hidden from before the foundation of the world. He is also our Saviour, for He has saved us from the power of Satan and sin, and has made us sons of God. Jesus is the Sustainer of life; He has given life to those who were once dead in sin, life that is sustained by Him who is the "Bread of life". He is the wise Man fleeing from, rejecting, corruption and all that pollutes. Satan tried to defile Him, but the Lord Jesus overcame him by the mighty Word of God.

God's mighty Ocean

by Barbara C. Sawyer

OVER the summer months, people crowd our British beaches. Many must be aware at some time or other of the immensity of the sea. For Christians the chorus, "Wide, wide as the ocean" may well spring to mind, especially as this well-loved refrain is still sung in many seaside resorts where children's missions are in progress.

The very greatness of the sea speaks once more of God's boundless love, the love that was, and is still so wide that anyone who is willing can be "plunged in the depths of His mercy" and cleansed from the slightest stain of sin, to be made clean and pure through the precious blood of our Lord Jesus.

Not only is God's love so wide as to accept the worst sinner – seemingly so in our eyes at any rate, though the Bible tells us that "All have sinned" and so all need His cleansing as much as the hardened sinner who may have a criminal record or who has acted in ways that shock us – but also God's great sea of love is so deep that our sins can be "buried for evermore". We are promised that He will never remember them.

This does not mean that we now have a free licence to sin, for who would want to hurt deeply Someone who bought us back from sin by taking upon Himself the death penalty that we deserved? Some may worry about the circumstances in which they are placed, but how can we worry when we trust a living, victorious Saviour, who has won all our battles for us, and who has buried our sins and forgotten them?

Just like the sea, our Christian life is not always calm. There may be times when we enjoy many blessings from the hand of our heavenly Father and it seems that all is well and as beautiful as the sea breaking upon the golden sands. Then, suddenly, we find ourselves flung upon the rocks, as it were. The sea is pounding harder and harder. We must expect this, just as fishermen know that calm often comes before the storm.

God does not promise an easy life for a Christian. It may be that He needs to wear away a few rough edges until we are the shape that He wants us to be to function properly in His service and for His glory. He does not want to hurt us, but "whom the Lord loveth, He chasteneth" (Hebrews 12:6). God still loves us and He always will.

The sea is unpredictable, it is true, but it is unchangeable. We do not wonder if the sea will ever disappear, because we know that this would be impossible, just as it is for God to stop loving us. He gave all that He had to bring into His mercy. Though the billows may sometimes buffet us, His steadfast love remains constant.

Power or Wealth?

by M. Clissold

Where is the power of Pentecost?
The zeal, the passion, too,
The mighty signs and miracles
The early church once knew?

They had no cars or T.V. sets
And very little wealth,
But to the blind, the deaf, the lame,
They could impart Thy health.

Are we increased with goods, O Lord,
And losing out for Thee?
Is this the reason then, O Lord,
Thy power we do not see?

Lord, help us take our eyes, we pray,
From off the things of earth,
Then fill us with thy power and zeal
To end this time of dearth.

ENGLISH GRADUATE URGENTLY NEEDED

FOLLOWING our earlier request for a male English Graduate teacher to join the staff at the Inyanga North Emmanuel Secondary School, we have now received an urgent appeal from Peter Griffiths, the Headmaster. With expansions taking place and with greater evangelistic opportunities than ever, he urges us to advertise the need and to seek such a teacher for the January Term, 1974. This is one of the occasions when the Lord's business requires haste. We invite prospective teachers to apply to: Elim Missionary Society, P.O. Box 38, Cheltenham, Gloucestershire. This could be the greatest opportunity of your life. If you have the qualifications, why not launch out for God?

THE PRINCIPLES AND PRACTICE OF YOUTH WORK
by Eldin R. Corsie, National Youth Director

LESSON 3 Community Evangelism

Coffee Bars

It is sometimes possible to gain access to commercial coffee bars. Some have even taken over a coffee bar for an evening and provided free coffee.

A Christian group in Cheam, Surrey, tried this experiment. "They tried one or two cafes without success and then found one well situated with a cinema, jazz club and large public house nearby. The proprietress was willing to let them have this on Sunday evenings and a team of fifteen young men and eleven girls, who had been planning and praying about this venture for some time, began to distribute posters and handbills in the area. The aim was clear. Free coffee was offered, but the invitation was to come and chat about 'Christianity and the Man behind it all'. On the first night twelve boys came and after that an average of thirty to forty young people, mostly boys, made their way to the Lantern to talk about the Christian faith. Some, of course, came primarily for the free coffee, but soon their doubts, questionings, and misunderstandings about Christianity were raised and frankly discussed." (Towards Tomorrow's Church, pp 119,120).

Clubs

It is sometimes possible to gain access to youth clubs in the district. One is not always allowed to conduct meetings, but opportunity to talk quietly to young people who may be sitting about in the club rooms might be granted.

Doctors' Surgeries and Dentists' Waiting-rooms

Doctors and dentists will usually give permission to leave good gospel literature on tables in the waiting-rooms. THE ELIM EVANGEL, tracts and Christian periodicals may profitably be used in such places.

Libraries

It is often possible to advertise special meetings on library notice boards. Good evangelical and Pentecostal books will be obtained by the local library if they are requested. The Roman Catholics have used this method to fill the religious and theological sections with their literature.

Hotels

The Gideons have done a remarkable job in placing Bibles in hotels. They have proved the value of exploiting the hotel world. Announcements of young people's meetings can sometimes be exhibited on the notice boards of hotels. Literature can also be left in the reception area.

(3) Developing links with old people

In this welfare state, with National Health and Society Security, people are living longer. As a result older people form an increasing proportion of the population. Years ago people were expected to support their parents in their old age, but smaller houses and social changes have broken this tradition.

Why not organise an over-sixties' club? It could be directed by a Crusader Committee and staffed by any of the young people who want to take part. This could include the older children from the Sunday school. In addition to special meetings, there are many jobs that can be done for the elderly, e.g. chopping wood, carrying coal, pushing wheelchairs, shopping, reading, collecting library books, cleaning, decorating, etc.

Many old people are confined to special homes and institutions. A visit from a group of young people can break the monotony and boredom of their lives. Pastor J. Hyde has outlined a useful plan for beginning a Senior Citizen's Fellowship:

1. Visit centres where old people meet and present to their committees arrangements for a regular weekly fellowship for the spiritual welfare of the old folk. Stress the spiritual need, as they are often well catered for socially.

2. Advertise the meetings in the local press.

3. Try to avoid times which clash with any similar local meetings.

4. (a). Keep a register of names, addresses and birthdays. Give birthday cards at the meetings nearest the birthdays.

(b). Create a friendly, homely atmosphere; see that the building is warm.

(c). Choose well-known hymns and introduce Elim choruses. Have solos, etc., and a short, direct gospel message, not more than fifteen minutes long. A choir can be formed later.

(d). Arrange a united pensioners' meeting on a Sunday evening annually. Hold special services at Easter, Harvest and Christmas.

(e). You will find Christians from other churches, as well as those in your own congregation, willing to assist.

5. Let the old folk know that you are willing to

The Family Altar

Scripture Union Portions — Notes by Gerald L.W. Ladlow

Monday, November 12th Ezekiel 2:1-10; 3:1-11

"Open thy mouth and eat that I give thee" (2:8).

THE Lord used the symbol of a book that could be eaten to indicate that the message of His Word needs more than the acceptance of the mind. The prophet was instructed to assimilate it like food (2:4), so that it became the very sustenance of his own life before he attempted to communicate it to others. As Sir Philip Sydney said, "All is but lip wisdom which lacks experience", Dr. Stuart Holden reminds us: "It is only as the Word is made flesh that it acquires redemptive values". As Paul says: "The husbandman that laboureth must be first partaker of the fruits". (2 Timothy 2:6).

Tuesday, November 13th Ezekiel 3:12-27

"Then I came to them of the captivity. . . and I sat where they sat" (v.15).

IDENTIFICATION with the oppressed captives, understanding their need and their problems, was necessary before giving them the Word of the Lord. If we hope to reach the present generation, who are so obviously in captivity to the powers of evil, we must be prepared to go among them and try to understand their problems. Sitting aloof, shocked at what we see, always ready to condemn, will never help them, even though we spend much time in prayer for them. General Booth is reputed to have said: "The church bells ring out the message 'Come to church, come to church, come to church', whereas our drum sounds out the order, 'Go and fetch 'em, go and fetch 'em, go and fetch 'em!'".

Wednesday, November 14th Ezekiel 4:1-17

"Thou shalt bear their iniquity" (v.4).

IN a dramatic representation of the siege of Jerusalem and God's punishment of the people for their sin, Ezekiel was told to lie on his side for so many days. The number of these days was to signify the corresponding number of years of punishment, on one side for Israel and the other side for Judah. In a symbolic way the prophet was being punished in their stead – he was "bearing their iniquities". In contrast to this play acting, our Lord by His death on the cross has literally taken our place; He died the just for the unjust and has truly "borne our iniquities".

Thursday, November 15th Ezekiel 5:1-17

"And they shall know that I the Lord have spoken" (v.13).

THE fulfilment of the prophetic word would convince the sceptic of the truth of God's pronouncements. The true man of faith, however, does not require confirmatory evidence of the message of God. Jesus said to Thomas, "Blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed" (John 21:29). We are instructed in Hebrews 11:1: "Faith is the evidence of things not seen".

Faith, mighty faith, the promise sees
And looks to that alone;
Laughs at impossibilities
And cries: It shall be done!

Friday, November 16th Ezekiel 8:1-18

"Though they cry in mine ears with a loud voice, yet will I not hear them" (v.18).

THE extent of the people's abominable conduct has been shown to the prophet and the many calamities that have befallen them as a result. The crowning calamity is that their sin has put them out of ear-shot of the God of love. This is the ultimate desolation of every unrepentant sinner. Only to such does the Lord speak in this way, for "The righteous cry, and the Lord heareth, and delivereth them out of all their troubles. The Lord is nigh to them that are of a broken heart and saveth such as be of a contrite spirit" (Psalm 34: 17,18).

Saturday, November 17th Ezekiel 9:1-11; 10:1,2

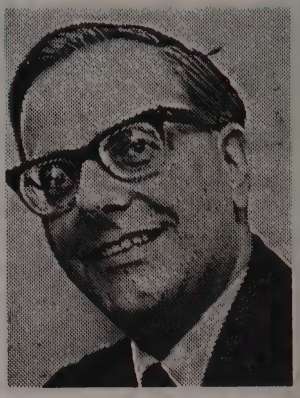
"Set a mark upon the foreheads of the men that sigh and that cry for all the abominations that be done" (v.4).



DESPITE the seeming total depravity of the nation, there was a small minority who were saddened by the sin around them and who wept over it. This vision gave them the assurance that the Lord saw them and marked them as His own. Do we sigh and weep over the sinful conditions prevalent today? Do we feel weak, inadequate, ineffective witnesses? Don't give up! Take heart! "The Lord knoweth them that are His" and faithfulness will reap its own reward.

Sunday, November 18th Ezekiel 11:1-25

"They shall be my people, and I will be their God" (v.20).

THE re-gathering of Israel in their own Land is one of the marvellous fulfilments of ancient prophecy in our own day. However, as yet the return is concerned only with the restoration of material blessings. Not until there is a spiritual renewal is God willing to acknowledge the nation as "His own people". The promise of such renewal is given in Jeremiah 24:7; Ezekiel 36:26, and here in v.19. Pray today for such a spiritual awakening in Israel. Only when man's heart is regenerated can he "walk in God's statutes and keep His ordinances and do them" (v.20).

ANOTHER SLANT

by Ken Smith

TWENTY-ONE years in the Christian ministry is nearly half a working life-time – and the anniversary provides an opportunity for reflection. Share with me as I "think aloud" over it all.

A number of people, inside and outside the Assembly, have asked me, "Would you still go into the ministry, knowing what twenty-one years have brought?". My immediate response is always: "I would have to do the same", for the call of God is the most important factor in a minister's life. Whether I would want to do so is another matter, but certainly had twenty-one years been like the last two in my present Assembly my reply would be joyously, "Yes".

Churches differ. Some assemblies hardly, if ever, express their appreciation of a man's ministry. Some even allow their minister's farewell to go without any expression of thankfulness, not necessarily because of animosity, but just due to lack of appreciative thought. I am not pleading for flattery, which I abhor, as all true men of God would detest it, nor for "a mutual admiration society", but I am struck by the abounding appreciation of the Apostle Paul for the people of God. In almost every Epistle, he thanks God for his remembrance of them. Let us emulate his generosity of spirit.

One of the heart-aches in the ministry, I find, is leaving people with whom one has worshipped and worked over the years. Such friendships go deep. I was once talking on this strain to one of the brethren, saying, "Wouldn't it be good if we had all the people with whom we have enjoyed fellowship in our various churches in one assembly?". He gave me much to think about when he replied. He asked me if had I thought of the reverse, namely that we may be landed with a church in which all the folk whom we had found difficult, or disagreeable, were placed. We are not likely to be faced with either prospect!

I was to have gone to the celebrations marking Desmond Cartwright's Anniversary at Blackheath, to give a speech, he having been a College colleague, but to my surprise, on our return from holiday, my secretary phoned requesting our presence, as a family, at the Church at the same time. What a surprise it proved to be! Just like road accidents, these things "never happen to me", but both did! When we received gifts from the Church – and I am glad that they remembered my wife and our boys, I thought immediately of Paul's words to the Philippian believers: "Not that I desire a gift, but I desire fruit, that may abound to your account". Paul was utterly selfless, for even his fruitfulness was desired for their blessing. So should we be, yet gifts of appreciation which are unexpected and unsought are indications of the fellowship of God's people and are such an encouragement. I would consider that the two are not so unrelated as they seem, for I have found so often that the people who look after God's servants themselves are blessed so much the more, in every way. "Give, and it shall be given".

Gone are the years of youthful enthusiasm, yet retirement is a long way off, and years of service for the Master remain, should the Lord tarry. In middle age one should be a combination of the enthusiasm of Elisha and the experience of Elijah, yet how often we get weary in well doing. One feels the need of a new touch of spiritual life. This was borne out to me when visiting Plymouth on holiday. I was amazed and thrilled at the sense of God's presence in the meetings. There is indeed a touch of revival and it came after Pastor L.P. Cowdery had been pastoring the Church for eight years! It is not always a change of minister, but a change of the ministry of the man that is needed. One covets a similar experience for others who have served for many years and who feel the need of a new touch of spiritual power, not the least oneself.

The undeserved goodness and grace of the Lord in granting the privilege of serving Him and sincere appreciation to the people of God for their thoughtful kindness gave one real hope for the future of ministry, should the Lord spare us.

AS can be imagined, all sorts of letters come to the Editorial office. Very rarely do we publish one which bears no name and address. Encouragement is rather at a premium for many of the Lord's people at the moment, however, so I decided to share a happy letter which came to me the other day, with thanks to the anonymous writer for taking the trouble to share an experience of joy in the Lord:

Dear Pastor Walker,

I have felt the blessing of God so much just lately, I wanted to share it with you. We need God so much in these times and He often meets us in our services at church and through the EVANGEL. We need the admonition; we need the encouragement. We thank God for our Godly ministers, and we pray very much for every one of them. They need God too. He has put His children in their care. We realize how discouraged they could get, especially our young men. May God bless them mightily!

I have been so much encouraged from the Old Testament, how God moved and blessed His people! I believe with all my heart that before He comes again, He will let His people see again what He can do, if we fully trust Him. I have such blessing and assurance in my heart. I thrill even as I write these lines. God is faithful; bless His wonderful name! He will comfort and strengthen our missionaries, who are feeling the hardness of the way. I know He will bless and reward them for the sacrifice that they have made to serve Him where they are now.

The words keep coming to me, "God leads His dear children along". He led us while we were as our own young people are. He will lead us as we get closer to Him. God always reveals himself to us as we seek to find Him. I could go on praising and praising; time will not permit just now.

Yours in our dear heavenly Father,
A very grateful One.

It does us good to rejoice in the Lord. Let's take time off just now and say, "Thankyou, Lord!".

"But Thou art holy, O Thou that inhabitest the praises of Israel. Our Fathers trusted in Thee: they trusted, and Thou didst deliver them. . .I will declare Thy name unto my brethren: in the midst of the congregation will I praise Thee." (Psalm 22:3,4,22).

Church Reports

GRANGETOWN Pastor: A.L. Hawkes

WHEN, during a trip to the North-East I called in to see my old friend, Pastor A.L. Hawkes, I was delighted to learn that there was to be a baptismal service on the Sunday evening I was there. Three ladies were baptised and all testified to the wonderful saving power of Jesus. The Lord set His seal on the service from the outset; His presence being felt by all. After Pastor Hawkes' brief, but challenging address, the gifts of the Holy Spirit were in operation, God speaking directly to someone in the meeting.

The young photographer was challenged and expressed a desire to talk to Pastor Hawkes at length about his soul. We all rejoice at the powerful way in which God is at work in this young Church.

R.S. NEWTON

HEREFORD Pastor: R. Griffiths

AT our beloved Pastor's fifth anniversary, the ladies, under the supervision of Mrs. L. Greenow, prepared a tea for about fifty members and friends. It was a great time of fellowship. After tea Pastor was handed a money gift by Mr. A. Andrews, who thanked him for his faithful ministry. Mrs. Griffiths was presented with a bouquet of flowers by Sister Janet Tittensor. The Pastor's son, Peter, was given a brief case. Pastor Griffiths thanked all for their generosity to them and stressed that Mrs. Griffiths played a great part in helping him in the ministry. Mrs. Griffiths also gave a word of thanks.

We were privileged to have Pastor Maurice Boyle, a blind Pastor, with us. He said how he had enjoyed the tea and that he had known Pastor Griffiths for a number of years, as a most humble, gracious man. Pastor Griffiths replied that his one ambition was to see souls won for the Saviour. About 100 gathered at the evening meeting when Pastor Boyle ministered the Word of God. God really spoke to us. Mr. Hooper sang a solo.

On Sunday morning Pastor Boyle spoke on the Grace of God. He spoke to the Sunday School children in the afternoon. They were very interested in his magic white stick.

Well over 100 gathered for the evening meeting when Miss Julie Lee read the Scripture, Mrs. Taylor, sang a solo, and the Crusaders and the brethren sang. Pastor Boyle again ministered the Word.

In the after-meeting many gathered with us from other Churches and Pastor Boyle told part of his life story, including his conversion from the Catholic Church and his losing his sight. The meeting ended with "How great Thou art". The time had gone all too quickly, but we rejoiced that we had had such a blessed time in the presence of the Lord.

A. E. ANDREWS

HIGH WYCOMBE Pastor: T.G. Hills

OUR People's Hour, a mid-week afternoon service, reached its first anniversary in September. This type of meeting has proved to be a great blessing to the senior citizens and friends in the area. Around forty gathered for fellowship at the special meeting.

Another recent occasion was the farewell service of Pastor and Mrs. Bob Holdstock, who left our fellowship to return to the ministry. They are now pastoring the Bridgend Church. Our loss is Bridgend's gain.

The visit of the London Crusader Choir to our town warmed the hearts of many. Their ministry in song was rendered in their immaculate way at the afternoon service in the town and at the evening service in our church.

Pastor R.W. Holdstock receives a farewell gift from Pastor T.G. Hills.

TREALAW Pastor: K. Lannon

MID–SEPTEMBER saw our annual Bible convention when Pastor Adrian L. Hawkes was our guest preacher.

The preaching of pure Bible truth was simple, forthright, uplifting, yet convicting. Pastor Hawkes took a series in the five meetings of the weekend and made it clear that winning souls for Christ is done with the presence of the Master in our hearts.

We were thrilled on the Sunday night as the fulness of the gospel message was expounded in the light of God's plan for eternity.

On the final nights the need for God's enduement of power was stressed and the need for Christians to be baptised in the Holy Spirit was explained.

Singing items came from our own Assembly. On one night three young ladies from our Pontypridd Church were particularly blessed of God as they testified that Jesus saves, heals and fills.

Pastor Hawkes's ministry will not be forgotten and the call to be doers of the Word and not hearers only will be well heeded.

STAFFORD Pastor: T. Partington

IN September our Church celebrated its fortieth anniversary. Our guests for the weekend were Pastor H.W. Greenway and Pastor Len Knipe (a former Minister). In the testimonies, reference was made to the revival which gave birth to the Church, which has always been known as Covenant Hall. Edward Jeffreys had a great campaign in the Borough Hall. One night the caretaker was heard to say: "If this fellow stays here much longer, we might as well close the hospital. They've already lost a lot of custom!".

On the Saturday night of the anniversary weekend, 100 sat down for tea. Pastor Greenway reminded us that we should be "letters" for Christ (2 Corinthians 3:3). A cassette recording was heard from Pastor Leon C. Quest; he was unable to be with us because of illness. He was Minister of the church from 1954-1959. On the Sunday, Pastor Knipe ministered with much blessing. Throughout the weekend there was a "precious memories display" in our minor hall, with dozens of photographs of previous church events.

The anniversary weekend was preceded by a mammoth seven-month plan for the fabric of the building. A screen cloakroom has been built, a kitchen installed in the minor hall, the church car-park has been tarmaced, and many other jobs have been undertaken, most of them by members of the Church. Shortly before the anniversary, the building was professionally decorated throughout. We rejoice, too, in the gift of a forty-two seater coach.

MOTHERWELL Pastor: F.W. Jones

ANOTHER Sisterhood weekend has gone and we praise the Lord for a very blessed weekend. The Saturday night saw a crowded church for the visit of the Maranatha Junior Choir of sixty voices from nearby Maranatha Youth Centre, a tremendous work among youth. Mrs. Dolores Holmes from Sunderland was our speaker for the weekend and her ministry in word and song can only be described as anointed. On the Sunday morning and evening our own ladies' choir excelled in their rendering of their pieces. We were also greatly favoured to have Mrs. Myra Anderson and Mrs. Jean Drysdale as our duettists. This ministry was so rich. They joined us again for our Monday night united women's rally, a feature eagerly looked upon as a highlight by other churches, as the 300-strong attendance proved. We were joined for this meeting by the Gospel Hall Ladies' Choir from Newarthill whose pieces called for great consecration. Mrs. Holmes sang with deep feeling. Her message must have challenged each heart. The roll-call taken by Mrs. Allan added to the joy of fellowship. Mrs. F.W. Jones very ably convened all these services. Four brethren dared to be present and they agreed with us that it was a very blessed weekend.

(Mrs.) I. KIRKLAND

DAGENHAM Pastor: J. McBurney

WE give thanks to God for His presence with us at our Bank Holiday Convention and for His anointing on Pastor B.H. Tween, our preacher for the weekend. We thank God for making these meetings possible, in spite of our unsettled position regarding the church building. The meetings, convened by our Pastor, ably assisted by Ted Inight, our Church Secretary, were well attended, especially on Sunday and Monday, and the congregation included ministers and members from neighbouring churches.

Pastor Tween's messages were very much a challenge to the church, as evidenced in the ministry of the Gifts of the Spirit on the Sunday. There were testimonies from ministers and others to the love of God in Christ. Soloists were Mrs. Cope from the Salvation Army, Romford, accompanied by Mr. Cope on the piano, Mr. C. Morris, and Mrs. Marie Hamilton.

We are grateful to everyone who supported us at very short notice, thus helping to make the weekend such a blessed and memorable one.

JOYCE BERRY

ILFORD Pastor: J.F. Hardman

"HIS touch has still its ancient power". These words have been wonderfully demonstrated during recent months, as several of our members have testified to the healing touch of the living Christ. Much rejoicing was experienced in a recent prayer meeting when it was made known that a lady for whom we had prayed had been marvellously delivered from her infirmity.

During the summer months the Sunday school had their annual outing, when two double-decker buses conveyed the children and some parents to Shoeburyness. The Sunday school also held their prize-giving service when Pastor A. Nicolson thrilled the children with his breezy talk and Mrs. Nicolson presented the prizes. Our Superintendent, Mr. R. Grimwade, ably convened the service.

In July our Pastor celebrated his fifth anniversary with us, and we were privileged to have Pastor G. Wesley Gilpin as our special preacher. The Lord bestowed much blessing.

The Spirit of God is moving in a mighty way in our midst and especially in our recent baptismal service as several converts were baptised on confession of their faith in the Lord Jesus and when at least five made decisions for Christ, walking out boldly to the front of the Church to receive counsel and helpful literature.

THE GIFTS OF THE SPIRIT—7

The Discerning of Spirits

(1 Corinthians 12:10)

by Charles J. E. Kingston

THE gift of discerning of spirits reveals the sort of spirit actuating a person: divine, human or satanic. Jesus possessed this gift. He discerned the satanic influence behind Peter's rebuke (Matthew 16:22,23); the hyprocrisy behind the Herodians' question about the tribute money (Matthew 22:18); the spirit behind the disciples' desire to call down fire on the Samaritans (Luke 9:55).

1. What is not the gift of discernment

It is not criticism of others, the ability to discover faults in and to sit in judgment on other people; this we are too richly endowed with by our fallen human nature. Jesus forbids the use of such a "gift" (Matthew 7:1).

2. What is the gift of discerning of spirits

It is entirely supernatural, like the other gifts. The recipient can distinguish between the real and the false in spiritual things. The need for such a gift presupposes the existence of evil spirits and the danger of being misled by them. "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God".

Occult influences mark this age. Interest in magic, spiritism, satanism, witchcraft, all testify to the activity of evil forces. The sale of ouija (or planchette) boards running into millions, estimates of eight million witches in the world, the opening of satanic churches dedicated to sensual indulgence, increasing addiction to drugs for psychedelic experiences, growing interest in spiritism, fortune-telling involving astrology, palmistry and cards, sexual permissiveness with its accompanying explosion of venereal diseases, violence, all speak of demon forces attacking this world at the end of the age. "Now the Spirit speaketh expressly that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils" (1 Timothy 4:1). How necessary is the gift of discernment of spirits!

3. The uses of the gift

The upsurge of demonism in Christ's days was due to satanic opposition to God's revelation in Jesus. We may expect therefore a parallel upsurge in the period preceding Christ's second advent.

To discern between mental illness and demon possession.

The Bible distinguishes them (Matthew 4:24). Mental disease, like any other bodily illness, can be healed through prayer and healing on the natural or supernatural plane. Demon possession, on the other hand, needs the word of exorcism by the Spirit of God and in the name of Jesus (Matthew 8:16, 12:28; Mark 16:17).

To unmask demonic lying wonders.

Antichrist is to show "lying wonders" and false prophets will show great "signs and wonders" (2 Thessalonians 2:9; Matthew 24:24). The elect are in danger of being deceived, because not every lying wonder is spurious; spirit phenomena are often real, but devil-inspired to trap the unwary. How necessary then this gift to guard God's people!

To guide in the deliverance of demon-tormented people.

Demon action can be classified as either oppression, obsession or possession (says Arthur Neil in The Flame).

Oppression reveals itself in spiritual, mental or physical depression. Christians "wrestle. . . against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world" and need the Christian's armour (Ephesians 6:12,13). A triple thanks be to God! "Greater is He that is in you, than he that is in the world" (1 John 4:4).

Obsession can be brought about as a result of believing a lie of Satan. Those who play with occult powers, go to spiritist seances, etc., open the door to obsession. Dr. McAlpine, writing in The Prophetic News in 1935, tells of a university girl student who came to him for deliverence from an evil spirit. He applied the test of 1 John 4:2,3 and she replied: "They won't let me say it!". After a long conflict she was delivered. He found that she had got into this condition through playing with a Ouija board in an endeavour to pry into the future.

Possession is the ultimate state where the demon or demons have their residence in the person. Judas knew this when "Satan entered into him".

The gift of discerning of spirits implies God's pro-

Quality of Love

by William R. West, Pastor of our Rayleigh Church

"Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God' (1 John 3:1).

QUALITIES that lie beneath the surface of a person's character are often brought out in times of crisis. Sometimes they are pointed out by an intimate friend.

Some things about God are obvious: His majesty in the mountains; His strength in the mighty sea; His wisdom in the design of the smallest flower. It takes the devotion and the communion of a Christian to discover the depths of God's love. "Behold what manner [quality] of love" – the word "manner" is the same as in 2 Peter 3:11: "What manner of person ought ye to be", what quality!

The quality of God's love can be seen in the father of the prodigal son. His was a love that understood when the son was determined to leave home, that waited eagerly for his return, that welcomed the prodigal when he was a great way off.

Our Father's love can be seen in the good Samaritan, a love that came where the victim was, that asked no questions, that gave help willingly, that cared and spared not.

It is seen in the quality of the shepherd's love, prepared to seek for one sheep although there were ninety nine in the fold, prepared to suffer in the search through rough, dangerous country, ready to rejoice when the mission was accomplished.

This quality is seen in Jesus. His love drew sinful Zacchaeus in to the Kingdom, wilful Peter into blessing, a dying thief into faith, a Roman centurion to confess His deity.

What quality of love lifted you and me!

The great thrill of this is that He "bestowed" this love. The prodigal could have been smuggled into the kitchen for a servant's meal, but the Father gave him a welcome, the best robe, a ring, and shoes, plus a great feast of rejoicing. Love was bestowed. Our Father has bestowed His love upon us, such quality of love.

We often say that we love. Look at the quality of God's love, compare it with ours. Then let us worship adore and admire Him!

A revived Ministry

by A. S. F. Horne, Pastor of our Ipswich Church

"Oh revive us! Then your people can rejoice in you again" (B.L.B.) (Psalm 85:6).

MANY are praying and believing for revival today, without giving a thought to a revived ministry. A revived ministry is not a ministry of gimmicks or of conforming to the world, but possesses several essential qualities.

A strong, spiritual Vision

Their bodies are full of light, hence divine truths are clearly understood. They walk in the light. They rightly divide the word of truth. They are awake to the needs of the flock. They know who are lame, sick, blind, who need reproof, exhortation and comfort. The under-shepherd is eyes to the blind, feet to the lame and a well of water to the faint and weary.

Edifying power

They speak of divine things from their own experience. An opposite ministry speaks from judgment or from memory only. But a revived ministry, filled with the Spirit, speaks what they know and testifies what they have seen, felt, handled of the Word of life. Out of their treasury they bring by the Spirit things new and old. The grapes that they give are out of a shop barrel, packed with saw-dust, fat, fresh, firm and direct from Eschol.

Their labours are earnest and lively

They are not sleepy, languid, formal and mechanical, not working for a movement or with an eye on executive position. The Church needs men who are earnest, going after the lost sheep in the wilderness, and bringing it back to the fold on the shoulders of their own faith. Labouring with eternity in view, there is a vigour and a life about this and about all that they do.

Such a ministry produces a prosperous, happy Church

History testifies to this. What an awful deadness existed before the age of Wesley and Whitefield! The amazing revival which took place in their day was the result of the abundant supply of spiritual bread which these men and their coadjutors brought to a famishing Church. God "drew the people with the cords of a man, took the yoke off their jaws, and set meat before them". The whole land may have been filled with gladness – thousands were.

A devoted ministry is not the efficient cause of a people's salvation – that would be to make salvation spring from men's piety instead of Christ's mediation – but the Church's enjoyments, liveliness and everything which makes a people glad are ministered by a holy, spiritual ministry. "Revive us and thy people shall rejoice in Thee".

Turn to God's Word for proof. What words of anger God spoke through the prophets to the priests of the Old Testament times, laying the wickedness of the people at their doors, and attributing the famished spiritual state of the nation to the neglect of the shepherds. Turn to the New Testament and ponder the charges brought against these same priests by Christ. Go to the Epistles of Paul to Timothy and Titus, where we see how clearly the welfare of the Church is connected with the spiritual life of the ministry of all grades.

It is not difficult to account for this connection between ministerial devotedness and Church prosperity. If you call to mind our previous remarks on the divine ordinances, you will see that ministers are channels through which God conveys blessings to His people. He gladly uses them to build His Church.

Now let us notice a few blessings ministered by a holy agency which make a Church rejoice:

Knowledge. The people must be fed with knowledge and understanding, for only these will bring joy unspeakable. Jesus said, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free".

Spirituality. Carnality, sloth and worldliness are grievous to God's people when first felt, but, if yielded to, produce deadness and hypocrisy. When these are non-existent, the mind goes out after Jesus and the life of faith is vigorous and healthy – hope that maketh not ashamed blooms, hence a joyous church eventuates.

Brotherly Love. When a church is adverse, strife abounds, but when grace prevails, brotherly love continues. This is like the holy oil upon the head of Aaron, which, descending and dropping in the courts of the sanctuary, makes the very atmosphere redolent with delight.

Conversions. A holy, happy church is never barren. She brings forth children and these are well nursed, nourished and trained. The cries of the babe and the songs of the parents blending make music more pleasant to listen to than angels' choruses in the celestial spheres. There is joy in the presence of the angels over sinners repenting.

The revival of the ministry is the work of God. All true religion is of God. Whatever is not of Him is of the flesh and avails not. All self-effected reformation is spurious; it only makes a man worse in the end. Nothing is genuine, nothing is true, nothing profitable, but what the Spirit of God bestows. Avoid all creature-power, for it can only make us proud, self-sufficient, prayerless and boastful.

Prayer is the only means we can use to effect a revived ministry. It is impossible to pray with liberty, access, confidence and power without confession of sin. The Holy Spirit shows us if we regard iniquity in our hearts God will not hear us, so, acknowledging and forsaking our sins, we are revived as the corn, and the wilderness and the solitary place will become glad.

Any minister who falls down before the Throne of Grace and prays, "Revive us again" causes God's people to rejoice in Him.

Matthew 9:9

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

WHEN Jesus chose Matthew to be His disciple I do not think that the others liked it at all. You see, Matthew was a publican and it was his job to collect the taxes from the people. Many publicans were dishonest, for they overcharged the people and kept the money for themselves. Though Matthew was not one of these, he was still despised and hated by the people. His friends distrusted him and even his family would not speak to him. I think that Matthew must have been ashamed of his trade and did not like taking the money from the people. I think that he must have been very unhappy and miserable at times. Jesus understood, however. He knew that Matthew was not like the others. I think that Matthew must have been very surprised when Jesus walked into his office that day and said, "Matthew, I want you to be my disciple!", for I read that Matthew immediately gave up his business and gave a farewell party for the other publicans, or tax-collectors.

Matthew was not ashamed to tell them why he was leaving. "I am going to work for Jesus," he told them. Jesus was at the party, too, and He sat talking to all Matthew's publican friends. This did not please the priests and Pharisees at all. "Why should He choose to be with such people?" they cried. "Surely He does not want to make friends of these dishonest men!". How little they knew of the heart of Jesus! Jesus cared for the publicans. He wanted to be their Friend.

The priests and Pharisees laughed and poked fun at Jesus. I think that it hurt Matthew to see His Master being treated like that. When he later wrote his list of the disciples in his Gospel, he humbly wrote his own name in the middle of the list – Matthew the publican. He knew in his heart that, partly because of him, Jesus was ridiculed and called "the Friend of publicans".

NEWS OF ELIM 1973 CAMPS

Isle of Wight Camp

FROM far and near they came, some 300 of them, to Kensington Temple to reminisce on the 1973 Isle of Wight Camp and to hear plans for 1974. What a time of fellowship and rejoicing this was!

Over 700 camped with us this year and perfect weather attended the four weeks, except for a forty-eight hour period when we suffered with the rest of the country the kind of conditions that bring out the worst in some, but the best in Christians! The spiritual tone was high and first-class ministry was provided by Pastors B.C. Vidamour and P.E. Streeter (Senior Camp), Pastors D.J. Green and P.F. Sanderson (Junior Camp) and by missionaries Joan Caudell and Ian and Valerie MacInnes. No doubt it was the presence of the missionaries that inspired the campers to give £200 to the overseas' cause.

One sad note was struck at the reunion.. Pastor Derek J. Green announced that mounting pressures of ministerial responsibilities meant that he will be unable to be with us next year. Tributes to his four years with the Camp were expressed by the Junior Camp Commandant, Len Rammell, by Denzil Jarvis on behalf of the staff and campers and by Pastor P.F. Sanderson, his co-padre for the past two years. A presentation was made.

The following report on the Senior Camp is provided by Philip E. Streeter, Minister of our Romford Church:

"Not only was it my first experience of performing the duties of a Camp padre, it was also my very first venture into the vigorous world of camping under canvas, so this report comes from a newly-initiated camper! Ministering as I did during the second week, the Senior Camp, I can only record my impressions of this particular week. The Camp was admirably run by "Commie" Richardson, "Adgy" Clark, Padre Vidamour, Mr. and Mrs. Rammell and a host of other stoical workers too numerous to mention. I was most impressed. Camp workers not only performed their own vital tasks, but also "chipped in" and helped others with theirs. One unforgettable night, with what surely must have been a Force 8 gale yelling and screaming around the Island, workers squelched about all night in the wind and rain tapping in tent pegs that obstinately popped out again. The spiritual temperature of the camp soared really high as Padre Vidamour delivered thought-provoking Bible studies on the Spirit-filled life and missionary Joan Caudell gave valuable personal counselling to enquiring campers. There were many decisions for Christ during the first two weeks of Senior Camp. I recall seven one night indicating their need of salvation. Two notable healings that occurred were those of a sprained leg, when pain instantly left, and a perforated ear-drum. I was also thrilled to see so many baptised in the Holy Spirit – over twelve one evening. On more than one occasion a camper was saved one night and baptised in the Spirit the following night. Scanning quickly through a pile of 115 Camp information sheets, I read the following testimonies with great delight:

'The Lord has answered my prayers in the case of two friends who were saved and baptised in the Holy Spirit.'

'The blessing I had was to see so many non-Christians become Christians and that now I want to serve God much more.'

'Received great spiritual uplift, rededicating my life to Christ and receiving assurance as to God's guidance in my future career.'

'I have really enjoyed the fellowship here and have been blessed by the fantastic meetings.'

"I would affirm that this 1973 Youth Camp was inspired and blessed of God. My soul was lavishly refreshed as I gazed on the joy and zeal of a fine crowd of our Elim young people.

"In retrospect, I do not know how I ever managed to drive back from Portsmouth to Romford. A flapping, draughty tent, two days of non-stop rain and damp grass were just too much for a raw, first-time camper. I had a severe cold, but, yes, I would happily attend an Elim Youth camp again!"

Bridlington Youth Camp

ONE hundred and sixty clean, tidy people converged on a sleepy village on the east coast of Yorkshire. 20,000 spuds, 100 cabbages, 100 cauliflowers, a few million peas, numerous cuts, bruises, soakings, and two weeks later, a tired, grubby set of campers returned home, satisfied after yet another great camp.

Fellowship and the Word of God are the two essentials on which the camp is built. Let the campers speak (they do nothing else!): From Hull: "Like a bit of heaven on earth"; those from Ireland found the "fellowship enriching"; a lady from Huddersfield "came full of doubts, but now that she has been filled with the Holy Spirit at camp, the doubts have gone and she has the Holy Spirit to guide and direct her life"; again from Huddersfield: "Many of the Sunday school teachers have noticed changes in those who have been to camp, particularly the boys. The mother of one of the boys, who is not a Christian, said that she was amazed at her new son since camp".

The campers came from all over the country, a contingent of Geordies, others from Yorkshire, the Midlands, and the South; and twenty-four from Ireland (they say that Belfast had a quiet fortnight!).

During the two weeks there were fishing trips from Bridlington, a trip to Hornsea Potteries, camp fire meetings on the beach, a fancy dress competition, and open air outreach in Bridlington. Campers spent their days in various ways. Some went to the informal Bible studies and discussions. Some played games on the extensive stretch of sands. Some swam in the sea only 200 yards from the camp. Others played table tennis, netball, volleyball. Others just wanted to talk: "Although I come from a Christian home, I have never been able to talk about spiritual things to people as I have here at camp", said one girl, echoing the thoughts of many others.

Each evening there was a meeting. The marquee bursting at the seams vibrated with choruses, quizzes, hymns, items, testimonies and the preaching of the Word. Elim's National Youth Director, Pastor Eldin R. Corsie, on a two-day visit to the camp, spoke of the Christian as being like an eaglet, Jesus Christ training us and caring for us as the mother eagle (see Exodus 19:4).

Camp had to end. There were some broken hearts, but they were new hearts belonging to new creatures in Christ. There was sadness at parting, but the deep-seated joy and peace of the Spirit.

Lancashire Presbytery Camp

First Week.

THE Camp was held this year at Bowley Scout Camp, Great Harwood. The Commandant was Pastor Ivan Potts, with Pastor John Seaman as Padre.

After breakfast each morning the Padre gave a Bible study. Then there were the many activities that fill a typical day at camp, for example, a trip to the swimming pool at Great Harwood, a hike to some place of interest, a games session or a coach trip. Every evening the meeting included lively choruses, quizzes and testimonies. Supper-time was an informal get-together, with Commie giving a short epilogue. The most rewarding aspect of all was the decisions by eleven children to follow the Lord Jesus, for which we give Him all the glory.

Second Week

WE started the second week by visiting our Accrington Church where nine young people and two adults gave their lives into God's keeping. On Monday afternoon we had a coach trip to Skipton. Tuesday brought a visit from Pastor S. Beresford, who joined in our sports. On Wednesday evening Pastor D.J. Green gave us a wonderful message, using models which he had made, the theme being our lives transmitting God's Word and love. Thursday saw another coach trip, this time to Heysham and later that evening Pastor L.E. Lambert spoke to us from Luke 14, after which five young people were baptised in the Holy Spirit.

The cry from the campers on Friday afternoon was: "I don't want to go home". Praise God for our Camp. Twenty-three decisions were the final total over the two weeks. Many thanks to Pastors I. Potts and J. Seaman for making it possible.

Boys' Camp on the Gower Coast

BOYS from our Cardiff, Hereford, Caerphilly, Merthyr and Pontlottyn Churches joined at Pwlldu, Gower Coast, for a wonderful, blessed time. Tents were arranged for thirty-two boys and seven leaders, the boys being grouped into six teams, who competed through the week for points to decide which tent won the prizes.

The Camp was wonderfully blessed, the Spirit of God moving in a wonderful way on young and old.

Rhythm among the Baptists

by H. W. Greenway

HAVING received my first religious training among the Baptists and having been converted and baptised in a Baptist church, it is not surprising that an announcement by the minister of the church where we worshipped during our holidays provoked a desire to visit a small branch assembly in a village about six miles away. The occasion was to be the dedication of a new organ. It suggested an experience too good to be missed. So, being a good Baptist at heart (yes, although I am now fully Pentecostal, I find myself more a Baptist than when I was a member of a Baptist church, with four baptisms instead of three!), we joined the party in the crowded mini-bus and eventually found ourselves heading down the narrow winding country lanes for the little tin church.

Away out in a small hamlet we were amazed to find the road lined with an assortment of cars drawn up alongside this unpretentious building. The broad dialect of the Devon folk heralded our approach through the neatly trimmed garden to the humble sanctuary. I glanced up - 1906! So the witness had been maintained among these good country worshippers for nigh on three score years and ten. Here they were, after all these years of preaching and praying telling the good news among their neighbours, installing a new organ, the gift of a family in appreciation of the faithful services of a beloved organist now promoted to musical ministry in a higher sphere.

The tidy little hall was as clean as a new pin, and to use the proverbial cliche was "bursting at the seams", or, if you prefer a more conventional description, was packed to capacity, part of the congregation spilling over into the few unoccupied choir seats. An air of expectancy pervaded the place. There was a friendliness about the people, the proceedings, and the genial minister, whose suit was also bursting at the seams. He came on to the platform with a beaming countenance and soon had us all at ease in the presence of the One who gave us a sense of appreciation for music and was the hidden Guest to receive our tribute of praise. We sang conventional hymns, offered conventional prayers, and listened to a conventional but well-adapted sermon.

Then came the dramatic, the unconventional, the contemporary, even the "way out". The minister announced that the organist would play a few hymns to demonstrate the range of tones and effects that this new wonder could produce. We soon discovered that this was no ordinary wind-bag, no "kist o' whustles" (with apologies to our Scottish friends!), but a music box created by the skill of the electronics engineer. Not that this type or organ is entirely new. We have been treated to the twentieth century sound for a number of years now.

The organist had roamed along the key-board before we were able to sample this new wonder and had found a few buttons, on the pressing of which he discovered a number of rhythmic drum beats. Having an experimental nature, he proceeded to add a more exciting tempo to some of our staid, well-tried hymns. Imagine, therefore, "The Church's one Foundation" and such like grand examples of ancient orthodoxy dressed up in the garb of the fox-trot, the bosanova, and other steady beats on the big drum, the switches of the snare drum, the castanets, and other manufactured percussion instruments sounds. Did the dignified farmers rise up in revolt? They just sat with a new movement in their worship; they tapped their feet and moved slightly to the steady uncompromising beat. The young folk had a smirk on their faces and the minister beamed with evident satisfaction.

It was farewell to the dirge. "Onward, Christian Soldiers" sounded much better with its martial stride, but the marriage of the stately hymns of serious content with the dance hall stimulus had a strange feeling for many of us.

Of course, these instruments of the orchestra have been used in divine worship from the time of the ancient temple. Rhythm adds to the emotional content of our praise and indeed to the interest that we should enjoy in singing our hosannas to God. The very mechanical progression of the beat at least kept us singing at a steady tempo to the end of the piece. We were not allowed that all-too-common slowing down at the end, that rallentando so popular among many church musicians and congregations.

The wise man in Ecclesiastes reminds us that there is "a time to every purpose under heaven". Obviously there is a time and place for rhythm in our worship. There is also a time when syncopation and rhythm can be a diversion from the main purpose of our devotions. Such was the case on the occasion of a rally at which a group of young progressives played "The old rugged Cross" to a bewildered audience. They banged, bawled, and bounced around that old rugged cross; they threw everything that they had learned from their jazz contemporaries at the petrified audience who winced under the deafening bombardment. No doubt they were sincere in their efforts to get the message across, but their enthusiasm had outstripped their understanding of the solemnity of the scene that they were trying to present. What should have been a tender appeal became a repulsive cacophony.

It's easy to get stuck in the mud down on the farm, but these good Baptist folk were neither in the mud nor in a groove. The new organ can be of great service to them as they sing the praises of God provided the fingers that control the keys are fully dedicated to the words, to which the music is but an emotional complement.

What suits our good farm folk can also be of help to the new generation coming up. A little bit of common sense in the use of new-fangled instruments can smooth over what could be an occasion for contention and loss, and adapt from ancient days a form of singing freed from traditional modes.

vision for deliverance from evil powers. "These signs shall follow them that believe: In my name shall they cast out devils". Praise the Lord!

For the government of the local assembly.

Because they had not this discernment, the religious leaders of Christ's day were not able to "discern the signs of the times", nor the movings of the Holy Spirit when Jesus cast out devils "by the Spirit of God".

Graham Pulkingham, the Episcopalian minister of the Church of the Redeemer, Houston, Texas, was told by God to go to New York to see David Wilkerson. Later, while David was talking to another man, Graham browsed among the books in the library. Suddenly David said: "I bear witness on my heart about you. Kneel down. I want to pray.". Graham obeyed. He says: "When their hands touched my head something inside me leapt with gladness. . . all awareness of the men and their prayers and even of myself was obliterated by the immense presence of God's power."

May God give us to discern by the moving of His Holy Spirit when He is about to bless His Church!

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

52. Corn in Egypt (Genesis 41:53-54)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

FOR seven years the Land of Egypt and the neighbouring nations enjoyed plenty because of the abundant harvests, but the people became carelessly secure. They were materialists, for they behaved as though this prosperity would go on for ever. The result of this attitude was that no-one troubled to make provision for the time of drought which would certainly come. When famine did come, the people found themselves face to face with death. In Egypt, however, Joseph was not lulled into false security by the time of plenty; he had been divinely warned of the coming famine and he made abundant provision during the years of plenty. The life of Egypt depended on his God-inspired wisdom. When other lands starved there was "corn in Egypt".

For years material prosperity has lulled men and women in our land into a false sense of security. Materialism has made possessions seem to be all-important. Many folk are becoming badly disillusioned, however, for they are now realising that "things" are only temporary and are unsatisfactory. The famine is surely coming on, not of food, but of the Word of life. Young people especially are looking for the true Bread. The folk who are going to meet the need are the spiritual "Josephs", those who in times of general carelessness have stored the Bread of Life. These are the ones who can give the Word of salvation to men and women.

Will we be found among those who will be providers of the Bread of Life in the time of famine?

From T. H. Stevenson

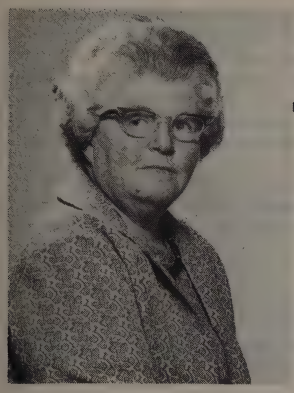
THE complaint of a mother in England, that her little girl had been hypnotised in the school play-ground by another girl of eight years old, served to show the reality and growth of the occult and draw attention to the inroads of spiritism and its off-shoots today. Spiritism is a subject that I have always felt a great aversion even to refer to, though thankfully the occasions have been very rare when I have conducted meetings and realised the presence of spiritists. I fully sensed or discerned the awareness of the evil spirits associated with or indwelling individuals, even if apparently inactive. I preached only once on the subject of Satan (during my first year of ministry) and recollect writing in a letter to my parents that I would much prefer to talk about the Lord. Almost forty-two years later I do not seem to have changed in this respect.

I must relate, however, the recent experience of two mature believers well known to me, when the husband's mother spent a holiday with them. Professing that she has several friendly spirits who speak to her often and particularly the spirit of her deceased sister, on the first night of her holiday she entered the bedroom of her son and daughter-in-law, terrified. A dark figure of human appearance had remained in her bedroom for more than an hour and then proceeded to raise her right leg persistently by gripping the great toe of the mother's foot. The son exchanged his bed, the mother transferring to his single bed. Despite being a mature Christian our brother soon had the same horrifying experience as his right leg was involuntarily and, despite resistance, persistently raised by the same procedure as before. His wife came into the room and prayed aloud for the evil spirit to depart in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ and immediately there was release and peace. In the morning our brother found his great toe severely bruised, while his mother had not only such a bruise, but multiple bruises on her body. The experience further confirmed our brother and sister in the power of Christ over this new, unexpected attack of Satan, but the mother who dabbled in spiritism still clung to her "friendly spirits". I was specially interested as our sister told how that she had always associated in her mind that exorcism required a minister or clergy, but now had experienced that the effective power was sincere faith to use the authoritative name of the Lord Jesus Christ.

I would but add that it is not only necessary to believe in the authority of Christ, but also to use that name of all authority with authority.

Our Lord has given power to exercise the power of the "name that is above every other name".

PRAYER AND PRAISE



by F. H. Coleman

IN my last column I told you of the early morning prayer meetings in Korea. At one Pentecostal Church the people gathered morning by morning for prayer, not knowing that in a house next door lay a man who was dying. Each morning this poor man heard the Christians at prayer. He thought that he should pray to his god, but, pray as he might, there was no response, he was as sick as ever. Buddha may have eyes, but they see not. He has ears, but he does not hear. His hands are lifeless and helpless to do anything for such who are sick and dying.

The Church prayer meetings continued. The sick man grew worse and worse. He knew that he did not have much time to live. Then the thought came to him to go to the prayer meeting next door. They were Christians, he was a Buddhist. No, he felt that he could not go. He grew worse and hope of recovery was fading. He listened to the Christians praying. They seemed to be so happy. They prayed as if their God answered prayer. So he made up his mind; he would go to the prayer meeting next morning. He did so. Slowly he dressed himself and dragged his sick body into the Church. What singing – what praying – the place seemed to be electrified with a power that he had never experienced before! He, too, began to pray. The power of God went through his body. He was healed at 5 a.m. and left the meeting saved and healed. Today he is a bright, shining Christian, testifying to all of the love of God and of the One who hears and answers prayer. I was not told but I am sure he is at the prayer meeting every morning. I do know that he does go to some early morning meetings, for I have a picture of him outside the Church.

Are you at your Church prayer meeting once a week? You are not asked to attend every morning at some early hour, but at a time convenient to all. May we see our Church prayer meetings filled and believers praying!

The Sheffield Poet

CHILDHOOD memories are often very distinct. I can well remember being taken to the Montgomery Hall in the centre of Sheffield. Years later I learned how and why this edifice was built. In June, 1812, an earnest band of workers formed the Sheffield Sunday School Union. From its inception James Montgomery wrote the annual report and for a number of years was its President. The Montgomery Hall was built some thirty years after his death to serve as a headquarters for this Union and a memorial to this great man. Who was this man who so obviously realised the importance of teaching children the Christian gospel?

James Montgomery, born in the town of Irvine, Ayrshire, in 1771, was the son of an Irish Moravian minister. He grew up surrounded by godly influences. At the tender age of six years he was placed in the Moravian Boarding School at Fulneck near Leeds. His parents felt the call to serve God as missionaries in Barbados, West Indies, and made the great sacrifice of leaving both home and children. Incidentally they both died there, having suffered much privation in evangelism among negro slaves.

It is recorded that, after a visit to Ireland, little James travelled by boat across the Irish Sea and there was a severe storm. His loving father comforted him by telling him how the Lord Jesus saved the disciples on the Sea of Galilee. The ship's captain was so impressed by the little boy's demeanour that he cried, "I would give £1,000 for the faith of that little child". God certainly had His hand upon this child. He wrote his first book at the age of ten and before he was thirteen he had produced a volume of poems after the style of the Moravian hymns. His desire to live an upright life is illustrated by the story of the visit of the eccentric Lord Monboddo to the Fulneck Settlement. His Lordship confronted the schoolboys and, glaring at them, struck terror into their hearts by coiling and uncoiling a whip. "This is a countryman of your Lordship," said the Headmaster, pointing to young Montgomery. "Ah! I hope his country will have no reason to be ashamed of him," he replied, grimly cracking his whip over the boy's head. There and then James determined that Scotland would never be ashamed of his character nor of his doings!

After leaving school he was apprenticed to a shopkeeper at Mirfield, but in 1789 one Sunday morning he set out to seek his fortune, possessing only 3/6d, his manuscripts, and wearing his old suit, as he felt that he hadn't earned the right to take the new suit that his master had bought him. He arrived eventually at the village of Wentworth. While staying there he ascertained that the noble Earl was at home and might be met with riding in the park. Montgomery at once proceeded thither with a fairly transcribed copy of a poem in his pocket. Having the good fortune to meet with his Lordship he presented it. He kindly read it on the spot and gave the author a golden guinea! This was his first patronage and profit.

Here he heard of another job which eventually led to his arrival in Sheffield at the age of twenty-one. God was leading and his life's work was beginning. His father had planned for him to enter the ministry, but His heavenly Father had chosen an even wider scope of service as a hymn-writer, Christian poet, pioneer of Sunday schools and social betterment, philanthropist and a preacher and deeply-respected man of God.

Two additional verses to his hymn, "Hail to the Lord's Anointed" have not been included in our hymn-book:

He comes with succour speedy,
To those who suffer wrong;
To help the poor and needy,
And bid the weak be strong:
To give them songs for sighing,
Their darkness turn to light,
Whose souls, condemned and dying,
Were precious in His sight.

O'er every foe victorious,
He on His throne shall rest;
From age to age more glorious,
All-blessing and all-blest.
The tide of time shall never
His covenant remove;
His name shall stand for ever
His changeless name of Love.

inspection, Bible study and activity time. After dinner came free time for swimming etc., until 5 p.m. for tea. An evening of fellowship followed with choruses, the Word of God and quizzes. The tent teams competing for points for learning and saying the day's memory verse.

The theme of this year's camp was: "Making God's message mine and giving it to others". The Bible study and talk each morning was based on this theme.

Special gratitude must go to all the leaders who helped throughout this wonderful camp, but most of all for the Lord for undertaking in such a marvellous way. On the Thursday night, we had a talk on the Baptism in the Holy Spirit and thirteen boys went into a separate tent to wait upon the Lord. At least five boys were baptised. There was more to come, however. One lad, feeling restless and not able to sleep, felt the need to speak to one of the leaders. His restlessness proved to be conviction, and the leader had the great joy of leading him to Christ. On the Friday night four more boys made decisions for Christ.

We praise God for all who helped on the musical side and the organising of the camp throughout, and for Pastors J.H. Dick and R. Hunston for giving the Word on the occasions of their visits.

Youth Weekend at Chigwell

WHEN the power of God falls, the Holy Spirit directs when meetings shall end. As we move out of the rut of tradition and ritual of set patterns for meetings and pre-determined endings, God has room to bless.

With such factors in mind as these the three London and the Eastern Presbyteries held their annual Youth Weekend at Grange Farm, Chigwell. About sixty guests from the four districts gathered for what proved to be an exciting, thrilling forty-six hours. One minister's summing up of the Saturday evening describes the realms to which God took us: "Words just cannot explain or describe the glorious experience".

Pastor L.P. Cowdery's Spirit-filled ministry led us along pathways which we shall want to follow, as we discovered "How to get answers to Prayer", "Rules for successful, dynamic living", "Following the Holy Spirit", and "What Happiness is". One could feel the Spirit moving on lives as the ministry went forth. Ministers and young people alike spoke of the tremendous challenge and confessed their need to follow after these things.

Appreciations for the weekend were spontaneously expressed, both in testimony and in generous giving towards the expenses.

The event was organised by Pastor Peter J. Hill and directed by Pastor Brian C. Richardson, with the able co-operation of Pastors John Harrison and Mervyn J. Tilley.

4. Special Outdoor Efforts

1. Carnivals. If your town has a carnival, make a church contribution. Hire an old lorry to make into a float advertising the youth programme of the church. Each department can be represented.

2. Market Stalls. Local markets are usually the meeting place of many thousands of people, particularly at weekends. Make enquiries at the Market Superintendent's office to set up a stall to sell and distribute good gospel literature. Special advertising materials can be displayed so that the local church gets the maximum publicity. It is important that a bookseller's licence is obtained before any books are sold. Scripture Union will provide full particulars of the methods of setting up a bookstall.

3. Town Shows. Some time ago application was made by our Harlow Church to rent a stand at the Harlow Town Show. Permission was granted and the Presbytery accepted the responsibility of publicising the gospel and the work of the Elim Pentecostal Church. Crowds in the region of 100,000 visit the Show and many contacted the Elim stand. It may be possible for you to do the same.

4. Gospel Convoys. Organise a convoy of cars, vans and lorries on which are displayed posters and slogans which advertise the youth work of the movement. The convoy should be led by a van with loudspeakers presenting a challenge and invitation to attend the services. This method will certainly command the attention of the people. A march of witness can be arranged to follow this up. What about a torchlight witness late at night (conducted with dignity, of course)? Be sure to obtain the permission of the police.

5. Youth Census. "Excuse me, I am helping to conduct an important youth census. I wonder if you could help me by answering a few simple questions?". With that very ordinary beginning, a young person walking along the street, sitting on a park bench, or leaning over a seaside promenade rail, has been introduced, perhaps for the first time, to the message of the gospel. It is very difficult to walk up to people in the street and begin to talk to them about religion. The youth census method helps to meet this difficulty. The equipment is simple and inexpensive: A folder with a set of special questions printed on the inside of the cover, some blank sheets on which to record answers, and a supply of good tracts or booklets. Sometimes also young Christians carry with them invitations to a squash or a forthcoming evangelistic meeting. With this ammunition, much prayer, and often trembling knees, groups of young Christians have ventured into almost every situation, sometimes in twos, sometimes singly, but generally with a group of other Christians working near at hand. There are right and wrong ways of doing this, so every participant is supplied with a set of printed suggestions enclosed in his folder and marked: "To be taken out before using this folder". After all it wouldn't help for a young person to read the instructions for getting at him! The National Young Life Campaign have printed youth census forms with a special tape-recording of instructions.

6. Bus Evangelism. Many churches are proving the value of filling buses with unconverted people and bringing them to the meetings. One church in the north of England with a weekly congregation of forty to fifty people has increased its congregation to three hundred to three hundred and fifty people. This method was used to great effect. The following plan was outlined in The Sunday Companion and is printed here by permission:

"How do you go about organising 'bus evangelism'? First, decide on a town, village or council estate not too near the church (about four or five miles distant is ideal). Arrange to hire (or even buy) a single-decker bus or a mini-bus, and seek out a driver from your own, or from another local congregation. Map out your bus route and decide upon strategic pick-up points. Assuming your service starts at 6.30 p.m., the first pick-up should be made at around 6 p.m., and the church should be reached by 6.25 p.m.

Scripture Union Portions — Notes by Gerald L.W. Ladlow

Monday, November 19th — Ezekiel 12:1-20

"I have set thee for a sign unto. . . Israel" (v.6).

IN order to be God's sign to Israel, the prophet had to sacrifice all personal interests. God asked him to do some extraordinary things to demonstrate His plan for His people. Some things involved him in personal suffering, while others could have made him the object of ridicule and derision. His complete dedication is seen in v.7: "I did so as I was commanded". Though his sanity might be doubted, his sincerity could never be questioned. The Christian is called to be His witnesses. Are we willing to obey His commands at the risk of becoming "fools for Christ's sake"?

Tuesday, November 20th — Ezekiel 13:1-16

"The foolish prophets, that follow their own spirit, and have seen nothing!" (v.3).

A PROPHET without a vision is a misnomer. The Old Testament prophet was known as a "seer", one who had spiritual sight, who saw and discerned things which could be known only by supernatural revelation. The Hebrew noun "prophet" comes from a verb meaning to "belch out" or "pour forth", so that his message was inspired by what he had seen. Without such inspiration the message originated in the human mind and led to disaster, as portrayed in this chapter. The decline in the Church in this century has been brought about by the rejection of the inspired Word of God in favour of human reasoning and pleasing platitudes. Let us pray today for a return to the God-inspired message which alone can meet the present need.

Wednesday, November 21st — Ezekiel 14:1-23

"Idols in his heart. . . the stumbling block of his iniquity before his face" (v.4).

BEFORE the making of idols as objects of worship, there was idolatry in the heart. When once we allow something or someone to occupy first place in our affections, we are on the path to idolatry and are in danger of openly backsliding. It was to the saints that John wrote: "Little children, keep yourselves from idols" (1 John 5:21). Let us ever seek to "sanctify the Lord God in our heart" (1 Peter 3:15).

Thursday, November 22nd — Ezekiel 15:1-8

"What is the vine tree more than any tree?" (v.2).

THE vine is useful for only one purpose: the production of fruit. When it fails to produce grapes, it serves no other useful purpose except as fuel for the fire. The vine is used to signify both the nation of Israel (Hosea 10:1) and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, who, having failed to produce the fruits of righteousness, were fit only for divine judgment. Our Lord likens Himself to the vine and the believer to a branch. Remember the solemn warning of John 15:6 and seek to abide in Him and bring forth much fruit.

Friday, November 23rd — Ezekiel 16:1-22

"Perfect through my comeliness, which I have put upon thee" (v.14).

AS an outcast infant, taken from birth, washed, nourished, nurtured, and, as it grew, clothed and enriched with gifts, so Israel is pictured as having been cared for by God. Here, too, is a prophetic picture of the love and care God has bestowed upon His Church, clothing here in His righteousness and enriching her with spiritual gifts. May we be faithful to our high responsibility of living as His children and manifesting His glory to the world (John 17:21,22).

Saturday, November 24th — Ezekiel 16:35-52, 59-63

"I will establish unto thee an everlasting covenant" (v.60).

THE covenant to Israel began with Abraham (Genesis 15) and was extended (Genesis 17:19;22:16). Constant reference is made to it throughout the Old Testament. It was renewed to Jacob and to Moses and is referred to by almost all the prophets. The ground for Israel's hope for future blessing rests solely upon the belief that God cannot go back on His word: it is an everlasting covenant. Similarly the ground of hope for the New Testament Church is the new covenant ratified by the blood of Jesus. So we enjoy peace (Hebrews 13:20,21).

'Tis everlasting peace,
Sure as Jehovah's name.
'Tis stable as His steadfast throne,
For evermore the same.

Sunday, November 25th — Ezekiel 18:1-18

"The soul that sinneth, it shall die" (v.4).

THE message of the Lord through the prophet was intended to impress the lesson of personal responsibility and accountability to God. No man is able to lay blame for his personal sin upon anyone else, nor is he able to excuse himself on the ground of inherent weakness. He must give an account of his own actions and will receive judgment accordingly. The sinner dies because of his own sin and not because of the sin of Adam. However, there was One who was able to die for our sins and so we are pardoned, not on the ground of our righteousness, but of His.

He dies to atone,
For sins not His own;
Your debt He hath paid
And your work He hath done.

Why the Lord must intervene

Psalm 119:126

by F. Lavender

THE Psalmist clearly recognised an important truth: that the activities of men must bring a response from the Lord. He is not careless or indifferent concerning what men are doing. Although He is patient toward them, a time comes when because of what men do God will act. The Psalmist said that men were casting off restraint and holding His law in contempt, therefore it was time for the Lord to work for the honour of His name.

On every hand there is evidence in our Nation of contempt for the laws of God. Materialism is certainly the religion of multitudes of our people. Their god is wealth because of the power, pleasure and comfort which it brings; people are as surely idolaters as the heathen who worship images. The results of idolatry are also evident. The moral laws governing man's relations with man are collapsing and men are ruled by lust, self-interest, and the attitude: "I'm all right, Jack!".

The churches, too, are generally indifferent to the will of God and to the true need of man, being more concerned with material things than with the spiritual needs of men and women.

There are some, however, who are acutely aware of our Nation's plight and they are crying: "It is time for Thee to work, Lord". The Bible clearly shows how the Lord works at such times.

He raises up men and women who will call people to return to Him, prophets, witnesses to declare the sin and folly of men and urge them to repent, men like Enoch, Noah, Elijah, Malachi, Paul, Luther, Wesley, Graham.

He shows mercy to those who repent of their sin, often encouraging such repentance by means of signs and wonders. So people like king Manasseh, Saul of Tarsus, the Philippian jailor and myself have found mercy and forgiveness by obeying the Lord and humbly turning to Christ.

The Lord works by visiting with judgment those who will not return to Him and repent of their sin. The desire of the Lord is to show mercy and not to condemn men, for it is not His will that any should perish, but rather that they should repent (2 Peter 3:9). When men and nations are hardened, only judgment remains. Solomon said: "He that being often reproved hardeneth his neck shall suddenly be broken and that without remedy" (Proverbs 29:1).

Are we among that company who are praying to the Lord that He will work in our Nation for His glory? If so, we can know for sure that the Lord has heard our cry and will work among us. He is raising up those who will call our people to repentance and, by signs and wonders, He will bear testimony to their message. Those who hear His voice and repent of their sin will experience His pardoning mercy and saving grace. Those who harden themselves against Him will know His overwhelming judgments.

Today He is calling Christians to turn from their slackness and to serve Him with all their hearts. He is pleading with sinners to repent of their sin, to turn to Christ and to receive Him as their Saviour before it is too late.

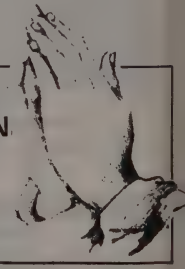
"WHEN they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them, as travail upon a woman with child; and they shall not escape." (1 Thessalonians 5:3). That this portentous Scripture is connected with the second coming of Christ is clear from its context, not least v.2: "For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night.". The remainder of the whole dissertation, which runs from 4:13 to 5:13, is against the background of the second advent and after, and its main thrust is towards believers.



The events of the past few weeks have been increasingly bewildering. It seems beyond the bounds of possibility that Britain could soft-pedal on her erstwhile friendly attitude to the Jews, most probably because of oil politics, but it has happened. The American alert was frightening in its possibilities. Press pictures of British fighters intercepting and "buzzing" a Russian bomber near the shores of Britain did not exactly lend for encouragement either. Sabre-rattling of the most grisly and terrifying kind has become all too familiar. News bulletins have seemed to become ever more astonishing and involved. At one time it looked very possible that the world would be engulfed in what could lead to nuclear war.

Now they have signed a so-called peace pact, toasted in fruit juice and coke apparently, and signed in the desert on Egyptian territory occupied by Israel, by Egyptians and Israelis in the presence of U.N. troops—"peace-keeping" is their euphemistic title. It all sounds too good to be true. The portents of renewed war are all too clear. Yet they proclaim Dr. Kissinger as a wizard and peace as a definite possibility. Who would have thought that the so-called "detente" could bring U.S.S.R. and U.S.A. into a love-hate relationship to impose peace? Can peace really be imposed? Can nations be put down, slapped down, if you like, like naughty children and be told what they have to do?

"When they shall say peace and safety"—how penetrating is the Scripture!

If there are two lessons to be learned from recent events they are that things are moving at such a pace that men are having to scramble to try to prevent a so-called peace being broken and a nuclear holocaust being unleashed.

The other thing is that we had better get on with our evangelism urgently. It does not look as if there is much time.

Church Reports

REPORT FROM NEW ZEALAND

THE twenty-second annual conference of the Elim Church in New Zealand was held in late October at Nelson where we have a growing Elim work. The fourteen delegates and observers rejoiced in the way God has strengthened the Movement over the past year. We heard how promises made by God at the last Conference had been fulfilled, especially in Blenheim, and how we praised Him for this.

The movement is still small and only two pastors are full-time, but the Lord has graciously promised a new day is dawning. We pray it will be a day of expansion, a day of a greater moving in the Holy Spirit, and a day when overseas evangelists will at last be available to assist us in our labours.

We were thrilled at the way in which the Lord confirmed the conference's decision considerably to increase the missionary budget by 40%! During the weekend a substantial anonymous gift was given to confirm that step of faith.

The series of six convention meetings also held over that long weekend was a great inspiration and blessing to many. Pastor Des Short of Faith Bible College really ministered under the guidance of God. As a result many entered into new spiritual dimensions. We all departed rejoicing in what God had done, and determined to be more open to the Spirit, to submit more to God, and to believe for great things over the next twelve months.

GRAHAM STREET, Birmingham

"IT is the first time in the history of Graham Street Church that a minister has retired, making it a unique occasion." So said Mr. L. Bentley, Church Secretary, as he welcomed 200 or more folk to a happy family gathering to mark the Pastor's retirement.

For the past thirteen years, Pastor E.F. Cole has held the pastorate, while his services to the Elim Movement extend over a period of forty-five years. On behalf of the Elim Executive Council, Pastor J.T. Bradley conveyed a message of gratitude for the zeal, love and devotion which have been so evident throughout Pastor Cole's ministry. In wishing both Pastor and Mrs. Cole all that is well for the future, Pastor Bradley stated that he could heartily recommend retirement as an honourable estate, though he himself has not yet experienced its joys, nevertheless he remarked that it is evident that many retired ministers take on a new lease of life. In enumerating the various pastorates held by Pastor Cole, mention was made of the magnificent achievement and indeed noteworthy climax that the new church building at Graham Street had been built under Paster Cole's ministry.

Mrs. Cole has played an equally important role in the work at Graham Street and this was richly expressed by Mrs. Sanders, a senior member of the Sisterhood. She esteemed it a great privilege to have belonged to the Sisterhood since its inauguration in 1962. In paying tribute to Mrs. Cole's leadership, she said that every meeting has been marked with a sense of the presence of God. Not once has there been heard a word of criticism or gossip, but week by week they have met with God and have gone away blessed in body, soul and spirit. The Secretary of the Sisterhood, Mrs. V. Hodgkiss, had the pleasurable duty of presenting Mrs. Cole with a cheque as an expression of love and gratitude, while another senior member, Mrs. Beardmore, a sprightly eighty-two year-old, presented her with a beautiful bouquet.

The Secretary of the Young People's Fellowship, Mr. Graham Wells, made the presentation to Mr. Cole of a copy of The Living Bible as a token of gratitude for all the help that he has given to the young people of the Church. Perhaps the young lady who stole the show was Debbie, the nine year-old grand-daughter of Pastor and Mrs. Cole, who, on behalf of the members and friends of the Church, proudly presented Mrs. Cole with a leather handbag.

Lastly, the Church Treasurer, Mr. H. Wells paid tribute, not only to Pastor Cole's ministry, but to all the ministers who have laboured for the Lord at Graham Street. The Church has been abundantly blessed under every minister throughout the years. In making the presentation of a cheque, Mr. Wells recalled some of the tremendous difficulties Pastor Cole has had to face during his ministry at Graham Street, nevertheless one of the greatest compliments that could be paid to him is that he retires leaving the Church in complete harmony.

As a lasting reminder, a book has been compiled bearing the signatures of the members and friends of Graham Street Church, together with a tribute to the work of Pastor and Mrs. Cole, who have been true ambassadors for Christ, loving the souls of men and women and faithfully shepherding the flock. What better verse of Scripture could be inscribed in such a book than Hebrews 6:10: "For God is not unrighteous to forget your work and labour of love, which ye have shewed toward His name, in that ye have ministered to the saints, and do minister".

NEWHAVEN Pastor: L. Northcote

A GOOD number of the members and friends met to give Pastor and Mrs. J.M. Reeve-Baker a warm farewell from their labours here in Newhaven. Both the Pastor and his wife, who have ministered at the Church for five years, said that they will hold happy remembrances of all with whom they had come into contact during their stay here and would continue to pray God's blessing on His work. Gifts were given by the Sunday school, Sisterhood and Church, and, on behalf of all those present and those connected with the Church, the Treasurer gave thanks to God for His most marvellous provision and for the faithfulness of His servants. We believe that, wherever God leads them, they will know the richness and power of His blessing.

We have now welcomed into our fellowship Brother and Sister L. Northcote, and we look to the Lord for a new and precious experience of Himself.

A.P. CLARK

LETCHWORTH Pastor: G.S. Hillman

WE are rejoicing in the Lord's rich blessing on our weekend meetings when we met to celebrate our fiftieth anniversary. Our guest preacher was the Editor, T.W. Walker. The Selly Oak Male Voice Choir joined us for the first meeting and rendered a number of choice choir items with much sincerity and warmth. We also enjoyed their solos and ringing testimonies. The inspiring first message given by Pastor Walker was most uplifting, a note of victory pervaded the whole atmosphere. His anointed message, taken from 2 Corinthians 2:14, was most enriching.

The theme was continued on the Sunday morning, while for his Sunday night message Pastor Walker spoke from Leviticus 25 on the Year of Jubilee, a subject appropriate to the occasion. A deep sense of Christ's presence affected us all. Pastor G.S. Hillman convened all three meetings.

CONSTANCE V. BRADBURY

LONG EATON Pastor: R.L. Currie

THE past weeks have been times of blessing and increase. We have received in ten new members and convened various events which were times of particular spiritual encouragement.

Over the August Bank Holiday weekend we held our second convention. Pastor J.C. Smyth ministered God's Word with liberty and power. We praise the Lord for the encouragement and for the wonderful time of fellowship.

On September 22,23, we celebrated our twenty-fifth Church anniversary. As the cake was cut at the anniversary tea by our oldest member, Mrs. M. Saunderson, we sang "praise God from whom all blessings flow". We praise God for all the past blessings, yet we look to Him for even greater things in the future. Pastor Ron Morrell, who had close associations with the Church in early days, was our preacher for the weekend, and again God blessed the Word to our hearts.

The following Thursday we held a baptismal service when six of our fellowship and one lady from a local Methodist church went through the waters of baptism in obedience to the Lord's command. Pastor Maldwyn Jones spoke on the significance of baptism and each candidate testified to their personal salvation.

It was fitting that the following weekend was our harvest festival when we joined in thanks to God for His goodness, mercy, faithfulness and love.

PONTARDULAIS Pastor: G.J. Feasey

WE have every reason to thank and praise the Lord for the blessing and progress which we have experienced during recent months. God has saved and healed frequently. In a number of cases the healings have been dramatic and instantaneous and testimonies in the services have been a regular feature.

We were honoured to have a six-day campaign with Pastor Joseph Smith, the veteran "young" pioneer as our guest preacher. His ministry made a great impact on all who heard him. We were greatly enriched by his visit.

We took the challenge of the gospel to our village by entering a large, impressive float in the local carnival. A sixteen-foot silver cross bore the message: "This is what Jesus has done". Some of the 8,000 who witnessed the scene of Calvary thanked the Church and the Pastor for bringing the courage of their convictions before the crowds. Following the carnival we hired the largest chapel in the village for the visit of Pastor David Hathaway. As he told of his deliverance from prison, the congregation of 200 sang in praise and made the large Church ring with joy.

Many other efforts have been blessed of God, including another baptismal service, the Church anniversary with Pastor D.A. Lambelle, the harvest thanksgiving with Miss Joan Caudell, who received for help in Inyanga the largest single missionary offering ever received in our Church.

Increasing membership and God's choicest of blessing have been achieved only through the ministry of prayer and by the anointed ministry of our beloved Pastor. He and his wife, who is a great help to us in the Church, have been blessed with the precious gift of a baby boy. May God's hand be upon them!

God is faithful to His Word and we expect even greater things in the near future.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Mr. Walker,

MAY I thank all who have prayed for my husband during his long illness and thank you also for all the prayers and messages of sympathy for the family in our bereavement. We have indeed felt the power of the prayer and loving sympathy extended to us and have been upheld by the Lord in a wonderful way. The Lord bless you all.

Mrs. V. Shipley.

Dear Editor,

VALERIE and I have just finished our itinerary, after visiting about one third of our churches, and through the EVANGEL I want to thank the various Pastors and members of the churches which we have attended for their fellowship and kindness.

There have been occasions when we were very tired, but we found that we received strength and spiritual help from many whom we met and to whom we ministered.

When in Guyana we will often remember people whom we have met and the places where we have been and we will give God praise knowing that He unites us all and that He answers prayer.

Once again, fellow-workers and members, we express many thanks for the blessings and encouragements received.

Yours in Christ,

Ian and Valerie MacInnes

THE GIFTS OF THE SPIRIT—8

Divers Kinds of Tongues

(1 Corinthians 12:10)

by Charles J. E. Kingston

LANGUAGE is only a pattern of sounds. The promise "they shall speak with new tongues" (Mark 16:17) implies the reorganising of existing linguistic patterns. The new tongues reflect a greater awareness of God, which needs a new language to express it, just as a new name is needed for a new product, such as nylon.

1. What is speaking in tongues?

Speaking in tongues is speaking in a new language, unknown to the speaker, but known to God who understands all language. "He that speaketh in an unknown tongue speaketh not unto men, but unto God" (1 Corinthians 14:2) – a private conversation between the spirit of man and the Spirit of God.

This gift follows from the baptism with the Holy Spirit, given by the Lord Jesus Christ, who is the Baptiser, as well as Himself being the Word. Speech is the mark of a person. The Holy Spirit spoke through the prophets; reasonably, we may expect Him to evidence His indwelling in us by speech, as He did on the Day of Pentecost. God is not dumb; He has spoken unto men and still does (2 Peter 1:21; Acts 2:4).

2. Why God gives this gift of tongues

God does not give His gifts unreasonably. When the Holy Spirit filled the 120 in the upper room they "began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance"; when "the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word" in Cornelius's home, they spoke with tongues and magnified God; when the twelve men of Ephesus received the Spirit, "they spake with tongues and prophesied". This pattern of response suggests that obedience to the Holy Spirit is one of the practical aspects of speaking in tongues. The tongue is the last citadel of man's nature to surrender to Him; when He takes control of the most unruly member of the body, He is the Lord of all. As the Bible says: "No man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost" (1 Corinthians 12:3).

3. How does the gift of tongues operate?

The disciples began to speak as the Spirit gave utterance; syllables of sound, given by the Holy Spirit but unknown in meaning to them (though not to Him) entered their minds in exactly the same way as inner guidance from God does. As these first syllables of sound were vocalised other sounds appeared, but the disciples had to speak out those sounds. God does not compel us to yield to the inner voice of His guidance, nor will He force our tongues to yield to His gift of tongues; beginning to speak is always the disciples' part.

4. What is the use of the gift of tongues?

That man may speak supernaturally to God

"There is a deep in the spirit of the redeemed that is not plumbed by mind or thought". "My spirit prayeth", Paul said. Praying in depth enables us to express our hearts to God.

That God may be magnified

This gift enables our whole beings to magnify and praise God. So those Jews testified who heard the 120 "speak in our tongues the wonderful works of God" (Acts 2:11). Michael Harper records how a young Episcopal couple came into contact with another who had received a deep experience of God: "So Joan asked Shirley (the wife) what had happened to her-she answered in the heavenly language that the Lord had given her". Joan tells what her reaction to this was: "I was astonished. For the first time in my life I knew that God was real; that He was as near to me as Shirley. My first thought was, 'The New Testament is true. Another realisation hit me – I was a sinner. . ." (As at the beginning).

That believers may edify (build up) themselves

Prophesying edifies others; speaking in tongues edifies oneself (1 Corinthians 14:4). Speaking in tongues gives rest and refreshing, the prophet tells us (Isaiah 28:11, 12). There would not be so many breakdowns in health among Christians if this gift were more widely used. Paul thanked God that he was able to speak in tongues more than them all. He must often have been refreshed in spirit by its use.

That, with the added gift of interpretation of tongues, the Church may be edified.

In his private prayers, the baptised believer may edify himself, as Paul did, praying with the Spirit; in a public meeting, if there be no interpreter present, let him keep silence in the church, speaking to him-

CHILDREN'S CORNER

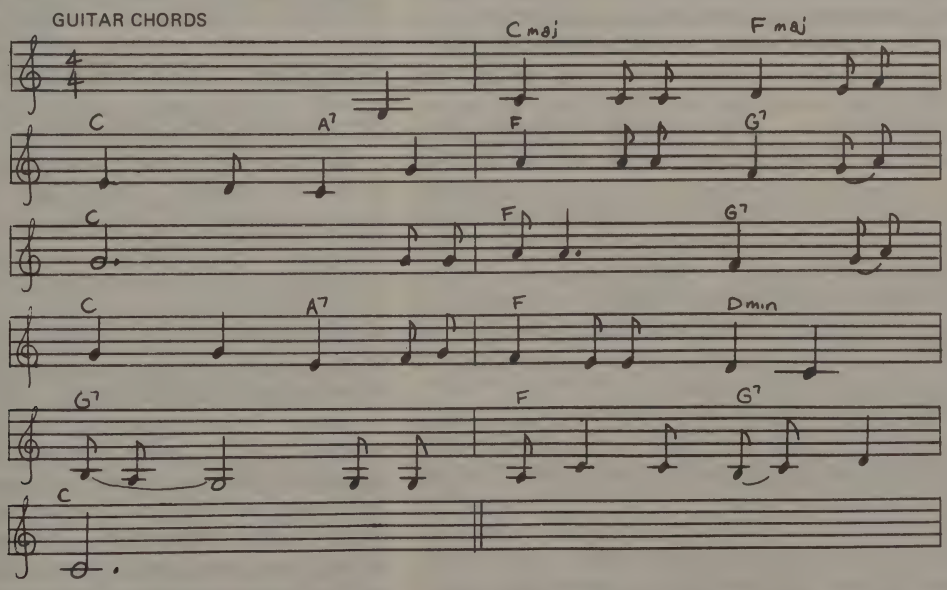
The interrupted Meal

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

AFTER spending a long and busy day, Jesus was looking forward to having supper with Simon the Pharisee, a very rich man. Simon, too, was looking forward to His company for the evening and he proudly welcomed Jesus to his grand house. The two went into the room to eat the freshly-baked bread and meat.

Suddenly there was a commotion outside. The door to the dining-room burst open and in rushed a young girl, weeping. She threw herself at Christ's feet and knelt there sobbing her heart out.

Simon was furious. "How dare you enter my home!" he cried. "How dare you interrupt my meal and spoil my evening!" Simon knew all about this girl. She lived nearby and led a wicked life. Now she had humiliated Simon in front of his Guest and he could not control his anger. "Get out!" he ordered. "Don't you know that I am entertaining a very special Person?".



The girl did know. That was why she had burst into Simon's house.

For a long time she had been alone. No-one would speak to her or help her. No-one was sorry for her. She had spent her days thinking of her home, her friends and the father and mother whom she was afraid to face. She had spent her nights regretting her wicked ways. One day, she met Jesus and heard Him speak of God's great love and tenderness. Ever since she had been thinking of His kind, tender words until, at last, she had made her way to Simon's house to kneel at His feet to ask Him to forgive her and become her Friend. Jesus did.

Some people believe that the girl was Mary Magdalene, who, two years later, followed Jesus to the hill of Calvary. Mary sobbed her heart out, as she watched Jesus die on the cross, but, three days later, her tears of sorrow turned to tears of joy, for she caught the very first sight of the risen Lord and heard Him, whisper, "Mary!".

He's Mine-He's Yours-He's Ours

by Cheryl Drower

Now Jesus was born in a stable,
Yes, that's what the story tells,
Of a cattle shed, of three wise men
Of the tinkle of Christmas bells
Of the tinkle of Christmas bells.

Is that where you leave the Lord Jesus?
Wrapped up on a Christmas tree
The greatest gift the world has known
And it's there for you and me
And it's there for you and me.

Now take your part of Jesus
Just open up and see
He's mine He's yours He's ours my friend
He died to set us free
He died to set us free.

For God so loved the world, it's true
He sent His only son
Believe in him, confess Him Lord
And your life has just begun
And your life has just begun.

"Satan hath desired . . . but I have prayed"

Luke 22:31,32

by Brian J. Hayes, Pastor of our Edinburgh Church

SATAN desired to have not just Peter, but all the disciples. He is still the same; he desires to have everyone of us. He is ever attacking the children of God. Peter speaks of "the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour". This coupled with Luke 22:31 gives a picture of the diverse methods that Satan uses to bring down the people of God. Peter vividly portrays the sheer terror, strength and weight of Satan's power which seeks to engulf us. "Hath desired to have you" conveys subtlety, such as was used against Eve in Eden. If one method is not successful, he uses another. If we become aware of some of his attacks he changes to the unexpected, the unlikely, the method against which we have no guard. His adaptability is revealed by Paul's phrase: "Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light".

"Desired to have you" is an allusion to Job 1:6-12; 2:1-6. God allowed Satan to test and try Job, but all Satan did was within the will of God. He had no power over the parts of Job's life for which divine permission was refused. While many testings, difficulties and many attacks against God's work and people come from the devil, let us be careful just how much we blame him! Some difficulties are the fruit of our carelessness or stupidity. Others are the fruit of our disobedience of God's Word. We cannot ascribe such things to the devil. To do so is as wrong as to say "The Lord told me to do this" in order to justify a course of action which we wish to take.

"Satan hath desired to have you": not one of us is excluded. He desires to have those who have been recently saved to drag them back into their old way of life. He seeks to stunt the growth of Christians by convincing them that their lives are not "up to the mark" or that holiness is not for them. He seeks to undermine the faith of young people through doubts and questions, by putting an attractive pathway before them, or by deluding them into thinking that they are missing much that is in the world. He desires to have those who have been Christians for many years by bringing some crisis in life which shocks or hurts and causes them to say, "I've had enough", or he deceitfully steers us on to a by-road so that we are still very busy, but not in the things that Satan detests – like soul-winning and the deepening of our spiritual lives. He creates divisions, quarrels, or causes us to harbour disagreements which he says are justifiable, or he gives us a superior attitude, which is really pride, though Satan calls it a spirit of wisdom and discernment. He uses fair means or foul, plausible arguments, feasible situations. He uses anything or anyone to accomplish his desire. If he is succeeding in some measure, remember the exhortation to "give no place (opportunity or chance) to the devil" (Ephesians 4:27).

Then come those wonderful words of encouragement: "But I have prayed for thee". Hear Him praying in the words of John 17: "I pray for them; I pray not for the world, but for them which thou hast given Me; for they are Thine. . .these are in the world . . .Holy Father, keep. . .those whom thou hast given Me. I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from evil (one)." This was a timeless prayer, for it still rings through the corridors of time and in the courts of heaven. It still holds good for us. The Saviour declares, "I have prayed for thee" and the tense and meaning are, "I have been doing it already". The strength of that prayer means that SATAN MAY DESIRE, BUT HE NEED NOT HAVE (1 John 2:1).

The Lord doing this "That thy faith fail not", that is, not fail entirely. Peter's faith did fail partially when he denied his Lord three times, but the One who says, "I have prayed for thee", is there when we stumble, or fall. When we make a mistake He is there to lay His hand upon us and lift us up. Do not run away when you fail or be content to stay on the ground when you fall, but reach out your hand to the One whose nail-pierced hand is always there to lift us up.

Hence – "when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren", that is, when you have turned again and come back afresh as a penitent disciple (as Peter did), then make use of your bitter experience to fortify others in their temptations. There is no shame in failure if we learn from it. Let the Saviour lift us up, and then encourage others. Satan would sneer when we fail and deceive us into believing that we cannot pray or be used again by God. Look at David! Look at Peter! Look at the promises of God (1 John 1:9). Then turn again and let the Lord use you as mightily as He did these two men.

Book Reviews

Jeremiah, Priest and Prophet, by F.B. Meyer. Published by Lakeland Paperbacks, price 45p, postage and packing 5p extra.

WHENEVER there is a divorce between religion and morals in the life of a nation or an individual, it is fatal. Idolatry and corruption occur frequently. This book is mainly a history book and deals with the rise and fall of kings and empires, especially the fall of Jerusalem and the carrying away into Babylon.

The author reveals the experiences of one man of God who stood entirely alone, cast out by prophets, priests, courts and people – Jeremiah. As you read the book you see how closely linked his life was to that of Christ – a Man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. He preached the terrors of Sinai with the pathos of Calvary. He was a prophet of doom, but with much love. He knew famine, barrenness, drought, pain, disappointment, experiences that youth leaders and pastors sometimes have. This book is difficult to understand in parts, but it is very good reading for the studious type of person.

God's Truth, by Alan Hayward, M.Sc. (Eng), Ph.D., F.Inst. P., C.Eng., M.Inst. Mech.E., F.Inst. Pet. Published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott, price £3, postage and packing 14p extra.

IN these days of the much-used cliche, "science contradicts Scripture," it is good to remind ourselves that there are many scientists who emphatically do not share that view. This book by Dr. Hayward is refreshing in its clarity and forthrightness. His position is clear: the Bible is the Word of God.

The book is in three parts. Part I deals with some of the facts which make the Bible unique – its unity, its prophetic content, the fact of Christ, His resurrection, etc. Part II deals with some of the popular objections, e.g., the Bible's inspiration, its accuracy, mistakes, contradictions, its being unscientific, etc. Part III consists of two chapters: advice on Bible study, and the mighty power of this Book.

Some fundamentalists may take issue with Dr. Hayward in chapter 24 on the question of eternal punishment, but it would be foolish to miss the other twenty-six chapters because of this. His style is extremely readable, even racy in places. He deliberately "sticks to simple English" and, in his own words, "the kind of language used will probably make my fellow-scientists weep". Maybe, but it made my heart rejoice! Yes, this is a welcome book in this age of doubt and unbelief.

Beauty for Ashes – poems by Ruth Wilson. Published by the author, price 3p, postage and packing 3p extra.

THIS is a pleasing selection of devotional verses with appropriate Scriptures and attractive scraper-board etchings by Rita W. McCormick. The subjects covered include Gratitude, Fellowship, Compassion, Shelter, and Christ my Lord. This booklet of fourteen poems in all makes an acceptable gift and its contents are very suitable for Sisterhood meetings and to bring comfort to those who are ill or downcast. It is moderately priced at 20p and any profit from its sale will be used to further the gospel.

Margaret M. Ladlow

How come, God?, by David M. Howard. Published by Scripture Union, price 45p, postage and packing 6p extra.

THIS is another book on suffering, but with a difference: the author does not try to explain the impossible and reason the unfathomable. Suffering exists and God stands in the shadows. David Howard uses the Book of Job to illustrate the twentieth century anguish and, despite critical happenings, places our feet firmly on the love of God. The Almighty may never explain why trials come, but it is sufficient to know that His unimpeachable wisdom is behind it. This book is worth buying because of its refreshing simplicity of the obvious. Its startling cover illustrates so many lives and the contents puts our relationship with God in right perspective. But like most writers on the Book of Job he forgets that we often get what we fear (Job 3:25)!

M.W. Carr, B.Sc.

Jack Yorkshire's Weekend Book, Published by Lion Publishing, price 50p, postage and packing 8p extra.

I HAVE been trying for a few days to review this book, but by its style and content it defies review in the accepted sense of the word. It is a "Weekend book", to be perused in the spare moments. As a preacher I found myself reading it with illustrations in mind – and it abounds with these – but it would be perfectly readable to the man in the street and leave him with some thoughts of God in his soul. The style of writing is an acquired taste. I would not expect everyone to like this book, but many will. Like most acquired tastes it is best taken in small doses. As every article is complete in itself this is easy to do, but you will also find that it is a book that you will keep coming back to and reading again. If the unconverted – for whom it is really written – do the same they cannot help but be impressed by its style, quality, and evangelistic appeal.

The Calling of Pa

"Paul, a servant of Jesus Christ, called to be an apos

I ESTEEM it a great privilege to be asked to speak at this Ordination Service, since I have shared, with others at our Elim Bible College, in shaping and preparing the minds of these young men for the Christian ministry.

It is sometimes forgotten that the twelve apostles of our Lord were young men, presumably in their twenties for the most part. He understood young men as none else did — the gaiety, gallantry, and generosity, their young hearts with all their conflicts, hopes, and dreams.

Here before us are twelve young men as they, with one of them not so young perhaps, and who can tell what Jesus Christ will make of them?

Our text has four punctuation marks and these indicate the four dimensions of a minister's life: selfward, Godward, othersward, and Bibleward. I thought that these would make a helpful basis for our talk tonight.

Character

The first phrase indicates the writer's character: "Paul". First of all he sets down his own name, as was customary. We add ours at the end of our letters. What God seeks and what the Church needs is the dedication of individuality. More than once Paul hints at his late arrival on the scene. Others were before him. He was overshadowed by those who walked and talked with Jesus: Peter, James, John, and all the original apostolic band. It must have been wonderful at the Last Supper to have sat at the right-hand place of affection, like John, and to have leaned on the Master's bosom; or, like Judas Iscariot, in the left-hand place of honour, and to have received the favoured "sop" from His own dear hand; to have made, like Peter, the great confession of deity; and to have heard from His own lips the great commission, sending them into all the world to preach the gospel to every creature. But he was Paul and it was Paul whom God called and for whom the world waited (as I felt as a young man in the Mother Church of Elim in Ireland, that Elim and England were waiting for me!). "Let no man", said Martin Luther, "lose the faith that God willeth to do a great work through him".

With all who are called to the ministry, you may have many things in common, but you each possess something unique: a God-given personality. Each time God makes a man He breaks the mould. How wonderful you are in God's sight. When you look in the mirror think of that! The God who this very day has made a billion blades of grass to grow in this land, and no two of them alike, has made you.

Older ministers, and maybe some church members present, will recall a preacher who is no longer with us. Though he had not the physical appearance of George Jeffreys, one had but to close one's eyes and listen, and the illusion was complete; his master's voice! At this year's Blackpool Conference Pastor A.S.F. Horne reminded us of an incident that he had witnessed when the great Dr. Campbell Morgan, immaculate as always, strode on to a public platform where hundreds were waiting to hear his words. Continuing over to the piano, he struck one note, B natural. That was his text and theme!

l unto the gospel of God"
(Romans 1:1)

Notes of the address at the Ordination Service at our Clapham Church

y J. Alexander Wright is upon the whole of his great work. No man need ever be ashamed of himself. Martin Buber, the Jewish philosopher, dreamed of the great Judgment Day when, standing before almighty God, he would hear Him say, "Martin Buber, I ask you not why you were not Moses, or Rabbi Baal Shem Tove; I ask you only, why were you not Martin Buber?". Be yourself!

Constraint

The second phrase indicates Paul's constraint: "a servant". Ordinands will remember how, when studying Romans together, we laboured that word in the original language: "bond-slave". A bond-slave was not merely a servant with wages and time off to "do his own thing". He had no off-time, for all his days, all his hours, body and soul, he was his master's property. Presently, we will be thinking of the next phrase, "an apostle", about Paul's authority, but here his humility is in view, like his Master's, who "took on Him the form of a slave". We may say that there is no real authority but that which springs from humility. Young ministers are tempted to "exercise authority"! "Strong leadership" it is sometimes called. So easily can that become a mild tyranny, disastrous to church life. First learn humility, brethren, for all apostolic and ministerial power flows from it. "I bear in my body the brand-marks of the Lord Jesus," said the apostle. A minister is not for ornament, but for use. He may not display his airs and graces. His dignity and rank are determined by the One who is his Master, but what a wonderful Master He is! The thought captivated F.R. Havergal. Her writings are full of the theme, like "Jesus, Master, whose I am, purchased Thine alone to be, By Thy blood, O Lamb of God, shed so willingly for me", and "I love, I love my Master, I will not go out free". When our Prime Minister calls his Cabinet together, the official summons reads, "The servants of the Queen are commanded to meet".

Constitution

The third phrase indicates his constitution: "an apostle". The slave becomes the "special messenger". Nor was he merely "called to be an apostle" as our A.V. text says. The verb is stronger: "constituted". To be "called the sons of God" (1 John 3:1) does not simply mean "named", but "constituted". "And such we are" adds the R.V. and others, making the point very clear. "And such we are"! – there's an Irish touch there! "Made an apostle": he is a wise man who knows and understands his calling. "It is a great pity", said the secretary of Queen Elizabeth I, "that so few of us discern for what purpose we are sent into this world, until the time comes for us to go out of it". "He is a chosen vessel unto Me, to bear My name before governors and kings and the children of Israel". God's programme for him was explicit and how gloriously he fulfilled it!

You may not be called to the pastoral ministry in the strict sense, though whatever you do for God will be done with a shepherd heart. Some may find their work in evangelism, some in administration, and maybe some overseas. "Christ the Son of God hath sent me to the midnight lands, Mine the mighty ordination of the pierced Hands.". "It may be I must carry the blessed Word of Life across the burning desert to those in sinful strife. And though it be my lot to bear my colours there, if Jesus goes with me, I'll go anywhere".

"Anyone" was the unwritten slogan of earlier days in Elim. Thank God for the diminishing but not yet extinct number of those ministers who are still with us who have been ready to go anywhere on the Lord's errands at their Field Superintendent's request. What joy they must bring to his heart! We have actually heard of some who, when a certain pastoral appointment is suggested, first go privately to the town or city to inspect the church-building and manse before giving their acquiescence or refusal. They couldn't have been Elim ministers. It's all a mistake, they must have belonged to some other church-fellowship!

Consecration

The fourth phrase indicates Paul's consecration : "separated unto the Gospel". Once he gloried in being a Pharisee, a Separatist, as the word means, even more, a Separatist of the Separatists! He was still a Separatist! Then he was dedicated to the overthrow of Christ's cause and the imprisoning, beating, and even murdering of His followers, but now he was devoted to the growth and spread of His Church in the world. What consecration he showed, too. No man ever makes a job of anything unless he separates himself to it. Singleness of mind and heart are called for. In his first Letter to young Timothy, Paul lists some half-dozen requirements for a young minister, and adds, "Give thyself wholly to them". In Paul's consecration there is enough to engage the hearts and minds of you all. "Called to separation with the Crucified, Temples of the Spirit, saved and sanctified, Set apart for service, by God's hand ordained, We the cross have taken, by His love constrained."

Your business in life is to declare the Good Tidings, to make all men see and know what is the mystery of the gospel, and to share with them those unsearchable riches which have come to you. May the Holy Spirit work this out in all of our lives!

Sparkbrook Outlook

by A. J. Curtis

AMONG their various activities, the Sparkbrook young people run their own annual camp. Venues vary, generally sites being found in Wales, but the last was held in Devon.

The effect of new converts living together for a week under canvas, with a full regimen of spiritual opportunity, justifies the amount of labour put in. Usually some efficient, experienced man from the Church is responsible for all meetings, and the Lord has certainly "set in the Church" in the case of Sparkbook such valuable, able leaders.

Recently-saved young people are being filled with the Spirit and showing the reality of their blessings in outreach, person-to-person evangelism, either from door to door, or in Birmingham's central shopping areas. New singing groups are gradually arising from them, giving pleasure to older Christians and providing a powerful witness in our gospel services. Previous Sparkbrook musical groups, especially the Choir, the Ribbonettes and the New Creation Group (heard on Radio 4) have been in countless clubs, public houses, remand homes, prison, hospitals and eventide homes, and churches to more than 100 miles away.

The Sunday School is successfully run and a most encouraging feature is the high proportion of teenage scholars firmly in regular attendance, and being absorbed into Church activities.

The Pastor, George Canty, is released from time to time with the prayerful backing of all, to carry the Elim message to places far and near as another "arm" of Sparkbrook. The Pentecostal character of the services has brought several invitations from the B.B.C., for the first-ever fully "charismatic" Elim meetings on the air, already twice broadcast and soon to be heard again, as well as for national (Radio 4) broadcasts by our Pastor, and on Radio Birmingham.

An outstanding, valuable opportunity is the "George Canty" programme, put out twice weekly on I.T.V. across the entire central area of England and to the Welsh border, when the gospel is "painted and talked", making our Sparkbrook Church quite noted.

Mr. Ron Pearson, a deacon, has also gradually established a fine bridgehead in the tough area of Chelmesley Wood – the largest housing development in Europe. Young drivers collect people each Sunday for the Sparkbrook gospel rally from this and other areas, in all weathers, despite the distances involved.

A large proportion of older people, who have carried on the work now for forty years and are still so valuably faithful, are cherished by the diaconate. Various proofs of love include Christmas dinners, summer trips, and constant care for their welfare. Four of these are between ninety-two and ninety-four years of age.

In the last few years the Sparkbrook area has received very bad publicity. It is mainly an immigrant area, including Pakistanis and Irish, as well as Jamaican. Many Jamaican people have added their richenthusiasm to our Church, for whom we thank God, but housing conditions are very poor and have been the subject of much television and press campaigning. Housing suitable for our young people who marry is not to be found and a serious loss of this age group has occurred as they have bought houses in over-spill areas outside the City. Much discouragement of this kind has been fought and overcome by the presence of new converts, though some of these are from distant areas of Birmingham. Two baptismal services have been held so far in 1973, and Church offerings are slowly increasing despite the severe loss of wage-earners. The showings of other general statistics reveal that Sparkbrook is Birmingham's poorest area, but we thank God for the fact God has not chosen the rich alone. The richness of Holy Ghost services compensates ten thousand times over for "the worst street in Birmingham" as a nearby road is called.

The Field Superintendent's Notes

Heard in the Office. THE teenage son of one of our ministers stood in the prayer meeting and pointed out to the Lord that he often heard his father speaking about being baptised in the Holy Ghost, but admitted that personally he had not shared in the blessing and would like to do so. There and then the Lord gave the young man his birthright as he spoke with other tongues before the congregation – hallelujah!

After spending a year in Tasmania, Pastor R.D. Bradley is thrilled to be back in this country and especially delighted to be back in the fellowship of the Elim family which was missed beyond expression.

Graduation. Ten young men graduated from Elim Bible College this summer. They have now assumed their first ministerial responsibilities at Alloa, Bishop Auckland, Bristol (Assistant), Cannock, Chelmsford (Assistant), Eastleigh, Ingatestone, Middleton, Rugby and Wells.

Family Affairs. Births. A number of manses have been brightened by new arrivals of late, among them the homes of G.J. Feasey, R.T. McDonald, T. Partington, I.S. Richard and T.J. Stevens. Marriages. We extend our good wishes to the following young ministers and to the ladies whom they have married: M. Jones, R. Smith and P. Upton.

Ordination. Twelve probationary ministers were ordained at the special annual meeting recently. The Clapham Church was packed beyond capacity, Pastor J.A. Wright ministered most suitably and the President led the very sacred service and presented the certificates. The Elim Bible College Students ministered in song.

Retirements. Over recent months there have been certain reitrements within the ranks of our ministry and these include: E.F. Cole, A.V. Gorton, H Burton Haynes, I.R. Moore and R.R. Taylor. Some of these brethren still carry church responsibilities.

Elim Bible College. Over 100 students are now sharing in Theology or English studies and this provides the highest number ever to enrol at our College. They are a fine group and should prove valuable to the ministry in future years.

Promotion. Three of our retired ministers, W.J. Allen, A.J.K. Magee and E.J. Phillips have been promoted to their eternal reward and we express again our appreciation for past services and continue to remember their partners in prayer.

"HELPS" Scheme. We are happy to say, and with considerable gratitude, that the call for help for the new Birkenhead Church realized about £2,000. A new call is just going out in connection with the recent purchase of Presbyterian premises in South Shields; previously they were only rented. If you would like to join this excellent, practical scheme, please write to: The Field Superintendent, P.O. Box 38, Cheltenham, Glos. Thank you.

"Ye did it not"
(Matthew 25:31)

THE haunting words of the General Confession declare: "We have left undone. . .". This is the damning sin which our Lord condemned in word and parable. "To him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin."(James 4:17).

Successful Evangelism?

May 15th, 1752. In the afternoon I preached at Alemouth. How plain an evidence we have here, that even our outward work, even the Societies are not of man's building. With all our labour and skill, we cannot, in nine years time, form a Society in this place, even though there is none that opposes, poor or rich, nay, though the two richest men in the town, and the only gentleman there, have done all which was in their power to further it.

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

53. Joseph's Brethren on Trial (Genesis 42:15)
by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

THE famine that came to the lands of the Middle East had a disastrous effect in Canaan. When Jacob heard that there was corn in Egypt, he sent his ten oldest sons to buy food there. When they reached the "corn market", Joseph recognised them, but they did not know him. Joseph decided to put them to a test to find out if they had changed their ways, if there was any sign of repentance. As a result of this testing three things emerged. The brothers had lived with a bad conscience for twenty years, for they immediately connected their distress with their cruelty to Joseph. Joseph, whom they had rejected, became their saviour. The promises of God were at last fulfilled when the brothers bowed before Joseph.

The Lord Jesus was rejected by, and died for, sinners; so, when a sinner hears the gospel, he is "put on trial" in a similar way to Joseph's brethren. When a sinner turns to Christ three things are revealed: his conscience is troubled; for he is convicted of sin and brought to repentance; the rejected One is the very Person who becomes the sinner's Saviour; the divine promise of Christ's exaltation is fulfilled in one life when the sinner bows before Jesus. Those are what happened when you and I were saved. The Lord Jesus had been as a "root out of a dry ground", but He became the "Rose of Sharon" and "the Lily of the valleys". We now gladly acknowledge Him as our Lord and Saviour.

Pen, Print and Poetry

IT is a pleasant task to continue my story of James Montgomery, for his adult life, from the age of 21 to 83, was spent in Sheffield, my home town. I am familiar with so many of his associations and derive particular pleasure from the fact that he lived in Hartshead, for it was in the Friends' Meeting House in Hartshead that the Elim Church began in 1931 and there I received my first teaching after conversion. Montgomery came to trust fully in Christ in his forties when attending a Methodist church. Disregarding his staid religious upbringing and moral integrity, he wrote: "Convinced that I was a sinner and in need of a Saviour, I flew to Jesus simple and child-like. Need I tell you the consequences?". In 1814 he was re-admitted to the Moravian Church.

Of his secular life I can give only a brief outline. In 1794, when he was only twenty three years old he commenced to publish the Iris newspaper. He was soon in trouble as editor, patriot and staunch supporter of liberty. In October 1794 he was fined and imprisoned in York Castle for three months for printing a poem by an Ulster clergyman. In 1796 he spent six more months behind prison bars for printing a true report of a riot when lives were lost in Sheffield. Undeterred by early reverses, Montgomery persevered. He published his paper for thirty years and at the same time developed his poetical skill. After retiring, he lectured on English literature and poetry and worked wholeheartedly for the establishment of Sunday schools and in many other ways to further the gospel and to help his fellow men, particularly the poor, the sick and the uneducated.

Looking through your hymn-book you will discover several well-loved hymns by James Montgomery. "Hark the Song of Jubilee" is a missionary favourite. "For ever with the Lord" is triumphant with a very real personal faith. From his pen came the devotional verses of "According to Thy gracious Word" which have been a means of blessing at countless Communion services. Turn to no. 231 in Redemption Hymnal and your heart will glow as you read his fine Pentecostal hymn. When Christmas comes, remember to sing with deeper appreciation the lovely carol of his "Angels from the Realms of Glory".

The James Montgomery Memorial stands in the precincts of Sheffield Cathedral. It is the statue of a gentle, noble-looking man clasping his Bible. The inscription reads: "Here lies interred, beloved by all who knew him, THE CHRISTIAN POET, Patriot and Philanthropist. Wherever poetry is read or Christian hymns are sung in the English language, 'He being dead yet speaketh' by the genius, piety and taste embodied in his writings". Inscribed on the plinth are the words of perhaps his most famous hymn: "Prayer is the soul's sincere desire". This superb poem is also to be found on the plinth. It breathes the radiant faith of a man who walked with God and knew that his eternal destiny was sure:

There is a calm for those who weep,
A rest for weary pilgrims found.
They softly lie and sweetly sleep,
Low in the ground.

The storm that wrecks the wintry sky
No more disturbs their deep repose,
Than summers evening's latest sigh
That shuts the rose.

The soul of origin divine,
God's glorious image, freed from clay,
In heaven's eternal sphere shall shine,
A star of day.

The sun is but a spark of fire,
A transient meteor through the sky.
The soul, immortal as its Sire,
Shall never die.

THE PRINCIPLES AND PRACTICE OF YOUTH WORK
by Eldin R. Corsie, National Youth Director

"PREPARE a carefully-worded letter warmly inviting people to your church, outlining your plan and giving details of route and pick-up points and times. Give prominence to the starting date of your scheme and stress that no charge will be made by the church. Deliver this letter all over the selected town, village or estate a month before the scheme is due to start, and follow-up within a few days by visiting all homes and explaining further. The reactions of householders to the scheme should be noted and records handed to the Central Organiser who should then compile his or her list of promises and possibles for future reference. Divide the selected area into smaller districts and put one or two Christians in charge of each district. It is their task, every Sunday, to call very briefly at every home half-an-hour before the bus is due to arrive and in a friendly way to encourage each "prospect" to join the vehicle. Those who are obviously annoyed at such a visit can be dropped from the district's list, otherwise persistence each week should prevail. The scheme should then be launched, possibly with press publicity, and backed regularly in prayer by other church members. It is important to remember that at first the going will be tough, but members must not lose heart. The Pastor must encourage the people. Assist people into and out of the vehicle, ensure they are given another warm welcome in the church, see them satisfactorily seated, check that they have hymn-books and Bibles. The services must be bright, alive and relevant. On the journey home, opportunities for discussing the service and for giving personal testimonies should be given. But advances must be made tactfully and in great love. Once bus evangelism has been established in one area, it can be launched in another. There should be careful follow-up and integration of the converts, who in their turn should be 'put to work'!".

The above plan can be implemented by the youth departments of the church.

Book Reviews

Treasurers of the Snow, by Patricia M. St. John. Published by Scripture Union, price 45p, postage and packing 8p extra.

IN her relaxed, easy style, Patricia M. St. John has written a tender story portraying simple peasant life in a Swiss mountain village. She has faithfully presented the reality of salvation and victorious Christian living through Jesus Christ. Even to proud, unforgiving Annette and hateful Lucien, amid the conflicts of adolescence, came the wonder of new birth and new life.

I rate that this book, first published in 1950 and reprinted eleven times, is still a must for every young person. I fully recommend it as an ideal Christmas gift.

(Mrs.) Dolores E. Holmes

The most exciting Place, by Kim Simmons. Published by Victory Press, price 40p, postage and packing 8p, extra.

THIS book has a great deal that would be of interest to children aged eight to eleven. The subject matter – children joining together in a club looking for adventure – is the kind with which children of that age group will easily identify, as it is at that age that fitting in with and therefore joining a peer group matter. These children are also avid readers of adventure stories.

It is simply written and the message of salvation and other gems from the Word are integrated into the story in an easily understandable way without detracting at all from the plot. The theme is that of helping society and thus "loving thy neighbour". The overall impression is summed up in these words on page 44: "The thought went through her mind that these followers of Jesus certainly knew what fun was all about".

Scripture Union Portions

Notes by Gerald L.W. Ladlow

Monday, November 26th Ezekiel 18:19-32

"I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth, saith the Lord" (v.32).

NO matter how great is the sin of man, nor how deserving he is of judgment, his punishment gives no satisfaction to God. What amazing love and mercy are His! His only pleasure was found in providing a way to pardon the sinner. Who can ever fully comprehend the fact that He who took no pleasure in the death of the sinner found pleasure in the death of His only Son for the sinner's redemption? "Yet it pleased the Lord to bruise Him" (Isaiah 53:10). "Amazing love! how can it be that Thou, my God, should'st die for me?"

Tuesday, November 27th Ezekiel 20:1-26

"For My name's sake" (v.14).

WE like to think that all the mighty works of divine grace are done because God loves us, but the truth expressed in Scripture is that nothing in us evoked that love. All that God does is for His name's sake, that is, to uphold the character of His own great name. This can be humbling, revealing that nothing we possess of spiritual value is ours because of what God sees in us, but it can be a comfort, for it means that God does not deal with us on the ground of merit, but according to the character of His name. We can therefore expect grace, mercy and lovingkindness to be extended to us.

Wednesday, November 28th Ezekiel 24:15-27

"So I spake unto the people in the morning: and at even my wife died; and I did in the morning as I was commanded" (v.18).

AT the end of a day of service, poor Ezekiel suffered the greatest sorrow of his life; his wife died suddenly and his faith was challenged. Even the greatness of his grief was not allowed to interfere with his mission. After a night of sorrow, all signs of mourning were put away and he was out once more declaring the message of God as he had been commanded. This wonderful example to all in the service of the Lord shows God's servant to be so fully devoted to the will of God that he was prepared to suppress personal feelings and private interests in the urgency of the Lord's commission.

Thursday, November 29th Ezekiel 25:1-17

"Because thou hast clapped thine hands. . .and rejoiced in heart. . .I will stretch Mine hand upon thee" (vv.6,7).

THOUGH Israel deserved the destruction that came upon her land because of her sin, God found no delight in her punishment, nor would He let go unpunished those who rejoiced in her downfall. If we have the love of God in our hearts we shall never find satisfaction in the misfortunes of others, no matter how much they have wronged us. "Love suffereth long and is kind. . .Love rejoiceth not in iniquity" (1 Corinthians 13:4,6).

Friday, November 30th 2 Peter 1:1-11

"If these things be in you" (v.8).

HERE is a list of virtues which the Christian is exhorted to add to his life. Everyone of them can be visibly manifested, yet they are not outward additions, but inner qualities of the soul. Only by the development of the inner man can there be true expression of Christian conduct. Christian virtues cannot be tied on to us like the decorations on a Christmas tree; they are the fruit of the life of the Spirit within. The more it is developed, so the more we increase in the knowledge of the greatness of the character and power of Christ.

Saturday, December lst 2 Peter 1:12-21

"I will endeavour that ye may be able after my decease to have these things always in remembrance" (v.15).

FROM earliest times there has been a belief that this verse expresses the determination of Peter to put into writing the account of the life and ministry of our Lord that had been the subject of his preaching. From this has arisen the belief that Mark wrote his Gospel either at the dictation of Peter or by the Spirit's inspiration from what he had learned from Peter. Whether this be true or not, Peter was determined that the message that he preached would be remembered when he was gone. It should be the determination of every Christian that his work will continue when he himself has passed on.

Sunday, December 2nd 2 Peter 2:1-11

"The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation" (v.9).

WHAT a comforting thought this is! Temptation is the common lot of all, but the Lord has promised to give strength to bear it (Hebrews 2:18), to set a limit to its power, and to provide a way of escape (1 Corinthians 10:13). James tells us that the conquering of temptation strengthens our character, brings blessing to us and earns an eternal reward and therefore should be the subject of our rejoicing (James 1:2-4,12).

Botswana Blessings

by Elim Missionary W. H. Francis

FROM among our Pentecostal Assemblies of Botswana, three young men have felt the urge of the Holy Spirit to learn more of God's Word and during 1973 have enrolled as students in a Pentecostal Bible School in Gaberones, the Capital. One of these brethren is the Leader/Evangelist at our out-station in Serowe, the Chief's (President Khama) village, the largest in Botswana.

Another, from our most northern station, Tsessebe, about fifteen miles from the borders of Rhodesia, east of Francistown, has written to me a letter about his conversion. Here it is in his own words:

My Conversion

IT was in October 1970, when nobody expected that my life can be changed, and become a Christian's life. It was a wonderful day that I received Jesus Christ as my personal Saviour. As a young man I was involved in pleasure, gambling, cheating, stealing, mischief, although I could not drink beer and smoking.

It was at Mahalapye where I met Jesus. Although Jesus was preached at "Tshesebe", at the place of my abode, it could not mean anything to me, because it seemed as if it was a play to me. At home, when I told them: "I am saved" - they poked fun at me, that I cannot be such, for the hand of the Lord was upon me, He led me to light.

In 1972, I was working in the Railways, when the call of God called me to go and learn for His work. The Scripture that really touched me was: "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few" (Matthew 9:36-38). Although there is no one helping me while I am in School, I trust that He who called me will do it, because it is His work, and He cannot despise me.

My heart's desire and prayer to God for my people is that they might be saved. I believe that there is nothing impossible; I remember my home at "Tshesebe", where there is no one who can minister to them, but I bear them record that they have the zeal of God.

I am in Bible College, in Gaberones, Botswana, for three years learning God's way of ministering His Word. This is my first year. I believe that God will provide His people with His Holy Spirit, not to quench in spiritual needs.

My prayer is that Botswana must be saved, in the name of Jesus!

Yours sincerely,
AMON B. MOKGOSI

Despite the immense spiritual needs there, which I have witnessed, and much poverty and hardship through the climate, there are many fine Christians saints there, including earnest preachers and zealous women workers for God. Please continue to pray for them.

self and to God (1 Corinthians 14:28). When interpreted, however, the church will receive edifying; which makes the use of the two gifts, tongues and interpretation, on a par with the gift of prophecy (1 Corinthians 14:4,5).

That unbelievers may have a sign

The gift of tongues, like the other gifts of the Holy Spirit, is a manifestation of God's power. Being such, they reveal God's presence. One woman testified that, when for the first time she heard her vicar speak in tongues, a tingling thrill of God-consciousness ran through her from head to feet. John Sherrill (In They speak with other Tongues) records how Lydia, as Episcopalian, prayed in tongues while in his office. "To me", she said, "tongues are always prayer. . . so if you want me to speak in tongues, you will have to let me pray about some real problem". At the time John's wife, Tib, was under stress to write an article, the dead-line for which was the next day, so he suggested that Lydia should pray about this. She asked John to sit in a chair in Tib's stead, laid her hands lightly on his head, and began praying for the healing of whatever was blocking Tib's creativity. "With no change in the tone of her voice Lydia began to pray in tongues. And at that instant I felt a wave of warmth pass from her hands into my head, then swiftly down through my chest and arms. What was this palpable power that had invaded this room with Lydia's prayer in tongues?". When his wife met him at the station that evening she told him the manuscript was written and posted. "It almost wrote itself", she said.

FUEL problems and the difficulties in connection with the national economy are dominating headlines at the moment.

The announcement of a ten per cent reduction in petrol supplies — which one newspaper points out is an effective twelve per cent reduction as the ten per cent was based on old figures, since which demand had increased — and requests to cut out weekend car trips, must bring home to us the challenges facing the world. While it is true that Arab oil politics are the immediate cause of much of the trouble, it must not be forgotten that the so-called Western world has been very prodigal in its use of energy of all kinds. This seems to apply specially to the U.S.A., where energy is used on a vast scale. An expert said lately that they use in one week the same amount of energy as many large countries do in one year.

There may be opportunities for us to exercise Christian grace and kindliness, however. Public transport may become congested and particularly older people may find it difficult to get about, even to get to the meetings. Young folk especially would help enormously if they could be on the look-out for older people who need help. This also applies to the sheer basic necessity for older folk to keep warm. Pensions being what they are, many of them are hard put to it to maintain a proper diet and the cost of heating means that literally hundreds are not as warm as they ought to be even in their homes. Remember your neighbours who are advanced in years. Let us be practical Christians at every opportunity.

The money situation is another problem. Interest rates are unbelievably high. Those who have to borrow must be daunted by the enormous expenditure on interest. Young people needing somewhere to live are finding the situation well nigh impossible.

Speaking of God's work, the need to borrow might well be considerably reduced if everybody tithed into the local church. Reckon the number who attend your church on Sunday evenings and calculate the proportion of giving per head against the weekly offerings. Is it anywhere near a tithe per head? Granted that Christian people give to other parts of God's work, but the proportion remains low even after making every allowance for other giving.

Pastor W. J. Maybin and the staff of the Southampton Sunday Schools on their annual outing

SOUTHAMPTON Pastor: W.J. Maybin

ON the evening of Sunday, September 30th, we held the anniversary service of the combined three Sunday schools.

The theme of the meeting was "The Lord's Prayer". Readings were made by the children relative to the subject and musical items were given which all had a definite bearing on the verses of "The Lord's Prayer".

One hundred and seventy two adults attended, this number included many parents of the children taking part, and nearly 100 Sunday school children took parts in the service. The singing of the children, especially the very youngest, was greatly appreciated and the service was a great blessing to all present as was the message delivered by our Pastor.

Our sincere thanks go to the Sunday school Superintendent, teachers and youth workers for all the very hard work in the preparation and the successful presentation of the programme.

Many of us considered this to be the best anniversary service to date.

COVENTRY Pastor: J.W. Newman

OUR young people recently held a youth weekend. It commenced on a Saturday evening after much preparation by the Crusaders and their leader. The church was filled, young people from Nuneaton, Rugby, Kidderminster and Birmingham taking part.

Pastor M. Jones was the speaker. His ministry was greatly appreciated. Mr. Jones also gave his testimony in his own inimitable style. The weekend was a great success and it is hoped to hold another rally next year, D.V.

Pastor M.J. Tilley was the preacher for a recent Sunday. The gospel message was clearly given, after which our own Pastor baptised eleven young people, including a young lady converted from Hinduism. The church was full again and several new faces were seen in the congregation. Pastor Newman prayed God's blessing on two of our young people who entered Elim Bible College the next day.

We give all praise to God for the blessings that we are receiving at Coventry.

ANDREA WILLIAMS

EAST HAM Pastor: H.L. Dawson

RECENTLY we held a special weekend to celebrate Pastor Dawson's twenty-five years in the Elim ministry. We had a great meeting on the Saturday evening. In the chair was Pastor J.F. Hardman (District Superintendent). The preacher was Pastor A.J. Downes.

Pastor Dawson, who comes from Leeds, committed his life to Christ while home on leave from the army; his godly grandfather persuaded him to attend the Leeds Church, While in the army, Pastor Dawson met our other guest, Pastor Brian H. Tween, who was batman to the camp padre. He gave testimony to the great times that they had together and he also produced a letter of congratulations from the padre who was unable to attend the meeting.

The Church presented Pastor Dawson with a gift of money, Mrs. Dawson with a gift of flowers, and the two children, Peter and Sharon, with pens. The Sunday school and Girl's Brigade gave a book token. After the meeting a cake was cut, and shared among the congregation.

The ministry of Pastor Downes was greatly blessed. It was a weekend to remember.

PETERBOROUGH Pastor: K.J. Cave

UNDER the heading "Event to make a noise about", the Peterborough Evening Telegraph reported an interview with our Pastor prior to our second anniversary: "The Bible says make a joyful noise for the Lord," said Mr. Cave, "and that is just what we do in our services. We don't believe in being quiet and subdued. Next weekend, at our anniversary services, we'll have brass and guitar groups. Members of our congregation are encouraged to stand up and pray. We have a regular congregation of sixty adults and 150 young members. The Church now supports me entirely. People who say religion in this country is dead couldn't be more wrong."

We shared our anniversary with other churches in the Presbytery. Following competitions between the young people, the Church was packed for a Saturday evening rally when Pastor T.W. Jacobs was the speaker. We were pleased to have the Northampton Choir with us for this occasion; we remember their ministry two years previously at the crusade. Pastor Jacobs ministered at the Sunday services. His ministry was much appreciated.

During the past year, our three midweek children's and youth activities have been augmented by the introduction of new groups for boys and girls. We rejoice over those who have found Christ as Saviour, Healer and Baptiser in the Holy Ghost. God has prospered this work spiritually, numerically, and financially.

The theme of prayer and praise was that, having seen the hand of God at work during the year, the future under His leading will be "grander as the days go by".

We enjoy fellowship with a group of Pentecostal Christians from Wisbech, the capital town of the Fens, and it was a joy to share a service of water baptism with them in our Church on the first Sunday of our third year.

JOHN L. STEWARD

LEYTON Pastor: G.L. Taylor

WE have had three special Sundays during the last two months. First was our gift day on the first anniversary of our moving into our present building. Over £150 was received. Second came the harvest festival. The display of fruit and vegetables was later distributed to older folk in the church. Then came a baptismal service. The first candidate was an older coloured sister, thousands of miles from her homeland. Quite a few of her family witnessed her act of obedience. The second candidate was a young married woman, who was saved in our Church just over a year ago, while the third candidate was her husband, who came to know the Lord a few days after his wife. Please pray for him. He has a great need for physical healing; we know that our Lord is able. At the close of the baptismal service an old lady asked the Lord into her life, making it a memorable meeting.

(Mrs.) SUSAN PRAIL

BISHOP AUCKLAND Pastor: W. Dunn

CAME the end of August and the induction of Pastor and Mrs. Dunn. Already they have won their way into the hearts of the people in Bishop Auckland and the neighbouring churches. We have just celebrated the thirty-fifth anniversary of our women's weekend. The speaker was Mrs. C. Horner of Sheffield. Many have been encouraged and strengthened in the faith through the testimony of our sister's miraculous healing. On the Saturday other denominations joined with us for refreshments and fellowship at the close of the service. One Methodist sister remarked how much she was blessed. She is now determined to try to live above circumstances, as Mrs. Horner exhorted us. Mrs. Dunn convened. It was her birthday so the ladies presented chocolates to her. On Sunday Mrs. Horner ministered on the power in our lives. We are not likely to forget this message.

On the following Sunday Pastor Dunn ministered at the harvest thanksgiving. The children had their own service in the afternoon and loved bringing their gifts. In the evening our young people sang. They have recently formed a group with our Pastor as guitarist. On the Monday all produce was distributed to sick and needy pensioners.

We are happy to report that our midweek numbers have doubled, finances have increased, and we are spiritually uplifted by the ministry and personality of our talented Pastor and his dear wife.

(Mrs.) M.M. BROWN

ABERYSTWYTH Pastor: G.S. Wyborn

AFTER praying and planning for over one year, our youth campaign, called "Revolution '73", lasted for sixteen days. The following is a report printed in our local paper, The Cambrian News:

"Revolution '73 – The Crusade ended last Sunday evening, with a large congregation in the Elim Church. It was a successful Evangelistic Campaign with many deciding to follow Christ. The aim of the Crusade was to start a weekly Youth Meeting and this has been achieved. The Crusade Evangelist was Pastor K. Lannon, from the Elim Church, Trealaw. Two extra speakers were Miss J. Caudell, an Elim Missionary from Rhodesia and Pastor Price-Stephens, and it was his wife who spoke to the Women's Meeting that Tuesday afternoon. The local minister, Pastor G.S. Wyborn, thanked his congregation for the special efforts all had made to make this Crusade a successful one."

Seven Christians attended the first youth meeting and apologies for those absent were noted. Many plans were made for future meetings and we look to God to increase our numbers as we work with Him.

Not only did young people decide to follow Christ, but older folk as well. We praise God for His blessing upon the whole Church. Already two requests for Church Membership and Water Baptism have been received by the Pastor.

Please continue to pray for us. Follow up work is still in progress when this report is printed.

SILVERDALE Pastor: D.S. Williams

WE welcomed the return of Mrs. Jean Broomhall as our guest speaker for the ladies' weekend recently. Her ministry in song and in word brought much joy and was very well received. The whole weekend was a great success. It was a pleasure to renew that bond of fellowship and to revive memories of former years, when her husband was the Pastor here. The meetings were very well attended, Monday being exceptional (standing room only!). There was a generous supply of refreshments supplied by the sisters.

Harvest never fails to remind us of the unfailing promises of God. Our guest speaker, T.W. Walker, did not fail to express and to press home the word relative to these wonderful truths. The seed was sown with discretion. There were lambs to be fed. They were pointed to the prepared table; the children, very attentive, revelled in its presentation. The people of God "came and they were blessed", feasting on the finest of the wheat. The ministry was rich and well received. Truly our hearts echo the Ghanaian word "Akwabo" - "Welcome", and thank you, Mr. Walker.

Every effort must have its reward. This has been the experience of the Silverdale Quiz team. After much tuition and patience on the part of Pastor Williams and the teachers, they were thrilled to bring home the shield, and so were the Church. The Church appreciated the action of the Longton team, the losers, in sending a telegram of congratulation. Thank you! All the teams must be proud of their increased knowledge of the Word.

E. ROWLEY

STOCKPORT Pastor: E. Snelling

AT the recent Church anniversary services, people began to gather early. By 7.30 the Church was overcrowded. The service commenced with that heart-stirring hymn, "All that thrills my soul is Jesus". As I looked down from the platform, I could see that this experience was truly a reality. We were privileged to have as our preacher for the weekend Pastor J.T. Bradley (Secretary-General), who laid the foundation stone of the Church two-and-a-half years previously. Singing items, which fitted in with the theme of the service, were sung by six young ladies from Denton, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Dawson. Pastor Bradley brought an inspiring, challenging message from God's Word, following which eleven candidates from Salford and Stockport went through the waters of Baptism, confessing their faith in the Lord Jesus. The Stockport Elim Choir sang, "The Maranatha Hallelujah Chorus", after which we went home with hearts full of expectancy for the coming Lord's Day services, in which the Lord blessed us abundantly through the ministry of Pastor J.T. Bradley.

THE GIFTS OF THE SPIRIT— 9

The Interpretation of Tongues

(1 Corinthians 12:10)

by Charles J. E. Kingston

THE gift of interpretation reveals the meaning of utterances in tongues. The interpreter waits on the Holy Spirit for His revelation of the "mysteries" spoken in the Spirit (1 Corinthians 14:2). Without this gift, the public ministry of tongues would be impossible, though not its private use in prayer and praise. Consequently, he who speaks in an unknown tongue should pray for the interpretation (1 Corinthians 14: 13).

Chaplain Carothers (in Prison to Praise) tells how he was asked to pronounce the benediction after a testimony to the baptism in the Holy Spirit had been given by a Southern Baptist woman. Instead, he began to speak the first words that came into his mind: "Everyone who wants to surrender his life to God, please come forward". Dead silence ensued, then, one by one, people began to come forward, falling on their knees. As he walked to the first one, he prayed silently: "Show me how to pray, God". He heard, "Pray in the Spirit". He silently prayed in his new language. "Now begin to translate what you have said," came the word. "Lord, forgive this man for his drunkenness, his dishonesty in business." He was shocked at his own words. He went to the next person and followed the same procedure: "Lord, forgive this man for his vile temper, his selfish treatment of his family". Afterwards, people came to him with tears of joy: "You prayed for exactly what I needed, but how did you know my problem?" they said. He didn't, but God did! Days later the minister of the Presbyterian Church told him that the congregation had been revolutionised and were overflowing with joy.

1. How is the Interpretation given?

Some receive the words as in a vision, as did many of the prophets. Some years ago, I asked a Belfast brother, who had a useful gift, how the interpretation came. He replied that he saw words in front of him as on a screen and he then read them off.

The most usual way would seem to be the granting of the first words by the inner voice of the Holy Spirit; as these are vocalised, further words are given until the interpretation is complete.

2. The Regulation of the Gift

God's Word limits the ministry of tongues to two or at the most three in any one meeting; it follows that, if a fourth message is given, it is out of order and should not be interpreted (1 Corinthians 14:27).

The command to "Let one interpret" has been construed to mean that the same one who interprets the first of any two or three utterances should continue to act as interpreter for the remainder. This, however, is obviously not the true meaning, since in the case of three different speakers in tongues each could scripturally interpret his own message (1 Corinthians 14:13).

The twofold purpose of this regulation is that there should be no refusal to interpret where tongues have been scripturally used and secondly, that there should be no competition among interpreters in an endeavour to give a "better" interpretation. Some may have a greater measure of eloquence and "soar like eagles", while others, like the forget-me-not, "forget themselves in beautiful reserve", as Harold Horton puts it.

3. The Meaning of the Gift

The gift of interpretation is not the translation of the utterance in tongues. The word used here by the Spirit means "to explain thoroughly". Thus, should two interpreters start simultaneously to interpret (one should, of course, give place to the other), it would be quite understandable should they commence with different words. The full meaning of the message would have been the same, though expressed in different words.

Should the interpretation seem either longer or shorter than the preceding utterance in tongues, this should not cause comment. Some years ago, I attended a convention in Switzerland. The speaker was the late Principal George Jeffreys. His message was interpreted first into German and then into French. The second was always much briefer than the first and the French-speaking Swiss felt that their interpreter was not giving them the full benefit of the Word. A Swiss lady at our table afterwards told me that the German interpreter sometimes elaborated with an explanation where he thought it necessary.

Chaplain Carothers tells how he once went out for prayer. He was asked: "What do you want us to ask God to do for you?". He replied: "Ask God to use me more.". They began to pray and Carothers had a vision of the Lord Jesus, who said to him: "I don't want to use you. I want you to use Me!".

I think the Holy Spirit is saying to us in Elim and to all Christians everywhere: "I want you to use Me, to use My gifts to transform your little bit of my world, "that you may know. . . what is the exceeding greatness of His power to us-ward who believe, according to the working of His mighty power which He wrought in Christ when He raised Him from the dead" (Ephesians 1:18-20).

We have come to the last article on the gifts of the Holy Spirit as recorded in the Corinthian Letter. They are all for us today. Now let Him work!

CHILDREN'S CORNER

DOGS

by Uncle Archie

WHAT a lot of dogs there are about today – yes, and there are so many varieties that it reminds me of the famous Heinz 57! There are long sausage dogs with short, spindly legs and long noses and tails, to those swift-moving Alsatians and those massive great St. Bernards, who always remind us of their part in rescuing people from an awful death on some snowswept mountainside. Are you afraid of dogs? I am. When they get near to me they always growl, bare their teeth, and look at me as though I were a juicy bone from which they could have a good meal.

But I must tell you how I was taught a lesson in which dogs were involved. I travelled to a place near the English Lakes and lodged at a lovely house, the home of a farmer. Into the farmyard I drove my car and sure enough there appeared, as if from nowhere, two fair-sized dogs. They took one look at me and decided that I should not be allowed free entrance into the house, so I stayed safely in the car until the farmer appeared. He laughed at my fears and assured me that those particular dogs would never bite either man or beast. I took his word for it and was soon safely inside the house. Then he told me this story.

Those dogs were trained to keep the sheep in the flock and to persuade the cows to come home at milking time. They barked at them, ran around them, and sometimes, if they were really stubborn, they would just nip them without biting them and so there would be no wounding of the animals.

What do you think? Yes, you are right – they tried it on me! Not that I needed to be persuaded to go in for my meals; it seems that they were just being friendly.

Psalm 23 is the Shepherd Psalm. Thinking of shepherds I am always reminded of those wonderful dogs who work so hard to help the shepherd with all those sheep who are such silly creatures that they want to go anywhere and in any direction except the right one. Did you know that there are two dogs in Psalm 23? They are called GOODNESS and MERCY. The Lord tells us that they follow us ALL the days of our lives. When we would stray away and be lost, the Lord sends goodness and mercy to bring us back into the fold. Sometimes they nip us just to get us there as quickly as possible. The Lord does not use some great big stick to beat us back into the fold; He sends a double portion of goodness and mercy. I am not scared of them and I am sure you are not, either; no, they are among our best friends.*

Here is a saying which will set you thinking:- "Evil for good is devil-like: evil for evil is beast-like. Good for good is man-like: good for evil is God-like".

*If you have a dog which has done something brave or clever, why not write to me and tell me all about it? I would be so pleased to hear from you.

LATE NEWS

Children's meetings packed at Skelmersdale. Few local adults attending. —Alexander Tee

From the President's pen

Back to Sinai

by John Lancaster

ONLY once did I set foot in the Sinai Desert – and it was enough! The memories came back vividly following the news of resumed fighting between Israel and her Arab neighbours in recent days.

During the second world war the troopship on which I was travelling to India, the somewhat ancient "Cameronia", a ship of the now defunct Anchor Line, dropped anchor outside the port of Suez, having made the slow journey through the Canal. A little later we were allowed the dubious privilege of being ferried ashore on the opposite side - at Port Tewfik - and taken for a route march on the edge of Sinai. In many ways, however, it was a welcome change from the cramped conditions of a troopship. From the distance of nearly thirty years three things stand out in my memory.

The first is that I developed a sense of sympathy for the Israelites during their long wilderness march. Even the fringes of Sinai are forbidding. The tawny sand-hills rise and fall in mile after mile of monotonous barrenness, broken only here and there by sad-looking clumps of shrubs struggling for their existence amid the breathless, sun-baked heat. As you march, the soft, clinging sand seems to pull at your feet, as though reluctant for you to go any further. Your feet become hotter, your legs ache, the perspiration trickles down your face as you squint against the yellow glare, and ahead the almost imperceptible desert track leads on towards - nothing. They had forty years of this! – forty years that need not have been. Truly "the way of transgressors is hard". God save us from getting into the wilderness through our own disobedience to His will.

The second memory is rather different. As our landing craft made its way into Port Tewfik it passed an old barge. Battered and rusting, the barge appeared to be deserted as it rose and fell on the swell caused by our passing. Then I noticed an elderly Arab on board her. He seemed as weather-beaten as the barge, a grey, grizzled beard contrasting with the deep brown of his wrinkled face. Suddenly, he moved to the side of the barge, bent down and picked up a rug, and then, unrolling the rug on the floor of the barge, turned himself in the direction of where Mecca must have been and prostrated himself in the attitude of prayer. By then we had passed on, but the sight of that lonely old man at prayer on his gently rocking barge has always remained with me. In our fuller knowledge of God in Christ we may feel sympathy for the ignorance that surrounded him and we might perhaps question whether his act of prayer was anything more than a deeply-instilled formality, yet the fact that, though all alone, he still was faithful at the appointed hour of prayer, may well be a challenge to to the tragically casual way in which many of us approach our communion with God. It is so easy to sing about the fact that "the heathen in his blindness bows down to wood and stone" and yet overlook the fact that many Christians, despite their claim to greater light, do not bow down to the living God. The way to the wilderness is along the path of neglected prayer. May God help us to see that, while we may rightly reject the rigid formality of much that is called religion, we must not neglect the necessary discipline of daily fellowship with God.

One more memory remains with me – those bushes in the wilderness. Stunted by the lack of moisture in the soil, shrivelled by the relentless sun, they lifted their leafless branches like bony fingers imploring the Most High to send the rain. Yet it was into just such a bush that God sent the living fire of His own presence! A "common bush ablaze with God" became the means through which God manifested Himself to Moses and initiated a dramatic new phase in the history of the people of God. History took a turning point in Sinai. The wilderness became the breeding ground of the purposes of God.

Sinai has a strange significance. Its arid wastes have felt the reverberations of the majesty of God at the giving of the Law and at the same time have seen the infinite patience of God with His unwilling people when "about the time of forty years suffered He their manners in the wilderness" (Acts 13:18). In our own day it has echoed to the thunder of guns as history marches inexorably towards it climax. Majesty and mercy have planted their footsteps in the sands of Sinai and alongside them human wilfulness and wrongdoing have planted their own.

For me, the memory of Sinai is one of hope. God can transform the wilderness. He can pour water on him that is thirsty and floods on the dry ground. No situation is so barren that it is hopeless. God is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we can ask or think. Where men will seek the face of God in earnest prayer and seek to do the will of God as they understand it, God will not remain aloof. He makes the wilderness and the solitary place to rejoice, for one of His many names is: "Him that dwelt in the bush" (Deuteronomy 33:16).

Flags beneath the Cross

by G. Wesley Gilpin

A FEATURE of the World Pentecostal Conference meetings in the Full Gospel Church in Seoul, S. Korea, was the placing of thirty-seven flags, representing the nationality of origin of the visiting delegates. Towering above, but not in any menacing fashion, hung an enormous maroon cross clearly lined by subdued lighting against the folds of hanging velvet and reaching almost to the dome.

It was symbolic of both the submissiveness and the unity of the group before the cross. There were one-time enemies on the field - Japanese, Koreans, Germans, British, Chinese, Americans (and what a potential for hatred could have been there!), but in that hour they worshipped together and exalted the Christ of the cross. In telling of their love to Him they showed their love for each other.

The moral is there for all to see: the only effective answer to world strife and power-seeking is the message of the cross. The Church holds the solution to international strife. There may not be much longer in which to proclaim the message, but at whatever cost and regardless of all pressures, the Church must proclaim peace through the blood of the cross.

Korea is at peace after a long history of oppression and warfare, but it is an uneasy peace. Her spiritual and political leaders are both aware of the tension between North and South. On the only road to the North, south of the demilitarised zone, there are all the evidences of fear and distrust – mines, tank-traps and intensive vigilance day and night. The busy, prosperous life of city and country stops dead with the curfew at midnight. All over the faces of the people there is a sadness and apprehensiveness, but the Church in this gallant country rises to its responsibilities. Throughout its ranks, believers rise at 4.30 a.m. and assemble at the churches for prayer. An unprecedented revival is sweeping the country and reaching right into the armed forces, where the draft is in full force, with every young man having to serve for three years. It is reported that over 50% of the Korean Army is Christian.

Surely such intercession is the solution. Now is the hour to pray, so that many other flags may hang at the foot of the cross, the crown and glory of all history.

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

54. Deceptive Appearances (Genesis 42:36)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

JOSEPH'S brothers arrived home from Egypt without Simeon. Was Simeon the inspiration of the plot to get rid of Joseph? On opening the sacks of corn which they had bought from the apparently unfriendly overseer of Egypt, they found that their corn money had been placed in the sacks. These things, together with the overseer's demand that they should take Benjamin to him, seemed to show that they were victims of a malicious plot. This was certainly Jacob's opinion. In his distress he cried, "All these things are against me!". Had he known the truth he would have understood that appearances were deceptive, for the Lord in mercy was actually arranging for the re-union of Jacob's family and also making provision for their salvation in the famine. The situation appeared black at that time, but, when Jacob yielded, the darkness would pass and the light would shine.

The Lord has promised that all things work together for good to those who love and obey Him (Romans 8:28). Sometimes, however, circumstances seem to deny this truth and we find that we have been brought into deep distress. At such times, we have to decide whether we believe God or our circumstances. If we could see as God sees, we would know that He makes no mistakes. Darkness and sorrow can be part of His purpose of blessing, though at times, as with Jacob, our unwillingness to believe God prolongs the trial. When we trust God, the darkness will finally pass, the light will shine and we will pass from the valley of the shadow into the place of blessing.

Believe God and be willing to go where He leads and do what He says!

Elim Pentecostal Church, Kambudzi, Rhodesia

Pastor and Mrs. S. A. R

A report by Field Chairman S. Alan Renshaw

WE arrived early for the morning service at our Kambudzi Church and were met by the Pastor, Ephraim Satuku. A group of people had already gathered and this number swelled until the little Church was so full that the children had to sit on the floor. The hearts of the people were full, too, as they heartily sang the praises of the Lord.

As I sat there, my mind went back over the past four years. Ephraim and his new bride, Winnie, were then working at the Kambudzi School. Ephraim's appointment as a teacher had just come to an end. Though it meant a drop in salary, he was thrilled to be able to devote more time to the work for which God had called him, that of being an evangelist. At that time, the people met in the school classroom, but they longed for a building of their own. So the work on the church building began.

A suitable site was needed. This was kindly given by the local Headman, Baba Kambudzi, himself an Elim member. It was a piece of land "set on a hill", right on the main 'bus route. Then came the task of making bricks. Ephraim organised the members into groups. Week after week they toiled on the brickfield, tramping down the mud, fetching water, moulding the bricks and covering them with straw. The foundation stone was collected, the sand was carried to the site, and water was carried in drums in an ox-cart loaned by another member, one of the teachers, Mr. Maneswa. Ephraim found a builder who was willing to do the work, so building was started.

As the money came in from the proceeds of someone's harvest offering, tithes, and gifts, so the work progressed. Door frames and window frames were purchased. Then the roof trusses and the largest and and most expensive item, the asbestos roof, were made. Despite difficulties and a bad harvest because of lack of rain, the roof was finally paid for and put on. Ephraim whitewashed the walls. At Christmas, 1972, we held our first meeting in our own building. There was no window pane and no pulpit. We had just a few benches. The building belonged to each member, however. Even if they could not afford money, they had given some kind of service to build their church.

Now around me sat these men, women, boys and girls, all singing with great gusto. There were many new faces, too, for a building of bricks and mortar is no good unless the spiritual Body of Christ continues to grow and thrive too. We had not been to Kambudzi since Easter due to my illness, but we could see that the Lord had truly blessed Ephraim's ministry. The congregation of 120 now filling the building was proof of his faithfulness.

The last hymn was sung and we made our way down the hill to the river where Ephraim baptised twenty believers. There were several teenage girls, among them Ephraim's own sister, some boys, and a number of women. It was a thrill to see the Headman's wife, Mai Kambudzi, take her stand among the others. She had been brought to our hospital paralysed and almost at death's door. Her relatives had given her witchcraft medicine. When she was taken to Salisbury hospital, we thought that this was the end for her, but the Lord intervened. Six months later, she returned, walking very slowly, to the church. She confessed that she had been dabbling in witchcraft and that the Lord had spoken to her. From that time, her health has improved, and on this day she followed the Lord through the waters.

We returned up the hill, our hearts full of praise, which continued in the testimony meeting afterwards, bringing us to worship around the Lord's Table. The Lord has been good! The little Church has not been free from the snares of Satan, who has tried already to split it up with differences, but he has not succeeded, and the healthy growth seen there is a great encouragement to us all.

Continue to pray for this Elim Pentecostal Church set on a hill in the dark heathen area of Katerere, that its light may shine into that darkness, bringing many to the glorious light of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Why do People sit at the Back?

asks Laurence E. Lambert, Pastor of our Church in Waterloo Road, Blackpool

WHEN God led me under the sound of the gospel some years ago, that in itself was a miracle. A godless teenager, prompted by the Spirit, I literally was led by the Spirit into Church. No human voice invited me.

A secondary miracle was performed that night, for, when my friends and I went into the House of God, although there was a large congregation present. . . THE BACK ROW WAS EMPTY!

In all churches where the seating capacity is bigger than the average congregation, you can be sure that people will occupy the back rows. Even in huge buildings with small numbers, this dreadful habit persists. As the malady is so widespread, there must be some deep underlying reason or reasons.

One cannot help but contrast this practice in churches with the attitudes of those who frequent sporting events or worldly places. There the clamour is for the front seats, the places which offer the best viewing and hearing.

Another strange factor is that some who sit at the back of churches sometimes complain that they cannot hear!

One cannot always have large congregations, and Jesus has assured His presence to the smallest groups, but He did say that they were to GATHER TOGETHER in His name. Why do people sit at the back? I would be interested to hear your reasons. Meanwhile may I proffer some ideas of my own.

1. Is it psychological? People don't like to feel conspicuous, most shun publicity, and some may feel that it's pushing themselves if they occupy the front part of the church. Yet how lonely the minister must feel in the pulpit. There is often a great gulf fixed between the congregation and himself. In church we seek to be God-conscious and not self-conscious.

2. Is it factual, caused by a tendency to be late? It's sad that many congregations build up during the first ten minutes of the service. Some folk are punctually late; whatever the time of the meeting they arrive five minutes after it has started. When people arrive late they tend to occupy the seats nearest the entrance and hope that others have not noticed that they are late again. It is a good job that God is punctual always.

3. Is it mental, a fear, perhaps, that if we are near the front of the church, the minister will notice either our lack of interest in the message, or our lack of enthusiasm for the service? We must always avoid the Big Brother complex like the plague, but do remember that there is One who sees our hearts and understands us altogether.

4. Is it aesthetic? Perhaps you feel that ministers are like oil paintings – they look better at a distance! All ministers seek to avoid annoying idiosyncrasies and pleasant pulpit decorum is an aid to communication, but the truth is more important than the bearer of it, and "Beyond the sacred page, we seek THEE, Lord".

5. Is it Scriptural? We know the Scripture which teaches humility when Christ rebuked those who occupied the chief room and important places (Luke 14: 8-11). Perhaps we think that it is both scriptural and becoming to occupy the back place, but Christ was dealing with the motive behind the action, with reference to those who "love to be seen of men". If our motive is to help the meeting, to support the minister, to be lost in God, then God sees, and is pleased.

6. Perhaps after all it is spiritual? Is it that we do not want to get too involved in the actual proceedings? We have become spectators rather than participants, getting an objective view rather than being an abject worshipper? Maybe it denotes a lack of desire for spiritual things and that BACK-slider is not an inappropriate word. We need to "come up higher" in every sense of the truth, spiritually and actually.

Two small points must be remembered. One is that some folk, perhaps those with babies, need to sit where they can get out quickly if the baby plays up. Others, like ushers, have to sit where they can help.

Remember, though, that sometimes unsaved people have to be brought right to the front of the church, feeling both shy and embarrassed, because all the back seats are taken by those who ought to know better.

Next Sunday, why not move forward half a dozen rows? Surprise your minister – and yourself! It's all part of the service!

Testimony Time

FOR about a year I had been suffering prolonged fainting attacks. Referred by the doctor to a specialist in Cardiff, I was put on a course of tablets – tranquillizers. These proved to be ineffective since I continued to faint. One such faint lasted for over two hours. I was given some capsules to take; I later discovered that these were for epilepsy. As a result of my taking these, the fainting fits stopped.

I soon became depressed with taking three of these capsules a day, so, since the faints had stopped, the doctor reduced the doseage. Within two weeks I had fainted again and was back to taking the same amount of capsules as before. I was now told that the driving lessons I had started a month previously would have to stop.

Still taking tablets, I went with two friends to the Elim Youth Camp and, while we were there, we were all baptised in the Holy Spirit. The next day, I was talking to another girl camper who had damaged the cartilage of her knee. We both decided to go up for healing the next day. Later that afternoon, however, she came running up the field shouting that she had been healed. This made me wonder whether or not I could be healed in the same way. That night, as I was taking a tablet, I heard something inside me say, "Why are you taking that? You don't need it", so I put it back in the bottle not quite knowing what I was doing.

During the prayer meeting the next morning, I prayed harder than I had ever done before. Suddenly I felt my head, which had been tired and heavy, grow lighter. I knew that I had been healed and from then on I have never taken another tablet and I have never fainted. My family and friends cannot really believe what's happened to me and to a certain extent I can't either – it's too good to be true – but I know this, that, if I had missed taking just one capsule before, I felt very ill indeed and I didn't feel it, I felt terrific!

I know now that God can do really wonderful things if only we have faith and ask him.

Wendy Owens

AT the Royal Albert Hall last Easter Monday, with many others I raised my hand and made a covenant with God that I might be used to show another the way of salvation.

As I raised my hand, being aware of God's past blessings in my life, I asked not for one soul, but for two.

After many years of prayer by our family and friends, I recently had the opportunity of talking to my sister. She had seen her need of Christ, but she had never made a decision. On the Sunday evening she took Christ as her Saviour. My brother, who for some weeks had been thinking things over, also gave his life to Christ on the same evening. On the following Sunday evening my sister-in-law accepted Christ as her Saviour, making a total of three. I had asked for two! Truly He is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think.

We are now praying for the husbands of our new sisters in Christ, that they may come quickly to Him.

MY wife went to be with the Lord last August, aged 38 years. Apparently she was one of the founder-members of the Wigan Elim Pentecostal Church under the ministry of Pastor T.E. Francis, she then being a young girl in her very early teens. A short time later, she received the baptism in the Spirit.

Some years later, I attended a meeting at the church. After being under conviction for some weeks, I too decided for God. A while later, I met Joyce. We fell in love and, during the last few months of my National Service in the Royal Army Medical Corps, we married. About two years later, after our son was born, she began to feel not too well. Imagine my horror, when, after many medical tests, the doctors told me that my wife was suffering from an incurable kidney complaint. She was 24 years old at the time and I was about 25.

In the early days of her sickness, after the initial shock, we were both convinced that God would heal her body and we both prayed for this to happen.

One day, some years later, as she grew slowly worse, she told me that she had accepted that it was not God's will that she would be healed down here, but, in all her years of suffering and pain, she never ceased to tell others about the Lord. I often used to marvel at her faith and witness and work for God. She only gave up her job as Sunday School Secretary and teacher when the burden of sickness became too great.

Although I had a certain degree of happiness from my Christian life, I had always been fully aware that I didn't have the same closeness to God that my wife had. I must admit that often I would be a little bitter and often heartbroken to see her suffer. Often, before I left home for the night shift in the Fire

by F. H. Coleman

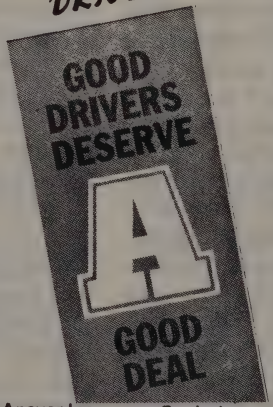
IT is not easy to be a Christian in the Far East. Many who accept Christ have to pay a dear price for their faith.

It was my privilege while in Hong Kong to visit our Elim Pentecostal Church there, A live Assembly 80% made up of young people. They are on fire for God. I enquired as to how many of these had received the baptism in the Spirit, and was told, "The majority." They have a youth programme which not only keeps them all day Sunday at church, but most weekdays as well. Some people reading this will say at once that this is not unusual, for the young people in our churches do this. But will you please read on!

I was pointed to a girl in her 'teens who had recently been saved. They were praying much for her and this is why. The Chinese are ancestor worshippers and that means that they not only worship at the graves of those who have passed on, but they also have idols in the houses as well. All food is offered to the idols before being eaten and Christians cannot partake of that food. When this girl was saved, she told her parents what she had done. The next day she refused to eat food which had been offered to the household idol. This continued for two weeks until she had to lie on her bed through sheer weakness. Eventually she was able to obtain food which had not been offered to an idol.

When I read in a newspaper how much we spend on food, I wonder how many of us would go without food for two weeks because we are Christians?

Their is another thing about these fine young people. Many of them are college students and this means attending college each day and also taking a job in order to support themselves, as there is not much free education there. When a Christian who attends college and works at a job goes to worship at the Christian church, his parents call him "Lazy-Bones" and say that he or she should use that time for study. Despite all this, those young people attend church six days a week.



Pray for our young people in our Hong Kong Church that God will bless them and use them to bring others to Christ.

The Bohemian Brethren

JAMES Montgomery, of whom I wrote last week, was a member of the Moravian Church. Delving into Church history, I have discovered that the witness borne by this comparatively small sect has been outstanding and worldwide in its scope. The story of the Moravian Church is one of apostolic zeal, courage, persecution and adventure. There is evidence that their faith has inspired and strengthened the Protestant Church.

This Church commenced around 1400 A.D. in the province of Bohemia, now part of W. Czechoslavakia and began as a Christian communion growing out of the reform movement pioneered by John Huss, who was influenced by the teachings of our own Yorkshire-born John Wycliff (1324-84) and the Lollards. John Huss was burned at the stake in 1415. Wycliff, too, experienced bitter persecution, as did his Lollards, some of whom suffered martyrdom. "The blood of the martyrs is the seed of the Church". Inspired by white-hot consecration of the two Johns and determined to re-establish the simplicity and burning zeal of apostolic days, the Bohemian Brethren became a Church denomination. Brother Bradacius was ordained a bishop in 1467 by the consecration and laying on of hands of the Waldensian Bishop Stephen and the new Church joyfully affirmed its precepts, i.e., the Bible alone to be the rule of faith and practice, a belief in the priesthood of all believers, strict church discipline and purity of life. The Church grew rapidly, extending into Moravia and in 1501 published the first Protestant hymn-book and by 1593 produced the first translation of the Bible in the Czech language. Persecution came all too soon at the end of the Thirty Years War in 1620 and the Church was outlawed. For a period of 100 years these courageous believers met in secret, deep in the forests of Moravia and Bohemia.

In 1722 "the hidden seed" escaped over the border into Saxony where the godly young Count Zinzendorf received them and settled them on his estate. God had miraculously preserved and restored the Moravian Church and Zinzendorf, fired by a great vision for world evangelism, determined to make the Church a training ground from which to send missionaries into all the world. Thus the Moravian Church became the first Protestant Church since the Reformation to reorganise missionary activity and to teach that all believers must be responsible for spreading the gospel. It is therefore the "Mother of all missionary societies". Zinzendorf taught that the gospel message and the need for conversion must be carried to all professing Christians as well as to the heathen. Missionaries were sent to work among the Russian Orthodox, the Coptic Church and the protestant churches of Germany, Switzerland, Holland, Scandinavia and Britain. The object was to bring men to Christ and not to take them out of their own churches. Thus the number of Moravian churches was small, but the influence of the Moravians was very great.

In 1735 the first Moravians came to England to establish a refuge for the Saxony Brethren if persecution again reared its ugly head. The leaders then moved on to America to witness to the settlers and the Indians. In the providence of God, John Wesley travelled to Georgia with a party of twenty-six Moravians and was greatly moved by their earnest faith. After two years Wesley returned to London and met Peter Bohler and wrote in his diary that it was a day much to be remembered. This fine Moravian missionary, just arrived from Germany, was mightily used by God to bring John Wesley into the experience of a full and free salvation by faith in the finished work of Christ. Wesley spent three months with the Moravians in Germany and, from Zinzendorf himself, caught the vision to share his new-found spiritual riches. So the glorious revival in which the Moravians had a glorious part, swept far and wide. Moravian churches were established chiefly in Yorkshire, Wiltshire and Ireland.

Because of their policy of world evangelism and co-operation with other churches, the number of Moravian churches to this day is small yet their witness is universal. God always maintains His witness and living faith and holiness are far more effective than church organisation and imposing buildings. The words of John Wesley, culled from his Journal, written of Peter Bohler are applicable to the Moravian Church as a whole: "O what a work hath God begun, since his coming into England! Such an one as shall never come to an end, till heaven and earth pass away".

THE PRINCIPLES AND PRACTICE OF YOUTH WORK
by Eldin R. Corsie, National Youth Director

7. Empty Shop Evangelism

MANY shops lie empty for months. It is not difficult to get permission from owners and estate agents to use such premises for evangelistic purposes. They can provide an advertising medium or a place to to stage a church exhibition. Some churches have used empty shops to show films and film-strips of the work of the church.

8. Camps

Each year many young people are brought to the Lord through Elim Camps. Churches can organise or sponsor groups of children and teenagers for Elim camps. The children are in the care of Christian workers for 168 hours in the week instead of the usual hour or so at the local church on Sunday. For information write to: The National Youth Director, Kensington Temple, Kensington Park Road, London W.11.

Hospital Visitation

It is important to be on time. There is nothing worse than a visitor who arrived just as the bell is being rung to end the visiting period. The breathless rush to the bedside and the few gasping sentences will do anything but help the patient.

It is vital to manifest happiness. The atmosphere of any ward can be uncheerful. It is the responsibility of the visitor to bring "sunshine" to the patient. "Do all things unto edifying". The gloomy, pessimistic person can influence the attitude of the patient and affect his progress. Prepare topics of conversation before entering the hospital. Be ready to discuss happy, faith-inspiring subjects. Find a chair and sit near the patient so that he or she has your full attention. Don't be preoccupied with other matters in the ward while holding a conversation with the patient.

It is helpful to take a gift. Gifts presented in rich profusion embarrass the patient. Many a patient has tried to balance four or five baskets of fruit, three or four vases of flowers, boxes of chocolates and "get well" cards on the locker at the bedside. The wisest thing is to ask the ward sister what the patient needs and how much, and to abide by her suggestions.

BOOK REVIEWS

Cherry and her Friends, by P. Catherine Coles. Published by Victory Press, price 35p, postage and packing 7p extra.

THIS book relates the story of a six-year-old girl and her life in both country and town. The style will probably appeal mostly to children between five and seven. It is written about a girl and the language is rather "nice", so it will probably hold more appeal for girls than boys. However, the language and the length of the book mean that it will probably have to be read to most children of this age. The book illustrates very well how Christianity affected every part of living; the point becomes clearer towards the end. I feel that Cherry at the beginning appears rather too good to be true. The rather heavy moral overtones at this stage would make it somewhat lacking in appeal for children older than about seven.

Margaret Wheeler

The Henty, by F.M. Gravatt. Published by Victory Press, price 50p, postage and packing 9p extra.

THE summer holidays over, Jay and Vince continue their holiday passion-fishing, but now there are the secrecy and excitement of fishing at night. On the way to see how their boat has survived a night and storm, Jay finds in a tree felled by lightning telegrams which should have been delivered a year before. This involves the two friends in a mystery for they begin to post the telegrams and thus is brought alive to Jay the hymn: "We've a message to tell to the nations". As the mystery involves them increasingly in deception and dishonesty, Jay finds that the only one to whom he can go for help is God. The boys' thoughts and feelings are portrayed vividly in a warm, realistic way. The life of the writer's style and the excitement and freshness of his story involve the reader immediately.

Service, she would pray and read the Scriptures to me.

Now as I look back, I realize that I was looking through the glass darkly as it were. I fully believe now that my wife, in her sickness, was a much more convincing witness than if she had been healed. I thank God that my own walk is richer and deeper and that I am fully trusting in His wonderful promises.

The Family Altar

Scripture Union Portions — Notes by Gerald L.W. Ladlow

Monday, December 3rd — 2 Peter 2:12-22

"These are wells without water" (v.17).

THE bitter disappointment to the traveller in the desert who has hurried to the promised well only to find it dried up is symbolic of these false teachers. They promised their followers freedom from the moral law and to do as they liked and thus they would find happiness. Instead their doctrine brought disappointment and greater bondage (v.19). The advocates of permissiveness in our society have not given the promised happiness. Their boasted "freedom" has brought greater slavery to sin and lust and increased man's sorrows. Obedience to the laws of God alone assures our happiness.

Tuesday, December 4th — 2 Peter 3:1-10

"The Lord is not slack concerning His promise. . . but is longsuffering. . .not willing that any should perish" (v.9).

THE answer given here to the seeming delay in the coming of the Lord is two fold: God does not measure time as man does, for He has all eternity in which to work; and because of His compassionate heart He is withholding judgment, giving man a longer period in which to repent and find His forgiving grace. Each day His coming is delayed is a gift of further time for His people to reach a perishing world with the message of His love.

Wednesday, December 5th — 2 Peter 3:11-18

"What manner of persons ought ye to be?" (v.11).

THE knowledge that the coming Christ will bring a new heaven and a new earth wherein dwells righteousness should be the great moral dynamic in the lives of believers. With this great hope, they should be inspired to lives of holiness, preparing themselves to be fit members of a new world. "With such a blessed hope in view, We would more holy be, More like our risen, glorious Lord, Whose face we soon shall see."

Thursday, December 6th — Ezekiel 33:1-20

"If the watchman. . .blow not the trumpet. . .his blood will I require at the watchman's hand" (v.9).

TO us has been given the revelation of the ultimate end of the sinner and the obligation to warn him of his peril. "Ye are my witnesses," says the Lord. Our faithfulness or otherwise to this responsibility may affect the eternal destinies of men and we shall be judged accordingly. If we realised the eternal issues involved, surely we would never rest satisfied while souls remain unwarned.

Friday, December 7th — Ezekiel 33:21-33

"Thou art unto them as a very lovely song. . .for they hear thy words, but they do them not" (v.32).

IT is a sad day for any church when people attend the services merely for entertainment. The popular preacher may, by his eloquence, rhetoric and pleasing personality, obtain the following of the crowds, but, if his message does not affect the conduct of his hearers, he is not building up the Church of God even though the auditorium be a packed one. If we do not act upon the message that is preached it is of no value to us even though we may say we have "enjoyed" the sermon.

Saturday, December 8th — Ezekiel 34:1-19

"I will seek that which was lost" (v.16).

IN contrast to the unfaithful shepherds who were careless in their duties God reveals His solicitude, not only for the welfare of the flock in the fold, but also for every lost sheep. His intention found its fulfilment in the coming of the Saviour who said, "For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost", and in so doing to "lay down His life for the sheep". We delight to sing: "I was lost but Jesus found me, Found the sheep that went astray, Threw His loving arms around me, Drew me back into His way".

Sunday, December 9th — Ezekiel 34:20-31

"The places round about my hill. . .there shall be showers of blessing" (v.26).

IN a number of the psalms "the hill of the Lord" is used to represent the presence of God. When the soul consciously leaves behind the secular world and seeks the presence of God, it discovers the showers of blessing. How often we sing "for the showers we plead", but fail to recognise that there are conditions to be met. The psalmist reminds us that, to be able to ascend the Hill of the Lord, we must have purity in our conduct, sincerity in our motives, honesty in our speech, and humility in our approach (Psalm 24:3, 4).

WHEN I first arrived on the steps of Northwick Park I was so lonely and lost, so sick and disillusioned with the drug scene, yet afraid to break away from its false security. Three and a half years have gone by since that day and I can now look back with amazement at what God has done in my life.

Hearing the gospel and receiving Christ as my personal Lord and Saviour were only the beginnings of a wonderful life of knowing Christ and experiencing the hand of the Lord upon me. I spent a whole year at Northwick Park and only now do I really appreciate all the Christian teaching and encouragement that I was given. I praise the Lord for raising up men and women with a vision for hopeless lost.

"Fear not, for I am with thee" was the Scripture which comforted me as I left the safety of Northwick Park to face the cruel world outside. Through all the many problems that I met, God was with me, strengthening me. The Christian life is not like the proverbial bed of roses, but God taught me to see my problems in perspective, how to meet them squarely and learn from them. Before, I would run away to hide in the twilight zone of opiates – but in Christ I found I didn't need a chemical castle to protect me from day to day crises!

After leaving Northwick Park I worked for a year in the Billy Graham Association office in London. I soon realised that God was calling me to Bible College to prepare for ministry. As a step of faith I applied to Elim Bible College and was accepted. I began in 1972 and the year that followed was amazing. The Bible teaching I received there showed me that my life had to be revolutionised. For the first time in nine years I renewed my relationship with my parents and I went to stay with them at Christmas in my father's homeland, Malta. During that time the Lord touched my heart and showed me the great spiritual vacuum on the island. I saw prostitution, sensuality and drug abuse running riot, and the young people disillusioned with the Church. Another piece seemed to drop into the jigsaw puzzle of my life. I returned to College with an inner conviction that God wanted me to take the gospel to Malta. I returned there at Easter and in the summer holidays, and now I have come back to England to complete my second and final year at College, after which I hope to marry a young lady who is also studying at Elim Bible College. God brought us together in a rather wonderful way and she shares in my vision for the Maltese. Elizabeth and I will be leaving England next August for the work that He has given us to do.

When I look back over the last few years to what the LORD has done in my life I can do nothing but praise and thank our Father. I can see that, as I have put my trust in Him He has gradually unfolded His plans for my life. We ask that, as we obey God's call to Malta, you will pray that our ministry might be an effective one for Christ's sake.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Sir,

I WOULD like to bring to your prayerful attention the incoming trend of Jesus festivals and gospel rock groups etc. These seem to be giving a very casual outlook to the gospel and a wrong impression to our youth. They seem to be caught up by the weird music and influence, but there seems to be no true evidence of conversion or of a real testimony given without the words being put in their mouths.

These groups would seem to be a substitute for the blessed Holy Spirit and to try and over-rule by another source of power.

I feel that it is time that we sat up and took notice, before we are blinded spiritually by the light of this world –Satan.

Yours truly,

(Mrs.) E.E. Lockwood

THE pressures on Christians nowadays are intense and immense. The avowed opinion of many is that Satan is doubly active in these last days. We are bombarded by so many suggestions, nuances, slanted applications and downright lies. Mass circulation newspapers and the communications media as a whole spread a miasma of devilish suggestions and angles. Things are written up from approaches that bias the whole argument put forward. The unconscious and even subconscious impressions made upon all of us and most importantly upon the young in faith and the tender in years are both direct and cumulative. This is the time par excellence when we should with deliberation "think on these things" as listed in Philippians 4:8.

The Bible is a marvellous encouragement, however. It faces facts as they unprettily are, but it reveals God in all His grace and in His total purity. It shows the Lord in all His love and in His entire holiness.

Read Jude vv. 17-25 as a sublime instance. The facts of the last days are startlingly revealed. We are warned that in evangelism we will be faced with such conditions that our approach will be in fear of the very virus of unchecked sin clinging to the garments of the sinner. Others, we are admonished, we should treat with compassion. There are always those who are more to be pitied than blamed. We are shown that by edifying ourselves, by prayer, by keeping ourselves in the love of God and by looking with expectation for the mercy of our Saviour, we can avoid the pitfalls of the way. There is certainly no glossing over the conditions. There is a complete absence of religious jargon, of "God's in His heaven and all's right with the world", the philosophy that relegates the scene of time to an insignificant paragraph in eternity's story. Sin is shown to be sin and to be exceedingly dangerous. It is a "catching" disease beyond the imagining.

Against this background, the words which end the Epistle are marvellous: "Now unto Him that is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of His glory with exceeding joy. To the only wise God our Saviour be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever. Amen." (Jude vv.24,25).

"Keep yourselves", yes, but "He is able to keep you from falling". This exquisite balance, this spiritual equilibrium is the deep wonder of all that goes to make for triumphant Christianity.

Church Reports

HEREFORD Pastor: R. Griffiths

WE recently held a baptismal service when eight converts followed the Lord through the waters. Mr. T. Wheeler sang and was accompanied at the organ by David Taylor. Our Pastor gave a helpful message for the candidates. It was a great day for the young people. Two of the candidates were husband and wife, Philip and Linda Tittensor. There were also two brothers and sister Susan, Andrew and Peter Reynolds.

PHIL MORRIS

GLOSSOP Pastor: W. Hunter

AT our Ladies' Weekend, visitors from Hadfield, Denton, Hayfield, Salford, Mosborough and Rotherham contributed items in song, choir, word and testimony. We enjoyed the ministry of Mrs. J. Beresford of Macclesfield. She gave us the Word with great zeal.

After a wonderful time of fellowship and blessing we shared a buffet supper prepared by our own ladies.

The services were ably conducted by our Pastor's wife.

EDITH LOFTUS

HASTINGS Pastor: E. Dainton

WE have just celebrated our Pastor's first anniversary. This has been a year in which we have proved the faithfulness of our God.

An abundant tea was served. Expressions of appreciation were made by the Church Secretary for all the work done by the Minister and his wife. The ministry of the Word has been particularly blessed. We all enjoyed the series on the Baptism in the Holy Ghost, and From Egypt to Canaan. A gift token to the Pastor and a plant to Mrs. Dainton were presented. Following this, local ministerial brethren paid their tributes.

In the evening meeting contributions were made by the various departments of the work. The preacher was Pastor A.A. Biddle. His lovely message on Psalm 23 brought a very happy time to its close. Pastor Biddle ministered with blessing all day on Sunday.

The recent week of prayer proved most encouraging. Numbers attended nightly seeking God's face for our Church and Movement. We are confident that the Lord will bless in the future in a great way.

(Mrs.) L. CRIPPS

ERDINGTON, Birmingham Pastor: K. Smith

WHEN we celebrated Pastor K. Smith's twenty-first anniversary in the ministry, a surprise tea was arranged by members of the Church on the Saturday and presentations were made to Pastor Smith and his wife by two of the youngest members, the Misses Caroline and Fiona Goldingay. Pastor and Mrs. Smith cut the anniversary cake and both expressed their appreciation of the fellowship here. The evening service was convened by the District Superintendent, Pastor R.J. Morrison, who expressed his appreciation of having Pastor K. Smith in his Presbytery and gave thanks to God for such servants of the Lord. Items were rendered by members of the Kingstanding Church and we were blessed by the Word of God from our two visiting speakers, Pastor W.J. Patterson and J. Seaman.

On Sunday Pastor J. Seaman was with us at both services and once again the blessing of the Lord was felt.

G.H. GOLDINGAY

At our women's weekend, the Sunday evening service was convened by Mrs. R.D. Bradley owing to the unfortunate illness of Mrs. E. Smith. The ladies sang. Our speaker for the weekend was Mrs. D.O. Ward from Bath, who gave us the message in song and Word. On Monday evening the Church was full, the rally being well supported by visiting churches. The service was convened by Mrs. Bradley and was opened in prayer by Mrs. J. Nicholson. There were singing items by the Erdington ladies and a recitation and solo. Mrs. Ward sang a solo and in her message reminded us that we may know God whom to know is life eternal. The rally was brought to a close with a solo by Mrs. Mary Goldingay and prayer by Mrs. L. Cartwright.

Summer Christian Bandstand, Bournemouth

EVERY year during the summer months our Winton and Springbourne Churches combine to hold a series of open-air meetings on Wednesday evenings in the Central Gardens Bandstand, Bournemouth, and also to take part with other churches in the town in the after-church open-air meetings on Sundays.

The speakers have included a number of visiting ministers and evangelists, in addition to the two ministers and some of the members of the Winton and Springbourne churches. Items have been rendered by various soloists and choirs.

God has wonderfully blessed the gospel as it has gone forth at the meetings this summer and a considerable number of visitors to Bournemouth have stopped to listen to the message. A greater number of people than ever before have asked for literature. Over 900 enquiries have been received and sixty of these have requested further instruction in the shape of the Bible course which is available on application.

This work presents the Churches with a wonderful opportunity of preaching the gospel to thousands who possibly never attend a place of worship. We do ask that all who read this brief account of the work will remember it in prayer so that next season the work, under God, may be even more blessed.

(Mrs.) D.F. KEMP

Why "Go ye" to Switzerland?

THE words of our Master, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel" are a command, not an alternative. Over forty young people from churches in England, Wales and Ireland, mainly Elim and Assemblies of God, had an opportunity to obey the command by going to Switzerland during August and September. We worked in the Canton du Valais, using a youth hostel in the tiny Alpine village of Bruson as home base. We were joined by a number of French-speaking Swiss young people led by Pastor and Mrs. W. Droz, both ex-I.B.T.I. students, now pastoring a group of Pentecostal churches near Hiverdon, in the Protestant area of Switzerland. Belgium, Finland and S. Africa were also represented and we had with us Mrs. E. Shearman and her son, Pastor Dave Shearman, from Talbot Street A.o.G. Church, Nottingham. We greatly enjoyed their ministry and fellowship.

Why did we go to Switzerland? The canton where we worked is a hard Roman Catholic area. Crosses are seen in every village, but the risen Lord is not known to them. Superstition and spiritism abound. Many times we asked the question, 'Are you going to heaven?' and heard the sad answer, 'If I merit it'. There was no assurance of salvation there!

Each morning we spent time waiting upon the Lord before moving out to the small villages, some perched high up the mountains, alongside almost inaccessible roads. We sang to draw a crowd, then shared our testimonies with the listeners. These were usually spoken in English and translated into French. Loud speakers are not allowed by law; however, we had plenty of opportunity to talk to those who listened, and to give out tracts and John's Gospels. Our young people had such a joy, peace and unity as they sang together. One listener said to me in French, "I wish I had their joy. They've really got something!".

The Lord provided for our needs in wonderful ways, despite the sudden devaluation of the Pound. A mini-bus was given, freely, in answer to prayer. I had already booked, in faith, a hovercraft flight for July 28th to transport a nine-seater mini-bus and twelve passengers and we crossed the Channel with a left-hand drive nine-seater mini-bus and twelve workers. It was wonderful how God gave strength and stamina to those of us who drove the mini-buses and cars. Apart from the 800-mile round trips from Bruson to Calais to pick up the English workers, we had to drive over precipitous mountain passes. Coming down a narrow road in the pitch dark one night, I had a sheer drop to my left, and the side of the mountain to my right. We had thunder and lightning and the road soon became like the bed of a stream as the rain torrented down... but instead of being panic stricken, my passengers sang, 'This is the day that the Lord hath made!' We knew Whom we could trust for our safety.

Not all the villagers made us welcome. Some were indifferent, and some were hostile. In one village, for example, we had handclapping and jeering every time anyone spoke, followed by two motorcyclists who repeatedly rode around in circles missing the group by inches at high speed. God gave us great grace and love and we continued to sing until they went, and as we left, we could tell by peoples' expressions and words that God had given us a real Victory. In another village a man shouted and jeered at us, mocking us in front of innocent little children. People laughed at him... then as one, we raised our hands in the One Way Jesus sign and we felt and knew the presence and power of God in a remarkable way. The mocking man was silenced and a Swiss member of the team received her Baptism in the Holy Spirit as we stood and sang. We were not always treated in this way though. There were people really interested in what we had to say as we shared Jesus with them. Many were searching for Reality and Truth, and they will only find what they need when they accept Jesus. An elderly lady told me, with tears in her eyes, that she had only heard people speaking, as we were, about Jesus, once before, when she was a small child. She wanted to hear more and begged us to return.

We had the opportunity to witness to a group of Muslim students in the nearby town of Martigny. Later some of the students came to find us in the Youth Hostel at Bruson wanting to know more about our God. They were Egyptians. . . which reminds us of the prophecy of Isaiah concerning the Egyptians in the last days, 'and they shall return to the Lord and He shall be entreated of them and shall heal them' (Isaiah 19:22).

The work continues in the Valais with a GO-YE-er from last year, Heinz Suter, an ex-Elim Bible College student, who is leading a French speaking team from Y.W.A.M. So far, over 200 people have given us their names and addresses asking for literature, visits, and bibles and many of them have also prayed with us and accepted the Lord. There is a desperate need for a community base there, for there are no protestant churches at all in that area. The seed is being sown but there is a need for a place to worship, for fellowship and teaching, and a place where team workers can be based, for both outreach and training. However, 'we believe God'. . . for with God all things are possible.

SHEFFIELD Pastor: A. Brooks

AT our harvest festival, the fruits and vegetables made a goodly show and on the window ledges around the Church were autumn flowers in abundance. The Crusader Secretary led the service in the afternoon and our Church Secretary spoke to the children, who did very well.

The evening service was taken by our own Pastor, who gave a message from Mark chapter 4. A large number of Sunday School scholars were in this service. They sang choruses and Mrs. Brooks gave a word to the many scholars who had entered and gained high marks in the Scripture Examination. She then gave the certificates and prizes to them. Every year we give a small silver cup to the scholar with the highest marks and also engrave his or her name on a large silver cup which is on view in the Church. Mrs. Brooks asked the children what prize Jesus offered and one child answered, "The Crown of Life". The Church and the extension were filled to capacity.

Mr. Dennis Scott, who has been our Sunday School Superintendent over the past twelve years, retired from this position at this service and was presented with a canteen of cutlery. He has served very well in this capacity and has travelled from Doncaster by car each Sunday picking up scholars on the way. Mr. Roy Jackson is to be the Superintendent now.

The next evening, Pastor and Mrs. David Mills showed us slides of Ghana and thrilled our hearts as they showed how greatly blessed is the work and how God works through His children in this land. Ours is a missionary-minded Church and we do all we can for the E.W.M.A. in our Sisterhood. We were well trained in this work when Pastor and Mrs. Gorton were with us.

Pastor and Mrs. Brooks have a very acceptable ministry which is greatly appreciated.

We have just had our Crusader week and what a blessed time it was. The Sunday was a great day. It was taken by the Crusaders. Throughout the week they have ministered in convening the services, testimonies, song, Bible reading, recitations, messages, solos and duets, and did excellently. We have a good number of young Crusaders, some of whom have been saved recently.

ANDOVER Pastor: D. H. Bass

GREAT blessing was experienced recently when two of our members were baptised. They were Mr. Robert McEachran and Mr. Barry McKeever. Both are recent converts and testify to the blessing of the Lord on their new lives in Christ. Robert was baptised in the Holy Spirit only three days before water baptism and we pray that Barry, who is also seeking this blessing, will receive soon. The sermon preached by our Pastor was entitled "What doth hinder Me?", based on Acts 8:26. The singing of "Abide with Me" by Mr. McEachran to conclude the service was a source of great blessing. Our brother thought that he would be unable to sing this solo, due to a heavy cold and throat infection. He testified to instant healing as he went through the waters. We praise God for all He is doing among us.

TEN members of Elim Bible College spent an extended half-term holiday ministering on the Continent. The seven "John Barton Voices", led by a third-year student, set out to evangelise and to encourage Christians in some Pentecostal backwaters of Belgium and France, making the best of a few of seven years of overseas' contacts through the E.B.C. English Language School. Music was a primary vehicle for our message and College Music Director Doug Fincher accompanied us as sponsor. The party was completed by Dave Palmer on bass guitar.

We travelled in the College minibus and Hovered across to Calais on the Friday morning. Our itinerary proper commenced in Belgium at Flenu, the home assembly of Eduardo Cino, a member of the party and an English language student. Our regular music programme included a selection from the Jimmy Owens Musical, "Come Together". Songs were alternated with testimonies and were followed by an interpreted gospel message. We attempted a few songs in French; continentals invariably appreciated the foreigners' efforts along these lines. It was wonderful to have Eduardo's unsaved parents in the meeting and visibly moved. The service concluded with some vigorously reverent chorus singing by the congregation, then rich fellowship and hospitality in the homes of our hosts. Pastor Guy Gilbert presented us with a decoration in the shape of a cross and told us of the Assembly's achievement in making and selling these decorations to buy a new eighteen-seater Mercedes-Benz bus.

The next day, driving into Lier, the increasing number of Virgin Mary figures in niches and windows reminded us that for Protestants this is a missionary area. The Missionaries in Lier are Pastor Mike Williams and his wife, together with David and Hanny Johnson from our Newcastle Church. A change of plan was necessary because we had arrived in the Flemish-speaking area. Eduardo was expecting to preach in French, but we learned that Flemish is a dying language, jealousy preserved, and there is hostility towards French, its main rival. However, it would be acceptable to sing and preach in English, with interpretation. A quick revision of programme, a change of preacher to Viv Fisher, and the service was under way, in the converted ground floor rooms of a house with a haberdashery shop at the front. Several of the congregation had visited Capel in a Summer houseparty earlier in the year.

On Sunday morning, after a night in a Brussels youth hostel. it was a short journey to a major Pentecostal church in the city. This time the building was a garage, recently renovated in expert style by members of the Assembly. We shared ministry and fellowship with them around the Lord's table, Steve Challoner preaching with Pastor Claude LeFevre as interpreter. Our lunch date was at Continental Bible College. In the evening there was a chance to minister to our hosts and fellow-workers when several of them joined us for a service at another Evangelical church.

Monday was a day for travelling. During a motorway break, Ursula Coulter, Kathie Morgan and Mildred Thompson cooked an unusual, delicious picnic meal. Our destination was Paris and we arrived in time to explore the Cathedral of Notre-Dame. There was a difficulty over the sleeping arrangements, and we were grateful to the Assemblies of God Bible College for accommodating us at very short notice. On the following morning we were still unable to contact Teen Challenge, our evening venue, and so, following group devotions, the best was made of a beautiful day as seen from the top of the Eiffel Tower or a boat on the Seine.

During the tour we had many reminders that the Lord was going with and before us. That afternoon we paid a "chance" call on friends at a Paris Bible College. Some of them decided to meet us in the Teen Challenge coffee bar in the evening. We arrived early and were horrified to discover that there was no piano and no electricity for the bass guitar. Eduardo could accompany us on his guitar, but then who would speak his French parts in "Come Together"? Our Bible College amis arrived in the nick of time; one took Eduardo's part and another offered to interpret. A lightning

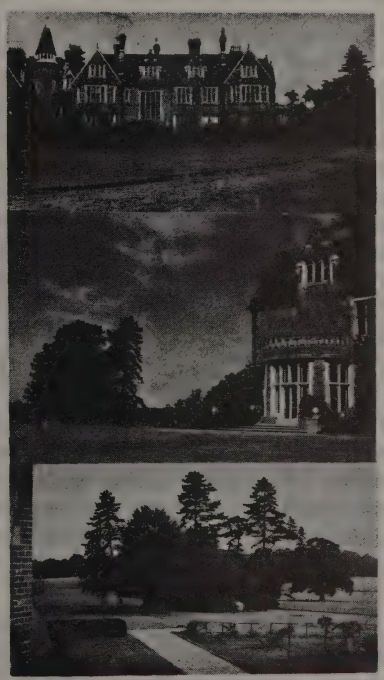
Living Treasure

Matthew 13:44-46



Words and drawing by Sheila Price

"I WILL be away for some time," the rich man told his servants. He gave some last-minute instructions to his household and set off, thinking of the treasure that he hoped to find. He had heard that it was hidden in the next town. "Perhaps it is stolen treasure," he thought. "Perhaps the thieves were disturbed before they could make their getaway. Perhaps they hid it until it is safe for them to return to collect it. I must get to it before they do!".

He searched everywhere, under hedges, in barns and cattle-sheds, anywhere where he thought the treasure might be. He searched from morning until evening, day after day, week after week, without success. At the end of one particularly exhausting afternoon he went into a nearby field to rest. He leaned against a tree and mopped his brow. As he bent down to pick up his water-bottle to quench his thirst, he noticed that the ground beneath him had been disturbed. He scraped away at the freshly–dug earth with his hands and saw something glinting just below the surface. Soon he had uncovered an assortment of gold and silver ornaments, rubies, diamonds and pearls. "I've found the treasure!" he cried excitedly, "Now all I have to do is to buy the field to make the treasure legally mine."

He returned home to count his savings and discovered that he did not have enough money. He wanted the treasure so badly that he sold all he had – house, servants, furniture, everything – to raise enough money to purchase the field and thus make the treasure his very own.

Long ago the Lord Jesus came from heaven to search for living treasure. He searched hard and long and did not give up searching until He found what He loved and wanted most of all – you and me. He values us far more than all the gold and silver in the land. So precious are we to the Lord Jesus that He gave all He possessed in order to make us His very own. It cost the Saviour His life on the cross at Calvary – the price He willingly paid to make us His very own eternal treasure.

Jesus Christ – Superstar?

by research scientist Kerr Wilson, B.Sc., Cardiff

IT doesn't seem long ago that one of the Beatles made the astounding claim that they were more famous than Jesus Christ. Well, the Beatle era didn't last long. Now, incredibly, it is the name of Jesus Christ that is up in bright lights in the big cities. Jesus is the leading character in a new musical called "Jesus Christ – Superstar", based on the last six weeks of his life. The record has sold over 2,000,000 copies.

Perhaps you see "Superstar" as an example of religious decay or maybe you see it as nothing more than vulgar commercialism and in pretty poor taste at that. The thought of the disciples at the Lord's Supper singing: "Look at all my trials and tribulations, sinking in a gentle pool of wine" seem to you little short of blasphemy. If you think that - you've got lots of company!

The theme of the rock-opera is the question, "Who is this Jesus – a good man or was He really God?". Listen to Judas, "He's a man - he's just a man. He's not a King - he's just the same, As anyone I know, He scares me so".

LEN MAGEE L.P. JUST RELEASED

"Len Magee works with me on Crusades and I have proved how very effective he is in communicating to young people. What most folk don't know is that most of Len's songs are his own compositions and, on this album, the quite remarkable talents of this young singer/songwriter are brought to a wider public".

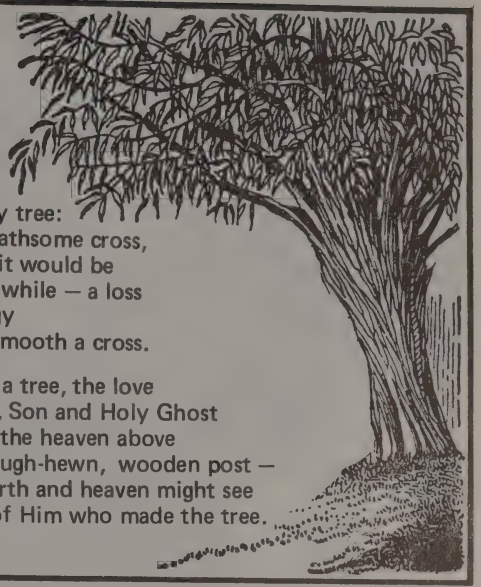
Judas feels it: He's just a man, but, after seeing "Superstar" an agnostic teenager might - he just might - decide to read the Gospels and get filled in on the details. Then he'll discover that there is a vast difference between the Jesus of "Superstar" and the eternal Christ.

Jesus was a Man living in Israel in the first century, who went about doing good, fully human, a man who felt physical pain and mental anguish, especially as they nailed him to a cross, BUT this Man was God, "as much of God as can be poured into a human frame without destroying its humanity". This is the eternal Christ who dwells with uplifting power in any life which trusts and welcomes him.

Many people know how we should live, but they find it hard to live up to. Unlike human teachers, the life of Jesus showed no gap between the theory and practice of living. How unlike Seneca, the tutor of Nero, this was! The Romans considered him to be one of their greatest teachers yet we read: "He condemned tyranny and became the teacher of a tyrant; reviled the rich and was himself a millionaire; contracted a brilliant marriage but amused himself with young boys". Yet the Jewish authorities were never able to pin one moral failure on Christ. Lawyers followed him around (perhaps compiling a dossier of evidence) and no doubt a good deal of muck-raking went on in Nazareth. "Which of you accuses Me of sin?" He asked. There was no answer. No fault could be found in Him; He was sinless.



What effect can a sinless man have if He was murdered? He stated that His mission on earth was not just to live among men, but to die for men. He said clearly that the result of His death would be forgiveness and new life to everyone who believed in him. He never attempted to avoid death. He actually forecast it and gave the details. It was no tragic mistake, no heroic martyrdom; it was intentional. He came to save men who were groping about in darkness. Only one such death has produced such a revolutionary result, that brings us out of darkness into light. Christ was born to be the Saviour!

These facts do not add up to the title "Superstar". That Jesus is the sinless Saviour of the world can leave us with only one conclusion, that He was, and is, as He claimed to be, the Son of God. As such, He invites you, whoever you are, to come to Him, to trust Him, and to surrender your life to His control. Because He is God He has the right to make this supreme demand. These are the facts. The response is yours.

The Maker of the Trees

by Christopher J. Sawyer

The poplar, tall and slim,
The oak, with twisted bough,
The birch, with silver trim,
The cedar — listen how
In silent harmony they blend,
Or giving sound in stirring breeze
They raise their song without an end
To Him who made the trees.

Such pleasant factory sites
Are these, where wood is grown,
Where no pollution blights
And discord is unknown;
And here the frame of many a home,
Tables and chairs and beds to ease
Body and mind, took their first form
From Him who made the trees.

God made a lovely tree:
Men made a loathsome cross,
Rough-hewn, for it would be
Not worth the while — a loss
Of time and energy
To shape and smooth a cross.

And so upon a tree, the love
Of Father, Son and Holy Ghost
Was lifted to the heaven above
Upon a rough-hewn, wooden post —
That all in earth and heaven might see
The love of Him who made the tree.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Sir,

I WONDER if I could request the courtesy of your columns to draw the attention of your readers to a project on the Hymnology of Lancashire on which Bob Dobson of Blackpool and I are engaged.

We are collecting information on the hymn-writers and composers of Lancashire, including any who may not have actually been born or died in Lancashire, but who spent several (productive) years there. "Lancashire" means any place which either has belonged to Lancashire until now (e.g. Warrington), has belonged to Lancashire in the past (e.g. Todmorden), or will do so after April 1st, 1974 (e.g. Earby and such parts of the Manchester and Liverpool Metropolitan counties which did not previously belong to Lancashire).

The actual information that we are seeking embraces: the subject's name in full, the exact dates of birth and death, the exact birth-places and death-places (i.e. addresses at the time) where these can be ascertained, and a brief synopsis of the subject's hymnological career — whether organist at a church or churches and if so which, with relevant dates, some indication of the hymns written or tunes composed, and, unless these are particularly voluminous, giving where possible metres and names of tunes and titles and first lines of hymns. If there are too many to list comfortably, we would appreciate an indication where any collected manuscripts, etc., may be found.

Any other special or relevant information is also of value.

Any information or leads, however small, should be sent to Ken F. Bowden, Public Library, St. James Square, Bacup, OL13 9AH, or to Bob Dobson at 14 Whitehead Close, Staining, Blackpool.

Yours truly,
Ken F. Bowden.

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

55. Jacob yields (Genesis 43:11-14)

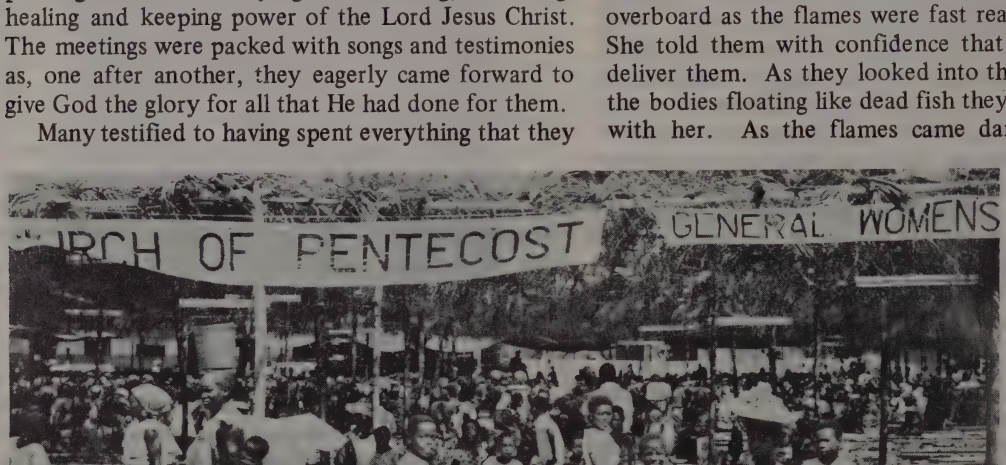
by F. Lavender

FOR a long time Jacob refused to send Benjamin to Egypt, but the food was almost gone and the famine increasingly severe so that Jacob and his family, including Benjamin, were facing starvation. Jacob was finally compelled to send again to Egypt for food, so he sent double money to pay for the first supplies of food plus a present for the "surly" overseer of Egypt. In addition he accepted the overseer's demand that Benjamin should go too, for without his presence both the money and the gift would be in vain. Having thus yielded, Jacob committed all to the hand of the Almighty and sent his sons to Egypt.

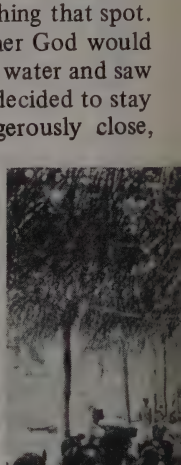
As we walk in the way of Christ we are progressively made aware of what God requires of us. Sometimes we feel that we cannot pay the price which He asks and we enter a barren period in our spiritual experiences. We may be willing to give a tithe, or more than a tithe, of our money, perhaps we are ready to give a present to God of our service, but all is worthless unless we are willing to yield ourselves to Him, especially in these matters upon which He has laid His finger. We should give ourselves and all we possess to Him, yield our all and, like Jacob, commit ourselves in faith to God. No matter how great the demand may appear to be, we shall find that it is a blessed thing so to trust Him.

Ghana Women's Convention

by Margaret Kilpatrick



Babies sleep while their mothers praise—but older children join in



WE packed the mini-bus for our three day stay in Sekondi. We were looking forward to attending the biannual women's convention and to meeting sisters from all over Ghana. The sisters were of one mind in praising God and testifying to the saving, delivering, healing and keeping power of the Lord Jesus Christ. The meetings were packed with songs and testimonies as, one after another, they eagerly came forward to give God the glory for all that He had done for them.

Many testified to having spent everything that they had to pay the witch doctor for "healing" for themselves or for their children and then at the end of the "treatment" they found that they were in a worse condition and all that faced them was death. It is so true that the devil is seeking to destroy and take life, whereas Jesus has come to bring abundant life and it is without money or price! Our hearts rose in praise as we heard how they encountered the Saviour when they were without hope and how He came in and took over in an impossible situation, as only He can.

One sister told of being on a boat on the Volta which went on fire and many people had jumped overboard to escape the flames; others were being burned on the boat. She cried to the Lord in her trouble. He heard her and showed her a safe place on the stern where she and her three children should stay. Some others came there, too, but they wanted to jump overboard as the flames were fast reaching that spot. She told them with confidence that her God would deliver them. As they looked into the water and saw the bodies floating like dead fish they decided to stay with her. As the flames came dangerously close, they just went out! "When thou walkest through the fire thou shalt not be burned; neither shall the flame kindle upon thee". A rescue boat picked up six out of a party of over one hundred. Her testimony brought conviction on many living around her and many people burned fetishes to serve the living, loving God.

The main attraction was Jesus Christ and the theme was that life and power were available to the "whosoever will", who would come in faith to live a life of faith in Jesus.

There were 7,000 sisters who met together for the convention. They slept in class-rooms, halls and with friends in the town. The townspeople worked hard to make extra food; little children carried their pots of water and trays of food to sell.

The convention brought blessing to all and salvation to many. The sisters left with a fresh determination to serve Jesus and to live to please Him. It is wonderful to belong to the family of God and to know how much He loves and cares for His children!

Born a Priest

Heneri tells his story

Heneri and Salina

HOW often I have been told of my birth. Like all my people, no preparation was made, not even the provision of a cloth to cover me. The spirits around must be kept in complete ignorance of the coming child. Although I was intended, if a boy, to be a witchdoctor, no preparation had been made even for that. Both my parents were priests. My mother held the mfuko (spirit bag) of our cult. As my mother gave birth on the earth floor, she rejoiced, thinking "A boy to inherit the mfuko from me!". The priests of our cult gathered. Offerings were poured to our muzimu (spirits of the dead).

Preparations went forward for my dedication. I must be brought out on the seventh day through a window, but there was none. After consultation with the spirits a solution was found. An opening in the mud wall near the roof would be my exit. A new-born cult-priest cannot pass through a door. As I passed through, I was protected by the tiny gourds tied to my body, that accompanied me on my first appearance to my family. I was received by Mbanga; he had been nominated by divination to be my guide and teacher. All night the preparations continued. By dawn all was ready for my presentation at the Mbuyu (sacred tree). At the foot of the enormous, ancient tree, Mbanga was possessed and prophesied that I would be of great profit to the cult. With the demon (his familiar) speaking through him, he named me "Kibuna", the name of one of our famous priests of the past. "Child," he said to me, "You must wear only black. Do not eat Mbawala. No knife must touch your hair."

Soon the early years were gone and I now recall my first memories. My people could not live in villages because of the barriers of cult and witchcraft. To live next door to a man of another cult was highly dangerous. He might bewitch you or your family. Should he offend you and you cursed him, he might have a more powerful spirit and the harm you sent him would return on you instead.

Every man feared his neighbour; all wore protective charms. Many were deeply involved with the spirits: seeking witchcraft to curse or protect or for hunting prowess, crop stimulants, perhaps lion repellents. The specialists went in for love spells, the control of the sun (causing it to scorch an enemy), control of rain or deadly poisons. Deeper still into shetani (the Devil) were the Mhungi whose clay and human flesh images could propel themselves from place to place.

My priesthood gave me some protection, but life was full of dangers. The great Majitu (giants), the djins (bad fairies?), the wazungu (Europeans), creation of the Devil, were rarely seen. The latter had not hitherto penetrated our area. These were all spoken of with equal fear.

When I was about eight years old, our tribe permitted two wazungu to settle among us. It was the cause of much foreboding, but the problem was solved. They were given ground which included a sacred clan tree, the abode of many demons. All were confident that Bulu (Bull) and his wife would be destroyed in a very short time. But Bulu built his house beside the tree. Mama Bulu had dawa (medicine); there was a small Bulu, too. Visitors returned to report that the wazungu were flourishing. Their God was greater than the demons: in fact the demons had moved.

At the age of fifteen I came to believe in that great God. Now I am truly a priest, a servant of the great high priest, Bwana Yesu Kristo.

Heneri is now a probationer pastor.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

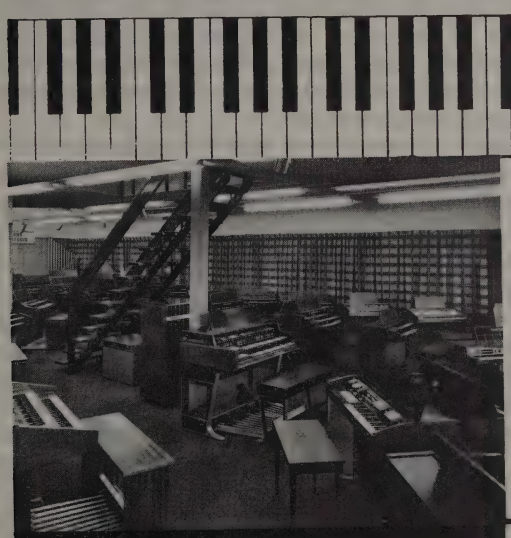
Dear Mr. Walker,

IT was very thrilling to read the tributes to Pastor E.J. Phillips in the EVANGEL and to realise how much we ordinary members owe to his contribution to our beloved Elim Churches. It appears that there is so much that we enjoy now in spiritual blessing among the many facets of the Elim Movement due to his tremendous service. One cannot but feel very thankful for and appreciative of such a life dedicated to the Lord and to His Church.

It seemed rather sad that such appreciation should be shown now that he has passed from this earthly scene, though we believe that he will receive far more greatly than any appreciation than we could show as he meets his Lord.

I think now of our dear friend and ex-Pastor, H. Burton-Haynes, in his illness and retirement. Our hearts go out to him in love and gratitude for his untiring efforts toward our spiritual well-being here in Clacton on Sea. There is so much for which to thank him and his dear wife in what was a lovely ministry, full of grace and compassion. Their deep knowledge of the Word of God, those spiritual truths laid down in our hearts, will be an assurance from time to eternity.

After one day of such ministry, my heart overflowed with gratitude, and the Lord inspired these words, surely not only a tribute to the ministry that day, but to every one who has ministered the Word of God, and brought the peace of God through the Word to bear upon the perplexities of our Christian lives.



I sighed, within my heart perplexed,
I cried, my mind and spirit vexed,
If only – vainly I breathe out my need –
A friend gave answer, yes, a friend indeed.

"Be still and know" – the word came to my soul.
"Be still and know" – God makes thy spirit whole.
Take up thy cross, O weary soul and sad,
Rejoice and pray, and make thy spirit glad.

So, guided by the loving hand of God,
One speaks the Word, the hidden source of food.
O friend, for friend you are indeed,
God bless you for your word in time of need!

Yours sincerely in His love,

Kathleen E.M. Park

Christmas Outline

The Stranger and the Strangers

STRANGE indeed that He who made us all should be a Stranger to the world (John 1:10), to Israel (Jeremiah 14:8), and even to His own family (Psalm 69:8).

1. "There was no room in the inn": The Stranger turned away;

2. "I was a stranger and ye took me in": The Stranger welcomed;

3. "To as many as received Him": The Stranger becomes the Host.

COME in, O come, the door stands open now;
I knew Thy voice, Lord Jesus – it is Thou;
The sun has set long since, the storms begin;
'Tis time for Thee, my Saviour, to come in!

Alas, ill-ordered shows the dreary room,
The household stuff lies heaped amidst the gloom,
The table empty stands, the couch undressed;
Ah, what a welcome for the Eternal Guest!

I seek no more to alter things or mend
Before the coming of so great a Friend;
All were at best unseemly and 'twere ill
Beyond all else to keep Thee waiting still.

Come, not to find, but make this troubled heart
A dwelling worthy of Thee as Thou art;
To chase the gloom, the terror, and the sin;
Come, all Thyself, yea, come, Lord Jesus, in!

Handley C. Moule

"THE human heart", said Father Maillard, "is a wayside inn, but the inn is nothing and less than nothing without the Guest. To be perfectly equipped, therefore, the inn needs three serving maids. The office of the first, whose name is Prayer, is to go out and invite the divine Guest to enter. The duty of the second, whose name is Obedience, is to open wide the door at His approach, that He may enter freely and find a sincere and hearty welcome. The province of the third, whose name is Peace, is to receive Him joyfully and make Him feel at home."

TO LOOK is to receive Him with the eyes. To HEAR is to receive Him with the ears. To TAKE is to receive Him with the hands. To TASTE is to receive Him with the mouth. To COME is to receive Him with the feet. To TRUST is to receive Him with the heart. To CHOOSE Him is to receive Him with the will.

From T. H. Stevenson

READING The European Herald, I was interested in Pastor George Canty's account of his preaching in several Assemblies of God in France and his acknowledgement of the place that the name of the late Douglas Scott holds among the French people, a name that is a key to open doors even today. Before any family relationship arose, I had known Douglas Scott for considerable years in his brief visits to London while I ministered in his home church. When his wife and he felt called to France no financial backing was desired, as they stepped out on truly faith lines, pioneering meetings without even public collections. There were 489 churches in France in 1972 with attendances of more than 40,000 beside the fact of the Gypsy Pentecostal churches with 10,000 baptised adult members, all in fellowship with the Movement which Douglas Scott pioneered.

I have written as above really because today I have concluded reading an absorbing thesis on The History of the Pentecostal Movement in France, a dissertation as yet unpublished, but approved by Texas Tech University for a degree of Doctor of Philosophy conferred upon George Raynor Stott, B.A., M.A. It is a work of thorough research and, apart from a separate section devoted to Douglas Scott, the name is constantly recurring throughout the large volume. Beloved by French Pentecostalists since the early 'thirties, ninety per cent of the members are converted Roman Catholics. The recognised pioneer by the French believers, Douglas Scott led the work from its earliest days to be entirely independent of any financial assistance from other countries and he himself refused to take any recognised office, though his advice was ever sought after. He had one mission; to be an evangelist. I trust that the desire expressed through other channels by G.R. Stott will be realised - to write the biography of Douglas Scott, a brother deceased but "whose works do follow". The story in detail would inspire ministers of earlier days, the younger ministers, and the whole Pentecostal fellowship.

"Come Together"

I WAS not able to attend one of the great "Come Together" gatherings held during the autumn in nine centres throughout Britain, but I was thrilled to learn of the blessing and uplift these praise services afforded. Jimmy and Carol Owens composed this simple yet inspiring gospel musical. Their aim was to provide young people with the opportunity to lead an experiment in worship and to foster unity as the whole church was invited to worship and minister together. People are encouraged to be real in sharing their feelings and their needs with the Lord and with one another. The emphasis is on fellowship, to demonstrate "the unfeigned love of the brethren", and to encourage all believers to observe God's standards of holiness and discipleship.

That God's approval has been placed upon this endeavour is evident from the following incident reported by Jean Darnell which took place during the "Come Together" festival in Liverpool: "There was an interval when the audience was encouraged to pray for each other's personal needs to be met. Groups of people clustered with arms around each other praying all over the packed Central Hall. A diminutive, sad-faced Asian lady met me in the aisle asking, 'Could you pray for my husband to get a job? We've come from Uganda. We've lost everything and we have nothing'. Her large brown eyes filled with tears. 'I've no home. My husband cannot find work - our children ...' she broke off. Although she was reluctant and bashful, she agreed to allow me to share the request with Jimmy Owens, who in turn asked more than 2,000 people to pray. They did more than that – they gave over £300 to this needy family. Most exciting was to see a returned missionary from Uganda with her arms round her new friend saying, 'My husband and I drove up and down the streets looking for a family from Uganda to help and we couldn't find anyone. Tonight the Lord has answered our prayers".

At the Belfast "Come Together" a choir member had this to say: "It was really something to see the soldiers lay down their guns to raise their hands to praise the Lord. Once or twice I heard one say over his walkie-talkie, 'Situation here under control'! Praise God for the moving of His Spirit and I can add my testimony to the reality of blessing received even from the "Come Together" record which we have played and played in our home. Incidentally, our dear Elim missionaries, Pastor and Mrs. David Mills, spent their last evening before sailing away from these shores in our home and we listened to the record. Its music was such a sweet benediction to us all.

There is a growing movement today amongst the neo-Pentecostals towards what is termed "Body ministry", in other words, for believers to set aside their customary role as observers and to participate in active worship and ministry. I believe that we so-called "old-time" Pentecostals should be willing and humble enough to profit spiritually from a genuine leading of the Holy Spirit towards simple New Testament worship. Our British temperament tends towards formality and we must protect the freedom of the Spirit, the spontaneity of worship which charmed our hearts in the early days. It will do us all good to read again 1 Corinthians 12 and check our attitudes regarding worship and fellowship. Do we only lead in prayer when asked to do so? Do we sit nice and tight in our special seats, not speaking unless spoken to? When we come together is our aim to get or to give? The Christian empowered by the Holy Spirit who gives in prayer, praise and caring is a blessing to the local church, a joy to the Pastor's heart and is correctly functioning in the body of Christ. All of which is so beautifully expressed in the following solo rendered in this musical.

God forgave my sin in Jesus' name,
I've been born again in Jesus' name.
And in Jesus' name I come to you,
To share His love as He told me to.

He said, "Freely, freely you have received,
Freely, freely give.
Go in My name and because you believe,
Others will know that I live.

rehearsal and word of prayer in the minibus, and we were on. By the dim Gaz light we could see our very mixed audience. God's strength was made perfect in our weakness; following singing, testimonies, and a "Revolutions" message by Dave Palmer, Teen Challenge leader Daniel lovingly made an appeal, to which several people responded. Afterwards we were made very welcome in the spacious apartments of Teen College workers Auguste and Charlotte.

Our last meeting was at the evangelical church at Gagny, east of Paris. Despite a crochety piano, our music was well received. At the end of the meeting, there was no rush to put the kettle on, but the Pastor, Paul Skovagsa, called the congregation to prayer for about half-an-hour, to let the message sink in. The prayers were in earnest and we discovered that this was one of the many French churches for which the label "Evangelical" really means Pentecostal. Then refreshments, farewells, and the small-hours haul back to Calais, during which Vic Anderson rendered commendable service in a four-hour non-stop conversation-cum-monologue to keep driver John Barton awake.

This was the first E.B.C. overseas ministry trip for over ten years and it is hoped that it will be the first of a series. Those of us who took part praise God for visible fruit and a broadened vision. We feel that greater things may yet result from contacts made during the week,

BOOK REVIEW

Like a mighty Wind, by Mel Tari. Published by Coverdale House Publishers Limited, price 50p, postage and packing 7p extra.

THIS book retells many of the remarkable miracles witnessed during the Indonesian Revival. For many Pentecostals, ONE miracle during a life-time is tremendous. Such a position shows how far removed "average" Christianity has become from God's Word and will. The central message of this challenging book is that we have gone away from a simple trust in the Bible and allowed our Christianity to be dominated by our minds instead of our hearts. It is a remarkably human story, for even after seeing many mighty miracles – including the dead raised to life – the author found it difficult to trust God in new situations.

Some may find themselves disagreeing with the teaching about tongues and the Baptism in the Holy Spirit. The explanation of a balanced Christian life, however, is excellent.

The cover of the book is most unfortunate. It gave the impression that this was a children's book until I realised its contents. There are a certain amount of repetition and some printing errors, but all these become secondary in the light of the book's message that God is alive and working today as He did in Bible times, in response to faith which believes God even against circumstances and physical evidences to the contrary. Every Christian should read it.

TRUE Christians are always keen to read the Bible and to pray at the bedsides of the sick, but it is wise to ask patients, if they are strangers, if they would like this ministry. Some people are embarrassed; inconsiderate action can prejudice future opportunities of ministering to them. If patients decline the offer of prayer, good, well-chosen Christian literature can be left with the sincere promise of prayer at the prayer meetings. It is good to tell them the days and the times of prayer meetings so that they can remember that prayer is being offered for them and possibly join in.

Ward services are very helpful to most patients. These must be well planned, organised and rehearsed. Subjects must be carefully, prayerfully chosen. A hospital is not the best place for sermons on such subjects as death, hell and judgment. Ministers are the best persons to liaise with hospital authorities for permission for young people to conduct ward services.

The following method and programme will help to involve all the young people (including the Sunday school). Prepare a service on tape lasting twenty minutes or so. These can include items from each department of the church. Ensure that all the hymns are well known. The convener introduces each hymn with a suitable statement (but no "waffling" please). Testimonies, Bible readings and a short address complete the service. Make sure the service has a theme - and keep to it! One church adopted this method and used titles like "God cares for you" and "God is my strength". The titles were placed at the head of octavo-sized, four-page, duplicated leaflets in pale yellow, blue or green. Under the title was the statement: "A recorded programme of Hymns and Meditations". Then it said who they were, and finally at the bottom it read, "Please join in the singing if possible, and keep the programme as a souvenir of our visit". On the inside of the printed leaflet was the programme according to the tape-recording. The hymns and Bible readings were printed in full and the names of each participator recorded. Three or four people came to the hospital with the equipment - a tape-recorder, extension loud-speaker, reels of cable, etc. Each patient was presented with a programme. After the service, as the equipment was being collected, one or two workers went round the ward with gospel literature.

A ward programme presented with such efficiency cannot but impress the patients.

Church-centred Social Evangelism

Thousands of young people about to leave school wonder about their future. They need guidance in their choices of careers. The local church can provide a service for youth and thus bring them into contact with the church.

1. A Careers' Weekend

Special workshops can be set up and specialists from various fields be invited to advise young people. Exhibition stands can provide visual insights into professions and occupations. Many pictures and photographs can be obtained from local and national newspapers. They will certainly give such a project plenty of publicity. The Youth Employment Officer is often most helpful and may offer to attend to supervise. It is sensible to cover professions and vocations which provide opportunity for Christian service, e.g. nursing, the probation service, welfare work, etc.

TESTIMONY TIME

TWO days prior to the youth weekend at Chigwell, I had the 'flu. Both my ears ached and my doctor said that I had fluid behind the ear-drums. He prescribed tablets to be taken four times a day. After taking only a few of the tablets, I felt so ill that I could not take any more. I wondered if I would be well enough to go to Chigwell. After praying about it, I decided to go. On the following day Pastors Cowdery, Hill and Harrison laid hands on me and prayed for me. While I was being prayed for, I felt the power of the Lord go through my body. A feeling of pins and needles penetrated my ear-drums. We had a wonderful weekend of blessing. We were all sorry to have to leave on the Sunday. Two days after returning home I again visited my doctor and, after a thorough examination of my ears, he told me that I had no trace of any fluid whatsoever and he said that he could not understand how the fluid and inflammation had cleared up so quickly. "To God be the glory great things He hath done."

Scripture Union Portions

Notes by Gerald L.W. Ladlow

Monday, December 10th Ezekiel 36:16-38

"I will take you from among the heathen. . . I will cleanse you. . . a new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you" (vv.24-26).

THE miracle of this century has been the regathering of the Jews to Palestine and the rebirth of the nation of Israel. How wonderfully God has fulfilled this ancient prophecy. However, the conduct of the nation reveals that material prosperity has not resulted in spiritual revival. God alone can give a new heart and a new spirit. Despite the affluence of today the Church as a whole is spiritually poor. Pray that God will grant a spiritual renewal.

Tuesday, December 11th Ezekiel 37:1-14

"So I prophesied as he commanded me, and breath came into them, and they lived" (v.10).

A VALLEY of dry bones was not a very inspiring congregation for a prophet to address. Faith in the word of God resulted in obedience to the Divine command even though it seemed ridiculous and produced an outstanding miracle. The quickening breath of the Holy Spirit will always follow faith and obedience no matter how unpromising the circumstances. God challenges us in this day of spiritual deadness: "Can these dry bones live?". We have the ability to prove that they can!

Wednesday, December 12th Ezekiel 37:15-28

"And I will make them one nation" (v.22); "I will be their God, and they shall be My people" (v.27).

THE fulness of God's blessing is promised to the nation when all divisions have gone and they are a united people. Only to a united nation can He fully manifest His deity and only by this unity can they be acknowledged as His children. Unity among any company professing to belong to Him is always a prerequisite for blessing (see Psalm 133). Upon those who were together with one accord the Holy Spirit fell (Acts 2:1-4). Our Lord prayed for this unity in John 17:20,21: "that the world may know that Thou hast loved them . . . as Thou hast loved Me", v.23.

Thursday, December 13th Ezekiel 38:1-16

"It shall also come to pass. . . thou shalt think an evil thought: And thou shalt say, I will go up to the land of unwalled villages" (vv. 10,11).

HERE is the amazing fact of God's omniscience. The message of the prophet is concerned with the latter years of this dispensation when Israel has been regathered in the land. Not only does God reveal who their enemies will be, but also the very thoughts that will fill their minds and the strategy that they will adopt. David said, "Thou understandest my thought afar off" (Psalm 139:2) and "The Lord knoweth the thoughts of man" (Psalm 94:11). No wonder, then, that he can confidently say, "In God I have put my trust; I will not fear what flesh can do unto me" (Psalm 56:4).

Friday, December 14th Ezekiel 39:17-29

"Neither will I hide My face any more from them" (v.29).

THIS grand promise assures the nation of Israel that one day she will be able to discern the face of God and recognise His dealings through the tragic years of history (v.28). The day of revelation follows her regeneration when she has received the new heart and the new spirit. Jesus said, "The pure in heart shall see God", so the born-again soul can recognise the over-ruling providence and purposes of God in human affairs.

Saturday, December 15th Ezekiel 43:1-12

"His voice was like the voice of many waters" (v.2).

BOTH Ezekiel and John (Revelation 1:15), having listened to the music and the majesty of His voice, describe it in this way: many waters, yet one voice, a perfect blending of differing tones. "Long ago God spoke in many different ways to our fathers through the prophets, telling them little by little about His plans. But now in these days he has spoken through His Son" (Hebrews 1:1, Living Bible). "The waters have come from the hills of long ago in single streams, all their courses bent toward Him and in Him they mingle and merge" (Campbell Morgan). God fully expresses himself in Jesus: "My beloved Son, hear ye Him".

Sunday, December 16th Ezekiel 47:1-12

"Every thing shall live whither the river cometh" (v.9).

A LIFE-GIVING river flowing from the house of God: what a picture this is of the purpose of the Church in the midst of a dying world! The Church is said to be "the temple of the living God", "a habitation of God through the Spirit". A truly Pentecostal church not only "worships God in the spirit", but is the channel through which the river of His grace and blessing can flow to those who are dead in sin. Jesus said, "He that believeth on Me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water".

"I protest!"

A GARAGE manager in Erdington, Birmingham, has been having a number of topless girls on his forecourt and a feature on this, with a photograph, was in the Birmingham Evening Mail.

Here are the contents of a letter addressed to the manager by Ken Smith, Pastor of our Erdington Church:

"I read of your sales gimmick in the press and I have written to the press protesting, and I feel that I ought to let you know. As I pointed out in my letter, a woman walking down Tyburn Road 'topless' would either be certified or prosecuted for indecency and I consider that it ought to apply in this situation, for a petrol station forecourt is equally public.

"You may disregard a letter of protest from a Christian minister, but it is still my duty to let you know our convictions. I trust that you will read the enclosed tracts and reconsider your action. I also enclose a tract for the young ladies concerned and trust that you will pass them on".

Mr. Smith also wrote to the Birmingham Mail, Post, B.B.C. and A.T.V.:

"I must protest! How far must one go in this competitive age to sell one's wares? Topless now – what next? I would consider that if a woman went down Tyburn Road in a topless condition, she would either be certified or prosecuted for indecency, and surely the forecourt of a petrol station is as public as the public highway, where children and teenagers are likely to pass. When my local garage has stopped gift offers because of the petrol crisis, it seems strange that another has to go 'topless' to sell it.

"One would consider it the duty of the local Watch Committee, or other body, to take the matter further, or else the rot will spread. No wonder ours is a third-rate nation, for this is an evidence of moral and spiritual rottenness. Jesus Christ said of His followers that they are the salt of the earth and the light of the world, and they are sorely needed in the darkness and corruption of a sin-sick, sex-sodden, sophisticated society. Everyone knows that you do not need a lot of salt when cooking, if the salt does its job.

"Christians may be, as they always have been, a minority, but we have a social concern and conscience that must be expressed. However discreetly taken, the photograph in the press is a sad reflection that the press has followed the trend rather than helping to maintain moral standards. I was in journalism over twenty years ago, though now still in my forties, and it would never have been printed then. It would have been better left for the publications bought for that type of material than a respected newspaper which enters thousands of decent Midlands homes.

"I may be dubbed a Puritan for this protest, but if so, I am proud to be thus named. Many may get their petrol at this garage, but I trust that many more will decline, for in selling petrol in this manner, all concerned are selling their souls.

"When good men do nothing, evil men flourish".

FIGHT EVIL WITH A WILL!

This is the Last Will and Testament

Do not leave the distribution of your estate to chance. Here are some reasons why you should make a will:

1. It prevents misunderstanding over your intentions about your estate.
2. It provides opportunity for you to continue to exercise Christian stewardship.
3. It helps to avoid heavy expenses, which can sometimes drain away valuable assets.
4. It gives you opportunity to designate who shall benefit from your possessions.

You can show your gratitude for blessings received and also continue the fight against evil by making a gift to the Elim work in your will.

The following wording can be incorporated in a will or codicil:

I bequeath to the Elim Pentecostal Church, of 117 St. George's Road, Cheltenham, Glos, the sum of £ .... free of duty for the general purpose of its work, and I declare that the receipt of the Secretary-General for the time being shall be a good discharge for the said legacy.

Is it not better to know that your possessions will be used for the Lord's work rather than be spent by those who have never honoured or revered His name?

"PRECIOUS souls" is an expression which awakens many memories. Among my early recollections when my family came into Elim in the 'thirties was the use of this very phrase in prayer and in ministry. A meeting could not go by without a reference to it. No testimony was complete unless it included it. No prayer was normal which did not contain a fervent request for their salvation.

"Precious souls" — I wonder how the description originated? It is very revealing. Things that are precious are valued, costly, worth taking pains over. There is no quick, slick gimmick about this.

I don't seem to hear it so frequently now. Chatting to a colleague only the other day, we compared notes and we both felt that this phrase was falling into disuse, hardly ever on the lips of young people and less included in the intercessions even of older folk.

The motive and desire were right, however. The message of Ezekiel and the watchman ("But their blood will I require. . .") should not be lost upon us.

A commentator, speaking of a space probe now nearing one of the planets, remarked that he would be a brave man who would undertake the very journey to the planet (which took two years for the unmanned probe), apart from the fact that he could not stand on the surface of the planet because of the tremendous gravitational pull, even if there was a surface, as we understand it. It certainly sounded out of this world!.

When you think of the Saviour coming to this earth, however, the difference between what we must call, for want of a better description, His normal environment and this sin-cursed earth must have been all the more startling. "A Saviour which is Christ the Lord", they carolled at His birth, but the necessary aftermath was, "My God, My God, why hast ThouforsakenMe?". Bethlehem was but the first step, as regards Christ's earthly life, to Calvary.

"Precious souls" indeed, for they cost His precious blood.

May God's blessing rest upon you and yours in all your Christmas preparations. Rejoice and be glad, but don't forget.

"Lead me to some soul today" is a moving chorus in our Elim Choruses.

It would do us all good to read the words frequently.

Church Reports

BURTON UPON TRENT Pastor: D.C. Crawford

ON October 14th after a long illness Frederick William Shipley passed into the presence of his Maker. He was a founder-member and the Secretary of the Burton Church, much loved by all who knew him and held in high esteem by all in the Church. I knew him for forty-eight years and he was a great comfort to many who were seeking to find the peace and joy which he had in Jesus. Often in the past years I have known him to be at Church lighting fires before going to work and in the evening on his way home to call and tend to any job that needed doing. He never missed a meeting whatever the weather and, although of retiring nature, he was ever at hand to help when needed. This brother will be a great loss to our Church.

R.T. WELHAM

CRUSADING AT PRESTON

THE Assembly at Preston has just concluded a three-week crusade conducted by Pastor Alex Tee. Over the years, this old-established Assembly has witnessed many times of revival blessing and the recent weeks have been another memorable chapter in the life and work of the Assembly. The accent on Bible prophecy created great interest as the start of the crusade coincided with the opening of hostilities in the Middle East. On the first night about thirty decisions for Christ were recorded and the number reached over 150.

Phase 1 of the Crusade began twelve months ago when the people began to pray and to seek the Lord and, as the time drew near, prayer intensified. God has answered prayer! He always does. The Crusade itself formed phase 2 and now we are in phase 3 - the follow-up.

The blessing also seems to have been threefold. Sinners have been converted, the sick have spoken gratefully of help and healing and many saints have received a new vision and impetus for God.

There is the more sombre side, of course, when it is considered that 33,000 houses in the town were visited with invitations. Many were completely indifferent and unmoved - a sign surely of the great apostasy that is enveloping our land. Jesus is coming soon!

The Assembly records its gratitude to God for His gracious blessing and will never forget the fearless, forthright preaching of the evangelist.

T.A. BILLSBOROUGH (Pastor)

IPSWICH Pastor: A.S.F. Horne

WE praise God for the audio-visual opportunity to spread the gospel in song at the local covered market. We are grateful to Mr. Cyril W. Smith of Swindon for having given up his weekend to enable this project to be accomplished. We commenced on Thursday night when we saw highlights of the 1973 Annual and Missionary Conferences by means of our brother's video-tape recordings. On Friday night the Ipswich Assembly members were "videotaped". This was shown on T.V. at the E.W.M.A. stall at the Market. This caused great interest among many. It was especially thrilling to hear some humming or singing the catchy old-time gospel favourites which we had recorded and to see the excitement when familiar faces of our Elim members were recognised on the screen! One was even heard to wonder if the recording had been done by the B.B.C. – all credit to our Brother Smith who worked so hard to achieve this perfection! Opportunities were taken both by means of tape recordings and personal invitations to shoppers to see the Billy Graham film, "The Shadow of the Boomerang" on Saturday night. Our Sunday night gospel service was televised live outside the Church as a witness to passers-by. Our total "takings" at the Market amounted to £22.43.

ELVYNA BLAKE

SPRINGBOURNE, Bournemouth Pastor: J. Osman

WE were extremely blessed by the recent visit of Mr. and Mrs. C.W. Smith of Swindon. Mr. Smith has video taped many of the highlights of the year, including Easter Monday meetings, the Annual Conference and the Missionary Conference. The quality of the recordings was excellent. We were particularly interested to see the Springbourne Choir singing at Trafalgar Square, an item specially inserted for our benefit. Mrs. Smith sang most acceptably while tapes were being changed.

Your Church would enjoy a visit from this dedicated couple. As indicated by Pastor Ron Jones in a recent article in the EVANGEL, all the proceeds go to the Evangelistic Fund. Our brother is to be highly commended, for he undertakes this work entirely without charge. God bless him! We shall look to another visit next year with keen anticipation.

West of England Presbytery Children's Rally

AS we alighted from the Hereford coach we saw a notice: "We are not closing down, we are expanding". Something was obviously happening in and around the Bristol Church. Boys and girls and grown-ups rapidly assembled for this great Children's rally. A number of Churches was represented and the City Temple was chock-a-block. Pastor J.B.D. Ritchie convened the afternoon meeting admirably. What action and enthusiasm there were as everyone sang the chorus, "I'm inright, outright, upright, downright happy all the time". A number of Sunday schools participated. Uncle Maurice gave an interesting talk on how the penicillin capsule fights disease and applied the gospel in a unique way.

Tea and squash were served. Thank you ever so much Pastor and Mrs. Jones and helpers, for making us so much at home.

Everyone awaited the evening meeting with great anticipation. Pastor R. Jones immediately helped everyone to relax as he announced the chorus, "I'm too young to march with the infantry". All stood, and faces were aglow, including the convener's! After prayer, a number of items was rendered by various Sunday schools. An American friend thrilled us all as he played the hymn, "Onward, Christian Soldiers". A puppet display with a difference enhanced the meeting. We thank our American friends. Uncle Maurice talked about "Shining for Jesus". What excitement there was as he demonstrated with a torch. A great moment arrived when we sang, "Come into my heart, Lord Jesus".

ROBERT GRIFFITHS

NORWICH Pastor: L. Reeves

"THE best harvest thanksgiving ever held in Norwich," was the comment of many. The children in the afternoon service and older scholars in the evening services really excelled themselves. A real spiritual blessing and crowded congregations added to a truly wonderful day. About ninety parcels were given away afterwards to the sick, needy and aged. Something like Colin Rogers and David Townsend who recently entered Elim Bible College from our Norwich Church.

over 400 gifts were received, with fruit, vegetables, etc., being a wonderful extra. We give grateful thanks to God and to the whole-hearted support of numerous helpers.

Two of our young men, Colin Rogers and David Townsend recently left us to enter Elim Bible College. They will be sadly missed. Both are deeply spiritual boys and were always present in the prayer meetings and Bible studies and were most active in every outreach for the Lord. A farewell supper was arranged and gifts from every department were presented to them. We pray that our severe loss will be a great gain in the work of the Lord.

A nursery school has been opened, running at present on Monday and Tuesday mornings, to alleviate pressure on overworked mothers. The aim is to introduce these children to the Sunday school and the parents to the church. There has already been some success in this.

L. REEVES

SOUTHEND ON SEA Pastor: A. Nicolson

AT our Sunday School's harvest festival, the display centred round the themes, "The field is the world" and "The harvest is great". The evening service was convened by the Superintendent, Mr. P. Roast. Special items were rendered by the children, including a duet for piano and drums, musical exercises by the timbrel groups, children of other lands by the Primary Department, and a delightful sketch on the four points of the compass arranged as N.E.W.S.. The gospel message was given with the aid of a flannelgraph. An appeal was made for flannelgraphs for use on the Guyana field on behalf of Pastor and Mrs. McInnes. The Lord's people responded most generously.

The following weekend we celebrated the forty-seventh anniversary of the opening of our Church. We were challenged and encouraged through the ministry of Pastor J. McBurney. His ministry was supported by the Lifeline musical group. On the Saturday a late night special was directed to youth. As we considered God's goodness throughout the past years, we rejoiced to be reminded that "Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, and today and for ever".

Two film nights brought a very different challenge to us. As we watched "To Russia with love" and "The Chinese are coming" we were humbled as we recognised our great privileges in a land where we are free to worship God, to own Bibles and other Scriptural reference books and to attend church services. The evident joy, even to tears, brought to our brethren behind the Iron and Bamboo curtains through receiving their own copies of the Scriptures, even in part, was very touching.

The month closed with a festival of song given by the London Crusader Choir with Pastor D.B. Gray, the Westcliff and District Male Voice Praise under their conductor Mr. E. Gauden, solos by Mrs. Thelma Beacham and a solo by Pastor W.M.E. Plowright. About 700 people gathered in the Clifftown United Reformed Church (kindly loaned). All the singing items were delightfully rendered. The service was concluded with a direct gospel message by Pastor Plowright. The London Crusader Choir and Pastor Plowright stayed to minister in our own Church throughout Sunday. The time spent around the Lord's Table was particularly blessed and much appreciated by Choir and congregation alike. Pastor Plowright gave a thought-provoking message. At the evening service items by the Choir, including a solo and testimony, and a solo by Pastor Plowright could be expressed in the title "How excellent is Thy name in all the earth." Every part of the service united with the final message to bring a challenge to full dedication or to an initial surrender.

READING Pastor: F. Shadlock

OVER the past few months we have been experiencing the blessing of God on our Sunday morning and Tuesday evening services particularly.

At our Pastor's fifth anniversary services, Pastor F.F. Frost was the preacher. His ministry was a real blessing.

We were privileged to welcome Pastor David G. Hathaway for a weekend. We were challenged as he told us of his experience with God during his imprisonment and how many of the nationals were in prison because of their faith in Christ.

It was a real joy to welcome Pastor and Mrs. L. Wigglesworth and Miss Joan Caudell for our missionary weekend. Many pictures and exhibits were displayed around the Church and we were greatly encouraged to hear of the work that God is doing through our missionaries. We were shown slides of the work in Rhodesia and Ghana and we were challenged to believe God in a more positive way to supply the needs of the field. The Sunday evening service had a real missionary flavour when a number of ladies appeared from the vestry dressed in saris etc. We thank God for those who gave time to come and take these special services for us and who brought such a rich blessing.

At our harvest thanksgiving services it was a joy to see again how God fulfilled His Word (Genesis 8:22). We had a great contribution from our Sunday school and branch Sunday school.

Another cause of praise is the big increase in our offerings so that we are able to carry out alterations and repairs to the Church.

God is blessing in a very real way: to Him be all the praise and glory!

SALFORD Pastor: A. Lambie

AT a united baptismal service at Stockport, six of the candidates were from our Salford Church. They were baptised by Pastor Lambie. The youngest was from our Sunday School and Junior Crusader Branch. Two were mother and daughter and the others have joined us from Methodist and Anglican Churches. This is the third batch of baptismal candidates in the last twelve months or so.

The rally at Stockport on the occasion of the Church anniversary is one of many in which we have shared fellowship on a reciprocal basis. On this occasion the church was packed, with visitors coming from Glossop, Chorlton-cum-Hardy, and other neighbouring assemblies.

News is still awaited, after a long delay, of the availability of the site for our new church so that building might commence.

The Song of the Ages

by A. S. F. Horne, Pastor of our Ipswich Church

MANY popular songs are soon forgotten, but the angels' song has come down to us and tells of the most wonderful Gift ever bestowed upon man.

It is expressed in two brief phrases that have shone down the ages like a mass of neon lights shining in the city stores during Christmas week. They are clear, golden lights declaring the wealth of the goods within. The song of the angels came from heaven. "Suddenly a great army of heaven's angels appeared with the angel, singing praises to God – Glory to God in the highest heaven and peace on earth to man with whom He is pleased" (Luke 2:13, 14). "God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten (unique) Son, that whoever believes in (trusts, clings to, relies on) Him shall not perish (come to destruction, be lost), but have eternal life" (John 3:16).

It is the duty and privilege of each church and of every believer to make known to all the world the news of this great gospel. The peace which Jesus Christ brings is not only the ideal, but the goal of His mission on earth, expressed in the new heaven and the new earth, the city of God, toward which the world is rapidly moving.

Peace on earth is the angels' song. It is a strange song in the storm of conflict, amid the noise of wars, the confused clashing of men and ideas, and the revelations of wrong, never so manifest as today.

Longfellow wrote:

I heard the bells on Christmas Day
Their old, familiar carols play,
And wild and sweet
The words repeat
Of "Peace on earth, Goodwill to men"
And thought how, as the day had come,
The belfries of all Christendom
Had rolled along
The unbroken song
Of 'Peace on earth, Goodwill to men'.
Then from each black, accursed mouth
The cannon thundered on the South
And with the sound
The carols drowned
Of "Peace on earth, Goodwill to men",
And in despair I bowed my head,
"There is no peace on earth", I said;
And mocks the song
Of "Peace on earth, Goodwill to men".
But the vision of a brighter day came,
And light and hope and faith
Then pealed the bells more loud and deep;
God is not dead: nor doth He sleep!
The wrong shall fail
The Right prevail,
With "Peace on earth, Goodwill to men".

Peace is not stagnation, nor is it contentment with evil. Peace is not sleep over a volcano and it does not mean death. To cover sin is not peace. To fight wrong, crime and sin in order to destroy it, this is the sign of coming peace, the peace of victory and righteousness and of heaven. To work for peace and goodwill is the best return one can make for God's Gift of His Son. It is not only our duty, but the test and proof that we are Christ's disciples and filled with the Spirit.

Christmas is not only a time for receiving, but also for giving. It is the expression of His Spirit. All can give. There is no one so far, so unworthy, so feeble, so lonely, but there is something that he can give to express God's goodwill to man. Deeds of kindness, expressions of sympathy, words of love and cheer and hope and courage: "Such as I have give I thee". Peter and John gave healing in Jesus' name. Barnabas, the noble-hearted rich man, gave of his possessions. We do not hear that Jesus gave money, but He gave Himself, His time, His healing, days of toil and His life. The widow's two mites were a great gift. A rich man's two mites amount to nothing. It is the giving of our hearts, endeavours, devotion, that makes life worth living. It is the soul of heaven.

A hero or a patriot is honoured and admired because he gave his best at the greatest cost for a noble cause or the good of man. A miser is despised by all because he is selfish and selfishness is mean and unworthy. Receiving, whether from God or man, unaccompanied by giving loses its power. "Glory to God in the highest" must ever accompany His "peace and goodwill to all mankind".

Selfishness cloys, receiving alone brings weariness, but the spirit of giving never cloys. It is like the heavenly bird song described by Trench in his poem of the Monk and the Bird. The monk feared that the joys of heaven might bring weariness in eternity, as here "the sweetest things soon cloy", but, while he listened to the heavenly song, their generation seemed but an hour, and left only one dread:

Lest an eternity should not suffice
To take the measure, and the breadth and height
Of what there is reserved in Paradise
Its ever new delight.

The peace which the angels proclaimed, which Jesus promised, is not merely an ideal set high in the heavens, but a goal to be reached on earth. Through the storm we hear the song of peace. Through the conflicts and wrongs of the ages we hear the angels sing:

Beneath the angels' strain have rolled
Two thousand years of wrong,
O hush the noise, ye men of strife,
And hear the angels' song.

Today come trials, burdens, the sorrows of life, but we know that there is a better time coming and we hear the voice of the inspired Apostle: "He that spared not His own Son. . .how shall He not with Him freely give us all things?". "It is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom", but it was man's bad pleasure to reject the King and kill the Prince of life.

Glory to God in the Highest! – He is alive and is coming to bring "Peace on earth and goodwill to men"!

The perfect Balance

1 John 1:9

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

"LET'S play shop," said Jenny.

"Good idea!" her friends agreed.

Carol placed her toy scales at one end of the wall while Betty arranged some empty cans and packets along the top.

"I will be the shopkeeper," Carol announced, "and you can be my assistants."

Brian and Pete rode by on their scooters. "What are you playing?" they demanded.

"Shop," said Betty. "Will you be customers and buy something from us?"

"Alright," said Brian. "Please may I have a cabbage?".

Carol pulled a small clump of grass and placed it on the scales. "Six pence, please," she said.

Brian handed over six leaves. "Thank you very much," he said.

"This is fun!" Jenny exclaimed. "You buy something now, Pete."

"Two pounds of potatoes, please."

Carol collected a handful of small stones and placed them on the scales. "Four pence, please," she requested.

"I shall not pay you!" Pete declared.

"Why not?" Carol asked.

"Because you have not given me the correct weight. You have weighed only one pound of stones, er. . . I mean potatoes, yet you expect me to pay for two pounds! I will not buy from you again."

"Don't be silly," Carol told him. "It's only a game".

"Then play fair," said Pete, "and weigh the right amount, otherwise I will not play with you."

Another word for "scales" is "balances". The Bible tells us that, when we are weighed in the balances of God's justice, He will find us wanting if we have sin in our hearts. God must always punish sin, but, because He loves us and wants us to be saved from judgment, He sent His only Son to the cross to suffer the penalty for us. God's justice is fair and, since He must always punish the guilty, so, too, He will reward those who love Him and trust Him for salvation. The reward is eternal life and all the blessings of the Glory Land.

On Truth

by James T. Bradley, Secretary-General

THE great question of Pilate to the Lord Jesus Christ, "What is Truth?" largely dismissed out of hand as if there were no valid reply, was the subject of the keenest philosophical debate at that time, a most critical period in human history. Our use of the very word "critical" reminds us that our Lord, only about five days before Pilate uttered this famous question, used the very word from which our word "critical" derives. It was He who stated that a world crisis of unique proportions was immediate in the words, "Now is the judgment of this world. . ." (John 12:31). The word "judgment" is "krisis", exactly our word "crisis", with its definition "a turning point in any affair of importance".

Subsequent history has shown the Cross to have been a national turning point for the Jews, a world turning point for all mankind, a turning point for every community and individual who comes within the orbit of the preaching of the Cross.

The quite startling fact is that He of whom Pilate asked the question, "What is Truth?" supplies the answer, nay more, He is the answer! He also reveals the custodian of Truth and the character of Truth.

Human experience demonstrates that it is beyond the wit of man to discover Truth. He can know only about Truth, he cannot know it; hence the proliferation of theories on every conceivable aspect of Truth: religion, politics, physics, creation, human society.

We discover facts and absorb knowledge – the truth of things, however, eludes us. In fact it appears to be a commonplace of epistemology – the science of knowing – today, that the truth of any proposition cannot be established, only its falsity. If this is the case, it puts the Christian, or perhaps one should say the Church of Jesus Christ, in an impregnable position. Of course it has always been there – "Upon this rock I will build My church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it" – but one might say it is now demonstrably there.

Professor F.F. Bruce writes, "Let us remember first of all that the truth of the Gospels in the fullest sense cannot be established by intellectual arguments alone". What he writes about the truth of the gospels applies to all truth. Intellectual knowledge is the accumulation of facts by observation, classification and experimentation; truth is the reality behind the knowledge. This latter is beyond the intellect of man to perceive, though it is by no means outside the scope of his experience.

One of the most startling of all statements about truth and, indeed, in the same context about the Church, is the word of the minister of all ministers to a young minister, "that thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself in the house of God, which is the Church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth". In spite of the hollow mockery that this statement may draw from rationalists and their ilk – one can imagine Bertrand Russell's "the Church! The pillar and ground of everything obscurantist and reactionary!" – from a Spirit-born member of the Church of the living God it draws forth a fervent "Hallelujah!". It established Truth in three realms – not in our academic centres, but in God's creation; not in man's brain – but in his spirit; not in theories, but in the assurance of Truth by divine revelation. Hence, as we have so often said, a child of four may receive truth by revelation and know, not only that it is true, but that he knows that he knows it is true, in fact even before he knows his twelve times table. How often have we heard adults testify that they knew that they were saved when they were four to six years old and that they knew that they knew!

Job certainly had received truth when he longed that his words might be written in a book, that they might be carved with an iron chisel and with lead in the rock for ever; but it was certainly not truth that he could ever have found by intellectual research (Job 19:23-27).

The nature of Truth then, in the divine sense of that word, is that it is a living Person and a living Book. "What is Truth?" – "I am the Truth", and, it may well be added, without Him there is no knowing. "What is Truth?" – "Thy Word", says He who is the Truth, "is Truth," and again it may be added, without it there is no knowing – as witness the world's predicament today.

When the Church does not proclaim the living Word of God on His terms and the written Word of God on its terms, it is a betrayer of Truth. The Truth, either living or written, is to be proclaimed, not debated or discussed. They are placed before us for acceptance or rejection, not for discussion; we are brought to an impasse, we cannot evade the responsibility for decision any more than could Pilate; we either accept or reject. Unlike our possible attitudes to merely human events or writings, we cannot be neutral.

Because the Church of the living God is the pillar and ground of Truth, when it does not uphold Truth it becomes the object of divine wrath. In fact its failure to uphold Truth reveals its true nature; if it does not uphold Truth it is not the Church of the living God, whatever may be its outward show or name.

The Church has therefore a threefold responsibility to Truth: to recognise that it is the guardian of "the deposit"; that it has been set apart to proclaim the Truth; that its duty is to believe and to practise the Truth.

To recognise that it is the guardian of the deposit.

The Apostle Paul makes this point when he writes to Timothy. "That good thing which was committed unto thee keep by the Holy Ghost which dwelleth in us" (2 Timothy 1:14).

The Church's greatest tragedy is the denigration by its leadership of both the living Word and the written Word. They have done more than all rationalists to undermine the confidence of men in God and His Word and thus to send souls to hell. The judgment of God is already seen in that the Church has suffered in recent decades its most devastating defeats, but Pentecost has again been raised up by God to restore the shattered fortunes of God's Church, and significantly by a return to the Church's primitive faith in Christ and the Word of God, in other words, by a return to Truth by a resurgence of Pentecost.

The Church has been set apart by God to proclaim the Truth.

While individuals may be set apart for special service, the mission of the Church is that of a proclaimer. Paul's statement: "Woe is unto me if I preach not the Gospel" (1 Corinthians 9:16) should be the Church's. Men apart from Christ will perish and it was that they should not perish that He Himself said that He had been sent by God (John 3:16).

The Church of the living God does its finest work when by its preaching of Truth people are rescued from sin and eternal condemnation.

All the side effects of the gospel, which it is the ever-present temptation of the Church to make its priorities, result from a simple acceptance of Christ as Saviour and Lord of the life. When a person in an instant stops smoking, stops drinking, stops fornicating, stops stealing, stops being a menace to society, by one act of his will in surrendering himself to Jesus Christ, that is social reform par excellence. It may not pander to human pride, but it achieves the finest results.

That its duty is to believe and practise the Truth.

The words of the Church's Lord that faith is the first step to experiencing and knowing Truth present the Church with what must be its only attitude to Truth, viz. acceptance by faith. In answer to the question of the Jews, "What shall we do that we might work the works of God?", Jesus replied, "This is the work of God:" – how they must have waited with bated breath for the next sentence! – "that ye believe on Him whom He hath sent", and Jesus went on to point out that this faith would result in their knowing and experiencing Truth, in the words, "I am the Bread of life, – he that cometh to Me shall never hunger and he that believeth in Me shall never thirst". Their experience of Truth as set forth in the latter part of this verse would confirm the validity of Truth mentioned in the first part, discovered to the faith required by Jesus' answer to the question, "What shall we do that we might work the works of God?" (John 6:28-35).

The practice of Truth

Happy the person, happy the community, that believes that God has spoken in His Word. The apostles of the Lord, one supposes, were they who, above all people, put the Truth that they had learned into practice. They reveal in their writings that they had Truth that covered not only the eternal matters of the soul's salvation, but they had truth about social relationships, marital and family relationships, politics, economics, employee-employer relationships, physical and psychological hygiene – in fact the insoluble problems that we face today would not arise were men to practise Truth. Admittedly many of the Bible tenets are difficult of acceptance, nevertheless the very fact that they are rejected and that society is in its present plight are surely an indication, if not proof, that we have missed the Way. But once again it is incumbent upon each member of the Church of the living God to believe and to practise Truth. God calls individuals today to salvation; He expects us as individuals to accept and practise His precepts.

Truth's Pentecostal expression

Truth cannot be expressed except Pentecost-wise; only the Holy Spirit can reveal Truth, only the Holy Spirit can remove the veil that hides Truth from the unregenerate heart, only the Holy Spirit can open the heart to receive Truth. "The natural (soulish) man receives not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are

Our greatest Need

by John Carter

"O Lord, I have heard Thy speech and was afraid:
O Lord, revive Thy work in the midst of the years, in the midst of the years make known; in wrath remember mercy." (Habakkuk 3:2).

HABAKKUK prophesied just prior to the Babylonian captivity, which was permitted by God to punish His people for their sins. God had revealed to His servant the rod that He would use to chastise the nation. "I will raise up the Chaldeans, that savage and impetuous nation" (1:6), He said, and the judgment was to come in that generation (1:5).

Wickedness abounded on every hand in the land of Judah (v:4) and the prophet made his plea to God to "remember mercy" in His wrath and to revive His work.

1. God's Work today needs REVIVAL

It is God's own work that needs to be revived: "Revive Thy work". The very word "revival" has meaning only where there is life, and so pertains to the people of the Lord. When souls are dead, they cannot be revived; a resurrection is needed in their case. Where there exists any spiritual life, even though it be at a low ebb, there is the possibility of a revival of that life taking place.

Revival should be the normal condition of the Church. It should not be regarded as abnormal, something extraordinary, a condition that can be expected only now and again, once in a while, whenever Providence so decrees.

We learn from Scripture that the Early Church enjoyed continuous revival (Acts 2:42, 47; 5:14; 6:7; 11:21), but the Church has backslidden, and is living below the apostolic standard. This is what Chas. G. Finney wrote on this point: "Suppose a man were to preach to farmers that God is sovereign and will give them a crop only when it pleases Him, and that for them to plough and plant and labour, as if they expected to raise a crop, is very wrong, that it amounts to taking the work out of the hands of God, that it is an interference with His sovereignty, and that there is no connection between the means and the result on which they can depend. Suppose the farmers should believe such a doctrine? Why, they would starve the world to death. . .It has been the devil's most successful means of destroying souls. The connection is as clear in religion as it is when the farmer sows his grain".

It is always God's will to send revival, but there are things that prevent this taking place. Discord and dissension in the assembly hinder God's blessing; an absence of brotherly love and an unforgiving spirit destroy unity and fellowship; a spirit of censoriousness (fault-finding) grieves the Holy Ghost; a niggardly spirit, the withholding of tithes, a love of the world – all these, and other things, can stay the hand of God.

2. REVIVAL is necessarily the work of God

He is the Source of all life – natural and spiritual. Labour as we will, there can be no harvests without His sun and His rain. The prophet is correct therefore in addressing himself to God.

What is revival? It is God manifesting Himself in power; that is why Habakkuk prays to God to "make known" – to make Himself known. In response to his earnest plea, the prophet received a vision of the Holy One coming in majesty and power and glory (v.3,4).

In revival, God works through the agency of His Spirit. This is emphasized in the message delivered to the despondent workers through Zechariah the prophet (Zechariah 4:7). They were told that the rebuilding of the temple would be accomplished and brought to completion "not by might, nor by power, but by My Spirit, saith the Lord". In the vision that accompanied the inspired message, the prophet was shown a golden lampstand, somewhat similar to the one that stood in the Holy Place, but this one had a golden bowl upon the top, from which seven pipes conveyed oil to the seven lamps. Two living olive trees poured their oil into the bowl (or reservoir) through two golden pipes. Thus the lamps were fed with the oil supernaturally, not by human means. The work of God would be accomplished by the constant supply of Holy Ghost power.

The Spirit of God works through the agency of the Word of God. God's Word is creative. In creation, all life came into being through the spoken Word of the Creator. Jesus said: "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life". It is therefore the Word of God that must quicken and revive the spiritual life of God's people.

In the work of revival, the Spirit uses human agencies. The farmer must perform his part in the raising of a crop – ploughing, sowing, weeding and watering the seed – while relying on God to give the increase. We have to co-operate with God, as "workers together with Him".

3. REVIVAL is the Outcome of earnest Prayer

The prophet addresses his petition to the Lord: "O Lord, revive Thy work". Habakkuk prayed when conditions everywhere were contrary to revival. What God had told him made him afraid: "I have heard Thy speech, and was afraid". He knew that the chastening hand of God was about to descend on the sinful nation and divine judgment was approaching; nevertheless he pleaded with God for revival.

The Psalmist (Psalm 119:126) said that the people were violating God's law and it required divine intervention: "It is time, Lord, for Thee to work, for they have made void Thy law". The Septuagint translates it: "they have utterly broken Thy law".

God has called us to be His remembrancers. He wants us to remind Him of His promises. In Isaiah 62:6 He says: "I have set watchmen upon thy walls, O Jerusalem, which shall never hold their peace day or night. Ye that are the Lord's remembrancers, keep not silence" (margin).

Revival came to Britain when moral and spiritual conditions were appalling. Prior to the Evangelical Revival, philosophical speculations were challenging the claims of the Christian Church. The nonconformist bodies were in a state of spiritual decay. Drunkenness was more widespread than at any time in English history. The character of the whole nation was affected by the great Wesleyan revival.

We, too, are living in fearful days and we should be afraid. We see the Church honeycombed with modernism and worldliness. Britain is fast becoming a heathen land, with only five per cent of the population attending places of worship. Church buildings are being sold for commercial purposes because congregations have disappeared.

Every religious revival is the outcome of earnest prayer. "As soon as Zion travailed, she brought forth her children" (Isaiah 66:8). Think how the Early Church prayed. Persecuted by the religious leaders of the nation, the apostles prayed for more boldness. Persecuted later by the civil authorities, James being slain and Peter imprisoned, the Church prayed. God is on the outlook for intercessors. It says in Isaiah 59:15, 16: "Yes, truth faileth. . .and the Lord saw it . . .and He wondered that there was no intercessor".

God moves in answer to prayer.

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

56. The Humbling of Joseph's Brothers (Genesis 44:13)

by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

WE may not approve of how Joseph treated his brothers, but there is no mistaking his purpose. He not only wanted to bring home to them the wrong that they had done to him; he also wanted to see if their apparent repentance was sincere. Joseph had been Jacob's favourite son twenty years previously; now Benjamin had first place in his father's affections. On that previous occasion Joseph's brothers had shown a cruel disregard both for him and for Jacob. How would they now react to the possible loss of Benjamin? Would they be as callous and hardhearted as before? Their actions showed, in fact, genuine grief, repentance and humility.

When we first came to Christ we were raw and untaught, but it was the Father's intention to make us to be like Christ. He began at once to do His refining work in us. He has not dealt with each of us in exactly the same way, but we have each known at times the pressure of His hands. It is not His purpose to hurt us and to make us miserable, but rather to teach us to trust Him at all times and to make us become more like Jesus. We are to grow in Christ day by day and, if we have not become spiritually hardened, we should respond to Him now with greater willingness than we did when we first believed. The testimony of John the Baptist should be our constant experience: "He must increase, I must decrease".

Let us not resent His dealings with us, but humble ourselves beneath His hand.

foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, for they are spiritually discerned."

Truth must therefore be preached in the power of the Spirit; received by the illumination of the Spirit; practised by the continuous filling of the Spirit as God's supreme achievement for His people in this mortal scene. "Ye shall receive," consequent upon faith in Christ, "the gift of the Holy Ghost", and the implication is clear that they did not have to wait a probationary, preparatory period as believers to receive the Holy Ghost. He would baptise them then; it was part of the gospel.

The Lost

by Graham S. Wyborn, Pastor of our Aberystwyth Church

CHRISTIANS talk much about "the lost". "Non-christians", "unsaved", "those without Christ", and many other titles we give them, but do we fully appreciate their condition?

Many rule out the idea of eternal punishment. Some believe in annihilation, like the Jehovah's Witnesses. Others, like the Roman Catholic Church, believe that the punishment is not eternal, but only according to how much wickedness we have done. A second chance after death is another idea offered by some movements.

Why warn sinners if Gehenna does not exist? If unbelievers are to be annihilated and never more feel punishment or pain, or if sinners are to be ultimately reconciled with God, why bother to preach the gospel! Let us take our ease!

These statements are false. The Scriptures say, "And these (unsaved) shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal" (Matthew 25:46).

Jesus gave many commands to Christians and we are very ready to come down upon a brother who fails to keep His Word. When we realise that we have broken one of His commands we seek forgiveness and, praise God, He gives it to us. Let me remind you of one command of Jesus: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel". Are you doing this? If not, you are sinning, because Jesus has told us all to speak out for Him.

"The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that He will send forth labourers into His harvest" (Matthew 9:37, 38). Do you realize that if every single Christian only prayed that prayer, then nobody would go? We would be praying to God to send someone else! Someone must say, "Here am I, Lord, send me".

"There's a work for Jesus, none but you can do" is true; only you can do your work properly for the Lord. Too many Christians are not pulling their weight, while other members do more than their share. When was the last time you asked your pastor to give you a job or told him you have some free time and would like to do some form of witnessing? If we thought more about the unsaved persons' future than ours, then we would do more for God.

A few months ago I was travelling on my little motor-bike across a bridge over the River Wye. On the middle of the bridge was a boy who was fishing. He had just made a cast into the water, so he thought, when I came along. As I passed him I was forced to do an emergency stop and I left an eight foot skid to prove it! You see, he had hooked me! There was the hook in my jacket sleeve, with the fishing line around the front wheel, my body and almost my neck! As the lad took the hook out, I remembered the words of Jesus, "I will make you fishers of men" (Matthew 4:19). You are now saved because a believer bothered to go fishing for men. It is our duty to gather together all the tackle our Lord has provided and to go fishing for lost men. We must pray, give and go with the gospel message.

Since we have become Christians, our whole lives should be centred around bringing men, women, boys and girls to the Saviour, not only leading them to Him, but caring for them after they have been born again. Would it not be grand if in the next year we each were instruments in bringing a person to Christ? Just think – our churches would be doubled and double the present praise and prayer would go up to heaven.

In the short time that it has taken you to read this article about 350 people have died without Christ!

THE DEVIL'S BEATITUDES

Blessed are they who are too tired and busy to go to church on Sunday; for they are my best workers.

Blessed are they who are bored with the minister's and teacher's mannerisms and mistakes; for they will get nothing out of the services.

Blessed is the church member who expects to be invited to his own church; he is an important member to me.

Blessed are they who do not go to church on Sundays; they cause the world to say, "The church is failing."

Blessed are they who gossip, for they cause strife and division, which pleases me much.

Blessed are they who are easily offended; they soon get angry and quit.

Blessed are they who do not give of their tithes and offerings to carry on God's work; they are my helpers.

Blessed is he who professes to love God but hates his brother; he shall live with me for ever.

Blessed are the troublemakers, for they shall be called the children of the devil.

Blessed is he who has no time to pray; he will be an easy prey.

BOOK REVIEWS

The Gift of Fire, a collection of sermons, edited by Ian Macpherson. Published by Dimension Books, Bethany Fellowship Incorporated. Price 40p, postage and packing 6p extra.

ONE hour ago I received this little book of fourteen sermons on Fire by men of fourteen different denominations. I tasted a sermon or two in the middle somewhere and then my spiritual appetite devoured the book from the beginning. I gulped it and couldn't read fast enough until I had wiped my plate clean, so to speak.

Perhaps it was me, at the right moment, having also just read John Carter's book about his brother Howard, and being filled with a longing to go far deeper in the Spirit.

But who doesn't want to go deeper? – and the effect of reading inspired word after inspired word from fourteen men every one of whom had had their own kind of experience of Fire is to feel the Fire.

For me, George Forrester's address on "The Place of Power" was just it. He was an Anglican who did not merely become a charismatic and sit tight, but let go and threw himself into the total surrender of the Pentecostal movement becoming an Assembly of God pastor. Why? You know when you read his Scripturally-rich message. Pentecostals can lose the Fire – so I recommend peeping through this window at men who have it, and if you don't covet it, I'll be surprised.

The Occult: A Christian View, by Roger C. Palms. Published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott, price 75p, postage and packing 7p extra.

THIS is a sane, well-balanced effort, amply supported by Scripture, showing the widespread nature of this evil, and staggering us by revealing its hold on the youth of our own nation. The author has gone to great lengths in his investigation, presenting almost every form of the Occult practised in the western world, from the seemingly harmless Ouija boards to the greater forms of darkness like witchcraft and Devil worship with their obscenities and diabolical rites which mark their Satanic origin. Man's quest for completeness and fulfilment and his longing for the supernatural, coupled with the failure of the Church to present a whole Christ, are given as the root cause of so many succumbing to the beguiling influences of Satan. Believers are warned of the dangers all around them and are reminded of their need for the whole armour of God. The ministry of exorcism rightly exercised is advocated.

Every responsible Christian should read this book.

PRAYER AND PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

AS I write, it is but a short time before Christmas and the Christmas number of THE ELIM EVANGEL. Despite having no responsibility of a pastorate, weeks and months have been occupied, so that my wife and I find the number of days before Christmas being referred to rather than the number of weeks. We definitely are in this respect "in the last days", a term many may use if only thinking of the ending of another year, or the rush and crush of the days preceding Christmas. Regrettably, current international and national events would almost overshadow Christmas, and becloud the last phase of the old year, so that many believers almost naturally use the words "the last days" in another respect. Like "the wedding of the year", the commercially-pressurised "Christmas spirit" will pass as a wisp and the reality of world and home conditions will be found still remaining. Yes, we surely must be in "the last days" and immeasurably nearer the second advent of Christ than our present observance of His first advent. It is with this Biblical significance of the "last days" in mind that I have used the phrase in my introduction to ask ourselves about "the last days". All the writers of the New Testament Epistles refer to such days, relating to the end times. Peter on the day of Pentecost used the words of Joel to relate to the coming of the Holy Spirit. Our Lord used the term "the last day" on separate occasions concerning the eternal destinies of believers and unbelievers. The last days are seen to be lasting days and indeed our remembrance of the birth of Christ pinpoints the beginning of the last days: "God - hath in these last days spoken unto us by His Son" (Hebrews 1:1). God will ever add more light upon what He has declared by sending His Son in whom God was made manifest: "Last of all He sent His Son". There has been the Incarnation. Now we patiently await the Consummation. The manger, the cradle, the cross are past. The mansions, the crown, the throne await our view.

CHRISTMAS PREPARATIONS

"DO come and see what I bought in the market!", a friend of mine said some weeks ago. So I did and I saw two lovely things that would make nice presents and they cost only a fraction of the price that one would pay in a shop. I agreed that they would make very suitable presents; who would guess that the price was so reasonable? Who would have thought that they could have been bought so cheaply?

In our preparations for Christmas we are all looking for good presents at reasonable prices, for our budgets are limited – at least mine is! There are so many things to be bought. There is the food, which is much higher in price than last year. Then there are the Christmas cards, and the list of those to whom we send them seems to grow rather than diminish. There are the Christmas appeals – and who wishes to be ungenerous at the season of good will? So we make our preparations, trying to cope with the impossible task of keeping within the limits of what we can afford to spend.

Yet at this very time of the year we think of the greatest Gift ever given to mankind. God did not create an angel or an archangel to send to the world to become the saviour of mankind. He gave the best in the person of His Son. What preparations were made for the Incarnation! There were the activities of the angels, the acceptance by Mary and Joseph of God's will for their lives, the apparent whim of the Roman emperor to tax all his subjects in order to fill his coffers, he not realising that, in making all go to the towns of their lineage, he was causing Scripture to be fulfilled. Mary and Joseph had to go to Bethlehem for the birth of Mary's Boy-Child.

Preparations – preparations – in the midst of our hurry and bustle, do not forget some spiritual preparations by prayer and praise for this Christmas and for what it means.

"Your daughters shall prophesy"

AS Christmas approaches, the well-loved details of the Nativity come back in all their glowing freshness and, as far as I am concerned, particularly the prominent part played by women. In Luke's record we are told that Elisabeth, the mother of John the Baptist, was filled with the Holy Spirit and prophesied when Mary visited her and imparted her own wonderful news of Gabriel's message. Mary, too, spoke words of ecstatic praise. Anna the prophetess exercised her gift by giving thanks to the Lord when she gazed upon the Child Jesus in the Temple. She continued her ministry by speaking of Jesus to those who awaited deliverance. Three women, one young and two very old, of differing backgrounds and tribes, and living in different places, all experienced the intervention of God in their lives and the leading and anointing of the Holy Spirit. This was only the beginning of a new dimension in worship brought about at the formation of the New Testament Church.

Throughout the Gospels and onwards, the Lord, as Head of His developing Church, gave women a place in its ministry. When at Pentecost the fire kindled the hearts of the waiting 120, faithful women were among the number and were filled with the Holy Spirit. Peter boldly asserted that daughters and handmaidens would prophesy (Acts 2:17,18).

I am not a Women's Lib. fanatic, but I have come across the teaching that women should keep silence in the Church, that theirs is an inferior position. Regarding the latter assertion, the teaching of Galatians 3:28 surely gives the lie to this. If we take the trouble to compare Scripture with Scripture we find that women are included in the public ministry of the Church. On my page last week I wrote about ministering to the Body of Christ. It thrills my soul to realise that the Lord has made it possible for all sisters to participate in that ministry even though the hierarchy of the Anglican Church and other communions cannot agree to the inclusion of women in the ministry.

We are told: "The one who prophesies edifies the church and speaks to men for their up-building and encouragement and consolation"(1 Corinthians 14:3, 4, R.S.V.) and, according to Joel and Peter, daughters and handmaidens were to prophesy as a result of the outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon them. In a truly Pentecostal church there is ample scope for women's ministry. It is obvious from Scripture that this was normal in New Testament worship, for Philip had four daughters who prophesied (Acts 21:9) and Paul himself gave instructions as to the manner in which the Corinthian women should prophesy (1 Corinthians 11: 5) and in his general instructions to the Church for the exercise of spiritual gifts he says, "Ye may ALL prophesy, one by one" (1 Corinthians 14:31).

The exhortation is given to us all to "covet to prophesy" (1 Corinthians 14:39) so, sisters, why not let us all seek this wonderful gift of the Holy Spirit and join the company of Mary, Elisabeth, Anna and other New Testament women and bring our inspired contribution to the public worship of the Church?

I like the comment of Spurgeon on the visit of Mary to the home of Elisabeth: "It were well if all our social intercourse were as useful to our hearts as this visit was to Mary. 'Iron sharpeneth iron; so a man sharpeneth the countenance of his friend'. Mary full of faith, goes to see Elisabeth, who is also full of holy confidence, and the two are not long together before their faith mounts to full assurance and their full assurance bursts forth in a torrent of sacred praise. The praise aroused their slumbering powers, and, instead of two ordinary village women, we see before us two prophetesses and two poetesses, upon whom the Spirit of God abundantly rested".

THE PRINCIPLES AND PRACTICE OF YOUTH WORK
by Eldin R. Corsie, National Youth Director

2. Special Exhibition

THE Church is responsible for helping those in need to find a solution to their problems. Many social problems blight society. Why not conduct a special display to pin-point these social scars? Drug-addiction (helpful information can be obtained from Rev. Frank Wilson, Life for the World Trust, Northwick Park Centre, Blockley, Moreton-in-Marsh, Glos., GL56 9RG) and down-and-outs have troubled the authorities. Is there any way in which the Church can help? Is it merely the concern of The Salvation Army? The Embankment Mission, Webber Street, S.E.1., can provide information by both films and literature. Facts can be obtained from the local library and from local and national newspapers.

These exhibitions are useful when there is a national appeal for a particular cause: cancer research, flood victims, Oxfam, Christian Aid, etc. Such interest will impress the public with the fact that the Elim Pentecostal Church is concerned with human need at every level.

Promoting Christian Unions

Christian youth workers and leaders should influence the young people under their care to become leaders in their respective schools or places of business. Christian unions have been instrumental in bringing many young people to Christ. A young lady in a large comprehensive school, a member of an Elim Church, was given the responsibility of leading the Christian union. There were only six members. In just two months she increased the membership to over fifty. Many young people have been brought to the Church and have made decisions for Christ. This opportunity is open to many young folk. Details of how to start a Christian union in schools is obtainable from: C.S.S.M., 5 Wigmore Street, London W.1. These opportunities are also open to students in universities. The Students' Pentecostal Fellowship can furnish particulars of their activities; write: S.P.F. Secretary, 1 Brishing Close, Maidstone, Kent, ME15 9LA. It is suggested that youth leaders arrange a special meeting of the young people and discuss the formation and development of Christian unions in their schools and places of business.

The purpose of this lesson is to impress upon young people of all age groups their responsibility for the world in which they live. This is the supreme task of youth workers and leaders.

The Family Altar

Scripture Union Portions

Notes by Gerald L.W. Ladlow

Monday, December 17th Psalm 84:1-12

"Blessed are they that dwell in Thy house: they will be still praising Thee" (v.4).

THE only people who actually dwelt in the Temple were the officiating priests. In Psalm 27:4 David expressed his one desire and ambition "to dwell in the house of the Lord", which obviously indicates that these words must not be taken literally. His house is where He manifests His presence, therefore this desire is for a constant realisation of His presence, a daily fellowship with God Himself. Truly blessed are those who achieve this. No matter what their circumstances they will always be found praising the Lord.

Tuesday, December 18th Psalm 85:1-13

"Righteousness and peace have kissed each other" (v.10).

THE kiss was the mark of friendship, the sign of unity. Righteousness and peace are inseparable friends. Uprightness in thought, word and deed always results in peace of mind and heart. Any deviation from the path of righteousness will destroy inward peace. Once the heart is cleansed from sin, peace invariably follows. "Peace perfect peace in this dark world of sin? The blood of Jesus whispers peace within".

Wednesday, December 19th Psalm 86:1-17

"Teach me Thy way, O Lord; I will walk in Thy truth: unite my heart to fear Thy name" (v.11).

IF we would walk in the truth we must first know it; hence the need to pray, "Teach me, O Lord". None can make a success of the Christian life unless he is willing to sit humbly at His feet and learn of Him. Having learned of Him, however, we cannot walk in His truth without His aid, so we need also to pray, "Unite my heart to fear Thy name". Dr. Stuart Holden wrote: "Light without life, precept without power, ethic without dynamic, merely mean constant and increased condemnation".

Thursday, December 20th Luke 1:1-13

"Thy prayer is heard; and thy wife Elisabeth shall bear thee a son" (v.13).

IT is obvious that Zechariah had not been praying for a son at this time, for his reply to the angelic messenger pointed out the seeming impossibility of this happening as both he and his wife were too old. Could this be the prayer of his youth when the young couple had sought the Lord to deliver Elisabeth from her barrenness, a prayer that he thought was unanswered? God does not work according to our time-table and His seeming denials are often but His delays. "Unanswered yet? Nay do not say 'ungranted' – Perhaps your part is not yet fully done; The work began when first your prayer was uttered And God will finish what He has begun".

Friday, December 21st Luke 1:14-25

"Great in the sight of the Lord" (v.15).

MEN have their standards of greatness, which differ considerably. The only greatness which really matters is that which measures up to God's standards. The most insignificant among men are often the great ones in His sight. John was great in his consecration to the will of God, his loyalty to the message of God, his zeal in the work of God, his exaltation of the Christ of God and the self-effacement which marked his life. "John did no miracle but all things John spake of this man were true" (John 10:41).

Saturday, December 22nd Luke 1:26-38

"Call his name JESUS" (v.31).

"JESUS" is the Greek form of the Hebrew name "Joshua", meaning "a Saviour or deliverer". It is uniquely the name of the Son of God, for He alone can save and deliver from sin. An old divine said: "There is majesty implied in the name God. There is independent being in 'Jehovah'. There is power in 'Lord'. There is unction in 'Christ'. There is affinity in 'Immanuel', intercession in 'Mediator' and help in 'Advocate'; but there is salvation in no other name under heaven but the name 'Jesus'". "There is no name so sweet on earth, No name so sweet in heaven, The name before His wondrous birth To Christ the Saviour given".

Sunday, December 23rd Luke 1:39-56

"Mary abode with her" (v.56).

SPURGEON said, "It were well if all our social intercourse was as useful to our hearts as this visit was to Mary. Mary full of faith goes to Elisabeth who is also full of holy confidence and the two are not long together before their faith mounts to full assurance and their full assurance bursts forth in a torrent of sacred praise". When we meet other Christians is our fellowship spiritually profitable or only socially pleasant? May we follow the injunction of the old chorus: "Let's go on, let's go on, Talking about this good old way. Let's go on, let's go on, Talking about the Lord".

The beckoning Star

by H. Burton-Haynes

"We saw His star when it rose, and we have come to worship Him" (Matthew 2:2, Moffat)

IN reflecting on the New Testament account of the birth of our Lord, I was deeply impressed by that remarkable incident of the wise men being led by the light of a star. That mystic star, shining with unusual brilliance, like a pendant lamp suspended in the vast dome of the sky, beckoned to those Magi and led them ultimately to where the infant Saviour lay. It declared that we live in a world where God is sovereign. In choosing a star, God used the most suitable means for directing these early pilgrims.

Guidance is not the special favour of a few choice spirits; it is the birthright of every child of God. Our highest privilege is to co-operate with God in the gradual unfolding of a divine plan. We cannot fulfil our high destiny and achieve the goal for which we were created, unless we are able constantly to receive from God, the great Architect and Astronomer of the universe, our own personal guidance and instruction.

To the vast majority of people, the guidance of the Magi may seem to be rather remote and mystical. Many refuse to believe the leading of God because they say that they have never had any experience of it. At first this seems to be a reasonable objection, but second thoughts show that it is based on shallow thinking. When carried to its logical conclusion it means that you will not believe in anything which you have not experienced. To say that there is no such thing as divine guidance because you have had no experience of it sounds just as foolish as a blind man declaring that the radiant colours of the rainbow do not exist because he has never seen the arching bow in the heavens. It is as absurd as a deaf man protesting that the sounds of a majestic symphony merely exist in the imagination because he has never been able to listen to the delightful, soul-moving melodies.

Once we get the thought of God aright, there can be no question of His ability to guide the individual soul. If God, who is sovereign in His universe, controls and guides the shining galaxies through space so accurately that scientists can plot the course of every star unerringly for centuries to come, is He not able to lead my steps? The road along which he beckons may be drab, difficult or commonplace, but it is the way of peace, happiness and fulfilment, and every God-lighted road will end in the presence of the Lamb.

The light from that star had to be followed step by step. There was a patient seeking and continuance on their part. Many obstacles had to be overcome. The journey at times must have seemed long and arduous, but they stepped out in simple faith and reliance upon seeing its rising in the night sky. How true are the words: "The steps (as well as the stops!) of a good man are ordered by the Lord". The star allured them; it spoke not with a voice, but with a beckoning hand. Their quest ended not in disillusionment, but in adoring worship. Their gifts of gold (in recognition of His deity), of frankincense (His priesthood and mission), and of myrrh (His suffering humanity), revealed their spiritual preparedness and insight into His true nature and purpose.

Let us come to God himself and ask for guidance. Step by step He will lead us into its realisation and fulfilment. That we might not be merely adventurers in God's world, living in neglect of Him, and choosing our own course, the Lord Jesus Christ came to Bethlehem's manger. In the unfading light of the "Bright and Morning Star" we may walk with quiet confidence through light or darkness all our days.

O Lord of every shining constellation
That wheels in splendour through the midnight sky
Grant us Thy Spirit's true illumination
To read the secrets of Thy work on high.

THE sweet innocence of it all is its greatest attraction.

The sight of a tiny baby is calculated to have a surprising effect on any audience. Hard-faced men and women melt before the warmth of it. City tycoons have been known to relapse into baby talk. Hard lines have seemed to be waxed away from the faces of careworn mothers. Noisy, irrelevant conversation has become stilled. It has even been known for the telly to be switched off . . .

So many ways of presenting what Mr. Average Man would dub "religion" seem to have little to do with paying off the mortgage, bringing up the kids, fighting for a place in the sun at work, the rough and tumble of everyday life. Religious observances can seem remote, of no application to life.

A woman who specialises in the field of child care wisely remarked that motherhood must be liberated. She was certainly not talking about women's lib. or anything like it. She meant that motherhood can become stylised, romanticised, festooned with trappings of Hollywood goo. It is an inestimable privilege, but it has to do with wet nappies, broken nights, toothache, upset stomachs, washing, washing, washing . . . as well as the lovely warm things.

Which brings us back to the manger. Distant clerics clad in outlandish garb chanting unrecognisable words to ancient dirges may seem as near to catching the train or 'bus for work as Brighton Pavilion has anything at all to do with real homes, but a Baby—that's different! To think that God could "get into" a Baby!—it's breath taking. A woman bore Him, a man trained Him in His job, a family lived around Him, a village ticked away the slow hours just outside His little home. He was "tempted in all points like as we are". Now there's a Saviour for you. He knows, not simply because He is God and knows everything, but He knows because He's been here, lived like us, been one with us, God with us.

The manger scene, however, was against the backdrop of rejoicing angels. They revealed His mission of Saviourhood. Their gladness was about the plan of God to bring peace to this old world. To achieve that goal involved our Saviour in Calvary. "The Man born to die" was in that great conception of God, for "God was in Christ reconciling the world unto Himself". "He came from God and went to God". No man has to ascend to bring Him down. He came down—and He went further down and became obedient even unto the death of the cross. He arose, He lives, He will come, He will reign! "This same Jesus"—the Babe of Bethlehem, the Christ of Calvary, the Lord of the empty tomb—this Jesus will come. "Glory to God in the highest" we exultantly carol.

But we remember . . .

Man of Sorrows—what a name
For the Son of God, who came Ruined sinners to reclaim Hallelujah! What a Saviour!

His gospel is more important and more relevant than the news from the world's press. His love is broader than the measure of men's minds. His condescension is more profound than human mind can envisage. "He knows, He loves, He cares".

"Love came down at Christmas".

The Two Advents

by W. J. Maybin, Pastor of our Southampton Church

WE rejoice in Christ's first coming to earth "for us men and for our salvation". It is right for us so to rejoice, but it is reasonable to assume, writes Cyril A. Wheeler, that "a Second Coming of the self-same Person to this planet would be an event of hardly less significance to the human race, and therefore be the object of unflagging and enthusiastic anticipation". It is distressing that reference can be made to the first coming of Christ, while ignoring His second coming. Dr. A. Skevington Wood is timely in his observation: "Too often we have conceived of the Incarnation as the sole centre of God's dealings with the world, when in reality there are two foci; the First Coming and the Second Coming of our Lord". So at this Advent season we must come to terms with the fact that the Christ who came nearly two millennia ago is the One who is to return again. Only when these two great events are presented in relationship do we do justice to the whole counsel of God.

There is an intriguing passage (Luke 2:25-32) concerning an aged man, Simeon, and perhaps an older woman, Anna the prophetess. Amid the shades of Jewish unbelief, "God had His few", writes Dr. E.M. Blaiklock, and there they were. As the Greek philosopher said, "Give me a thought that I may live on it", they were captives of a hope that was sure and steadfast. As we, with them, rejoice in that same first coming, we also anticipate His second appearing, first to "catch away" His redeemed Church, and then to reign on the earth for a millennium of years.

As we examine these two advents side by side, some pertinent truths emerge. They have in common that they are characterised by hope. Though religious hope is suspect to many, we believe that Christianity offers a hope that is superstructured on a foundation that is adequate to support it. Our hope is from first to last Biblical.

With the story of Simeon and Anna in mind, both rejoicing in the realisation of that first advent, we underline some relevant lessons for us who await His second coming.

The prophetical Nature of it

Simeon was "waiting for the consolation of Israel" (v.25), while Anna "looked for redemption in Israel" (v.38). Both expressions of the coming Messiah are contained in the prophetic content of the Old Testament. These two faithful souls saw the fulfilment of these prophetical Scriptures in the birth of Jesus Christ. Centuries before His birth the Old Testament had told of that birth. Micah had specified the place of it (5:2). Isaiah had foretold that He would be born of a virgin (7:14), while in Daniel 9 we discern in chronological form the precise time of it. Prophecies made centuries in advance were minutely fulfilled and a believing remnant in the nation waited for such a fulfilment.

That great weight of prophetical evidence relating to the first coming of Christ, now fulfilled, provides one of the greatest proofs of the inspiration and trustworthiness of the Bible. Should it be thought incredible that what still remains unfulfilled concern-the future of this same Christ will find complete fulfilment? Predictions concerning the future return of Christ far outnumber those concerning His first coming. Approximately one quarter of revealed truth relates to the world's next greatest event, the return of Christ. While we make much of the first advent, let us not overlook the fact that "unto them that look for Him shall He appear the second time without sin unto salvation (Hebrews 9:28). Bishop Moule said that this event will be a "crisis of blessing to all creation".

The Expectation characterising it

God had His few and this believing nucleus was an expecting nucleus. Simeon "waited", a Greek word meaning, "to look for with a view to favourable reception". Anna "looked" for redemption, a Greek verb of similar derivation also suggestive of expectation. The lamp of faith and expectation was still burning in the land. When Jesus eventually arrived on the scene, the faithful, comparitively common people received Him. These two aged souls were typical of all that was best in the life of Judah. Our expectation should be none the less. We live "between the advents" and we must exercise the same trust. Concerning the time of the event we must not be tempted to speculate, since "the times and seasons" are in His hands, but we can discern the signs of the times and know that it is imminent. Like the Thessalonians we "wait for His Son from heaven" (1 Thessalonians 1:10), a Greek word which conveys the idea of waiting with patience and confident expectation. Jesus, after describing the effects of the second coming in separating the prepared from the unprepared, said, "Watch therefore" (Matthew 24:42), a word which has the idea of keeping awake. A blessing is extended to those who exercise such vigilance (Luke 12:37). Well did Dr. C. Morgan reason: "I never lay my head on the pillow without thinking that perhaps before I awake, the final morning may have dawned. I never begin my work without thinking that He may interrupt it and begin His own". Simeon knew by divine revelation that, when the Messiah appeared, he would go. This is what His second appearance will mean for us!

The practical Effect of it

As Simeon waited and hoped, his manner of life bore testimony to the coming One: "the same man was just and devout, waiting" (v.25). Of Anna, Luke tells us that she "departed not from the temple, but served God with fastings and prayers night and day" (v.37). They believed the prophetic utterance concerning the coming Messiah and the result was shown in their devout, devoted lives.

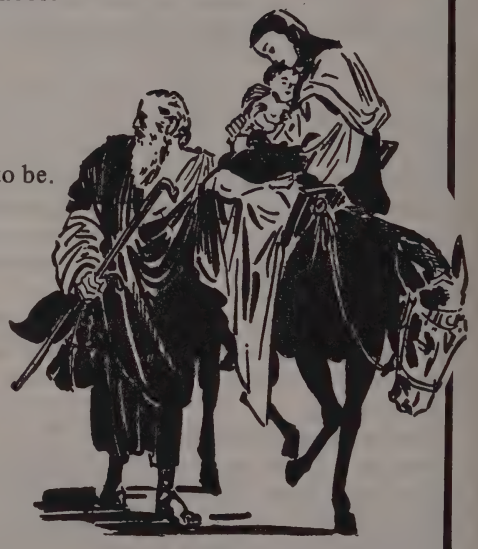
Christ's second coming is styled a "blessed hope" (Titus 2:13), a "living hope" (1 Peter 1:3), and a purifying hope (1 John 3:3). The hope that we shall be like Him tomorrow should make us desire to be more like Him today. The hope begets holiness. Said John Trapp, "That is true hope that runs out into holiness". The study of prophecy is not indulgence in mere starry futurism, but something that should qualify all Christian living and service. We miss the whole purpose of God's prophetic programme if it fails to end in purity of character.

So, as we celebrate Christmas, let us not forget to anticipate the next greatest event in the prophetic programme, the return of our Lord for His Church. There is no hope like this. It brightens every mile of the Christian pathway, until that supreme moment when we shall see His lovely face.

The Christmas Story

by Constance V. Bradbury

THE heavenly Host was singing when Jesus came to earth,
Good tidings of great joy they brought because of Jesus' birth,
This glad and happy company made such a joyful sound,
They praised and magnified the Lord and glory shone around.



The wise men and the shepherds were the first to hear the news
And they were greatly honoured, for the Lord our God did choose
These men so vastly different, as if to emphasise
The fact that full salvation is for sinners far and wide.

Then Simeon, that aged man, into the temple came
And held the Child within his arms and magnified the name
Of God, who, by the Holy Ghost, had promised him that he Should not see death 'til Christ had come the precious Lord to be.

Then there was one named Anna, who in the temple stayed,
A prophetess and widow, and of a great old age,
She spent her time in fasting, and prayed both night and day.
She too did see her Saviour before she passed away.

But I who have not seen Him have heard His voice so clear,
For He is ever near me to comfort and to cheer.
My wonderful Redeemer, my Saviour and my Friend,
Has promised to be with me right to my journey's end.

One day I too shall see Him, behold Him face to face,
And sing redemption's story, a sinner saved by grace,
I'll join that heavenly chorus and sing and praise the Lord,
Who died for me, a sinner, and shed His precious blood.

Children's Corner

The First Christmas

Words and drawing by Sheila Price

IT was almost bedtime. Mary was washing the supper dishes and Joseph was resting after a busy day in his carpenter's shop, when a knock came at the door.

"Come in!" Mary called.

"I've just heard," said their next-door neighbour, "that Caesar has ordered a census. Each man must return to the city of his own tribe and give the names of his family to the census officer there."

"I belong to the tribe of Benjamin," said Joseph, "so I'll have to go to Bethlehem. We'd better pack a few things for the journey, Mary."

Joseph locked up his carpenter's shop, secured the luggage on his donkey's back, and set off with his wife.

For nearly a week they travelled over the rough roads, up and down the hills until, at last, Bethlehem came in sight. Joseph had hoped to stay with friends in Bethlehem, but when he called on them he found that they had no room to spare. "I'll try at the inn, Mary," he said.

"I'm sorry, sir," said the manager. "We are full up. There isn't a spare room in the whole of Bethlehem. Everywhere is crowded because of the census, you see."

Joseph searched and searched, knocked on doors, stopped passers-by and asked them if they knew of a spare room but each time the reply was the same – "Sorry, full up!"

Joseph was so weary he could have slept anywhere, under a tree or on the pavement, but he had to find somewhere comfortable for his wife. He noticed a little house on the corner and knocked the door.

"I'm full up," the owner told him, "but I have a stable. You're welcome to that, sir. It's a bit dirty, I'm afraid. I've been too busy to clean it out, but I'll give you some fresh straw."

"Thank you," said Joseph. He arranged the straw in a corner away from the draughts and made a pillow for Mary out of his cloak. Soon, from the corner, came the cry of a Baby.

There was no kind woman to help Mary, no friendly neighbour to lend a hand, so Mary wrapped her Baby in swaddling clothes and laid Him in the manger.

This is how the Lord of Heaven came to this world that first Christmas night. Did ever a baby enter this world so humble and helpless? He was not able to do anything for Himself, but smile into His mother's face and kick His little feet about, just wanting us to love Him. This is the lovely reason why Jesus came.

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

57. Judah's Pre-eminence (Genesis 44:14-34)

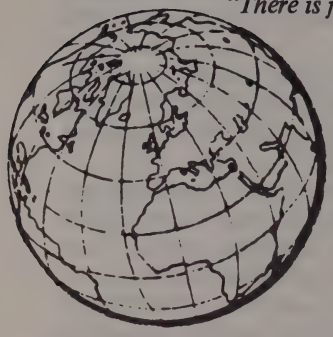
by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

JUDAH was certainly guilty of Joseph's enslavement, for it was his idea to sell Joseph to the Midianites. The Bible shows that he made other very unhappy errors. Yet, after Joseph's departure, Judah gradually became the leader of the sons of Jacob. Jacob never had the love for him that he had for Joseph and Benjamin, yet there was a developing trust and respect between them, and it was Judah to whom Jacob committed the care of Benjamin. The character of Judah was revealed when the new misfortune came upon them in Egypt. He was overwhelmed when he thought of his father's grief if Benjamin did not return, so he begged to be allowed to remain as a slave instead of Benjamin. His words to Joseph form one of the most moving passages in the Old Testament.

We know that some folk are naturally talented and of pleasant personality, so they quickly become popular and leap to the forefront. Others may seem blundering and unattractive by comparison, yet faithfulness and dependability can make up for many deficiencies of charm and sparkle. The Lord certainly took and used the brilliant talents of Joseph, but He also used the more rugged qualities of Judah. Though Joseph was the beloved one, it was Judah who retained the ascendancy in Israel.

Whatever we may be by nature, if we will be faithful to the Lord He will use us to bring honour to Himself and blessing to others.

The Unspeakable Gift



"Thanks be unto God for His unspeakable Gift"
(2 Corinthians 9:15).

WORDS cannot tell out the fulness of love,
Nor speak the worth of God's gift from above!
God gave His all on that first Christmas morn,
When, to redeem us, the Saviour was born.

The Saviour from sin, from fear and despair,
The answer of God to men everywhere.
O let our thanksgiving to God high ascend
For Jesus the Lord, our Saviour and Friend!

F.D. Walker

"There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth" (Luke 15:10).

Missionary Ministry

by L. Wigglesworth,
Secretary of Elim Missionary Society

Taiwan: Senior High-school students at cam

HOW many souls have joined the ranks of the redeemed since last Christmas? There is no mind or computer or any earthly machine which can count the number of those who have called upon the name of Jesus and now call Him Saviour. Another phenomenon which is immeasurable is the company of angels spoken of in the Scriptures. The zeal of their praise fills the heavens and the glory radiating around them speaks of the magnificence of God.

What then is the remarkable effect upon them when we acknowledge Jesus Christ to be the Lord of our lives and the King of glory? Superimposed on the ministry of praise comes a ripple of exultant joy because someone has become a child of God! Repentance in the heart of a sinner sends a reaction of gladness right into heaven. Just one conversion has this amazing consequence. Wherever the preaching of the gospel brings the rejection of sin by man, we give the angels an opportunity to rejoice. The greater joy, however, is in the heart of the Saviour Himself as He considers the travail of His soul.

So "Joy to the world, the Saviour comes" has its reciprocations of rejoicing both on earth and in heaven. It is our joy to help it along. Taking the gospel to all nations has brought the gladness and delight of eternal love to millions. Each individual decision has the great wonder of bringing further praise into the celestial courts.

Our beloved missionaries and national ministers, a thin line around the world, are sharing in bringing glad tidings to all peoples. The first heralding of Christmas in our mission fields will be in far-off Taiwan, where Ken and Wyn McGillivary will share the anniversary of the birth of Jesus with many Chinese Christians. Their son and daughter will be far away. Ian has been busy working in Saudi Arabia, installing computers on a pipeline with an oil firm, while Jennifer is in Israel serving with other young people in a kibbutz. The Kevin Brottons and the Derek Le Pages with their families will be among the Elim friends who hail the day when Christ was born. The sun will shortly afterwards waken our brothers and sisters in Hong Kong. As they sing the Saviour's birth, they will miss their sister and friend, Vera McGillivray, who will D.V., be in this country by Christmas. Vera will have the reunion with her family in London to look forward to, but she will have a little ache in her heart as she remembers the happy times spent with the believers in Hong Kong.

The sun speeds its way relentlessly to the west and, just a few hours later, India will join the Far East in praise for a Saviour which is Christ the Lord. In Madras the Prentices will have their sons with them. Johnnie and Roy will no doubt celebrate with the children of the Josephs. What a joyous festival it will be as the Christians of Madras and district acclaim the Saviour! Several hundred miles to the north, the sisters Beardwell and Jarvis will be joining with the Dehri-on-Sone Christians in a Christmas so vastly different from ours. The commercialism of the West is not a part of Christ's birthday there. In the west of India the company of believers remaining when the Trokes retired will be meeting with their Pastor, Brother Alexander, and will no doubt reach out with goodwill to the poverty-stricken of Bombay.

In the context of Elim missions, the sun will next chase the shadows of the night from Africa's plains. We would have to be up very early to be ahead of the worshippers, whose custom is to meet the dawn with praise and prayer. The Bulls in East Africa will be reflecting on many Christmases spent in the bush with the same joy and adoration, perhaps more accentuated, but without the trimmings. Their daughter Heather and her husband and children live near London and, because of our customs, this is a time when distance brings heartache.

The Mervyn Thomases in Nairobi will be praising the Lord together with the larger family of God's people. Then, because of their geographical location, missionaries in Zambia, Rhodesia and South Africa will be awakened simultaneously to begin a day of praise and glory. In South Africa, we expect the missionaries

yana: Elim's 21st Anniversary service, April 1970, Albert Street, urda, Goergetown around Nelspruit to be expressing their love for the Lord Jesus in churches and in their homes. The Gull family is growing up, but they are still able to be together and the two girls, Elizabeth and Gillian and their brother David will have a say in the Christmas arrangements! The Butchers will be having the thrills of introducing baby Martin to another Christmas. There is a possibility that grandparents Butcher will join them. Anne Stephenson usually has a crowd of youngsters around her and Christmas will be no exception. Frieda Grossen may be persuaded to leave her translation and Bible school work for a few hours to rejoice with the Christians. In Pretoria, the Francises, who are now in their fortieth year on the field, have their family living with or near them. Some are married with their own families and they scarcely know what an English Christmas is like, but the praises of the Lord are the same the world over.

In Penhalonga, Rhodesia, the Nortons with five sons and a daughter will be remembering the coming of Christ Jesus. Their co-worker Miss Garbutt will be engulfed in exercises of goodwill. Then further northwest, the Katerere Chieftainship will see a mixed African-European observation of Christmas. The Secondary school will be closed, but the hospital work goes on. Families like the Renshaws and the Griffiths will be reunited as the children return from boarding school. The Renshaw children, Timothy, Bethanne and Karen, and the Griffiths's children, Stephen and Robert will now be counting the days until they will be with their parents once again. The McCanns have their baby Philip (number two is due!). The single sisters are a wee bit scattered. Joan Caudell is on furlough and with her people in Bournemouth. Cath Picken will be on a special visit to her family in Southend-on-Sea for the Christmas holiday, so Joyce Pickering and Mary Fisher will be comparing their new Christmases in Africa with the traditional ones at home.

The Johnstons in Zambia have just returned from a visit to Northern Ireland and will no doubt be recalling the family meetings. Statutory holidays for them will mean many opportunities to witness for the Lord.

There are some hours difference between East, Central and West Africa sun-wise, but at Christmas time in Ghana great conventions are held and the Mills and the Kilpatricks will have a busy time ministering. For the four Mills girls, Ruth, Judith, Erica and Margaret, and Johnnie Kilpatrick there are sure to be exciting moments of Christmas joy.

Most of our Lightbearers are working in Africa. We remember them as they serve the Lord in South Africa, Rhodesia, Sierra Leone and Ghana.

The orb of life-giving light has a long way to travel before it shines on our missionaries in the West, but his radiance will scarcely outdo the sheer joy of Christmas as they voice their carols in praise of Jesus in Guyana. The MacInnes family number four once again for father and mother have been rejoined by son and daughter-in-law after furlough. Perhaps Joel and Philip will be together in England. South of Guyana, in the vast land of Brazil, where we have no missionary at present, hymns of praise will be led by devoted nationals seeking to win men and women to the Saviour.

May we who enjoy the family fellowship of the homeland send through the kind offices of our EVANGEL editor the warm Christmas greetings to the wider family of God scattered throughout the world. As we move into 1974, may our earnest prayer be for a world-wide revival and a great ingathering of precious souls. To you all – a happy Christmas!

What Christmas means to me

by Len Magee, Pastor of our Lane End Church, High Wycombe

SANTA was either on strike or suffering the effects of fuel rationing when I left the farm and came of age. Somehow, all the tinsel and mystical lustre of Christmas simply vanished. Soft drink became hard and stupefying. The air of childish excitement, keyed-up anticipation and innocent glowing faces suddenly became a beer-sodden, hazy weekend, usually spent in someone else's house. The crib of Nativity became a hive of activity in a frantic, frustrating effort to enjoy myself. I never really did. It's strange how lonely a place a Christmas party can be.

Bondi beach was overflowing with suntanned bodies at Christmas in Australia. Somewhere in the mad melee was I, trying to be happy. Submerged in a sea of faces, I was in more danger of drowning than ever I was in the twelve foot waves. It's strange how lonely a place a crowd can be.

God hates loneliness, that world-wide, soul-destroying malady. Estranged from God, suspicious of each other, mankind through the ages has pursued an empty, bleak, downward path, ever widening the gulf fixed between him and God. Christmas is the beginning of God's answer for loneliness - reconciliation.

To me, the meaning of Christmas is in one voluminous, overflowing, jump-in-the-air-for-joy word: EMMANUEL – God with us!

God said to Moses, "I am come down", but who could have fellowship with a voice in a burning bush, or a mighty angel in a pillar of fire, or an awesome, burning Presence upon an annually-visited mercy seat? For some folk Christmas is a sombre, Sinaitic experience of worshipping God afar off, but Christmas isn't God looking down, or even reaching down, no, He didn't reach down – HE CAME DOWN. He wore shoes. He was part of a family. He made tables and chairs. Wherever He went He loved people like you and me. It was no grudging, reluctant visitation, but God eagerly leaping into time and fellowship with men.

Emmanuel – "The Word became flesh and dwelt among us". He became what He was not previously. He did not cease to be God, but He became a man. Only deity can reveal deity, only God can express Godhead.

Little Jesus wast Thou shy?
Once just as small as I?
And what did it feel to be
Out of heaven and just like me?

Emmanuel – a soft, snuggly Baby in a star-lit stable? – now I can get my mind (and my arms) around something like that!

A working-class carpenter's Son, tired and sweaty: I can grow up with someone like that. A man so full of compassion and virtue that He overflowed the life of God by His every look, word and touch: I can follow someone like that. A Man holding the whole of creation together, commanding the elements, powers and principalities; and they obey – instantly: Him I can worship.

See Him resisting Satan's subtlest temptations and groaning in agony to put God's will before His own natural desire to live. I can pray to someone like that, for He understands. A Man taking my place, spiked to a cross, bearing my sin and guilt as the crushing weight of the full wrath and righteous indignation of a thrice-holy God was poured upon Him, because He loved me. He lay down His very life for me. I can't help but love Someone like that. Emmanuel means that we need never be alone again, now and eternally.

If someone left a lovely gift on your doorstep, how would they feel if you just left it there and ignored it? How would they feel if you trampled on it and destroyed it without even bothering to see what it was? That's what I used to do with God's great gift. Like the chief priests and scribes who informed Herod as to the place of the Messiah's birth, I was indifferent, insensitive, unconscious, uninterested and totally unaware of the dawning of history's greatest event. Christmas is a time of RECEIVING – God's done the giving.

One Christmas a teacher had supervised the construction of the Bethlehem stable in a corner of the classroom. A barn had been made and its floor covered with straw. In a little crib had been placed a tiny doll to represent Jesus. Around Him were placed figures of Mary and Joseph, the shepherds and the wise men and, beyond them, the animals. One little lad was so fascinated that he could hardly tear himself away. He kept returning to gaze engrossed. At the same time the expression on his face showed that he was puzzled by something.

At length the teacher asked him, "Is something bothering you, Johnny? Is there anything that I can explain?". With his eyes glued on the manger scene, the lad said, "What I'd like to know is – where does God fit in?".

Miss Christ out of Christmas and you miss Christmas. It's not just a vague, historical fact to meditate on, but a glorious now experience. God with us, loving us NOW!

Is your heart alone, or a home – for Emmanuel?

"Fear not. . .I bring you good tidings of great joy" (Luke 2:10).

Peace on Earth

by Hugh Sawyer

PIERCING the velvety gloom of midnight with its flickering shadows, the wood fire crackled. Its radiating heat brought comfort to the little group of shepherds huddled around its spark-spluttering blaze. To pass away the lonely hours they yarned, as with wary eye they kept watch over the slumbering flocks scattered around them. The presence of wild animals stalking their prey was a nightly menace demanding utmost viligance.

Suddenly, to their sheer amazement, the blackness of the night was shattered. There in the midst of a bright, ethereal illumination stood an angel, a messenger from heaven, and scintillating glory shone all around! "Fear not," said he, stretching forth his hand to calm their quaking terror quickened by his startling appearance and split-second visitation, "I bring you good tidings of great joy"! He told them of the wondrous birth of the God-Child Jesus and where He was to be found.

To the further amazement of the affrighted shepherds, as if appearing from nowhere, stood a host of praising angels, chanting "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men"! As swiftly as they came, the angelic host vanished, speeding faster than thought back to their heavenly abode.

Time passed and Jesus grew to manhood. Throughout His earthly life peace did reign; during that historic period no wars of any moment have been recorded. Now Jesus, the Prince of Peace, is back in heaven and enquiring minds are mystified at the non-fulfilment of the angelic tidings promised so long ago. They want to know the reason.

"Where," they cry, "in the midst of this hostile world, where men walk in deadly fear of their lives, beset on every hand with ever-increasing violence and bloodshed, is that wondrous peace and good will towards men, that those heralding angels spoke about nearly two thousand years ago? Allowing for human error, did those shepherds in their bewildered condition hear aright? Did those joyful angels really say what they did? Was it the rambling of hazy, collective thoughts compiled into a narrative by those same shepherds after they had calmed down?".

These are the questions that thinking minds ask and it is imperative that they know the truth! This is to be found in the inspired Word of God, the impregnable rock of divine truth which the unceasing onslaughts of Satan with his demonic hordes and the futile efforts of man ever seek to destroy. Against the might of God these efforts fall away like the baffled receding waves of a raging sea crashing against the rock-bound barrier of a rugged foreshore.

When God speaks, His divine authority is absolute truth and He said it was so; therefore believers accept it without question. When Jesus was born into this world, our heavenly Father's preconceived plan came into action. Christ the King would come down from heaven, take upon Himself a body of flesh and dwell among His chosen people. He would call them to repentance and offer them the kingdom of heaven. Through His foreknowledge God was already aware that His people would reject and slay His Son.

John's Gospel records, "He was in the world, and the world was made by Him, and the world knew Him not. He came unto His own, and His own received Him not." In His farewell to Jerusalem, Jesus, with loving compassion, said, "How often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not"!

Through the denial and defiance of the Jews, the fulfilment of that angelic promise was deferred and God in His wisdom scattered the people among the nations to wander about the earth until that specific time appointed by God when His people, seeing the error of their ways, would repent and acknowledge Jesus as their Messiah. Then would that long prophesied millennium age be established, in which the Gentiles have a place, and then would follow that long awaited peace on earth and good will toward men!

A foretaste of that perfect peace is obtainable even at this late hour. Jesus is still saying, "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock; if any man hear My voice, and open the door, I will come in to him". Where Jesus is, there is peace to be found. All who welcome Him into their hearts will enjoy that wondrous peace . . .now!

"Let us go . . . . to Bethlehem"

Luke 2:14 (R.S.V.)

by John Lancaster

THE heavy, ugly buses grind and grumble as they climb the hill leading from the Jerusalem road to the square in the centre of Bethlehem, but peace returns as you step into the warm sunshine in the square. On one side, the fortress-like Church of the Holy Nativity squares its massive shoulders and stares across at its rival, the Mosque, whose slender minaret reaches towards the cloudless blue of the sky. In the centre of the square, an American, legs apart and wide-brimmed hat perched precariously on the back of his head, focuses an expensive camera on the famous bells of Bethlehem, which can be seen through a rounded window in the bell tower above the Church. An Arab woman, her long, black robe splashed with a pattern of colourful flowers, moves silently and gracefully across the sunlit flagstones, while in the shadows of the ancient buildings framing the square, old men sit, brown fingers interlaced in their laps, passively watching the world go by.

Another ugly bus, its radiator grill looking like massive teeth bared in the strain of climbing the hill, rumbles into the square and stops with a swish of air brakes. Children with outstretched hands and souvenir sellers cluster noisily around the descending passengers and then another winding crocodile of tourists moves slowly across the square towards the narrow door of the famous Church, a harassed guide looking back every now and then to make sure that the more vulnerable among his charges have at last escaped from the gesticulating sellers of postcards and crudely-carved camels.

You follow in the wake of the tourists and, as you approach the Church, a man hands you a small, oblong card with crinkled edges. On one side the black printing, contrasting with the faded pink and blue petals of some small anemone like flowers, assures you that these Holy Land flowers have actually been placed on the holy manger, which somehow guarantees their special sanctity. The other side, less religiously, but nonetheless earnestly, assures you that the Oriental Souvenir Shop in Milk Grotto Street can provide you with everything from mother of pearl Bibles to Crusader jackets, whatever they may be. You pocket the card and, stooping to pass through the exceedingly low doorway of the Church, you enter the dim coolness of this ancient shrine. Great wooden struts support its age-weary structure. What light there is gleams dully on the huge, coloured spheres which hang, like oversized Christmas tree baubles, from the ceiling. Candles flicker round a gilded ikon and a silence heavy with the memories of centuries is broken only by the muffled footsteps and whispering voices of the tourists.

An Israeli soldier, crisply alert and efficient-looking, eyes you keenly as you pass the offertory box at the top of the steps leading to the underground cavern where, it is said, the Saviour of the world was born. If you had any illusions about the stable, this is the place to lose them. The Christmas card nativity scenes belong to another world in this gloomy cave, which even the inevitable glass baubles cannot save from drabness. Gone are the tidy outlines of thatched roofs and well-seasoned wooden fencing, the soft hay and dreamy-eyed cattle. Even the great brass star which marks "the exact spot where Jesus was born", as the guide solemnly points out, cannot save this place from looking more like a tomb than a birthplace. There is a barenness that the trinkets of religion cannot hide. You take one last look, trying to ensure that the mental photograph is indelibly printed, and pass through the heavily-curtained doorway, up the rough-hewn steps and eventually into the sunshine again. You have seen the place where it all happened.

Or have you? The question nags at you as you stand on Bethlehem's ridge looking over the surrounding countryside. The terraced slopes, dotted with stumpy, dark green olive trees, fall away towards the shepherds' fields and then rise again, first in gentle hills and then in the mounting savagery of the wilderness, to where the Dead Sea lies, a thin sliver of silver beneath the misty, blue mountains of Moab in the far distance. You stand in the warmth and dream, like the old men in the square. Ruth and Naomi come slowly from the wilderness. David pipes to his sheep in the distant fields. Samuel leans heavily on his staff as he mounts the hill. A carpenter and his weary wife move painfully along the Jerusalem road. History comes crowding back into Bethlehem and then the sudden, impatient hooting of one of those wretched buses jerks you back into the harsh realities of the twentieth century.

You remember the Israeli soldier by the steps leading to the manger and realise with a start that you are in "occupied territory", taken from the Arabs during the six-day war. Then you recall that it was occupied territory in His day, only the troops were Roman. You look again at the clustered houses of Bethlehem and beyond them to the hills and valleys that surround them on all sides. Your memory jolts you. Beyond the intensely personal dramas that have been enacted here, there have also been the great tidal movements of history. Egyptians, Moabites, Philistines, Assyrians, Babylonians, Romans and Turks have all marched through these hills, plundering, burning, killing and being killed. You wonder how long it will be before the thunder of the guns rolls again through these peaceful valleys. Even as you stand and ponder, in faraway places – Cairo, Damascus, Washington, Moscow, maybe in Peking – military fingers point out the strategic significance of these very hills on wide-spread maps. Whatever your view of prophecy, you feel that you are close to the realities of life when you stand in this place. Not only the memories of the past, but the realities of the present – that soldier in the sanctuary – remind you that the Middle East is the flash-point which could ignite the world.

Your mind wanders back to the cave beneath the Church. You feel again the almost claustrophobic lowness of the roof and see in your mind's eye the rocky walls hung with tapestries and sacred pictures. The smell of burning candles mingled with incense wafts down the corridors of memory and then you see again the faces, the candle-lit faces – thick-set Americans, angular Scandinavians, glossy-eyed Italians, sober-looking Britishers, analytical Germans, and the little Japanese with a cine camera almost as big as himself. Suddenly, the significance of it strikes you. Whether or not that was the exact place does not matter very much; the fact is that Bethlehem has become the focal point to which all men have felt drawn. They may be gum-chewing tourists, they may be pious but confused devotees of religion, they may be mere sightseers or genuine Christians, but the fact that they are here at all points to the massive significance of Jesus Christ. He is inescapable. Slowly the words of Micah 5:2-4 unfold themselves in your mind: "But thou; Bethlehem Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall He come forth unto Me that is to be ruler in Israel: whose goings forth have been from old, from everlasting. . .now shall He be great unto the ends of the earth". Certainly, the ends of the earth have come to Bethlehem.

While you stand and ponder, another coach load of tourists roars up the hill. Soon they, too, will trickle across the square towards the Church and the small dark-eyed children will stretch out hopeful little hands. That same Israeli soldier will watch them warily and the bearded priests will make sure that they notice the offertory box as well as the manger. A little later, in the shop in Milk Grotto Street, the proprietor, smiling blandly, will offer them a cup of black tea before inviting them to inspect his overwhelming display of souvenirs. Then, loaded with olive-wood donkeys, mother of pearl Bibles or Crusader jackets, they will enter the bus and roar off towards Jerusalem in time for dinner.

Why do people come to Bethlehem – only to see the sights, to buy souvenirs, to impress their friends with coloured slides? Or do they really hope to find Him there? What will it all mean to them when they're back in Baltimore, Berlin, Bangkok or Bethnal Green – a sense of wonder, memory of weariness refreshed by black tea, or only of glass baubles gathering dust? Come to that, what do Bethlehem and Christmas really mean to you – sentimental candle-light, good food, exciting parcels, family reunions – nothing more?

Scores of people lived in Bethlehem during the first Christmas and never saw angel or star or the Babe in the manger. He was in their midst, but they knew not the day of their visitation. Thousands of people visit Bethlehem each year, but they never find Him there. Millions will celebrate Christmas, but for them it is Xmas – the feast of "X" the unknown quantity.

Let us truly go to Bethlehem; with prayerful hearts and thoughtful minds let us open the Scriptures this Christmas. Read John 1 and gaze into those mysterious reaches of eternity before the "Word became flesh". Turn to John 17 and hear Him speak of the glory He knew. Turn to Philippians 2:6-10, and Luke 1 and 2, and Matthew 1 and 2, and allow the words to speak to us again, for here is the real truth about Christmas. Having read, let us take time to bow before Him and worship Him. Christmas only becomes meaningful when we say, with the shepherds, "Let us go even to Bethlehem and see this thing that has happened, which the Lord has made known unto us".

Having made the journey, like the wise men, let us fall down and worship Him, open our treasures, and give Him everything.

Church Reports

BRECON Pastor: G.H. Neale

THE theme for prayer for 1973 was "Christ the Baptiser in the Holy Spirit" and now as the year draws to a close we can praise God that He answered our prayers. During the summer, three Crusaders went to the Isle of Wight Youth Camp and returned baptised in the Holy Spirit. In September another Crusader was filled at the Welsh National Youth Rally, but still the Lord had not poured out the Holy Spirit in our Church. At our convention, we prayed much for a real outpouring. The Lord answered our prayers with wonderful convention services under the ministry of Pastor George Rutherford and nine were baptised in the Holy Spirit. God is also moving with regard to evangelism for there were ten unsaved at the gospel service. We are now looking to the Lord for even greater blessing.

MACCLESFIELD Pastor: D. Beresford

OUR Church has been greatly helped by the recent crusade conducted by Melvin Banks. The faithful preaching of the gospel, the hard work and sacrificial giving of the congregation, have resulted in many coming to the Lord. The evangelist returned for a three-meeting follow-up and eighty people came forward for re-dedication or salvation. Many friends whom we had not seen since the crusade returned to see Mr. Banks.

The Sunday evening services continue to rise in blessing and attendence, with a record of over 100 people on a recent Sunday. Weeknights and Sunday morning services are growing steadily. Some of our members have caught fire and we are winning others for the Lord.

DAVID BERESFORD

ABERDEEN Pastor: W. Crawford

FOR a week a team of young people from Youth with a Mission actively engaged in personal evangelism in Aberdeen. Each night, with support from the local Crusaders and much prayer by the senior members, they were busy in the streets witnessing. More than twelve teenagers professed salvation. A number of young people came to the church, which doubled as a dormitory for the week, and were counselled and taught the way of salvation. We are grateful to God for His blessing and to all who prayed for the crusade. Please pray that in the follow-up period many will be added to the fellowship.

The appalling ignorance of the gospel and the openness of many to talk of Jesus have challenged us greatly to "go out into the highways".

Two weeks prior to the crusade we were all deeply challenged by a series of messages from Pastor Joseph Smith. Renewed commitment to the Lord and to prayer which resulted from his ministry has been very marked and was a real factor in the blessings experienced during the crusade and anticipated in the future.

BARRY Pastor: G.R. Knight

Mrs. M. WARD of Bath was the guest speaker at our ladies' weekend services. The anointing of the Holy Spirit was upon the services from the commencement on the Sunday morning. Each message brought a timely challenge and we were especially blessed by Mrs. Ward's ministry in song. On Sunday and Monday evenings, Mrs. G. Wood of Cardiff rendered delightful solos which blended beautifully with the theme of the services. The rally on Monday evening was quite well attended. A trio from Pontypridd added their talents to the other items to make this an occasion to be remembered. Members of the Fellowship participated in all the services, which were convened by Mrs. Y. Knight and Mrs. E. Higgs.

STOWMARKET Pastor: M.A. Drew

THE first children's rally to be held for many years at the Elim Pentecostal Church, Stowmarket, was attended by 120 youngsters. The rally was organised by Pastor John Harrison, of Lowestoft, youth commisioner of the Elim Pentecostal Churches in East Anglia. The children who took part aged between five and sixteen, were from Stowmarket, Felixstowe, Lowestoft, Great Dunmow and Great Yarmouth. "The object is to create fellowship within the youth of the churches and to show them that we are interested in them during the week as well as on Sundays," said the Stowmarket Minister.

TAMWORTH Pastor: R.T. McDonald

AT the commencement of our Golden Jubilee Celebrations, 100 members and guests gathered for the opening banquet. The guests included the Mayor and Mayoress of Tamworth, the Vicar of Tamworth and local Free Church representatives, Pastor R.J. Morrison (our D.S.) and Pastor J.C. Smyth who also ministered at the Jubilee rally held later that evening in the Church. Over 120 gathered at this rally in which the presence of God was very real. We were blessed by the singing of the Selly Oak Male Voice Choir and Mrs. S. Shakespeare and were thrilled by the ministry of Pastor Smyth.

On the Sunday, Mr. F.B. Phillips and Pastor L. Wigglesworth ministered. During the following week we enjoyed the ministry of previous pastors of the Church, including Pastors R. Knox, J. McAvoy, K. Banks, S.C. Cain and F.B. Phillips. We concluded our celebrations with an evangelistic rally at which Pastor I.W. Lewis preached under the anointing of the Holy Spirit. Various singers and our own Choir rendered the gospel in song throughout the week.

Prior to the week of Jubilee celebrations we had 10,000 brochures printed and distributed throughout the town. These had a very good effect and people are still coming to the Church through having read the brochure.

We praise God for His goodness to us throughout the past fifty years and confidently trust Him for continued blessing in the years that lie ahead.

Elim Youth Camp at Maldon, Essex

OVER 100 young people and staff shared the Elim Youth Camp at Maldon, Essex. From East Anglia, Swindon and Cheltenham, groups enjoyed one of the largest and most successful camps in the region. Eleven days of blue skies and sweltering temperatures added to the hard work which the staff had put in to make this a great occasion of fellowship and spiritual feasting.

About thirty young people decided for Christ. According to encouraging reports received since Camp, some of these are progressing. One evening, during the service and following the preaching of the Word, the power of God fell. It was a thrilling sight to see more than half the campers weeping before the Lord and seeking the Baptism in the Holy Spirit. For many, it was their first experience of such glorious moments, and, though for some there was temporary apprehension, this was skilfully dealt with by the Camp Padres, Pastors Derek E. Edmonds and Mark A. Drew. As a result, it is a pleasure to report that at least twelve received this infilling with signs following. Two campers were publicly baptised in water in the local open-air swimming pool, following a march of witness through the streets of Maldon in connection with the local Elim Church.

We acknowledge with thanks the ministers who were prepared to allow the campers to take part in ministry on the Sunday evening during Camp.

There was a warm sense of togetherness among staff and helpers, which added much to the high quality of the Camp. The Camp Commandant and Adjutant were Pastors Peter J. Hill and John Harrison respectively . Next year's Camp is already booked at the same site – "the sunniest camp of them all" – August 12th – 23rd, 1974 D.V. Why not reserve a place now, by writing to Pastor J. Harrison, 18, St. Aubyn's Road, Lowestoft, Suffolk; details and booking forms are available.

The London Crusader Choir's nation-wide musical evangelism

by Douglas B. Gray

THE Choir's forty-fourth year is about to conclude.

The tempo of their activities through the year is an amazement to many. The Choir has presented their ministry and witness in many towns and cities in 1973. To mention but a few outside the Greater London area would be Peterborough, Reading, Isle of Sheppey, Maidstone, Eastbourne, Dover, Canterbury, Hastings, Mildenhall, Hove, High Wycombe and Westcliff on Sea. Hospitals, prisons, sharing the blessings among Charismatic churches and fellowship groups, to many of our Elim churches and sister Pentecostal Assemblies, in cathedrals and village halls, on B.B.C. home and world-wide broadcasts, such a demanding ministry has been loyally borne by the Choir members and their director of music and associates. Tens of thousands in varying situations and strata of society have heard the message that Jesus saves from the uttermost to the uttermost.

The Choir's first love is still their prison evangelism. God has greatly blessed such witness in message and music. One prison in the South of England, under the lead of the resident Anglican Chaplain, a born-again, fiery Irishman who greatly admires and respects the Choir, runs a weekly Sunday school for the children of the local village and the families of the prison staff. In addition a weekly prayer and Bible study meeting is held in this detention centre. Many men attend and the chaplain reports several real and genuine conversions are taking place. A Sunday morning service has been broadcast from this prison by the B.B.C. A Governor from a prison in the Midlands at his request has been supplied with several gramophone (stereo) records of the choir. Another deputy-Governor was so deeply impressed with the choir's friendliness, sincerity, and musical finesse, and the impact made then and following such a visit, that he, himself, paid most of the expenses involved in a somewhat long distance journey. Perhaps little mention is made in the pages of the ELIM EVANGEL (not the Editor's fault) of the week by week service the choir renders but we give thanks to the Lord for such blessings and results shared. We thank our own prayer warriors for their consistant intercession on our behalf. As in many areas of Christian ministries these days the battle hardens. Dedicated and consistent workers who are willing to give their all for the Master are in many ways not easy to discover. We need more and more young people to complete the teams. There are now over one hundred prisons, Borstal Institutions, and centres of detention in our country housing some 40,000 men and women. What a harvest field! Waiting, maybe, FOR YOU to help us take the Word to this vast waiting congregation.

Oh, to be His hand extended,
Reaching out to the oppress'd!
Let me touch Him;
Let me touch Jesus,
SO THAT OTHERS MAY KNOW
AND BE BLESSED

THINK ON THESE THINGS and MAKE HIS PRAISE GLORIOUS.

CONDESCENSION

A new Christmas carol Tune: "Amazing Grace"
by Alexander Tee

THERE came to earth from Heaven above,
A gift to sinful man;
Revealing from God's heart of love,
His gracious Christmas plan.

The Lamb, the Life, the Truth, the Way,
The Rose of Sharon fair
Lies gently down among the hay,
A scene beyond compare.

See here, the King of love and light,
In swaddling clothes wrapped round;
How pure and meek this wondrous sight,
So human, yet profound.

The angels herald forth His name,
A Saviour, Christ the Lord;
A counsellor of might and fame,
The everlasting Word.

Good tidings of a Prince of peace
To all mankind is given;
From fear and foe He will release
And bring us home to Heaven.

The Story that never changes

IT was a time-honoured custom when I was a child not only to hang up a long black stocking, but for Father Christmas to place several delightful objects in the toe on that never-to-be-forgotten night. There were always an orange, a beautifully polished apple, a pink sugar mouse and a bar of chocolate. I remember that moment of ecstasy when, in the darkness of the morning, I reached for my stocking and felt all the packages, shapes and bulges. The climax came when I surveyed my treasures and joyfully broke my fast by sampling the chocolate.

It is a far cry from my Yorkshire childhood to the years that I spent on the Isle of Guernsey, yet something I saw there reminded me of my childhood Christmases. In the little shop at the corner there was a bench along the wall for the comfort of waiting customers. Happily the pace of life was slower than it is today and one had ample time to study the advertisements in the shop while sitting waiting to be served. There it was - the Fry's milk chocolate advertisement, with the five pictures of the little boy and the captions "Desperation, Pacification, Expectation, Acclamation, Realisation", just as they appeared on the wrappers of my bars of chocolate on Christmas mornings long ago.

Strangely enough a Guernsey friend sent me a cutting from the local newspaper recently, telling the story of "Five Boys", which long-lived advertisement was discontinued in 1972: "It appears that this really is the most aged advertisement in the business as, in 1886, the father, uncle and grandfather of Mr. Lindsay Poulton created the five studies using Mr. Poulton as a model. Mr. Poulton is now in his late eighties and lives in Providence, Rhode Island, U.S.A.. Apparently the tears shown in the first two photographs (depicting desperation and pacification) were induced by applying a cloth soaked in ammonia to the nape of young Lindsay's neck. Fry paid £200 for the copyright , and, in 1902, when they introduced milk chocolate, decided to use the "Five Boys" on the wrapper. It has been used to advertise the chocolate ever since. It must be any copy-writer's dream that an idea for an advertisement should be successful for seventy years!".

I think you will agree that there is something to be said in favour of things that last. There is a tendency today to disparage some old-fashioned commodities and particularly so in advertising and commerce. The emphasis must be on the "spanking" new, the sensational and the "with it" form of media. Not all the old adverts and their products have lost their charm or usefulness, however. It isn't always necessary to serve up a fresh slogan to appeal to the public. I can think of many reliable foods which fully bear out all their old adverts claim. It is ever the same when it comes to the more serious matters of life and faith. Take the ingredients which make up the story of the Nativity: a star, some shepherds, an angel choir, a stable and Mary, Joseph and the Child. These are the very essence of Christmas and have been its age-long attraction. They need no modern gimmicks to project their glory and truth. There has been a cry from certain quarters in recent years that the gospel message needs to be modernised to appeal to the world outside the Church, but I believe that the old-time gospel is still "the power of God unto salvation". All that we need to do is "to tell it as it is".

May you all have a blessed Christmas and enjoy once more the full rich flavour of the story of the birth of our Saviour in all its age-old splendour.

He did not use a silvery box,
Of paper green and red;
God laid His Christmas gift to men
Within a manger bed.

No silken cord was used to bind
The gift sent from above.
'Twas wrapped in swaddling clothes
In cords of tender love.and bound

There was no evergreen to which
His precious gift was tied:
Upon a bare tree on a hill
His gift was hung. . . and died.

'Twas taken down from off the tree
And laid beneath the sod,
But death itself could not destroy
The precious gift of God.

With mighty hand He lifted it
From out the stony grave;
For evermore to every man
A living gift He gave.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Sir,

If your correspondent, Mrs. E. Lockwood, (Letter to the Editor, December 1st issue) would contact me I would be most happy to put her in touch with young people who have been soundly saved and delivered from satanic power through the media which she mentions.

We obviously do not always appreciate each other's type of approach in communicating the gospel. We can, and must, however, pray one for the other.

Yours sincerely in the Lord,

D.G. Woodfield

Book Reviews

The Blessing of Illness, by Basilea Schlink, published by Marshall, Morgan and Scott Ltd., price 40p, postage and packing 4p extra.

THIS is a book of short readings, written from personal experience and purporting to help those who are sick, infirm and afflicted. In fact, all who are enduring suffering of any kind are shown in its pages how to come through their sufferings profited rather than impaired.

Its emphasis is prayer, faith and submission to God, who has all things in hand. Phrases like "God's Word brings strength", "God's Word reveals", "God's Word encourages", "God's Word brings help", are some of the headings of these short readings, showing to would-be readers the power of God's infallible Word.

Books create atmospheres and one senses in this book a touch of the mystic and an atmosphere of the cloister. In reading this little book, I was reminded of such characters as Brother Lawrence, Madame Guyon, and Cardinal Fenelon, who all show that prayer, faith and submission are the only way to endure painful experiences to profit.

God's Strategy in Human History, by R.T. Forster and V.P. Marston. Published by Send The Light Trust, paperback price 60p, postage and packing 9p extra.

HERE is a useful, inexpensive paperback with an intriguing title. Prof. F.F. Bruce in his Foreword, begins by attributing grace to the authors for inviting him, an "impenitent Augustinian and Calvinist" to submit the same. The Professor is here revealing his "theological hand", though one would like to know what lies behind his claiming to be Augustinian? Perhaps from a reference to the treatment of Romans 9-11 in the book one might detect or suspect an unveiling of his eschatological views with regards to Israel's future destiny or otherwise! However the views of the authors and the reviewer may or may not line-up, though, he states, and very rightly, that this book is of a thoroughly expository nature, a conviction that becomes very evident as one reads the book.

Like the title, the contents reveal a grand design of thought covering the nature and history of the spiritual conflict. Part three, entitled "Key Concepts in the Conflict" forms an excellent word study with the object of analysing what the Scriptures mean when they speak of God's foreknowledge and predestination of us. Here is a complex subject dealt with in terms easy to be grasped. Mention must be made of the last twenty-five pages, appearing in small print as an Appendix, dealing clearly and lucidly with the subject of God's and man's wills in the matter of salvation, setting forth the earliest Christian teaching available on the subject, that of the early Christian Fathers.

I am sure that this book will find a place on the shelf of every Christian desirous of getting to grips with such great themes.

YOUTH PAGE

JESUS-Myth or Fact?

by Eldin R. Corsie, National Youth Director

WE have not begun to understand the almost shattering yet practical implications of believing that Jesus was "God in flesh". As C.S. Lewis describes it, we live on "a visited planet".

The historicity of Jesus is beyond doubt. There is more evidence for this than for Julius Casear. There are, apart from the Gospels, at least five Roman historians of the first century (Tacitus, Thallus, Seutonius, Pliny and Josephus) who refer to one "Christus", a Jewish prophet crucified under Pilate's governorship and the Founder of a new, powerful religious movement. Jewish writers give more details of His ministry and the belief of many is that He was the promised Messiah.

Most important, the four Gospels claim to be eyewitness accounts of His words and actions. It is extremely difficult to see how and why they could have been just made up. The miracle stories are so restrained and lacking in the fantastic embellishments of many contemporary tales of "marvels" that they must be taken seriously. The fact of Jesus Christ cannot be dismissed as a myth, whatever may be decided about the New Testament claims as to who he was. If He really was God and Man the remarkable things about Him are credible – should we not expect His birth to be unusual and that He should have authority over physical and spiritual powers of nature, sickness and death?

The advent of Christ brings into prominence two of the Church's chief doctrines, the Incarnation and the Virgin Birth. Controversy has raged around the doctrine of Christology. Christ's unique history from the manger to the throne has been investigated, criticised, attacked, assailed on every hand. More particularly in our day the Virgin Birth has been the object of attack. "Stop your ears," said Ignatius, a companion of the Apostle John, "when any one speaks to you at variance with the truth that Jesus Christ was conceived by the Virgin Mary of the seed of David but by the Holy Ghost". Anselm remarked, "God can form man in four ways: from a man and a woman, as constant custom shows; from neither man nor woman, as Adam; from man without woman as Eve; or from a woman without a man, as the Son of God".

Belief in the Virgin Birth of our Lord affects the doctrines of original sin, the sinlessness of Jesus, the whole nature of the Atonement and Salvation and the bodily resurrection and ascension of Christ.

What is the practical significance of belief in the Incarnation and Virgin Birth of Christ? Young people today are encountering members of heretical sects and almost every one can be identified by its inadequate view of the Person of Jesus Christ. Watery ideas about these truths cause young folk to lapse into vague ideas. It is important that they should realise the splendour of the full doctrine of Christ.

In A.D. 325 the bishop of Alexandria and his young deacon, Athanasius, before a huge council of the Church presided over by the Emperor Constantine himself, insisted on the description of the Person of Christ which we now have substantially in the Nicene Creed as the only official view to be held by the Church. For fifty years Athanasius fought to have this recognised. He was deposed, exiled and ridiculed for his strong views – "Athanasius against the world!", Church leaders scoffed. Yet gradually they were brought to see that Jesus Christ must indeed be nothing less than "of the same substance and essence as God the Father". Athanasius devoted his whole life to insisting on this truth, because he realised that only if Christ were truly God as well as truly man could He save us and restore us to full fellowship with God. Our whole assurance of salvation depends on whom we believe Jesus to be.

"If Jesus Christ be God and died for me, then nothing is too much for me to do for Him" were the words of the famous cricketer, C.T. Studd, as he gave up an exciting career to go as a missionary to inland China. This is the inevitable decision of one who truly believes that Jesus is God.

For many people Christmas has no larger context than that of an annual occasion to be celebrated with hilarity and mirth.

For the Christian the message of the Christmas season is that God sent His son. He is "Emmanuel" – "God with us". This is what Christmas meant on that first occasion. This is what it continues to mean even in our sophisticated twentieth century.

The Family Altar

Scripture Union Portions — Notes by Gerald L.W. Ladlow

Monday, December 24th — Luke 1:57-80

"Thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare His ways" (v.76).

FOR a royal visit to a city in ancient times men were employed to clear the roads and smooth the way to provide easy access. John ever acknowledged that this was his mission in relation to Christ as prophesied in Isaiah 40:3,4). We may all share in this mission and by personal witness prepare the way for the Lord to come into the hearts of men and women. Conversion may come as a crisis experience in an evangelistic service, but an examination of the experiences of most people would reveal that the crisis only followed faithful witness, personal interest and earnest praying by others who showed concern for them.

Tuesday, December 25th — Luke 2:1-20

"And when they had seen it, they made known abroad" (v.17).

THE essence of Christmas is the joy of sharing what we have with others. The shepherds returned to their earthly occupation with the thrill of their experience filling their hearts with joy and their lips with praise (v.20). Not content with their personal joy, they shared it with everyone whom they met. If we have experienced the joy of finding "the Saviour. . .Christ the Lord", it should be our desire and delight to "make it known abroad".

Wednesday, December 26th — Luke 2:21-40

"Lord, now lettest Thou Thy servant depart in peace" (v.29).

"DEPART" is literally "loose away" and was used for unfastening the moorings of a vessel ready for a voyage. Simeon has no fear of death, but the prospect is so pleasing that he cries, "Lord, loose me from this world and let me go". Paul uses a similar expression in Philippians 1:20, where he expresses a desire to "depart to be with Christ"; the word he uses means "to pull up the anchor". This is the true view of death for believers, for we go to be "with Christ, which is far better".

Thursday, December 27th — Luke 2:41-52

"Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favour with God and man" (v.52).

HERE is the perfect development of the Child Jesus. "Wisdom", here is mental development, "stature" physical development and "in favour with God" spiritual development. The State today with its education programme and its National Health service does much for the mental and physical development of our children, but the responsibility for their spiritual development rests with the parents. May God help all Christian parents to be faithful in this most essential duty.

Friday, December 28th — Titus 1:1-16

"Titus, mine own son after the common faith" (v.4).

PAUL'S calling Titus his son indicates that he was responsible for his conversion. What pleasure Paul must have had in seeing his convert so developing in spiritual things that he was able to delegate authority to him in church government, teaching and discipline. He acknowledged him as his equal: "my brother" (2 Corinthians 2:13); "my partner" (2 Corinthians 8: 23); and "of the same spirit". (2 Corinthians 12:18). The aim of every preacher should be to get his converts to share in the work of the kingdom and of every convert to be able to accept such responsibilities.

Saturday, December 29th — Titus 2:1-15

"Adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour in all things" (v.10).

THIS message, addressed to slaves, is an appeal for them to allow the grace of God to be seen in their daily occupation. By giving faithful, obedient, honest and efficient service to their masters, they witnessed to the power of the gospel. "Adornment" is "outward array", but it can be an evidence of what is in the heart. The world does not see what we do in church nor hear what we pray, but it does see what we are in our daily work and in our relationships with others. Seek to adorn the doctrine!

Sunday, December 30th — Titus 3:1-15

"Maintain good works for necessary uses" (v.14).

BECAUSE good works cannot secure our salvation (v.5), we are not exempted from performing them. Good works can be an evidence of our salvation and are the fruit of the life of God within us. "And let our people learn to practise fine deeds that they may be able to supply all necessary needs" (Barclay's translation). We live in a very needy world and our Christian compassion should urge us to do whatever we can to bring help to those who need it.

We express our grateful thanks to Pastor G.L.W.Ladlow for his helpful notes. Our contributor for the next three months is Pastor Arthur Anstey of our Delancey Church, Guernsey.

Christmas Star

by Leon C. Quest

THE Bible speaks of Christ as: "The Star of Jacob" – "The Day Star" and "The Bright and Morning Star". The wise men came to Jerusalem looking for Jesus who had been born King of the Jews. They made it known to Herod the king. They said, "For we have seen His star" – His star! Using the language of the modern scientist, the Star was one of God's special satellites. He who made the greater light to rule the day and the lesser light to rule the night, made the stars also. God in due time launched His own greater star in orbit to signify that He had given His only begotten Son, that He was born on earth in Bethlehem.

Just before Christmas in 1965, the world witnessed a great success. America's Gemini 6 and Gemini 7 spaceships rendez-voused at 17,000 miles an hour, 185 miles above the earth. Chris Kraft, controlling the chase of two spaceships of satellites said, "It is going right by the book – everything is right on schedule".

According to the book, 1,450 years before Christ was born, before the Star appeared in the East, God said, "I shall see Him, but not now; I shall behold Him, but not nigh: there shall come a Star out of Jacob" (Numbers 24:17). One thousand, four hundred and fifty years after the prophecy was given, the rendez-vous took place – His Star arrived, the Baby Messiah, Saviour, King in a Manger.

What is the purpose of man's satellites—to make war, to control, to reach other planets, to bring peace on earth? The answer is not fully known. What was the purpose of God's holy satellite? There is only one answer: to save, to redeem, to bring peace and to give peace and joy to mankind everywhere.

In these days when scientists are hurling their man-made and costly moons-stars-satellites into space, the story of God's star ought to have a special interest. The wise men were the philosophers or scientists of their day and generation. They were versed in learning. They spent their time trying to understand the mysteries of the earth and the sky. When God launched His heavenly satellite, the scientists saw it! They studied the Holy Scriptures as well as the earth and sky. They were not taken up merely with their own discoveries so as to miss this heavenly miracle, His star, Christ's star. This star had nothing to do with other stars, with Venus, Mars or Jupiter. They were already in orbit and still are. This was God's star – specially launched from heaven. The God of the Old Testament, who sent His shekinah glory cloud to guide the children of Israel from the Red Sea to Jordan put His star in the East to guide the wise men, who represented the world.

The star did guide them and it led them to Jesus Christ, the Day Star, the Bright and Morning Star.

One national newspaper wrote this about Gemini 6 and 7: "More than 180 miles up beyond the noise of the earth, even speed becomes tranquil. Space is a quiet place". So the star led wise men to Bethlehem, to the Babe, to the Cross, His throne, the place of humility and peace.

This Christmas – let's follow His Star!

CHRISTMAS

by Joy Rook

Christmas is a time to give,
Christmas tells us how to live,
Christmas brought a brand new way,
For Christ was born on Christmas Day.

Humble shepherds saw the light,
Heard the singing in the night,
"Holy, holy" was the cry
Of the angels in the sky.

Roaming over miles of sand,
Riding through much unknown land,
Royal kings brought regal presents
To the new-born King of heaven.

In a manger for his bed,
Immanuel lay his sleepy head,
Incarnate Son of God come down
To this simple eastern town.

Sent to save the souls of men,
Sent to show them life again,
Saviour of the world now born,
Gladsome news this Christmas Morn.

Tidings of good news send round,
Tell the nations of its sound.
To our God all praises be,
For by His Son we're now set free.

Meek and lowly, born to die,
Mildly lay His glory by;
Messiah, Saviour promised long,
Let's now sing this joyous song.

Alleluia! Let us glory
Always in the Christmas story.
A Gift of love, let earth adore,
A Saviour, who is Christ the Lord!

So, Lord God, though years have gone
Since the day Your Son was Born,
Show us now, in Your own way
The love that came on Christmas Day.

ROTHERHAM Pastor: P. Smith

AT our Sunday school prize-giving, children from our three Sunday schools took part in the evening service. Singing items were provided by children and teachers from each Sunday school. The tambourine group excelled themselves at their first performance. The speaker was Mr. Luther Thomas from Doncaster, who spoke of the girl used by God to bring about Naaman's healing. Mr. Thomas presented the prizes, watched by parents and friends.

"A HAPPY NEW YEAR!" — as I write these words they sound trite, for the prospects are not bright. Indeed the B.B.C. news programme compere this very morning said that he had found one cheerful item "amid the encircling gloom", all the other comments being regarding Northern Ireland's troubles, the rail go-slow, oil shortages, Israel versus Syria, and the electricity cuts and voltage reductions. "Encircling gloom" was too apt a description for comfort!

One of my colleagues drew my attention to an expression used in Parliament the day before, to the effect that it was impossible to call for a Dunkirk spirit in a casino society. Certainly the nation's grim mood at the moment would seem to indicate something of a lack of fighting spirit and an overplus of fear, perhaps of the loss of creature comforts.

For the Christian, however, this must be part and parcel of his outlook, that is, that he recognises the problems which must attach themselves to the world order because of sin. This world is not his home and he realises that the fact that men in general reject the written Word and the living Word must bring sad consequences. The current interest in the last war has surely only shown how futile are men's efforts to bring about an equitable, peace-loving society for the world. The so-called Western powers have lived too long on cheap raw materials, often at the expense of the folk from whose countries they were obtained. If nations like Britain and America at the same time broadcast their affluence via news, radio and television, they must not be surprised if peoples who have gone from the camel to the jet, from the drum to television in one generation, now that they have seen the opulence (by their standards) of ordinary people in the West, want similar conditions immediately. From the human standpoint, who can blame them?

We cannot help but return to a familiar theme, perhaps the most important one of the day. That is that we need revival. Doctors are always anxious to diagnose the cause of a disease. They treat symptoms only, when they cannot really get at the root problem behind the malady. Such piecemeal treatment must fail, for it does not overcome the true power behind the infection. We are anxious to make clear that the trouble with all of us is sin, not just sins, but sin. Only the blood of Jesus can cleanse it away.

I greet you in the name of the Lord. Let us enter the New Year with a determination to pray and believe for revival.

CARDIFF

Pastors: P.S. Brewster, R. Hunston and J.H. Dick

WE enjoyed an evening of Christian music presented by some of the Crusaders. The attendance of over 650 was well beyond our hopes and what particularly thrilled us was that many strangers came. The music was of a high standard. It was arranged and conducted by Mr. Kelvin Thomas. Between items were testimonies and readings from the Scriptures presenting an overall picture of the life and power of the Lord Jesus Christ. Quite a number gave their lives to Christ at the end of Pastor Hunston's address. The Scripture says "By all means save some" and we saw on this particular Wednesday that music is one means.

Scottish Presbytery Youth Rally

THE afternoon rally got off to a great start with choruses led by Pastor T.S. Miles. The ministers of the Presbytery took the platform. Pastor E. Garner, the Youth Commissioner, convened in his usual bright and cheerful manner. After a devotional chorus, Pastor P. Watson opened the meeting in prayer. The reading of Ephesians 2 was brought by Pastor H.B. McGowan. The Motherwell Timbrel Band then brought a great rendering of "Sound the battle-cry", in song with tambourine accompanyment.

The ministers were introduced by Pastor Garner, the first being our guest speaker, Pastor L.E. Lambert. A tremendous welcome was given by the congregation to Pastors Joseph Smith and Walter Kelly.

A stirring testimony was brought by a young man from Edinburgh, Billy Nesbit, followed by a beautiful duet from the Reid Sisters of Paisley.

The congregation sang, "I will sing of my Redeemer". After another item by the Timbrel Band and another moving duet by the Reid Sisters, a most challenging word was brought to us by Pastor Lambert. The power and demonstration of the Holy Spirit in the ministry of the Word were manifested. A goodly number rededicated their lives to the Lord. "O Thou who camest from above" brought to an end a most wonderful afternoon rally.

The evening meeting began with great expectancy as Pastor B.J. Hayes led a great chorus session. After "O for a thousand tongues to sing", the opening prayer was led by Pastor F.W. Jones the D.S. who included a tribute to our beloved late brother E.J. Phillips. Brother Jones informed us that he had sent a telegram to the memorial service of E.J. which was being held on the same evening in the Clapham Church.

The reading of God's Word was brought by Pastor K. Legg, the newest minister in the Presbytery.

After the singing of "Floods of Revival", the ministry in song was brought by The Bridge Gospel Group. A stirring testimony was given by Jim Kincade, a converted gang leader. A duet by John and Drew, two of the youth campers, brought home the message of Jesus when they sang, "My feet were also weary upon the Calvary Road". The Bridge Group sang once again and a testimony by Robin Hall of the Group told us of Christ in a Christian home. A solo was rendered by Katherine Reid before a second, even more challenging word from Pastor Lambert. Four souls were saved and there were Christians who rededicated their lives to the Master. Our closing hymn, "Draw me nearer", brought to a close a most profitable and and challenging day.

HULL, City Temple Pastor: C.J. Watkins

IN October, Hull City Temple celebrated its fortieth anniversary. It was in 1933 that the late Principal George Jeffreys and party conducted a campaign in a large tent on the Fair Ground. This led to the founding of the City Temple fellowship in the former Methodist Church on Hessle Road.

At our celebration tea over 150 sat down to a meal ably prepared by a band of willing workers. A huge cake was made and suitably decorated by a member especially for the occasion. One of our senior members cut the cake and pieces were shared among us. It was good to see a number of friends who attended the campaign forty years ago and who still follow in the way of the Lord.

Our guest preachers were Pastor and Mrs. I.R. Moore, who formerly held the pastorate for a number of years. They were followed by a visit from Pastor Richard Lighton who ably ministered through the series of meetings incorporating our annual convention. To the Lord we render praise for His graciousness through the years.

From this Church a number of men have gone into the ranks of the Elim ministry. Among those may be numbered two recent Presidents of the Elim Pentecostal Churches, namely Pastors R.B. Chapman and T.W. Walker. The President-Elect in the person of Pastor George Canty also hails from the City Temple and our latest contribution to the work is Pastor M. Moore who has taken up his appointment at Eastleigh. Others serve the Lord in various places. To God be all the glory!

LETCHWORTH Pastor: G.S. Hillman

THE week October 20th-28th was a special week for the golden jubilee of our Church. Our Pastor had contacted some earlier members who had moved away to join us in our family celebrations. Unfortunately, some of the one-time pastors had either passed on, or were too ill to attend. Several old photographs pinned to a board at the rear of the Church, depicting Pastors, their wives and children, and Deacons who had ministered during the years – Mr. F.B. Phillips, whose brother, Hubert Phillips, founded the Church, was there with his wife. All the Phillips's family were there in those early days, including their parents. Mr. Phillips gave a short introductory message and set the tape in motion which his brother Hubert had recorded last March - he was very ill and unable to join us in our celebrations as he would have wished, so he recorded his message in Nelspruit together with a few words from his wife. He spoke chiefly about those early days fifty years ago when the Church was being built, and how they previously held meetings in a local factory. They sent their love and congratulations.

At a splendid jubilee tea, 130 enjoyed fellowship and with what joy they renewed their friendship, some after nearly fifty years. There was a special jubilee cake in the form of an open Bible, suitably inscribed. It was made by our Sisterhood Secretary, Mrs. M. Goodwin. After tea Mr. Phillips introduced the subject of the colour film "Zaire River". Halfway through the film, Stephen D. Huntly, a product of our own fellowship, now ministering at our Church in Smethwick, gave a brief talk about his early life as a Sunday school scholar and his call to the ministry. Then the film concluded. It is such a heart-searching and moving film, one of the best of its kind.

After the service, our Pastor Hillman sent a cable to Pastor H. Phillips conveying our warmest greetings.

Sunday morning Pastor Huntly spoke at the Communion service and he and Mr. Phillips both spoke at night. Pastor F.R. Barnes prayed. A letter from Pastor S. Gorman was read and a telegram from Pastor H. Burton-Haynes regretting that they were unable to attend owing to illness; the former said that he had such happy memories of Letchworth and his family were brought up there.

On Tuesday night, Pastor Hillman's predecessor, Pastor A.P. Thomas and his wife took over. Pastor Thomas spoke about the Foursquare Gospel and Mrs. Thomas sang two solos. On Wednesday our President, John Lancaster, spoke of the authority of Christ and how people were astonished at His doctrine. On Saturday the Peniel Chapel Choir took over the first half of the meeting with bright singing of choir pieces, testimonies and a solo. Mr. C.J. Martin, former minister of our Church, gave a lovely message. Pastor Bernard Wall gave his testimony followed by a solo from his wife (one of our own products). On Sunday morning Mr. Martin ministered at the Communion Service and on Sunday night, Pastor Wall gave the gospel message and his wife sang two solos. Our Pastor, G. Hillman, convened at all meetings. It was a very blessed week indeed and we give praise to God for His presence in our midst.

C.V. BRADBURY

COVENTRY Pastor: J.W. Newman

THE recent visit of Pastor T.P. Mullen was received with much enthusiasm by both children and adults. Many children came from the neighbourhood of the Church to hear Uncle Tom. At each meeting a story accompanied by a blackboard illustration was told to the children and then questions were asked. On the final evening there were eighty or more children present and prizes were given to the youngest and the eldest who answered the most questions over the three evenings.

Adult services were held after the children had gone home. The Bible readings on the subject of prayer were greatly appreciated. We were richly blessed by Pastor Mullen's ministry in song – anointed singing indeed!

On Sunday, the fifth and the final evening, we held our harvest thanksgiving festival. The Church was beautifully decorated by many sheaves of varied corns, fruit, flowers, berries and evergreens; the bountiful crops proclaimed: "How great is our God". The Coventry Choir sang and Pastor Mullen spoke on gathering the wheat at the final Harvest Home.

At least fourteen committed themselves to Christ and we believe more beside. Eternity will reveal the true, lasting results.

A. WILLIAMS

HARLOW Pastor: J.H. Bradbury

PASTOR Ron Mackenzie (plus Robbie the Robot) conducted a week's children's campaign here. The Lord blessed this venture in a very real way. We had fifty-five children the first night, then 108, followed by three nights with 155 on each occasion. The final meeting on the Sunday, when parents were invited, was thrilling. The Church was packed to capacity with fifty-four adults and 104 children. Some adults spent the service in the entrance hall because there was no room in the Church.

Since the Campaign, a Wednesday Club has been started for the six to elevens, with twenty-four children attending the first week and thirty-nine the second. Our Friday evening Crusader meetings for the twelves and 'teens have seen newcomers from the campaign and Sunday school attendance have increased, too. We praise God for all that He is doing.

VAZON, Guernsey. Pastor: A.C. Jarvis

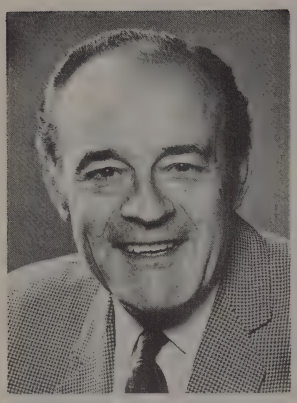
OUR youth weekend commenced with the film, "God loves People". At the end of the meeting a girl made her decision for Christ.

On the Saturday night an American supper was prepared and a number of young people came under the sound of the gospel. There were singing items and part of the film, "The Prodigal Son", the story being portrayed in a modern setting.



The Sunday night was a great time of spiritual blessing. The Crusaders took the service. The Church was almost full. Afterwards young and old shared testimonies when the Crusaders invited the older people to a time of fellowship in the minor hall. Everybody enjoyed singing choruses and praising the Lord.

PAM OZANNE

FELIXSTOWE Pastor: H.C.O. Bawtree

DURING the summer months we were pleased to welcome many visitors to our services in Church Lane, Walton, Felixstowe. We have also sung praises and extended God's Word by taking short outdoor meetings before our usual evening Gospel services. We thank the Lord and our visitors for such a good summer which we have all enjoyed. We shall be looking forward to welcoming the return visit of our friends next year. Our Crusaders provided quite a display of fruit and vegetables for their harvest festival. These were sent to the local home for the blind and gratefully received .

The thoughts of the President-Elect on his forthcoming year in office

by George Canty

IN February my Sparkbrook Assembly will be celebrating. Forty years ago George Jeffreys turned the key to open the permanent building which, with about £10,000 worth of recent improvements, still hums with activity as we proclaim the truths of Pentecost.

The particular truth which drew the original (and often sensation-seeking) crowds was that God works miracles today. The Principal (as we called him) had brought his opponents out in force over this issue. The 1930s were still profoundly affected by the crude mechanistic views of the universe by which the Victorian agnostics and scientists had disproved God for ever in their smug minds. Science could explain everything – or would soon: what blind faith! Then came the Pentecostal evangelists . . . !

I've just watched, in 1973, a young man break steel objects and set going watches with parts missing simply by concentrating his thought upon them. Spoons were bent on tables 200 miles away where the broadcasts were received. The most exhaustive tests have obliged scientists to admit that they have no way to explain it. For that matter many Christians don't know how to explain it either. Is it God, Satan, psychokenesis or some other reality? I think that I could suggest what is happening, but that is not my present subject.

In 1974 there must be very few people surviving the age of complete disbelief in some kind of supernature. There's more in creation than meets the eye.

This has made possible the success of the appeal of deep meditation, witchcraft, spiritualism, astrology and horoscopes, mind reading, palmistry, healers, and general occultism. Indirectly it has created conditions favourable to the spread of organisations exploiting a multitide of "departures from the faith" either total, or partial.

This situation has, however, strangely not brought any apparent rush into Christian churches, not even those which teach a supernatural form of Christianity. Why?

The reason is disturbing. People may be open to new doctrines and theories whether they include supernaturalism or not, but they want to show their rejection of the disciplines of the Christian life-way. The attempt to get what Christianity offers – the knowledge of God and peace – by other means than the orthodox manner common in Christendom for 2000 years, is a form of rebellion. Motivated by truculent attitudes towards Church truth, thousands turn toward Yogi, Transcendentalism, and even the exercises of yoga. It has produced the flourishing devotees of violence, karate, aikido, and tai-chi ch'uan, all of which like to demonstrate their success in using the unseen powers of the universe without resort to Christian belief.

Far from the interest in the occult giving us hope that the tide will swing towards Christ, it is a greater evidence of the determination of multitudes to have nothing to do with Him and to find spiritual power by other means. It is an expression of freedom without responsibility.

Therefore the message to communicate – if we can – is the old-fashioned one of repentance. Ephesians 2 (in the French version) reads that "we are the sons of the rebellion". What has to be repented of is not merely drunkenness or loose attitudes towards morals, but a hearty dislike for submission to Jesus Christ. Everybody who breaks British law (and who doesn't?) is not a rebel, but there are sworn revolutionaries and agitators completely opposed to the British way of life. In the world of spiritual response, we are all opposed to the authority of Christ until we repent, yield to His will, and accept His pardon and forgiveness through the blood of the cross.

Pentecostals are thorough-going subjects of Christ. There must be no parley or dialogue with Christ-rejectors, no compromise of half-friendship with those who talk of being in tune with the infinite or discovering their oneness with all things and God in the depths of their being. This is all grossest sin, because it is man's final attempt to reach God without Christ or His cross, or even without a moral change of heart.

Once this Christless supernaturalism becomes a general feature of society, man will have reached the final stages of lawlessness. Israel also reached out in her apostasy for the wonderful superstitions of pagan gods, and then judgment fell. Modern Syncretism – one religion comprised of all religions – as a return to the Roman Pantheon.

We know what will happen when the times of false miracles come, if possible deceiving the very elect; Christ will come also. The last days will not be unsupernatural, but full of the supernatural. Pentecostals must maintain their witness to the faith once delivered to the saints, in which God is known through a crucified Christ, and the manifestation of the unseen realm is looked for through the gifts of the Holy Spirit – the HOLY Spirit, for many other spirits are gone forth into the world.

What is "in the air" for 1974? The prince of the power of the air – still. Let us prepare to stand against his last great onslaught and we shall overcome by the word of our testimony and by the blood of the Lamb. In 1974 these words become peculiarly significant.

Campaign News

Heckmondwike Crusade

A WEEK'S crusade was held in Heckmondwike, Yorkshire. For several weeks Dewsbury Church members distributed thousands of leaflets and did door to door work. The crusade started on the Saturday with a march of witness. The meetings were held in the centre of town, in a well-known hall above the Co-op. A coffee bar was run from Thursday to Saturday.

Pastor George Miller preached nightly and the Holy Spirit blessed his word each night. Attendances ranged from forty to seventy. Eleven decisions were made and several backsliders restored. One night a young lady cried out when the appeal was made, "Jesus, save me!", and wept before her new Saviour.

Pastor Miller was aided by Pastor M. Sherwood, who led the singing, and Mrs. Z. Hathaway, who played the piano. Each night testimonies and singing items were included, among those who testified being Pastor David Hathaway and Mrs. Carol Horner.

Ravenhill Crusade

DO church crusades work? This one certainly did. It arose from local initiative and, by the time that Ron Jones and Len Magee stepped from the 'plane at Aldergrove Airport, East Belfast, where the Ulster Temple is situated, had been saturated with literature and posters. Owing to the security checks in our part of the world one party of Temple youth giving out posters and bills found themselves at the business end of a submachine gun while the army personnel involved thought they had captured some new subversive element. With explanations and laughs all round, the young folk went on their way to continue the work.

The opening night saw the church packed to the doors with interested folk and night by night the numbers were maintained and even grew. Each night people responded to the invitation and many Christians were challenged by the Word of God. In their presentation of the gospel Ron Jones and Len Magee touch old chords and are living examples that Christ is relevant to modern youth. The days were spent in visiting schools and in accepting any other openings that we were able to make. The interest was sustained to the very last night.

"Ah, but what about afterwards?" challenges the critic. On the first Sunday afterwards we baptised twenty-two people and again the Temple was packed. On the next Sunday again the church was full to the doors.

When you next read about East Belfast with its problems and its bombs remember that in the midst of it God is still working.

BURSTING!

Ted Spender writes on the work of Elim Bible College

FOLLOWING one of his early military successes David named the battlefield "Bursting" (2 Samuel 5:20, Living Bible), because, he said, the Lord had burst through his enemies like a raging flood. The sensation of bursting aptly describes the past year at E.B.C. and the present situation. Every department has seen tremendous expansion.

The theology school saw a record number of students graduate, a record number stay for the second year and another record number of students began the course. Sixty-eight students are now in this school. Accommodation is at such a premium, that, at one time, one young married couple were camping in the Principal's own caravan, and now and again the studio becomes a dormitory.

Student ministry has also increased, parties going as far as to Whitehaven in the North to Brussels and Paris in the South (we joined the E.E.C., too!) and to over sixty other centres in between. Two of our young men spent the summer in youth camps in Canada and a newly-formed singing group plans to visit the States next April. A new development was the production of the presentation "Crux" by Neil Martin. This has already been given at Barking, Kensington, Eltham, Watford, Eastbourne and Yeovil, and has brought several decisions. Many enquiries have come in and a number of venues are planned for next year.

The language school has also swelled in numbers. Since January 1st, over 160 students have attended at different times. Many more applicants could not be given places. Those who came represented Finland, Sweden, Denmark, Hungary, West Germany, Switzerland, France, Italy, Belgium, Austria, Yugoslavia, Iran, Portuguese Guinea, Japan, Hong Kong, Peru and Mexico. We are happy that our prayer times are enriched by so many other languages, but also that a number of these students who did not know the Lord when they came received Him before they left. A highlight of the year was a service round the swimming pool in which ten overseas students were baptised. This service was shared with a youth camp from Basingstoke Baptist Church. Their pastor, Barney Coombes, gave a short message and a number of those young people responded to his appeal.

Our ministry as a conference centre has continued to encourage us. Close on 2,000 people have attended weekend house parties and holiday weeks. A number of university Christian unions and local church groups of several denominations make E.B.C. their regular annual venue. Quite large groups also came from Belgium and Germany. We are aware that house parties play a big part in bringing many young people to Christ and, although we play a more temporal role here, we are convinced that preparing meals and washing dishes is an important thrust for evangelism. In addition to the figure given, over 200 school age children were brought to camps arranged by other evangelistic organisations on our grounds.

The Capel Bible Week was another highlight of the years. Accommodation was fully booked, and crowds of well over 1,500 attended each evening session. Miracles of healing were evidenced and many felt a tremendous new touch from the Holy Spirit.

Earlier in the year the Crusade for World Revival held a training week here, during which one man who had lost the use of a leg was wonderfully healed. Having arrived on crutches, he was able to play football before going home! These conference ministries mean that E.B.C. has become a part of the personal geography of not just the Elim family, but of the much wider Christian community at least of the South-East. Bookings are heavy and we have been sorry to disappoint a number of enquirers whose numbers would have been too large.

A vigorous programme of extensions is planned, believing that the ministries with which God has blessed us He would have us to enlarge. Please be with us in prayer through the coming year that this expansion may go on without our actually reaching bursting point.

CHILDREN'S CORNER

The Secret

Isaiah 9:6

by Sheila Price

WHEN Brian and Carol visited their grandfather they found him busily packing the Christmas presents that he had bought that morning.

"What did you buy, grandmother?" Carol asked.

"It's a secret", said grandfather.

"Please tell us, grandad! We promise not to tell".

"Very well, children", said grandfather, and he whispered in their ears. "Remember to keep the secret", he warned them.

"We will. We like secrets!"

"Christmas reminds me of the greatest secret of all, children".

"What is that, grandad?"

"It is the secret that God told to the prophets of old. He told them that a Child was to be born whose name was to be Wonderful, Counsellor, the mighty God, the Prince of Peace. When God put it into the minds of those prophets that a great One was to come some day, I do not suppose that they really understood what it meant, but it must have set them thinking and wondering, 'Who is this great hope of Israel who is to come some day? Who is this Prince of Peace who is to come to the world?' In the Old Testament we read of all the wonderful things that were happening in preparation for His coming".

"They must have been very excited waiting for that great day to come, grandad!"

"Yes, children, but they waited and waited and nothing happened. The whole world waited for many hundreds of years".

"Why did it take so long, grandad? Surely the poor world needed Him? Why did Jesus not come sooner?"

"I do not know the answers to those questions, children, but I know that, long before the world ever thought of Him, He had been thinking of them and planning to come to them. At last, the Bible says 'in the fulness of time', God sent forth His Son as a helpless, humble Baby. Since that day Christians all over the world remember Him and thank Him for that very first Christmas when His greatest secret became His greatest Gift to the world – His Son, the Lord Jesus".

Through the Year

by the Field Superintendent

IT is no meagre task to constrict the activities of twelve months into a paltry 1,300 words, but this is the commission and if some items are omitted I must crave your indulgence. I trust that these thoughts will stir acceptable memories and provoke thanksgiving to God.

January set the standard for the year with the Movement called to a special week of prayer. There are many things which we have in this affluent day which we could well do without, but the essential which the Church cannot jettison, whatever the age, is PRAYER. Several New Year conventions surely felt the benefit of this concerted intercession.

February held the occasion when the members of the Executive Council and the Evangelistic Committee met the District Superintendents at Elim Bible College, Capel, to discuss various aspects of how to expand the work and reach out for the souls of men and women. A plan for presbytery evangelism was mooted and it was warmly received in general and the necessity now is for the project to get under way.

March saw many activities including the opening of splendid new premises for the churches at Weoley Castle, Birmingham, Marton, Blackpool, and St. Helens, Lancashire. A very profitable visit was made to Headquarters when Pastor L.V.D. Tiller called during his furlough from that turbulent centre of historic and prophetic significance, Israel. We learned much of the current customs, restrictions and prospects of that noble, little country and of the problems faced when one's purpose is to introduce God's nation to its Messiah. Towards the close of the month Elim and Assemblies of God ministers met in Conference at Swanwick in Derbyshire and the benefit of the biblical expositions matched the uplift gained through the delightful fellowship. New territory was also penetrated by the pioneer campaign in Birkenhead. For many years opportunity had been sought to establish a work in this Cheshire centre and at last the vision has been accomplished. The Elim Assembly is now comfortably housed in what was originally a Welsh Presbyterian Church. Another crusade also was in progress at Rotherham in Yorkshire and there Carol Horner received her wonderful healing from multiple sclerosis.

April also opened with a week devoted to prayer which laid an excellent foundation for the great Easter celebrations. It was a delight to see our largest congregation since the war at the Royal Albert Hall. The appearance of D.G. Hathaway, newly released from Czechoslovakia, caused quite a stir, but the greatest joy came in the response to the gospel message. We had our share on the B.B.C. with a broadcast from the City Temple, Cardiff and also the London Crusader Choir appearing on Sunday Half-hour.

May, of course, was the month of our annual Conference at St. Annes, which proved to be the largest we have had to date and witnessed baptisms in the Spirit, people finding salvation and the real joy of Christian fellowship within the Elim family. This occasion also saw the introduction of the book written by our President entitled, "The Spirit-filled Church". Campaigns were held in Cannock and Grimsby and the "Helps" call went out for the purchase of the building for the newly-formed assembly at Birkenhead. The appeal realised about £2,000. The Elim Pentecostal Church in Edinburgh moved its abode and took up its new residence in a magnificent church building situated centrally on the renowned George IV Bridge.

June saw a marquee erected in the centre of Middleton a Lancashire town not far from Manchester. This pioneer campaign has resulted in the establishment of another Elim church, housed in what was once a Gospel Hall. The College Open Day surpassed all expectation, the weather was magnificent, the company who gathered was the largest ever, the quality of the meetings was excellent and the hospitality abundant. One of our retired ministers, A.J.K. Magee, passed to his eternal reward.

July followed the quarterly pattern and was launched with a week of prayer. Burnham-on-Crouch is a small town, known usually for its yachting facilities, but now known also for its Elim church opened this month. Its formation was the outcome of the initiative of a group of worthy friends loyal to the Pentecostal message. In the Midlands an unusual rally took place. Worcester Cathedral was graciously loaned to us for the occasion and well over 1,000 people packed that ecclesiastical edifice and caused its nave and transepts to ring with lusty songs of praise. Another of our retired ministers, W.J. Allen, was called home.

August was not only holiday month, but canvas month for our Movement. Youth camps could be found in Maldon, Bridlington, the Isle of Wight, Great Harwood and the Gower Coast. Canvas spread beyond the camps to envelop crusades in Macclesfield, Palmer's Green, London, and Southport. We hear that there has been increase in each of these assemblies and hopes are high for the future.

September welcomed home Dr. and Mrs. Brien from Rhodesia for the first furlough in seventeen years. They arrived just in time for the Missionary Convention in Cheltenham. Vacation Venture was held in Jersey, a pioneer tent campaign in Exmouth and a crusade in the Town Hall in Alloa, Clackmannanshire. Two youth rallies were held, the annual national event in London and a northern one in Bradford.

October brought the final week of the special prayer periods for 1973. On the other side of the world, Pentecostals from all nations gathered in Seoul, Korea, for the tenth World Conference. Bristol City Temple celebrated its 21st anniversary and Ashbourne church recognised its golden jubilee with a campaign in the Town Hall. Tamworth church planned special services to commemorate its fiftieth anniversary, but in the same month one of its first pastors, who later became Elim's first Secretary-General, E.J. Phillips, was promoted to higher service – a brother esteemed, an architect approved, a gentleman admired and a Christian rewarded.

The Clapham Church was packed beyond capacity for the annual Ordination Service when twelve candidates were ordained to the ministry. A pioneer rally was held in Solihull, the Liverpool Church conducted its own local campaign and the Dewsbury Church showed initiative by launching out with the gospel into nearby Heckmondwike.

November heard the call for "HELP" on behalf of the South Shields church, now eighteen months old and looking stronger. During this period the Church had been successful in renting some disused Presbyterian halls, but now the opportunity had come to purchase the whole premises and the Church went forward in faith. The challenge of the gospel was carried into the new town of Skelmersdale in Lancashire, the Tyne-Tees Presbytery ventured into the mining area of Boldon, and Belfast, troubled for so long with guerilla warfare, heard of the peace of God through the Ravenhill Crusade.

December, as it draws 1973 to a close, witnesses a campaign at The Lanes, Brighton. We wish to express our gratitude to God for His goodness, even though we long for fuller and greater blessing, growth and development at home and overseas. We would place on record our appreciation for the magnificent loyalty and support that has come from our entire Movement, without which nothing of consequence would have been achieved. We now take this opportunity of wishing you all a very happy New Year when the peace and blessing of God will be your personal portion.

Soul-winning

A New Year message from the Secretary-General, James T. Bradley

AS you read this, New Year will be near enough, either in prospect or retrospect, to make it still topical, but now is the hour to think about Easter: last Easter and Easter 1974.

Little did we realise last Easter that the international scene would change so dramatically before Easter 1974. Today the apparently impossible has happened, in that against that tiny country of Israel, with its some 3,000,000 population, whole vast continents and countries of the world are lined up. The fulfilment of Zechariah's prophecy that Jerusalem would be made a burdensome stone for all nations, and that God would gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle can already be seen in embryo. Surely the days are short, the time for service drawing quickly to its close.

Some thousands of us last Easter in the Royal Albert Hall stood to indicate that we would lead one soul to Christ before Easter 1974. I wonder if you who are reading this are among that number, and if you have fulfilled your undertaking. If you have not, remember time is fast running out.

We seem rarely to discuss the state of the lost. Yet at the back of every saved person's mind there must surely be the thought of the multitudes that are lost. It seems easier to create compassion for society's predicament; indeed it seems easier to change society than to convert individuals.

The saving of souls is the most demanding and costly of all human activities – not costly in terms of cash, but in terms, if we may quote from another context, of blood and tears and toil and sweat. It would seem that what it cost the Son of God to save the lost will also be the cost to us if we are faithful to our calling. If we think in terms of growth, expansion, of rescuing people from social evils, the motive is not powerful enough to prompt the necessary sacrifice. Jesus Christ came not to change men or to change society; He came to save sinners. In the measure that we lack the dedication of Jesus we shall lack in soul-winning. The apostles put into practice all Christ's demands. The new converts immediately following Pentecost did likewise, hence the amazing results.

Alas, how quickly lack of dedication came in! Paul writes to the Philippians about his problems, "All seek their own" he writes, "not the things which be Jesus Christ's". One would hardly imagine such widespread self-seeking in those days. Paul has to write to the Corinthians on their having the best of both worlds, this world and the world to come, but the apostles were destined to be living sacrifices every day and then to prepare for slaughter at the end.

We still think that if we pull the right trigger, throw the right switch, get the right person, pay the right money, these will compensate for lack of personal dedication to the task of personal soul-winning. Yet the spread of truth has always been by dedicated, fired-up individuals; people with vision, people with passion, people with a love for Jesus, a love for people and a fear of judgment.

We do not minimise the difficulties of witnessing; neither should we exaggerate them. One of the signs of the last days, Jesus said, would be that, because iniquity would abound, the love of many would wax cold. Are we tempted, as so many appear to be, to weaken in our witnessing because apathy, cynicism, and permissiveness abound? If we succumb to this temptation it means, whatever excuse we may make, that our love is waxing cold.

Dedication, vision, passion, love, fire – what abandonment to our calling do these words conjure up! Let us pray that God will give us dedication to Himself, a vision of Hell, a passion for mankind, the love of Christ to constrain us, and the fire of the Holy Ghost within us.

Our most urgent need today is not oil, not money, not methods, not the capture of the media, but the acceptance of our own personal responsibility for those with whom we come into touch day by day. If each of us did his part there would be no need of any other method. Alas "methods" are often only a means of transferring to someone else the responsibility which is ours.

Good Resolutions for 1974

by A. S. F. Horne, Pastor of our Ipswich Church

AT the beginning of a New Year, it is good to have a fixed purpose, that by the help of God we will fulfil.

Here are thirteen resolutions that can but do us all good and bring great blessings.

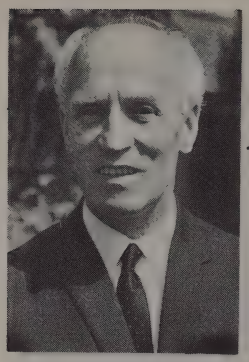
1. We will seriously examine our hearts and past conduct and seek until we obtain pardon for all past unfaithfulness and renew our sense of the presence of God (2 Corinthians 13:5).
2. We will stand in faith on the admonitions as set out in 1 Thessalonians 5:16-22.
3. We will try in thought, word and deed to conform exactly to the revealed will of God, which is our "reasonable service". Please read John 14:21; James 1:22; 1 John 3:7; 1 John 5:3.
4. We will keep our tongues from speaking what is to the discredit of absent persons, whether it be true or false, because thus to speak is not doing to others as I would that they should do to me (James 4:11, 12).
5. We will read our Bibles more, including at least one chapter a day of the inspired Epistles, that our knowledge of our personal and relative duties may be constantly on the increase (Psalm 119:97; John 5:39; 2 Peter 3:1, 2).
6. In hearing the preached word, we will judge ourselves rather than the preacher, always remembering that God has given us the privilege of hearing the gospel, not to amuse us, but to instruct and edify us (2 Corinthians 5:18-20; 1 Thessalonians 5:12,13).
7. We will pray every day for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit on every church, and for a new anointing on the church to which we belong and upon all mankind (Psalm 34:15; Matthew 6:6).
8. As often as possible we will attend the weekly meetings for prayer and Bible study, by so doing to strengthen the fellowship and encourage the minister (Matthew 18:19, 20; 2 Thessalonians 3:1; 1 Timothy 2:8; Hebrews 13:18).
9. We will seek to persuade all upon whom we have any influence to attend the house of God (Romans 10:14).
10. We will do all in our power to get people to give themselves to Jesus Christ and to join the Church. We are assured that there cannot be a good reason for not doing so (Matthew 10:32, 33; 12:30; 16: 24-26; Luke 12:8, 9; 1 Thessalonians 5:11).
11. That God's service may be to us perfect freedom, we will cherish as our sole motive, in doing or giving, grateful love to our Saviour (John 14:21; 1 Corinthians 10:31).
12. We will seek to strengthen our purpose by the recollection that to act upon these, or similar resolutions will, at least, add greatly to our own spiritual benefit (Job 17:9).
13. We will refresh our memory as to these resolutions at least once a week, seriously examining how far we have kept them, and with what promptitude and zeal (Proverbs 4:25, 26).

May 1974 be a great year of blessing. It could be and would be if we are in earnest (Romans 12:2).

Please cut this out and keep it in your Bible.

Thoughts from the Book of Genesis

58. Joseph reveals Himself (Genesis 45:1)



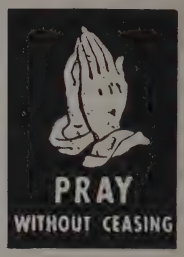
by F. Lavender, Pastor of our Croydon Church

THE earnest plea of Judah clearly moved Joseph so deeply that he was unable to contain his feelings any longer, so he revealed his identity to his brothers. They were very troubled by his presence and were probably afraid, too, because they thought that he would surely take his revenge on them.

Joseph, therefore, tried to set their minds at rest by explaining the matter and by showing them how God had overruled the evil which they had done to him. He told them that the famine would get far more severe, but that, through Joseph, Jacob and his family would be saved. If Joseph had not gone to Egypt, the family would have starved, yet he went to Egypt only because his brothers sold him as a slave.

Joseph, his brothers and Jacob himself learned deep lessons. From them we realise that the Lord's dealings with us are always faithful and never meaningless. Joseph's obedience to his father seemed to lead him into trouble. For years things seemed to go from bad to worse, yet he found that the Lord was guiding his circumstances. The brothers discovered how great are the mercy and grace of God, for He overruled their evil and envy in order to bless them. Jacob found that the Lord had been leading even in the darkness of his heartache.

Let us not fear our circumstances, difficulties and darkness, because the same faithful God is with us and will fulfil His purposes for us. The time will come when we will know and understand His working. In the meantime let us trust Him.



From T. H. Stevenson

I HAVE no recollection of ever having made a New Year resolution and the likelihood of such a policy must wane even more with passing years. The nearest to a resolution, perhaps more a prayer and desire, would be to emulate the words of Paul when he wrote: "That I may know Him, and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings, being made conformable unto His death" (Philippians 3:10). These words have occupied a special place in my life for almost forty-two years, though never as a New Year resolve nor awaiting an annual renewal.

I was alone in a railway carriage as the train started and I was now breaking the links of home to begin my ministry for God. Soon I was reading my copy of THE ELIM EVANGEL and found the main article with the title: "PAUL'S ASPIRATION". How appropriate and appealling that was to me at the very moment when I had one aspiration seemingly – the ministry! That the article was written by my first Pastor, dear Samuel Gorman, made me even more interested. The text was as above and, to express it concisely, Paul's aspiration was to know Christ in all His fulness, as the verse indicates. In the empty compartment, I knelt down before the train was out of the town boundary, asking God for grace to put Christ completely first in my life, aspiring to know Him above any other aspiration that I might envisage in the new life before me as a minister. This has never deteriorated to a mere hobby-horse, but remains a first priority. It is possible and conceivable to be mistaken or for me to misunderstand the motive of my life (and I have come so far short even consciously) in relegating all else as less important that this even for a minister, but I have never felt cause to disbelieve that we are nearer what is right in other things, the nearer we are to Christ. I think the same thought has been expressed by another, even if seemingly looking at it from the opposite angle: "We cannot be right in the rest, if we do not think rightly of Him".

The year now almost ended has sent almost frightening tremors in many spheres of life, internationally and in our homeland, and the prospects for the year before us scarcely appear more promising, though God has continued to bless His work in wonderful ways. We pray for even greater movings of God. In all our ministry, mission and motive for God and to bring others to Him, may every aspiration be crowned by daily increasingly knowing Christ in our own lives.

PRAYER AND PRAISE

by F. H. Coleman

THE EAST

HOW thrilling and fascinating is the thought of the East to the Western mind, whether it is the Near East, the Middle East or the Far East. We conjure up pictures of deserts with caravans of camels, or hundreds of junks on which Chinese are born, live and die. We imagine mysterious happenings in such surroundings.

When we read the Christmas story we are told of the wise men making their long journey to Jerusalem because they had seen His star in the East. Lew Wallace, in the opening chapters of Ben Hur, captures the reader's imagination as he describes three wise men coming each from a different country to a common meeting-point to go to Israel. Incidentally, this was the only book that Lew Wallace wrote. He had been an atheist and was challenged by Robert Ingersoll to write a book proving that Jesus Christ had never lived. His research not only proved that He had, but Wallace's reading of the four Gospel stories led him to discover Jesus as the Saviour of the world, which resulted in his being born again.

The wise men went to much trouble to find the Christ Child and great was their joy when they succeeded. They gave Him their gifts of gold, frankincense and myrrh and in so doing met the needs of Mary and Jospeh: gold for the journey to Egypt and their sojourn there, frankincense to give to the priests when the Child was dedicated, and myrrh for Mary's purification.

Have you a need this Christmas-time? God owns the silver and the gold and the cattle on a thousand hills. Pray about your need. He may not send wise men from the East to meet your need, but He has a thousand ways in which to answer prayer. Don't wait until all other things have failed and then try prayer. Try it first! It is amazing how it works!

Margaret M. Ladlow's page

"Let the redeemed of the Lord say so"

(Psalm 107:2)

"IT'S always made a noise since its conversion", complained a housewife speaking over the 'phone on "Tuesday Call", the B.B.C. radio programme. She was referring to her gas radiator which had been converted to natural gas.

I was struck by the remark and instinctively applied to the statement a New Testament connotation. Conversion is a splended word and simple to understand, for it just means to turn about, to have a change of heart, yet its effect is profound. The Lord Jesus was very forthright when using this word (Matthew 18:3). He cut right across the disciples' rather petty question of prestige in the kingdom of heaven by saying, "Verily I say unto you, except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven".

So the need for a complete change of heart and of direction in life was urged by the Saviour. I am emphasising it because this aspect of the gospel message is neglected by many people. The lack of teaching on conversion was brought home to me when attending a week of "Living Word" study classes. On the night when we studied John 3:1-21, out of a group of eight people only four confessed to an experience of conversion; the others were equally firm that they knew nothing of such a change.

Having established the meaning of conversion and the essential need for everyone to admit that, because of personal sin, repentance first and then a change of heart and of aim in life must take place, I want to bring you back to the noisy, converted gas radiator. We may deplore such an annoying piece of apparatus, but a bit more noise from converted people would be welcome. When giving out invitations to a Christian book party in my home, a young housewife and neighbour was most embarrassed when refusing the invitation to attend. She seemed such a nice girl and her excuse pathetically lame. I learned later that this neighbour is a member of the Exclusive Brethren and apparently is forbidden to associate with those of other persuasions. What a pity she didn't open up and tell me that she had an experience of conversion. I could have then explained that my book party was a gospel outreach to get Bibles and Christian literature into non-Christian homes, a means of witnessing in my home to my unconverted neighbours. I certainly would have valued her help and fellowship in prayer.

A young man was converted at a Salvation Army Hall one Sunday night. A week passed by and on Sunday morning the local Salvation Army Officer greeted him: "Tell me, how did you get on at work now you are a Christian?". "Fine", replied the young fellow "they haven't found out yet". We may laugh at his naivety, but the necessity remains that we should show by word and deed that we are converted and changed by the operation of the Holy Ghost. "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God" and surely, as God's children converted by His grace, we should tell the world that we have found a precious Saviour and a bit of noise and fervour to accompany our testimony would not go amiss.

Pastor Joseph Egyir-Paintsil told us at the Conference missionary rally last May, that when Ghanaian Christians meet they do not greet each other with a polite "passing of the time of day", but one shouts "Praise the Lord!" and the other replies, "Hallelujah!". "Thus", he remarked "when one is walking down the street, or in the post office a large store or market and those greetings are heard, people say 'That's one of them!'". There is no doubt in anyone's mind as to whom these folk belong neither do they mind who knows it.

The lines of the old negro spiritual express the thought: "Stand up and shout if you love my Jesus, stand up and shout if you love my Lord. I want to know, yes I want to know, do you love my Lord?".

Loyalty

by Archie A. Biddle, Youth Committee Chairman

IT is always good to know what you are talking about and this can only be achieved by defining what we are talking about. The dictionary definition of loyalty is "to render (give) all faithful obedience to his sovereign". Jesus gave us His definition of loyalty when He said: "Render (give) therefore unto Caesar the things which are Casear's; and unto God the things that are God's".

There are many kinds of loyalties, but they are all included in our loyalty to God. If we are loyal to God we shall inevitably be loyal in all other respects. It will be a part of that outworking of the nature of Christ is in us. Obviously, then, the most important thing of all is to be loyal to God. Nevertheless loyalty to God involves and demands other loyalties. We cannot be loyal to God and disloyal to our local assembly or to our fellow-believers. We cannot be loyal to God and disloyal to His Word and its doctrines. The whole emphasis in the Word is upon unconditional loyalty to God. All Christians agree on this point. If that be so, then why should there be any doubt or argument about that same unconditional loyalty to God's work especially in the local setting?

Marriage is based upon vows of unconditional loyalty and an unconditional life of loyalty in the years to follow. This basis enables a couple to set up a home and train up a family in the right atmosphere and with the right outlook. The breaking of that basic loyalty for but one unfaithful occasion often leads to the breaking up of all that is good and secure in a home and thence to disaster for all concerned. Loyalty brings security and it follows that this brings peace of mind and leads to a happy and fulfilled life.

John in his First Epistle (2:23) writes to three kinds of people – fathers, young men, little children. The exhortation to young people is to overcome the wicked one. How can this be done? The answer is in v.14: "I have written unto you, young men, because ye are strong and the word of God abideth in you". From that place of development a young man can go on to become a "father" in the local church by a progressive knowing of the Lord and His Word. Loyalty to the abiding Word in one's heart leads to a place of distinction in God's family. Paul speaks of this in 1 Corinthians 4:15: "For though ye have ten thousand instructors in Christ, yet have ye not many fathers". Paul goes on to tell how he had begotten them through the Gospel and was their spiritual father. Loyalty to the Lord and His work is necessary to develop a believer so that he can become a spiritual father. A spiritual father is not one who can tell you how to do it (an instructor), but one who can say as does Paul in v.16: "Wherefore I beseech you, be ye followers of me". How can anyone become that kind of person apart from an absolute loyalty to the family in the local assembly? Loyalty is absolutely essential to spiritual maturity.

The whole programme of evangelism in any local assembly is planned, produced, and performed on the assumption that the participants will be there in the assembly. It could never be done by those who come and go. If Sunday school work is to be done effectively and with permanent results, it must be done systematically and over several years, and this demands local stability. Being a church treasurer demands absolute loyalty, for a good steward in this respect is of great price. This must apply to the pastor, for he cannot be flitting around all over the place if he is to do the work in the place where God has placed him. Loyalty is absolutely essential to local stability.

The Word of God teaches us that the Lord's will for every city is to set up permanent, powerful assemblies. This is a vital link in the saving of souls and the worship of God. Often the grass looks greener on somebody else's patch, but we must beware of the attraction of some special event or meeting which distracts from the local testimony. Never think of the local assembly but in the highest possible terms, Matthew 18:20 is true, whether it be two, 200, or 2,000. In your assembly all things are possible because He is there. Miracles, Holy Ghost outpouring, souls being saved, can all happen to a group who are united in love, dedicated to prayer, and willing to work week by week, year by year. Loyalty is essential to a permanent testimony.

Loyalty is often costly. It means sticking to the job at all times, in days of drought as well as in days of plenty. Remember that it was to the good and faithful that our Lord promised entrance into the joy of His kingdom and consequently the satisfaction of a job well done.

Be loyal; it pays both on the way and especially in the END.

The Family Altar

Scripture Union Portions — Notes by A. Anstey

Monday, December 31st — Psalm 97:1-12

"The Lord reigneth" (v.1).

THE psalmist, with spiritual perception and prophetic insight, emphasises this glorious theme in his anthem for public worship. God reigns majestically in the heavenly realms now. He should reign experimentally in the lives of all saints. He will reign ultimately when every knee shall bow and every tongue confess that He is King of Kings.

"Worship Him" (v.7). This universal call reminds us that not all idolatry is confined to heathen temples. Golden calves still crumble to powder in His presence (v.5). Dagons still fall and smash at His feet and colossal empires are lost in the dust of history. "Keep yourselves from idols" (John 2:21).

God is far above all (v.9). Man's moonshots, space probes, and intricate computers, cannot comprehend or calculate the measure of His Ascension.

"Give thanks" (v.12). On this last day of the year give thanks for all your yesterdays and in faith for your anticipated tomorrows.

Tuesday, January 1st, 1974 — Ephesians 1:1-14

"Spiritual blessings. . . in Christ" (v.3).

ACCORDING to the good pleasure of His will (v.5), the good treasure of His riches (v.7) and the good measure of His grace ("in whom we have redemption" v.7), we have an inheritance (v.11), we have trusted (v.13), we are sealed. We have become beneficiaries of His eternal bounties, His unsearchable riches, His unchanging promises, His immeasurable love, His incomprehensible purposes linked with His immaculate personage. The small print of man's policies can craftily deny the promises that they should guarantee, but our Guarantor holds the Title Deeds in His nail-pierced hands and underwrites them with the seal of His glorious name and redemptive Blood. Let us appropriate New Year blessings in Him.

Wednesday, January 2nd — Ephesians 1:15-23

"My prayers" (v.16).

PAUL'S new year with Christ commenced in Damascus ("Behold he prayeth"). Three days of blindness and desperate prayer preceded his miraculous healing and Pentecostal anointing. Paul reached a new dimension in prayer (v.17), a new revelation and a new vision (v.18). He sought the Spirit's illumination and interpretation as to what are the hope of His calling, the riches of His glory and the greatness of His power. True spiritual focus determines the power of our prayer. Paul's great desire for the saints was to comprehend the power of Christ's resurrection and to behold Him as the living Head of the Church (v.22).

Thursday, January 3rd — Ephesians 2:1-10

"In time past" (v.2).

DOMINATED by the prince of the power of the air, disobedient, on the downward path, degraded by the desires of the flesh (v.3), dead in trespasses and sins, children of darkness are quickened, raised and seated in heavenly places (vv.5,6), "made alive" by new birth, raised to new standards of His righteousness. Reserved seats in the courts of heaven in ages to come (v.7) will enable believers to see eternal purposes manifested in eternal ages through the eternal Son. We are saved (v. 8) by grace, through faith, by the gift of God (excluding worthless works and boasting). We are His workmanship (v.10), created by Him, for Him, His instruments ordained to walk in His righteousness, reclaimed by His unfathomable love to unlimited resources.

Friday, January 4th — Ephesians 2:11-22

"Without God" (v.12).

"WITHOUT" means that we were godless, hopeless, Christless, lawless, homeless, aliens indeed, but now, being "within" (v.13), Christ has removed all barriers – national, traditional, prejudicial, personal, sin barriers are broken, abolished through His cross (v.16). Made nigh (v.18) through Christ, by the Holy Spirit, unto the Father (the Trinity is involved) we are fellow-citizens of the household of God, a holy temple in the Lord, and habitations of the Holy Spirit. This spiritual vista opens into a full-orbed panoramic view of what Christ has wrought through His cross, obtaining reconciliation, peace, forgiveness, access and the status of heavenly citizenship. We are the people of the new generation in Christ.

Saturday, January 5th — Ephesians 3:1-13

"Dispensation of the grace of God" (v.2).

THE prisoner (v.1), though restricted in body, is released in spirit, and soars into mysteries of the prehistoric plan and purposes of divine grace, abounding, saving, sufficient, triumphant, enabling and sustaining grace to approach the throne in time of need, sovereign grace that justifies the sinner and makes him a saint. "Unto me" (v.8) – transforming grace turns the rebel into a convert, a saint, a disciple, a preacher, an apostle and a teacher of the Gentiles, yet divine revelations made him assess himself only in the light of the holiness of God – "less than the least". Spiritual pride has been the downfall of many. God "created all things by Jesus Christ" (v.9). We have been recreated in Him. Pre-historic truth and mystery are good, but to know the pre-historic Person is far better.

Sunday, January 6th — Ephesians 3:14-21

"What is the breadth, and length and depth, and height?" (v.18).

WE can measure earthquakes, the dimensions of unseen planets, radiation, rainfall, fall-out, altitude, latitude, in this computerized generation. Who can por-

7. Constantly sanctify ourselves (12:1) and
8. Completely separate ourselves unto Him (12:13).

An Incident

"What is that in thine hand?"

DIGGING in the garden of the Methodist college at Kingswood, young Adam Clarke found a half-sovereign, which he used by the sanction of the Principal, to buy a Hebrew Grammar. He welcomed it as an Arab would an oasis in the desert, for it enabled him to form the groundwork of his after-attainments in biblical study and criticism and to the publishing of his world-famous and erudite Commentary on the Bible. tray or measure His greatness? In the U.S.A., the world's most colossal sculpture of four of America's greatest Presidents, Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Roosevelt, is chiselled in the Blackhills of South Dakota. Washington's head is 60 ft. high, his nose 20 ft. long, his eyes 11 ft. across. The elements are already wearing away this gigantic work which took fourteen years to blast away surplus stone and twelve years to sculpt. Christ is the great Key - Corner - and Foundation Stone. No elements or Satanic blasts will ever wear away His greatness. His love is as great as His power; it passes knowledge. Every facet of His attributes and eternal greatness will remain for ever. How great is our God? In Christ is all the fulness of God (v.19).
